

1287

JAMMU & KASHMIR UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

DATE LOAND

Class No. _____ Book No _____

Vol. _____ Copy _____

Accession No. _____

--	--	--

DONATED

By

PANDIT SHAMBOO NATH DAR,
(1901 — 1969)

ADVOCATE,

and former President

SRINAGAR MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

G. N. Dar
Advocate & C. Secy
Srinagar Municipal Council
Srinagar.

JAMMU & KASHMIR UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

DATE LOAND

Class No. _____ Book No _____

Vol. _____ Copy _____

Accession No. _____

--	--	--	--

THE ALL INDIA REPORTER

1933

MADRAS SECTION

CONTAINING

FULL REPORTS OF ALL REPORTABLE JUDGMENTS OF THE MADRAS HIGH COURT

REPORTED IN

- (1) I. L. R. 56 MADRAS (2) 64 & 65 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL
(3) 1933 MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES (4) 1933 CRIMINAL CASES
(5) 19 & 20 ALL-INDIA CRIMINAL REPORTS
(6) 34 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL (7) 1933 MADRAS CRIMINAL CASES
(8) 37 & 33 MADRAS LAW WEEKLY (9) 141 TO 146 INDIAN CASES

WITH EXTRA JUDGMENTS

CITATION : A. I. R. 1933 MADRAS

Printed by D. G. Ranade at The All India Reporter Press, Nagpur.

And published by

V. V. CHITALEY, B.A., LL.B.,

AT THE ALL INDIA REPORTER OFFICE.

NAGPUR, C. P.

1933

(All rights reserved.)

1972
JAN 10 1973
LIBRARY SCHOOL

To THE LEGAL PROFESSION IN GRATEFUL RECOGNITION OF THEIR WARM APPRECIATION AND SUPPORT

K UNIVERSITY LIB.
K DIVISION
Acc No	11745
Date	11/1/72

4112

MADRAS HIGH COURT

1933

Chief Justice :

The Hon'ble Sir Horace Owen Compton Beasley, Kt., Bar-at-law.

Puisne Judges :

The Hon'ble Sir Vepa Ramesam, Kt., B.A., B.L.

- " Mr. M. Venkatasubba Rao, B.A., B.L.
 - " " C. Madhavan Nair, Bar-at-law.
 - " " G. H. B. Jackson, I. C. S.
 - " " H. D. C. Reilly, I. C. S.
 - " Rao Bahadur C. V. Ananthakrishna Ayyar, B.A., B.L.
 - " Dr. K. Krishnan Pandalai, Bar-at-law, Rao Bahadur.
 - " Mr. A. J. Curgenvin, B. Sc., I. C. S.
 - " " H. D. Cornish, Bar-at-law.
 - " Dewan Bahadur K. Sundaram Chetty, B.A., B.L.
 - " Mr. Gilbert Stone, B.A., LL.B., Bar-at-law.
 - " " E. Pakenham Walsh, I. C. S.
 - " " S. Burn, I. C. S.
 - " " H. R. Bardswell.
 - " " K. P. Lakshman Rao, B.A., B.L.
-

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE

DEWAN BAHADUR G. S. RAO, Ex-Judge, High Court, Bombay.
DR. SUDISH CHANDRA ROY, M.A., LL.B., Ph. D., Bar-at-law, Calcutta.
SIR M. V. JOSHI, Kt., K. C. I. E., Ex-law Member, C. P. Government.
MR. E. VINAYAKARAO, B.A., LL.B., Advocate, High Court, Madras.
MR. V. V. CHITALEY, B.A., LL.B., High Court Vakil, Nagpur.

EDITORIAL STAFF

MR. R. K. MANOHAR, B.A., LL.B., Advocate (Bom. O.S.) High Court Vakil, Nagpur.
MR. S. G. GADGIL, B.A., LL.B., Advocate (Bom.), High Court Vakil, Nagpur.
MR. G. B. JOSHI, B.A., LL.B., Pleader, Nagpur.
MR. D. D. DATAR, B.Sc., LL.B., Pleader, Nagpur.

REPORTERS

Privy Council

Dr. A. Majid, M.A., LL.D., of Gray's Inn, Bar-at-law, London.

Allahabad

Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji, B.A., B.L., High Court Vakil, Allahabad.

Bombay

Mr. S. C. Joshi, M.A., LL.B., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.
Mr. B. D. Mehta, B.A., LL.B., Advocate, High Court, Bombay.

Calcutta

Mr. Narain Chandra Kar, B.L., Advocate, High Court, Calcutta.
Mr. Praphulla Chandra Ghose, B.A., B.L., Advocate, High Court, Calcutta.
Mr. Monindra Nath Mukerji, B.L., Advocate, High Court, Calcutta.

Lahore

Mr. Amolak Ram Kapur, B.A. (Hons.), LL.B., Advocate, High Court, Lahore.
Mr. Anant Ram Khosla, B.A. (Hons.), LL.B., Advocate, High Court, Lahore.
Mr. Kedar Nath Chopra, B. Sc., LL.B., Advocate, High Court, Lahore.

Madras

Mr. P. R. Srinivasa Iyengar, M.A., B.L., Advocate, High Court, Madras.
Mr. N. Srinivasa Iyengar, M.A., B.L., Advocate, High Court, Madras.
Mr. C. R. Krishna Rao, B.A. B.L., Advocate, High Court, Madras.

Nagpur

Mr. K. V. Deoskar, B.A., B.L., High Court Pleader, Nagpur.
Mr. R. K. Manohar, B.A., LL.B., Advocate (Bom. O.S.), High Court Vakil, Nagpur.

Oudh

Mr. Surendra Nath Roy, M.A., LL.B., Vakil, Lucknow.

Patna

Mr. Subal Chandra Muzumdar, M.A., B.L., Advocate, High Court, Patna.
Mr. Laxmidhar Mahanty, B.A., B.L., M. L. C., Vakil, Circuit Court, Cuttack.
Mr. Jagat Bandhu Kar, B.A., B.L., Pleader, Circuit Court, Cuttack.

Peshawar

Pandit Raghunath, B.A., LL.B., Vakil, Peshawar.

Rangoon

Mr. R. P. Pandit, B.A., LL.B., Bar-at-law, Rangoon.
Mr. K. C. Sanyal, M.A., B.L., Advocate, Mandalay.

Sind

Mr. Hakumatrai M. Eidnani, B.A., LL.B., Advocate, Karachi.
Mr. P. K. Vaswani, LL.B. Bar-at-law, Karachi.

NOMINAL INDEX

Abdul Razak v. Abdul Rahim	715	*China Sommayya, In re	251 (1)
Abdul Razak v. Zainab Bi	86	Chingleput Municipality v. Murugesu
*Achutaramana v. Jagannadham	117	Mudaliar	59
*Ahammad Kutty v. Kottakkat Kuttu	315	Chinnammi v. Venkayamma	407
*Akshayalingam Pillai v. Avayambala Ammal	386	Chitti Babu Mudaliar v. Venkatasubba
Alagappa Chetty v. Saminathan Chetty	367 (1)	Mudaliar	264
Alakh Narayan v. Chinna Jogudu	221	Chockalingam Chettiar v. Taluk Board,
Ambukutti Vaidiar v. Koottambath Kelan	460	Devakotta	22
*Ammathayarammal v. Official Assignee	137	Collector of Chingleput v. Krishnaveni
Ammu Shetty v. Bapa	842	Ammal	190
Anantanarayan, In re	337	Commissioner of Income-tax v. Madura
*Annadana Jadaya Goundar v. Konammal	309	Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd.	SB 347
Annamalai Chettiar v. Annamalai Chettiar	697	*Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras v.
Annamalai Chettiar v. Rama Narasimhulu Naidu	257	Namberumal Chetty & Sons	SB 1
Annavi Pillai v. Machammal	595	Damodara Shanbhogue v. Chandapur Pujary	613
Appaji Raddiar v. Thailammal	417	*Daso Polai v. Narayana Patro	879
Appavoo Asary v. Sornammal Fernandez	821	Dhanarajagerji v. Parthasarathy Rayanim
Appavoo Nainar v. Lakshmana Reddi	745	Varu	825
Arulananda Nadar v. Janaki Bai Ammal	525	Dibba Balesu v. Chinna Sanyasayya	695
*Arumugam Pillai v. Mohideen Sheriff Sahib	533	*District Board of Ramnad v. Mahomed Ibrahim	524
Arumugha Chetty v. Ranganatham Chetty	847	*Duraiswami Thevan v. Lakshmanan Chettiar	537
*Arumugha Mudaliar v. Venkatachala Pillai	439	Eastern Distilleries and Sugar Factories, Ltd. v. Municipal Council, Negapatam	496
Arunachala Asari v. Anandayammal	688 (1)	Ellappa Mudaliar v. Swaminatha Mudaliar	755
Ayyakannu Pillai v. Doraiswami Pillai	725	*Ethirajulu Chettiar v. Official Receiver, East Tanjore, Negapatam	152
Ayyanna v. Gangayya	465	*Fernando v. Fernando	544
Ayyanna v. Secy. of State	646	Firm, T. N. S. v. Muhammad Hussain	756
Ayyaswami Ayyar v. Sivakki Ammal	780	Ganapathy Iyer v. Subramania Iyer	516
Azagappa Chetti v. Ramnath Chettiar	466	Gangaiya v. China Lingaiya	162
*Baijnath Karnani v. Vallabhdas Damani	511	Ghulam Mnhiuddin v. Sulaiman	263
Bakthavathsalu Naidu v. Ramanuja Naidu	326	Gomathi Ammal v. Avu Ammal	686
Balaji Rao Naidu, In re	103	Gopalan Nair v. Dist. Board of Malabar	704
Balgis Beevi Ammal v. Hathija Beevi Ammal	353 (1)	Gopalaswami Chettiar v. Secy. of State	748
Baluchami v. Emperor	843	Govinda Krishna v. Ramakrishna Reddi	384
Bapiraji v. Ramachandra Das	854	Govinda Padayachi v. Velu Murugayya Chettiar	399
Bashyam Ayyangar v. Srinivasachariar	734	Govindaraja Pillai v. Mangalam Pillai	80
Basivireddi v. Kamaraju	241	Govindarajulu Naidu v. Secy. of State	649
Bava Sahib Miyan v. Abdul Ghani Sahib	498	Gunnam Naidu v. Chendri Naidu	839
*Bayya Naiko v. Desetti Krupa	325	Gurumurti v. Rangiah	165
*Bellary Electric Supply Co. Ltd. v. Kan-niram Rawoothmal	320	Gurusami Naidu v. Govindappa Naidu	762
*Bhogi Reddi Ankamma, In re	247	*Guruswamy v. Sivanmalai	157
Bullayya v. Subbayya	130	Guruswami v. Md. Khan Sahib	112
Chathukutty v. Raman	674	*Hanumantha Rao v. Venkatakrishnappa	817
*Chellamma Rao Bahadur v. Seetharamayya	436	Hariharan Pattar v. Narayana Menon	482
Chenchuramayya v. Venkatasubbayya Chetty	655	Hari Singh v. Emperor	688 (2)
Chenchuram Naidu v. Muhamed Baha-vuddin	3	Ignatia Brito v. T. P. Rego	492
Chendrasekaran Pillai v. Srinivasa Pillai	71	Imperial Bank of India, Madras v. Krishnamurthi	628
Chengayya v. Kottayya	57	Income-tax Act (1922), In the matter of	SB 14
Chenna Kesavulu v. Veeraswami	862	Iswarudu v. Emperor	369
Chindambara Sinaprakasa Pandara San-nadhi Avergal v. Manickam Pillai	481	Jaganatha Rao v. Narayanamurthy	696
		Jamundas Ravuji Sait v. Kandiyil Krishan	723
		Jujishti Panda v. Lakshmana Dola	435
		*Jujisti Mahapatro v. Magata Patro	442

Kadir Meera Saheb v. Pir Md. Taraganar	523	Manikkam Pillai v. Murugesam Pillai	431
Kalathi Mudali v. Venkategsa Mudali	277	Manikyanayananim Varu v. Lakshminarasimha	43
Kaliappa Goundan v. Emperor	798	Marippan v. Sevugan Servai	298
Kandaswami Chettiar v. Annamalai Chettiar	360	Maromma v. Emperor	125
Kandaswami Chettiar v. Municipal Council of Pollachi	260	*Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd. v. Official Assignee	207
*Kandaswami Goundan v. Venkatarama Goundan	774	Meyappa Chettiar v. Commr. of Income-tax	SB 14
*Kandaswamy Goundar v. Chinnammal	540 (2)	Meyappa Chettiar v. Nagammai Achi	67 (2)
Kannusami Chetti v. M. Rabiath Ammal	806	Mira Rowther v. Mubammad Ismail	797
Karnavan v. Govindan Nambi	265	*Modali Ademma v. Venkata Subbayya	627
Karuppanan Ambalam v. Guruswami Pillai	434 (2)	Moidin Kunhammad v. Ahmad Kutti Abdulla	686
*Karuppayya Nadar v. Ponnuswami Nadar	500 (2)	Moidunni Haji v. Madhavan Nair	876
Karuppiyah Pillai v. Ponnuchami Pillai	768	*Mottai Goundan v. Ramaswami Ayyangar	290
Kelu Achan v. Thandavan Chettiar	340	*Mounagurusami Naicker, In re	FB 367 (2)
Kelu Kutti v. Kalikut Municipal Council	428	Municipal Council, Calicut v. Kunhipathumma	454
Kesava Reddiar v. Tahsildar of Polur	319	Municipal Council, Dindigul v. Rajamani Ayyar	416
Kondapanaidu v. Mahalakshbamma	194	Munisami Achari v. Veerappa	403
Koraga Gowda v. Somappa Gowda	98	*Munnsami Goundan v. Kutti Moopan	708
Kotayya v. Radhakrishnamurthi	833	Musalayya v. Ranga Rao	98
Kotayya v. Yellamanda	549	*Muthalakkammal v. Narappa Reddiar	FB 456
*Kotayya Naidu v. Mahalakshbamma	457	*Muthiah Chettiar v. Official Receiver of Tinnevely	185
Kothandarama Pillai v. Municipal Council, Trichinopoly	782	*Muthukumara v. Sivanarayana	158
Krishna Ayyangar v. Alwarappa Ayyangar	70	Muthuraman Chettiar v. Subramaniam Chettiar	612
Krishna Ayyar v. Secy., Urban Bank, Ltd., Calicut	682	Muthusami Pillai v. Tahsildar of Govt., Ramnad	434 (1)
Krishnalal Jankiprasad v. Hyathkhan Sabet	608	*Nachiappa Chettiar v. Commissioner of Income-tax	SB 701
Krishnamachari v. Emperor	767	Nachimuthu Chettiar v. Ramakkal	475
Krishnamurthy v. Pitchayya	485	Nagalingam Pillai v. Sivachidambaram Sabapathy	85
*Krishnamurthy Chettiar v. Sathappa Chettiar	398	Nagarattamma v. Nagayya	658
Krishnaswami v. Avayambal Ammal	204	*Nagendran Chettiar v. Lakshmi Ammal	FB 583
Krishnavenamma v. Hanumantha Rao	860	Nallakaruppan Ambalam v. Vellamarunthan Ambalam	374
Kumarappa Chettiar v. Suppan Chettiar	672	Naranappier v. Chidambaram Pillai	96
Kunhammayan v. Nalakath Kunhi Sow	169	Narappa Naicken v. Rangasami Naicken	393
Kunhi Moidin v. Kunhi Koman Nair	691	Narasanna, In re	147
Kunju Nair v. Narayanan Nair	252	Narasayya v. Ramagovindam	753
Kuppuswami Chetty v. Pakkiri Pillai	342 (1)	Narasayya v. Somayya	364
Lakshmanan Chettiar v. Chidambaram Chettiar	787	*Narasimbacharyulu v. Appa Rao	197
Lakshmi Narasimham, In re	372 (1)	Narasimham v. Venkata Subbayya	171
Lakshmindra Tirta Swamiyar v. Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras	305	Narasimhulu v. Bhadrappa	10
Levvai Rowther v. Syed Ammal	200	Narayana v. Emperor	233
*Madras Provincial Co-operative Bank, Ltd. v. Commissioner of Income-tax	SB 489	Narayana Iyengar v. Desika Chariar	689
Mahadeva Sastrigal v. Marulai Reddiar	874	Narayana Iyer, In re	99
Maharajah of Pittapuram v. Gangadhararamarao	462	Narayanamurti v. Darmana Ramalingam	187
Mahomed Abu Bakkar v. Ramakrishna Chettiar	540 (1)	Narayana Nadar v. Arunachala Nadar	868
Mahomed Essack v. Sukur Ganny	24	*Narayana Rao v. Veerayya	519
Mahomed Naina Maricair v. Bava Sahib	503 (1)	Narayanawamy Padayachi v. Emperor	461 (1)
Mahomed Naina Rowther v. Muhammad Hehiya Rowther	218	Nataraja Mudaliar v. Official Assignee, Madras	438
Mahomed Rowther v. Maideen Pichai Sahib	569	Natesa Ayyar v. Mangalathammal	503 (2)
Mahomed Sahoob Levvai Sayabu v. Mayamad Ammal	789	National Indian Life Insurance, Co. Ltd., Calcutta v. Mahadevan	680
*Mahomed Sheriff Sahib v. Kasim Saheb	635	National Insurance Co. Ltd., Calcutta v. Seethammal	764
*Mangamma v. Narayanappa	785	*Navamani Nadar v. Vedamanicka Nadar	424
*Manicka Chetty v. Narayanswami Naidu	679	*Official Assignee, Madras v. Neelambal Ammal	920
Manickavasagam v. Union Board of Devakottah	92	Official Assignee, Madras v. Sampath Naidu	795
		Official Receiver of Ramnad v. K. R. Muthu	721

NOMINAL INDEX, 1933 MADRAS

7

*Official Receiver, West Godavari, Ellore v. Sagiraju Subbayya	527	Ramasamy Padayachi v. Thiruvengada Padayachy	163
O'Hearn, R. P., In re	461 (2)	Ramaswami Chettiar v. K. Ankappa Mudali	175
Pakirayya v. Kamasastri	328	Ramaswami Chettiar v. Chinnappa Chetty	406
Palaniappan Chettiar v. Settichi	108	*Ramaswami Chettiar v. Paramasivan Pillai	447
Palani Chetty v. Sevugan Chetty	395	Ramaswami Chettiar v. Rengan Chettiar	824
Palaniswami Goundar v. English and Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Societies, Ltd.	145	Ramsawami Chetty v. Palaniappa Chetty	675
Pandia Naicker v. Kamatajapandia Naicker	500 (1)	Ramaswamy Naicken v. Dandakaran	840
Panduranga Mudali, In re	123	Ramaswami Naicker v. Secy. of State	105
Papamma v. Ravula Ramaswami	622	*Ramayya v. Emperor	67 (1)
*Paramasivan Pillai v. Ramasami Chettiar	FB 570	*Ramayya v. Kotayya	276
Pathraj Kathavala v. New Bombay Steamships, Ltd.	7	Ramier and Bros. v. Ramudu Ayyar	176
Pativattath Katungi v. Ittiraricha Nedungadi	770	Rami Reddi v. Gurumurthi	219
Peramanayagan Pillai v. Raman Chettiar	104	Ramireddi v. Sreeramulu	120
*Perumal Konan v. Tirumalai Machi	245	Ramireddi v. Venku Reddi	510
Pichai Moideen Rowther v. Chathurbuja Das Kushal Das & Sons	736	Rammammal v. Vijayaraghavalu	FB 102
Pioneer Mutual Benefit and Friend-in-Need Society, Ltd., v. Assistant Registrar of Joint Stock Companies	129	Ranga Ayyar v. Sundararaja Ayyangar	362
*Ponnu Chettiar v. Sambasiva Ayyar	293	*Ranganatha v. Rajagopala	181
*Ponnusami Chetty v. Emperor	372 (2)	*Rangappa v. Rangappa	9
Ponnuthaye Ammal v. Official Receiver, Coimbatore	858	Rangappaya Aithala v. Shiva Aithala	699
Prayag Dossjee Varu v. Venkata Perumal	410	*Rangasayi v. Nagarathnamma	FB 890
Public Prosecutor v. Audinarayana Reddi	278	*Rathnammal v. Sundaram Achari	508
— v. Gurappa Naidu	728	Rathnavelu v. K. S. Iyer	FB 765
— v. Mayandi Nadar	230	*Rethinasami Thevar v. Nataraja Thevar	346
*Pulla Reddi v. Pattabhirama Reddi	626	Rosayya v. Kommi Pitchayya	713
*Pullayya v. Official Receiver of Kistna	271	Rudrappa Nayak v. Dasan	610
Punnamchand Chatrabhan v. Satyanandam	804	Sadasiva Suryanarayana Rao v. Rajalingam	382
Ragadu v. Lakshminarappa Reddi	502	Sadasivier Krishnier v. Meenakshi Iyer	781
Rajagopala Ayyar v. Adinarayana Chettiar	54	Sakala Rattam v. Musalayya	565 (1)
Rajagopala Goundar v. Maruthamuthu Asari	668	Samsuvava Rowther v. Sayyad Muhammad Rowther	495
Rajagopala Gramani v. Baggiammal	242	Sankara Mahadeva Setty v. Sanyasayya	FB 678
*Raja Ram Doss Bavaji v. Gajapathi Krishna Chendra Deo Garu	729	Santhanakrishna Chetty, In re	888 (2)
Rajeswara Sethupathi v. Kuppusami Pillai	83	Sathiavel Pillai v. Sivasami Pillai	344
Rajitagiripathi v. Pedakotayya	855	Sattamuthu Chettiar v. Abdul Kareem	61
*Raju Thambiran v. Arunagiri Thambiran	397	Satyamma v. Official Receiver, Masulipatam	917
Rama Ayyar v. Ramachandran	838	Satyanarainarao v. Venkataswami	153
Ramachander Lalji (Firm) v. Narasimbalu Chetty & Co.	888 (1)	*Satyanarayana v. Venkanna	637
Ramachandra Deo v. Ramamurthy	925	Satyanarayana v. H. B. Yorke	148
*Ramakrishna Chettiar v. Jayarama Iyer	778	Schamnad v. Rama Rao	268
Ramakrishnayya v. Soorayanarayana Sarma	224 (1)	*Secretary of State, In re	321
Ramakrishnayya Garu v. Naganna	865	Secretary of State v. Ayyasami Chettiar	178
Ramalinga Ayyar v. Subba Ayyar	168	— v. Kunhi Krishna Varma	376
Ramalingam Pillai v. Ponnusami Goundan	726	— v. Lakbanna	430
Ramamurti v. Narayana Gajapati	279 (2)	— v. Raghunathan	506
Raman v. Parvathi	794	* — v. Ram Narayan Sarma	173
Rama Naidu v. Rangayya Naidu	114	* — v. Subba Rao	618
Ramanarasu v. Venkata Reddi	28	Seeramma v. Seshamma	217
Ramanathan Chettiar v. Chidambaram Chettiar	342 (2)	Seetharaman Chettiar v. Chidambaram Chettiar	166
*Ramanathan Chettiar v. Estate Collector of Sivaganga	597	Shankaranaraina v. Official Receiver of South Kanara	73
Ramanna v. Emperor	841	Shanmuga Mudaliar v. Subbaraya Mudaliar	133 (2)
Raman Thirumumpu v. Karunakara Menon	852	Shanmuga Rajeswara v. Perumal Moopan	101
Ramaraja Nadar v. Chidambara Nadar	345	*Shanmugasundara v. Ratnavelu	33 (2)
Ramasami Nayakar v. Venkatasami Naicker	653	Sitapati Rao v. Sitabayamma	662
		Sitarama Ayyar v. Ramanuja Mudaliar	203
		Sivaramakrishna Patter v. Krishnan Nair	390
		Sivaskandaraju v. Narasimha Pattamani	225
		Sivasubramania Thevar v. Theerthapathi	451
		Sobhanadri Rao, In re	42
		Somasundaram Chettiar v. Muthirulappa Pillai	432
		*Sorimuthu Pillai v. Muthukrishna Pillai	598
		*Sothavalan v. Rama Kone	338

- Sowntharapandian Ayyangar v. Peria-veeru Thevan FB 550
 Sree Chand Sowcar v. Kasi Chetty 885
 Srinivasa Ayyangar v. Pichumani Ayyangar 164
 Srinivasa Ayyangar v. Venkatarama Ayyar
 215
 Srinivasa Ayyar v. Lakshmi Ammal 33 (1)
 Srinivasalu Naidu v. Ramakrisna Naidu
 353 (2)
 *Srinivasathathachar v. Srinivasathathachar 259
 Sriramulu v. Firm of K. Sriramulu 55
 *Srivilliputtur Municipal Council v. Aru-nachala Nadar 332
 *Subba Naicker v. Solaiappa 624
 Subba Rao v. Ankamma 110
 Subbarao v. Bhimalingam 913
 Subbaraya Chettiar v. Sellamuthu Asari 184
 Subbaraya Devai v. Sundaresa Devai 5
 *Subbarayya Goundan v. Virappa Chettiar Bank FB 851
 Subbaraya Sastri v. Seetha Ramaswami 664
 Subbarayudu v. Pandivi Satyanandam 609
 Subbayya v. Veerayya 65 (1)
 Subbiah Iyer v. Official Receiver, Tinnevelly 25
 Subbiah Pillai v. Muthiah 657
 Subbiah Pillai v. Nellayappa Pillai 366
 Subramania Ayyar v. Arunachalam Chettiar 95
 Subramania Ayyar v. Bomer Cooty Haji 870
 Subramania Ayyar v. Emperor 279 (1)
 *Subramania Ayyar v. Swamikannu Chetty 413 Subramania Chetti v. Mahalakshmi Ammal 659
 Subramaniam Chettiar v. Subbiah Ayyar 563
 *Sundarathanmmal v. Paramaswami Asari 888
 Sundaresa Ayyar v. Subba Rao 258
 Suranna v. Subbarayudu 871
 Suryaprakasa Rao v. Venkata Dikshitalu 844
 Susai Lazar Viliavaraya v. Ramaswami
 Naidu 710 (1)
 *Swaminatha Ayyar v. Official Receiver of South Malabar 703
 Swaminatha Ayyar v. Taluk Board, Nannilam 681
 *Swaminatha Odayar v. Kalyanarama Ayyangar 694
 Swaminatha Odayar v. Natesa Iyer 710 (2)
 Swamy Babu v. Union Board, Narasannapet 791
 *Thangachi Ammal v. Mohamed Moldeen
 Maricair 231 (2)
 Thangavelu v. Narayana Padayachi 352
 Thayammal v. Sankaranarayana Pillai 836
 Thiagaraja v. Vedathanni 48
 Thillaikannu Achi v. Abdul Kadir 126
 Thirumala Chariar v. Athimoola Karyalayar 529
 *Thirupathi Ayyangar v. Yegnammal 568
 *Tripura Sundaramma v. Abdul Khader FB 418 Universal Mutual Aid & Poor Houses Association, Ltd., Madras v. Thoppa Naidu 16
 Valliammal v. Official Assignee, Madras 74
 *Vancheswara Sastri v. Narayana Ayyar 251 (2)
 Varadappa Rao v. Mahadeviah 94
 Vasamsetti v. Tatayya 179
 Vellayammal v. Palaniyandi Ambalam 856
 *Venkanna v. Subbayya 300
 Venkatachalam Pillai v. Sethuram Rao FB 322
 Venkatachalapathi Nidhi, Ltd. v. Nanj-appa Goundan 299
 Venkatadri Apparao v. Chakrapani Rao 521
 *Venkatanandam, In re 330
 *Venkatanarasimham v. Subba Rao 867 Venkatanarasimha Ramchandra Rao, In re 358
 Venkatapathi v. Balappa 429
 *Venkatappayya v. Punnya FB 631
 Venkatarama Ayyar v. Krishnaswami 133 (1) Venkatarama Ayyar v. Somasundara Van-adyar 224 (2)
 Venkatarama Chetty v. Angathayammal 471
 Venkataraman v. Sivagurunatha Chettiar 639
 *Venkataratnam v. Butchayya 306 Venkatarayanam Garu v. Maharaja of Pit-tapuram 427
 Venkata Reddi v. Dorasami Pillai 68
 Venkatasubba Rao v. Emperor 270
 Venkatasubbayya v. Venkata Lakshmayya
 65 (2)
 *Venkatathirisami Naidu v. Kasthuriranga
 Appaswami Naidu 401
 *Venkatesha Kamathi v. Villa Bhakta 455
 *Virayya v. Parthasarathi Appa Rao 690
 Viswasundara Rao v. Pallamaraju 565 (2)
 Vittala Hedge v. Sheenappa Shetty 872
 *Vyravan Chettiar v. Official Assignee of Madras 39
 Yegnanarayanamurthi v. Balakrishnayya 411
 Zamindar of Khallikote v. Sivaram Bevarla
 Patnaik 231 (1)

SUBJECT INDEX

Absence of Star denotes Cases of Provincial or Small Importance.

 Indicates Cases of Great Importance.*

 * Indicate Cases of Very Great Importance.*

Accounts

—Mere filing of accounts and exhibiting them does not prove various items in them — Other corroborative evidence is necessary 756a

—Defendant making claims as to items in account to be taken in suit, is not required to pay court-fees on sums claimed 353 (1)

Administration

—Suit for—Proper parties—Next of kin and intermeddler with estate are proper parties 74c

Adverse Possession

—Decision of survey officer breaks adverse possession 279 (2)c

Arbitration

—Arbitration outside suit is a fact to be established like anything else 471f

Benami

—Fraud — Property conveyed at revenue sale benami for effecting fraud—Fraud Committed — Property sold by benamidar to third party—Real owner cannot set up benami as defence to suit by third party 457

—Burden of proof is on party alleging it 137e —Person purchasing property in wife's name—Wife is benamidar unless otherwise proved 137f

Benamidar

* — Benamidar mortgagor—Transferee from heirs of benamidar can sue for redemption and mortgagee is estopped from denying right of mortgagor 635

Cattle Trespass Act (10 of 1871)

—S. 22 — Pleader's fees cannot be awarded 502

Certiorari

—Writ of—Erroneous decision on law point is no ground for issuing writ when exercised within jurisdiction 133 (2)b

Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (14 of 1920)

—Ss. 5 and 6—Non-compliance with order under S. 5 for filing accounts amounts to breach of trust by virtue of S. 6—Suit under S. 92, Civil P. C., is competent without sanction of Advocate-General even by person other than individual who obtains order under S. 6 854a

Chit fund

—Subscriber agreeing to pay future instalments and in case of default of any one instalment, all future instalments to become due on date of default—Default clause is not penal 725

Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908)

—S. 2 — Application under S. 4 (2), Madras Agency Tracts Interest and Land Transfer Act (1 of 1917), is not suit and order refusing it is not decree 695

* —S. 2—Preliminary decree—Appeal against preliminary decree withdrawn and dismissed — Time for applying for final decree is three years from such order of dismissal 442

* —S. 2—Decree creating a charge—Property brought to sale in execution—Order under S. 52, Provincial Insolvency Act, stopping sale is not appealable 152b

—S. 2 (15)—Order passed on payment of costs—Advocate has authority to accept and legal consequences flow from such act even if advocate has accepted without realizing consequences 410c

—S. 2 (17)—Receiver to manage property and collect rent on commission is public officer 105a

—S. 9—Claim to exercise right of worship is cognizable by civil Court 726a

—S. 9—Suit for mere "honours" does not lie 264

—S. 11—Principle of res judicata cannot be ignored on ground that reasoning in previous decision can be attacked on particular point 925a

—S. 11 — Suit to recover arrears of kattubadi—Argument that previous decision was given with respect to previous years has no bearing whether or not decision therein acts as res judicata 925b

—S. 11—For application of res judicata, Court which tried previous suit must be competent to try subsequent suit—Decision by former Court on point which it was not competent to try may be disregarded and is not res judicata 913b

—S. 11—Suit by endorsee of promissory note against maker and endorser—

Civil P. C.

Maker denying execution of note—
 Endorser admitting receipt of consideration but pleading that he is unnecessary party—Court upholding maker's plea and dismissing suit as against endorser on ground that there was no cause of action disclosed against him in plaint—
 Subsequent suit against endorser is not barred by res judicata 868
 —S. 11—Decision as a result of gross negligence of guardian does not operate as res judicata as against minor 806h
 —S. 11—Decree wholly in favour of party—No issue decided against such party is res judicata in subsequent suit 770
 —S. 11—Execution—Dismissal of—Want of notice to judgment-debtor will not prevent operation of res judicata against judgment creditor 745a
 *—S. 11—Suit against defendants 1 to 6 alleging to be in possession of deceased's property—Deceased by will giving life interest to defendant 2 and vested remainder to defendant 4—Defendants 4 to 6 exonerated before trial—After decree 2 dying—Execution taken against property coming to defendant 4—Defendant 4 not being judgment-debtor or his legal representative, property in her hands cannot be proceeded against—Non-appearance by her to application for transfer of decree cannot create constructive res judicata 508a
 —S. 11—S. 11 is not applicable to execution proceedings but analogous principles can be applied 465b
 —S. 11—Execution proceedings—
 Party not appearing and not being heard—Unless summons has been declared to be served principle of res judicata will not apply 466c
 —S. 11—Execution proceedings—
 Execution taken for amount greater than that mentioned in decree—Failure of judgment debtor to appear is not res judicata 466c
 —S. 11—High Court cannot interfere with wrong decision on point of res judicata 231(1)b
 —S. 11—Execution—Decision in, that land being not service inam was saleable—Collector subsequently deciding land to be service inam—Fresh execution against portion of same survey number—Previous order held operated as res judicata—Collector's decision though ordi-

Civil P. C.

narily binding did not affect question— 130a
 —S. 11—Decision against Municipal Council is binding against its chairman 59a
 —S. 11—Erroneous decision on point of law is not res judicata—But subsequent decision cannot affect rights under former decision 59b
 —S. 11—S. 11 is not exhaustive 9a
 —S. 11—Res judicata applies to insolvency proceedings—Receiver's application for setting aside alienation dismissed—Creditor cannot again apply 9b
 —S. 13—Foreign judgment—Appeal dismissed—"Judgment in that suit" is appellate and not original judgment 511a
 —S. 13—Ex parte decree of foreign Court passed without jurisdiction—Decree transferred to British India for execution—Application in foreign Court to set aside decree—Decree is nullity and continues to be inexecutable in British India 393
 —S. 13—Ex parte foreign decree in personam against British subject not residing there at date of action will not be executed by British Courts 112a
 —S. 13—Entering into partnership in foreign country is not submission to its jurisdiction in matters connected with partnership 112b
 *—S. 13 (b)—Ex parte decree under summary procedure of Ceylon is not on merits within S. 13 (b) 544
 —S. 16—Suit by vendor to enforce specific performance of contract to purchase land is suit for land—Suit by vendee is covered by proviso to S. 16 436a
 *—S. 16—Suit by vendee for refund of purchase money which has been made charge on property—Court in which property is situated has jurisdiction 436b
 —S. 17—Distinct causes of action against several defendants can be combined in same suit if there is some common question of law or fact 622
 —S. 21—Acquiescence of parties cannot give jurisdiction 346b
 —S. 34—Amendment allowed on payment of costs—Acceptance of costs allowed—Effect stated 410b
 —S. 35—Person continuing appeal under O.22, R.10—Dismissal of appeal—

Civil P. C.

Such person is liable for full costs of respondents and not costs incurred from date of his application under O. 22, R. 10 411b

—S. 35—Costs are in discretion of trial Court — High Court will seldom interfere unless some principle is involved 224(1)

—S. 35 — Bad conduct disentitles party to costs even though successful 166c

—S. 39—When Court passes decree and there is decree in appeal therefrom, for all purposes of execution there is only one decree, viz. the original decree as amended by appellate Court—It is only this decree that is transferred 872a

—S. 39 and O. 21, R. 16—Decree assigned after transfer to another Court—Application under R. 16 can be entertained by original Court before certificate or record is received 110

—S. 41 and O. 21, R. 16—Decree assigned after transfer to another Court—Application under R. 16 can be entertained by original Court before certificate or record is received 110

—S. 44—Ex parte foreign decree in personam against British subject not residing there at date of action will not be executed by British Courts 112a

—S. 47—Purchase of property in suit by puisne mortgagee subject to decree to enforce prior mortgage—No irregularity arises by not impleading purchaser in execution of mortgage decree 838c

—S. 47—Purchase of property subject to mortgage decree—Agreement between purchaser and decree-holder not to bring property to sale—Sale held in breach of agreement by decree holder challenged by purchaser—Matter does not come under S. 47 838d

—S. 47—Whether property awarded by decree has been damaged on date of delivery can be considered in execution 825e

—Ss. 47 and 151—Suit for declaration and permanent injunction — Temporary injunction granted on plaintiff's executing security bond to Court, undertaking to make good loss occasioned by grant of temporary injunction—Suit dismissed—Bond can be enforced only under S. 151 691

*—S. 47—Question arising between stranger auction-purchaser and judgment-debtor falls under S. 47 and decision thereon is appealable 598d

Civil P. C.

—S. 47—Party bound by decree applying to set aside in execution—Application is under S. 47 and not O. 21, R. 100 569a

—S. 47—Decree-holder asking Court to record satisfaction—Court cannot in execution consider whether satisfaction was intended to defraud alleged assignee of decree—Separate suit is only remedy 523

—S. 47—Execution proceedings—Preliminary objections overruled—No final order—No appeal lies 500(1)

—S. 47 and O. 21, R. 103—Purchase of property by decree-holder and confirmation of sale—Application for possession of property by one of parties to suit under O. 21, R. 100—Alternative relief for crops as party under S. 47, Civil P. C., cannot be entertained 482a

—Ss. 47 and 151—Order of Court in execution proceedings under S. 151—Appeal and second appeal lies 399a

—S. 47—Power of executing Court to go into the disputed points of fact stated 362

—S. 47—Party to suit bound by decree — Dispute in execution must be settled under S. 47 340a

—S. 47—Order in proceedings under the section is open to appeal 305a

—S. 47 and O. 21, R. 22—Application by legal representative of deceased judgment-debtor to set aside sale for want of notice under O. 21, R. 22—Sale is invalid only to the extent of applicant's share 224(2)

*—S. 47—Attachment before judgment and surety bond—Proper procedure for decree-holder to enforce liability of surety is to proceed in execution 219c

—S. 47—Previous suit filed and property attached before judgment—Subsequent suit after such attachment—Property sold in subsequent suit under decree—Execution of decree in the prior suit resisted by purchaser under S. 47—Decree-holder in previous suit challenging other decree as collusive and fraudulent and alleging purchaser to be benami—Execution Court should decide the point and not refer decree-holder to a separate suit 166a

—S. 47—Both parts of section must be read together 166b

—S. 47 — Execution sale — Decree-holder becoming auction-purchaser —

Civil P. C.

Possession is taken as auction-purchaser 153a

*—S. 47—Decree creating a charge—Property brought to sale in execution—Order under S. 52, Provincial Insolvency Act, stopping sale is not appealable 152b

—S. 47—Nature of application is to be determined from substance and not from heading 130b

—S. 47 (1)—Matter falling under S. 47 should be decided in execution—Court has no discretion to refer parties to separate suit. 325f

—S. 49—Equities have to be enforced though assignee is assignee without notice 215b

—S. 49—Right of set off can be available against assignee of decree 215c

*—S. 50—Suit against defendants 1 to 6 alleging to be in possession of deceased's property—Deceased by will giving life interest to defendant 2 and vested remainder to defendant 4—Defendants 4 to 6 exonerated before trial—After decree defendant 2 dying—Execution taken against property coming to defendant 4—Defendant 4 not being judgment-debtor or his legal representative, property in her hands cannot be proceeded against—Non appearance by her to application for transfer of decree cannot create constructive res judicata 508a

*—S. 50 (1)—Execution application against legal representative of judgment-debtor without prayer to add such legal representative is valid 568a

—S. 54—Partition of revenue also is not necessary for applicability of section 259b

*—S. 54—Decree for partition of portion of undivided estate is outside scope of section 259a

—S. 55—Arrest of A in execution—B filing surety bond—On construction of his bond held that B could not be discharged from his liability in circumstances of the case 360a

—S. 55 (4)—Surety bond executed under S. 55 (4)—But surety not binding himself to do anything in case of default—He may plead that he incurred no liability under the bond—But if decree is passed against him he cannot raise this defence in execution proceedings 817b

—S. 63—Money in custody Court is not assets in attaching Court unless such

Civil P. C.

money is ordered to be credited to attaching Court 342 (2)

—S. 64 and O. 21, R. 90—Transferee from judgment-debtor after attachment can apply under R. 90 96

—S. 65—Sale in execution of decree and purchase by third party—Decree reversed on appeal within 30 days of sale—Decree need not be subsisting for confirmation of sale 598a

—S. 65—Purchaser in Court sale is entitled to property from date of sale and not date of confirmation 482b

*—S. 66—Property conveyed at revenue sale bonami for effecting fraud—Fraud committed—Property sold by benamidar to third party—Real owner cannot set up benami as defence to suit by third party 457

—S. 73—Decree-holder allowed to bid and set off amount of bid—Set off should be deemed to be made as soon as sale is made and other decree-holders cannot claim rateable distribution in the amount of bid 804

—S. 80—Objection as to want of notice can be waived 917c

—S. 80—Receiver to manage property and collect rent on commission is public officer 105a

—S. 80—Document, if valid notice, must be determined with common sense and after understanding it in sense intended by writer and understood by receiver 105b

—S. 92—Charitable and Religious Trusts Act (1920), Ss. 5 and 6—Non-compliance with order under S. 5 for filing accounts amounts to breach of trust by virtue of S. 6—Suit under S. 92, Civil P. C. is competent without sanction of Advocate-General even by person other than individual who obtains order under S. 6 854a

—S. 92—Some of plaintiffs dropping out of suits—Others can proceed with it 854b

—S. 92—Suit against person having beneficial interest in property can be brought 533b

—S. 92—Tests of applicability—If direction of Court is necessary or breach of trust exists and relief is one specified S. 92 applies 70

—S. 99—Non-joinder of necessary party in spite of objection taken from start—Suit should be dismissed 664b

Civil P. C.

- S. 100 and O. 21, R. 90—Case falling under O. 21, R. 90—No second appeal lies 838b
- S. 100—Madras Agency Tracts Interest and Land Transfer Act (1 of 1917), S. 4 (2)—Application under S. 4 (2) is not suit and order refusing it is not decree 695
- S. 100—Finding of fact though supported by evidence will be interfered with in second appeal if arrived at on wrong view of law 565(2)b
- S. 100—Finding of fact—High Court in second appeal cannot disturb 471a
- S. 100—Finding of fact from which custom is inferred cannot be interfered with by High Court in second appeal 390a
- S. 100—New plea cannot be entertained in second appeal 382d
- S. 100—Finding of fact—No second appeal lies 353(2)a
- S. 100—Finding of fact—Omission by lower Court to consider important evidence and application of erroneous presumptions of law—Finding of fact can be challenged in second appeal 163a
- S. 100—Misconstruction of important document in deciding question of fact—Interference is possible in second appeal 10b
- S. 102—Logs of timber placed in custody of Court—Removal from Court on Court's order by one of the parties—Suit for timber or for their value removed from Court valued less than Rs. 500—Suit is triable as small cause suit and no second appeal lies 636b
- S. 102—Suit for return of money less than Rs. 500 recovered as tax and injunction to prevent defendant from levying it again—Reliefs independent and necessary—Suit is not of small Cause nature 22a
- S. 105—Execution proceedings—Preliminary objections overruled—No final order—No appeal lies 500(1)
- S. 105—Evidence not properly considered—High Court will interfere 353(2)e
- S. 107 and O. 41, R. 20—O. 41 R. 20 does not exhaust appellate Court's power to add parties 806c
- *—S. 110—Plaintiff is not entitled to include interest accruing subsequent to suit in determining amount or value of subject-matter—Difference between

Civil P. C.

- plaintiff's and defendant's appeal pointed out 401
- S. 110—Substantial question of law as between parties to the case, and not merely of general importance, must exist to give right of appeal to Privy Council 221a
- S. 115 and Sch. 2, Para, 14—In the absence of objection by party, Court is not bound suo motu to remit award under para 14—High Court will not interfere in revision with decree passed on award as made 697
- S. 115—Plaintiffs representing temple knowing rights of parties—Party exonerated cannot be allowed to be proceeded against 508b
- S. 115—Court-fee—Decision favourable to plaintiff—Even revision application by Government does not lie 506a
- S. 115—Government not party—Decision on court-fee favourable to plaintiff—Whether Government can apply in revision—Quaere 506b
- S. 115—Decision on what amounts to office is revisable 496a
- S. 115—High Court cannot interfere with wrong decision on point of res judicata 231 (1)b
- S. 115—Appeal allowed—Revision should not be granted 217b
- S. 115—Court has discretion to treat appeal as civil revision 152c
- S. 115—Jurisdiction to decide rightly or wrongly does not mean refusal to follow binding precedents—Glaring error—High Court will interfere 94b
- S. 115—No grave injustice—Court is not bound to interfere 5b
- S. 141—Pauper application dismissed in default as no steps taken for prosecution can be restored on finding that some steps were taken 5a
- S. 144—Suit instituted against dead person—Decree passed—If money is paid under such decree Court should allow restitution 888 (1)
- *—S. 144—Test is restoration to injured party—Benefit to opposite party immaterial—Money ordered to be deposited for obtaining stay—On success of appeal money though not withdrawn by other party was refunded with interest 33 (2)
- S. 145—Order passed by Court not under S. 145 but under general power against sureties—Surety has right of appeal from such order 780

Civil P. C.

- S. 145—Surety bond executed by two persons to produce movable can be enforced without recourse to suit—Limitation runs from date of bond or date of failure to produce property—Proceedings taken against judgment-debtor in execution of decree or against one of the sureties for enforcing bond in which other is simply impleaded without any relief being claimed against him, are not steps against other surety to enforce bond so as to save limitation 722
- Ss. 145 and 151—Suit for declaration and permanent injunction—Temporary injunction granted on plaintiff's executing security bond to Court undertaking to make good loss occasioned by grant of temporary injunction—Suit dismissed—Bond can be enforced only under S. 151 691
- S. 145—Money paid by judgment-debtor into Court—Application before disbursement of money to convert into Government pro-notes is "proceeding consequent" on suit with in S. 145 FB 678b
- S. 145—Order dismissing petition to arrest surety is not appealable 342(1)a
- S. 145—Attachment of movables of judgment-debtor—Surety bond for production of articles—Procedure for enforcing surety bond indicated 342(1)b
- *—S. 145—Principal and surety—Surety bond for allowing execution of decree pending appeal—Consent decree passed in appeal—Surety is not discharged if consent decree is not outside scope of surety bond 309a
- S. 145 and O. 21, R. 43—S. 145 applies to enforce surety bond executed under O. 21, R. 43 219b
- *—S. 145—Attachment before judgment and surety bond—Proper procedure for decree-holder to enforce liability of surety is to proceed in execution 219c
- Ss. 148 and 151—Order of stay of delivery of possession conditional on payment of kist and rent by certain date is one under S. 151 and S. 148 applies to such order 563
- S. 151—Suit instituted against dead person—Decree passed—If money is paid under such decree Court should allow restitution 888 (1)
- S. 151—Suit for declaration and permanent injunction—Temporary injunction granted on plaintiff's executing

Civil P. C.

- security bond to Court undertaking to make good loss occasioned by grant of temporary injunction—Suit dismissed—Bond can be enforced only under S. 151 691
- Ss. 151 and 148—Order of stay of delivery of possession conditional on payment of kist and rent by certain date is one under S. 151, and S. 148 applies to such order 563
- *—S. 151 and O. 39—High Court has no power to grant injunction apart from O. 39 in appeal or revision from mofussil Courts 500(2)
- S. 151—Dismissal of suit—Each party allowed to bear his costs—Court mentioning as one of reasons in order as to costs, that in case decision of lower Court in another suit is reversed in pending appeal in High Court right of plaintiff to sue in former suit may be revived—Plaintiff is not entitled to have suits revived—Other remedies open, relief under S. 151 cannot be granted 485a
- S. 151—Court has inherent power to dismiss execution application for default FB 418c
- S. 151—Order of Court in execution proceedings under S. 151—Appeal and second appeal lies 399a
- S. 151—Sale held in contravention of express order of Court—Court can set aside such sale under S. 151 399b
- S. 151—Ex parte order regarding binding nature of debts of father on sons—Ex parte order as to delivery of property is void—Duty of Court indicated 345
- *—S. 151—Deficit Court-fee cannot be recovered after disposal of case 321
- S. 151—Court has no inherent right to deprive party of right obtained by limitation 258
- *—O. 1, R. 3—Plaintiff obstructed in worshipping deity by some of villagers—All villagers not joined as defendants—Decree can be passed against those who are impleaded 726b
- O. 1, Rr. 3 and 9—Person having right to defend is necessary party—Suit to eject from site and for removal of pail erected thereon—Plea that site belonged to Municipality and permission had been obtained from it for erection of pail—Municipality is necessary party and suit should be dismissed for non-joinder 664a

Civil P. C.

- O. 1, R. 3—Distinct causes of action against several defendants can be combined in same suit if there is some common question of law or fact 622
- O. 1, R. 8—Application for probate by executor—Any beneficiary can intervene—Proceedings are in representative character—Death of executor—Beneficiaries can continue proceedings 114a
- O. 1, R. 10, and O. 41, R. 20—O. 41, R. 20 does not exhaust appellate Court's power to add parties 806c
- O. 1, R. 10—Suit filed against dead person—Application to bring legal representative does not lie—Even if Court wrongly allows application S. 14, Limitation Act, does not apply 454
- O. 1, R. 10 (2)—Parties wrongly joined as defendants—Plaintiff giving up claim as against them or Courts finding that they have been wrongly joined—Procedure to be adopted and effect thereof pointed out 435
- O. 3, R. 1 and O. 16—Except for very good reasons party should not be ordered to appear on application under O. 3, R. 1—Proper procedure is under O. 16 821a
- O. 5, R. 4—Refusal of witness in foreign territory within 200 miles from the Court to attend on service of summons—Evidence should be taken on commission 366
- O. 5, R. 19—Unless requirements of O. 5, R. 19 are carried out, summons cannot be held to have been served 466d
- O. 5, R. 19—Unless there is declaration by Court as to due service of notice, constructive res judicata as to service does not arise 406
- O. 6, R. 8—From evidence Court noticing that consideration for suit transaction illegal—No objection raised by defendant—Still Court should look into facts and give proper decision 187a
- O. 6, R. 17—Amendment of plaint for stating relief originally intended, accurately and clearly can be allowed 410a
- O. 6, R. 17—Amendment allowed on payment of costs—Acceptance of costs allowed—Effect stated 410b
- O. 6, R. 17—Plaint amended—Amendment relates back to date of institution of suit for question as to limitation 153c
- O. 7, R. 6—Exemption from limi-

Civil P. C.

- tation should be expressly pleaded under O. 7, R. 6 675b
- O. 7, R. 6—Plea of exemption from limitation—New grounds of exemption cannot be allowed to be proved without amendment of plaint 395
- O. 7, R. 11—Order for payment of deficit court-fee within given time—Application for pauperism made within time granted is maintainable 498b
- O. 8, R. 6—Term "set-off" may include equitable set-off 203a
- O. 9—Court has inherent power to dismiss execution application for default FB 418c
- O. 9, R. 4—Dismissal of applications for making final decree does not bar subsequent application 55
- O. 9, R. 9—Pauper application dismissed in default as no steps taken for prosecution can be restored on finding that some steps were taken 5a
- O. 9, R. 12—Trial Court can strike out defence when order is disobeyed—But order should be free from ambiguity—Ambiguous order should be construed in favour of defendant 821b
- O. 11, R. 1—Suit on promissory note—Plea of want of consideration—Application by defendant without letting in evidence to issue interrogatories to plaintiff must be dismissed 298
- O. 11, Rr. 14 and 21—Plaintiff's non-compliance with order under O. 11, R. 14 does not warrant dismissal of suit 870
- O. 11, Rr. 21 and 14—Plaintiff's non-compliance with order under O. 11, R. 14 does not warrant dismissal of suit 870
- O. 16 and O. 3, R. 1—Except for very good reasons, party should not be ordered to appear on application under O. 3, R. 1—Proper procedure is under O. 16 821a
- O. 17—Court has inherent power to dismiss execution application for default FB 418c
- O. 17, R. 1—Plaintiff taking steps to secure attesting witness and not responsible for non-service—Witness dead during appeal—Plaintiff can prove document by other means—His own evidence is sufficient 612b
- O. 19, R. 1—Fact that Court admitting affidavit of plaintiff's next friend to prove pro-note and not calling him as

Civil P. C.

witness is not illegal if there is no contention as to facts 164
 —O. 20, R. 7—Decree—Date of decree is not the date on which it is actually drawn up, but the date on which judgment is pronounced 315a
 —O. 20, R. 12—Onus of proving actual profits received is on defendant—Onus shifts to plaintiff, if he claims more, to prove that defendant ought to have received more 825a
 —O. 20, R. 12—Person in possession is presumed to get rent according to prevailing rate 825b
 —O. 20, R. 12—Court has only to see whether possession of defendant is wrongful—It is not justified in going further and inquiring into degree of defendant's misconduct or culpability 825c
 —O. 21, Rr. 2 and 16—Decree holder asking Court to record satisfaction—Court cannot in execution consider whether satisfaction was intended to defraud alleged assignee of decree—Separate suit is only remedy 523
 *—O. 21, R. 2—Uncertified adjustment cannot be pleaded in execution even by assignee of decree-holder 157a
 —O. 21, R. 2—Transaction extinguishing decree partially or wholly is adjustment—Fresh contract otherwise legal though involving promise by judgment-debtor to do something in future is adjustment 28
 *—O. 21, R. 5—Decree transferred to another Court for execution—Latter Court can entertain execution application even though copy of decree has not been received by it 627
 —O. 21, R. 7—Power of executing Court to go into the disputed points of fact stated 362
 —O. 21, R. 11—Application otherwise than in accordance with law 872b
 —O. 21, Rr. 15 and 2—Execution application by one of joint decree-holders—Objection by other decree-holders that application is a fraud—Court can disallow execution 157b
 —O. 21, R. 16—Application by assignee to be recognized as decree-holder and for transmission of decree for execution is petition for execution 797
 *—O. 21, R. 16—Execution application against legal representative of judgment-debtor without prayer to add such legal representative is valid 568a
 —O. 21, R. 16—Decree assigned after transfer to another Court—Application under R. 16 can be entertained by original Court before certificate or record is received 110

Civil P. C.

 —O. 21, R. 17—Executing Court cannot go behind decree 197a
 —O. 21, R. 18—Right to set off cannot be claimed unless both decrees are before same Court for execution 215a
 —O. 21, R. 20—Mortgage decree for sale imposing personal liability in case of deficiency—Set off can be given even before sale 63
 —O. 21, R. 22—Application by legal representative of deceased judgment-debtor to set aside sale for want of notice under O. 21, R. 22—Sale is invalid only to the extent of applicant's share 224 (2)
 —O. 21, R. 39 (4)—Subsequent remittances to jail authorities by money order is application to Court and is step-in-aid 83
 —O. 21, R. 40—Detention to be valid need not be in writing—Judgment-debtor escaping from custody, commits offence under Penal Code (1860), S. 225-B 278
 *—O. 21, R. 43—Attachment before judgment—Surety bond executed in pursuance of order under O. 21, R. 43—Limitation for enforcing liability of surety is three years from date of decree 219a
 —O. 21, R. 43 and S. 145—S. 145 applies to enforce surety bond executed under O. 21, R. 43 219b
 *—O. 21, R. 43—Attachment before judgment and surety bond—Proper procedure for decree-holder to enforce liability of surety is to proceed in execution 219c
 —O. 21, Rr. 52 and 53—Money in custody Court is not assets in attaching Court unless such money is ordered to be credited to attaching Court 342 (2)
 *—O. 21, Rr. 61, 63 and 66—A obtained decree against B—B had mortgaged his property to C—A attached B's properties—Under O. 21, R. 58, C preferred claim petition stating that he had purchased property mortgaged to him from B—C's claim was dismissed and the order becoming conclusive under O. 21, R. 63, C brought present suit on his mortgage and contended that his claim petition having been dismissed the mortgage revived under law—Held that A who had purchased the mortgage property under his decree could challenge

Civil P. C.

validity of mortgage though he had notice of it under O. 21, R. 66—Held also that order under O. 21, R. 61 was not order in rem and hence mortgage in favour of C did not revive—Held further that the mortgage had become extinguished in sale 879b

*—O. 21, Rr. 62 and 66—Under R. 62 Court is satisfied of existence of mortgage and under R. 66 the purchaser buys property with notice of mortgage—Hence such purchaser is not precluded from challenging validity of mortgage 879a

*—O. 21, Rr. 63, 61 and 66—A obtained decree against B—B had mortgaged his property to C—A attached B's properties—Under O. 21, R. 58, C preferred claim petition stating that he had purchased property mortgaged to him from B—C's claim was dismissed and the order becoming conclusive under O. 21, R. 63, C brought present suit on his mortgage and contended that his claim petition having been dismissed the mortgage revived under law—Held that A who had purchased the mortgage property under his decree could challenge validity of mortgage though he had notice of it under O. 21, R. 66—Held also that order under O. 21, R. 61 was not order in rem and hence mortgage in favour of C did not revive—Held further that the mortgage had become extinguished in sale 879b

—O. 21, R. 63—Madras Estates Land Act (1908), Ss. 189 and 192—S. 192 relates only to procedure and does not extend jurisdiction conferred upon Revenue Courts by S. 189—Revenue Court has no jurisdiction to try suit under O. 21, R. 63 865

—O. 21, R. 63—Appointment of receiver under S. 92—Attachment in execution of decree—Dismissal of claim and suit under O. 21, R. 63—Sanction to sue receiver is not necessary 340b

—O. 21, R. 63—Scope of suit under—A suit to show that the claimant has a title to the property and that the order of attachment was not properly made would lie under O. 21, R. 63 328

*—O. 21, Rr. 66 and 62—Under R. 62 Court is satisfied of existence of mortgage and under R. 66 the purchaser buys property with notice of mortgage—Hence such purchaser is not precluded from challenging validity of mortgage 879a

*—O. 21, Rr. 66, 61 and 63—A obtained decree against B—B had mortgaged his property to C—A attached B's properties—Under O. 21, R. 58, C preferred claim petition stating that he had purchased property mortgaged to him from B—C's claim was dismissed and the order becoming conclusive under O. 21, R. 63, C brought present suit on his mortgage and contended that his claim petition having been dismissed the mortgage revived under law—Held that A who had purchased the mortgage property under his decree could challenge validity of mortgage though he had notice of it under O. 21, R. 66—Held also that order under O. 21, R. 61 was not order in rem and hence mortgage in favour of C did not revive—Held further that the mortgage had become extinguished in sale 879b

Civil P. C.

—O. 21, Rr. 72 and 84—Decree-holder allowed to bid and set off amount of bid—Set off should be deemed to be made as soon as sale is made and other decree-holders cannot claim rateable distribution in the amount of bid 804

—O. 21, R. 89—Deposit of mere 5 per cent. is not sufficient to set aside sale under O. 21, R. 89 598c

—O. 21, R. 89—Amount deposited in Court is not amount "received" within the meaning of R. 89 263

—O. 21, R. 89—Mortgage decree against A and B directing sale of A's interest first and B's interest in case of deficiency—A's interest sold and he applied under O. 21, R. 90—B's interest sold for deficiency—B applied under O. 21, R. 89—A's application rejected—B's application was competent and was not barred by A's making his application 54

*—O. 21, Rr. 90 and 92—Application by judgment-debtor to set aside sale dismissed—Judgment-debtor adjudicated insolvent on application filed subsequent to sale—Judgment-debtor, though adjudicated insolvent, can appeal from order of dismissal FB 851a

—O. 21, R. 90—Scope—No irregularity or fraud in actual conduct of sale—Case does not fall under O. 21, R. 90 838a

—O. 21, R. 90—Case falling under O. 21, R. 90—No second appeal lies 838b

*—O. 21, R. 90—The expression "person whose interests are affected by sale" is not restricted only to persons having

Civil P. C.

interest in praesenti—Adjudicated insolvent is such person 694
 *—O. 21, R. 90—Fraud under S. 18, Lim. Act, may be of any person, not necessarily of decree holder 626
 *—O. 21, R. 90—Person having attachment before judgment and getting decree subsequently has pecuniary interest and is person whose interests are affected by sale within O. 21, R. 90 455
 —O. 21, R. 90—Irregularity in conduct of sale—Evidence of injury may be circumstantial 225b
 —O. 21, R. 90—Several villages to be sold in one lot—Proclamation affixed in each village showing only that village as subject of sale is material irregularity 225c
 —O. 21, R. 90—System of conducting sale from day to day and fixing date for bringing sale to end deprecated 225d
 —O. 21, R. 90—Transferee from judgment-debtor after attachment can apply under R. 90 96
 —O. 21, R. 92—Decree-holder attaching one of two properties of judgment-debtor with wrong description—Sale held and certificate issued under erroneous description but application for delivery of possession dismissed—Application to amend sale certificate—Sale set aside by consent of parties, judgment-debtor taking time to pay—Judgment-debtor cannot subsequently contend that setting aside of sale was without jurisdiction 753
 —O. 21, Rr. 92 and 94—Sale in execution of decree and purchase by third party—Decree reversed on appeal within 30 days of sale—Decree need not be subsisting for confirmation of sale 598a
 —O. 21, R. 92—R. 92 applies only to cases of valid sales 598b
 —O. 21, R. 100 and S. 47—Party bound by decree applying to set aside in execution—Application is under S. 47 and not O. 21, R. 100 569a
 —O. 21, R. 100—Party bound by mortgage decree cannot set up paramount title in execution 569b
 —O. 21, R. 100 and S. 47—Purchase of property by decree-holder and confirmation of sale—Application for possession of property by one of parties to suit under O. 21, R. 100—Alternative relief for crops as party under S. 47 cannot be entertained 482a

Civil P. C.

—O. 22, Rr. 3 and 4—Suit on behalf of minor—Death of plaintiff—Suit does not abate—Legal representative can continue suit—Severance of status takes place from filing of suit for partition on showing that suit was for benefit of minor: 41 Mad 442: 42 I C 860: A. I. R 1918 Mad 379 and A. I. R 1930 Mad 486, Overruled FB 890a
 —O. 22, R. 3—Application for probate by executor—Any beneficiary can intervene—Proceedings are in representative character—Death of executor—Beneficiaries can continue proceedings 114a
 —O. 22, Rr. 4 and 5—High Court—Application under R. 5 can be treated as one under R. 4 920d
 —O. 22, Rr. 4 and 11—Death of one respondent before decree in appeal—Appeal could proceed without bringing legal representative of deceased on record—Decree of appellate Court is valid 218
 —O. 22, R. 4—Decree against wrong legal representative not in possession of estate of deceased is not binding on estate even in absence of fraud 43
 —O. 22, R. 10—Mortgagee of deceased plaintiff's share is entitled to continue appeal 411a
 —O. 22, R. 10—Person continuing appeal under O. 22, R. 10—Dismissal of appeal—Such person is liable for full costs of respondents and not costs incurred from date of his application under O. 22, R. 10 411b
 —O. 23, R. 1, Sub-Rr. 1 and 4—Court can refuse to allow one of several plaintiffs to withdraw from suit, if such course is not consented to by other co-plaintiffs or would be prejudicial to their interests 824
 *—O. 23, R. 1—Subject-matter is cause of action—Withdrawal of suit for ejectment for want of notice is no bar to subsequent suit even in absence of leave 3
 —O. 25, R. 1—Absence of prima facie good case on appeal by pauper is good grounds for security 519b
 —O. 26—Refusal of witness in foreign territory within 200 miles from the Court to attend on service of summons—Evidence should be taken on commission 366
 —O. 26, R. 1—Claim of great magnitude—Parties, even if women, should be examined by Court. 48c

Civil P. C.

—O. 32, R. 3—Assignment by mother of mortgagee in favour of both minor daughter and herself—Suit on such mortgage—Merely by fact of such assignment, interest of mother is not adverse to that of minor daughter so as to disqualify her from being appointed as guardian 806e

—O. 32, R. 3—Mother unsuccessfully tried to be served for being appointed guardian—Court officer made guardian—Minor cannot be said to be not represented at all 179a

—O. 32, Rr. 6 and 7—Suit on behalf of minor—Death of plaintiff—Suit does not abate—Legal representative can continue suit—Severance of status takes place from filing of suit for partition on showing that suit was for benefit of minor: 41 Mad 442: 42 IC 860: A. I. R. 1918 Mad 379 and A. I. R. 1930 Mad 486, Overruled FB 890a

—O. 32, Rr. 6 and 7—Court has to see that next friends act bona fide for interest of minor and not for their personal benefit FB 890d

—O. 32, R. 6—No order granting leave to next friend to receive property—R. 6 does not apply FB 678a

—O. 32, R. 7—O. 32, R. 7, applies to execution proceedings FB 456

—O. 33, R. 1—Estate not pauper—Yet person representing such estate may file suit as pauper 883b

*—O. 33, R. 1—Suit for redemption—Equity of redemption is "subject-matter of suit" within R. 1—It should be excluded in determining whether plaintiff is pauper 679

—O. 33, R. 1—Suit filed on payment of court-fees can be continued as pauper—No change under new Code 498a

—O. 33, R. 1—Order for payment of deficit court-fee within given time—Application for pauperism made within time granted is maintainable 498b

*—O. 33, R. 5—Hindu widow applying to file suit in forma pauperis—Before rejecting her application Court should take into consideration that she will neither be able to borrow money nor sell her property 883a

—O. 33, R. 5—Pauper application dismissed—Suit is still pending until plaint is dismissed—If court-fee is paid limitation will count from presentation of pauper application 883c

—O. 33, R. 5—It is customary to allow some time to pay court-fees when pauper application is dismissed 883d

Civil P. C

—O. 34, R. 5 (3)—Dismissal of applications for making final decree does not bar subsequent application 55

—O. 34, R. 6—Mortgage decree for sale imposing personal liability in case of deficiency—Set off can be given even before sale 63

—O. 34, R. 6—Maintenance decree creating charge on some items and making whole property liable—Security need not be proceeded against in first instance unless not doing so is mala fide—Analogy of mortgage decree does not apply 33(1)

—O. 34, R. 7—Suit for declaration of mortgage as invalid and for possession—Portion of mortgage found to be valid and decree for possession conditional on payment of certain amount within certain period which was made charge on property—Decree is redemption decree and Court has power under O. 34, R. 7 to extend the time for payment 762

—O. 37, R. 2 (2) (a)—Suit on hundis under—No agreement to pay interest in document—Statutory interest must be allowed 299

*—O. 39—High Court has no power to grant injunction apart from O. 39 in appeal or revision from mofussil Courts 500 (2)

—O. 39, R. 1—Injunction to restrain should not be ordinarily granted 103

—O. 40, R. 1—Receiver can be appointed in suit by simple mortgage FB 570a

—O. 40, R. 1—Appeal under Cl. 15 Letters Patent, lies from order of single judge rejecting application under O. 40, R. 1. FB 570b

*—O. 40, R. 1—Suit on simple mortgage—Interim receiver can be appointed for taking rent and profits only when mortgagor is personally bound to pay debt or commits waste 447a

—O. 40, R. 1—Party to dispute obtaining lease for indefinite period from receiver by practising fraud on Court—Lease can be summarily set aside without filing suit after notice under Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 111 67(2)

—O. 41, R. 3—Memorandum of appeal not registered is not appeal—Continuance of concession for completing it cannot be given 358

Civil P. C.

- O. 41, R. 4—Death of two of appellants pending appeal — Legal representative of one brought on record but application by representative of another dismissed—Decree can be dealt with as a whole against all appellants 655
- O. 41, R. 5 (3) and Ss. 148 and 151 —Order of stay of delivery of possession conditional on payment of kist and rent by certain date is one under S. 151 and S. 148 applies to such order 563
- O. 41, Rr. 20 and 33—Appellate Court has jurisdiction to add a person as party respondent for purpose of exercising power under O. 41, R. 33 806b
- O. 41, R. 20—O. 41, R. 20 does not exhaust appellate Courts power to add parties 806c
- O. 41, R. 22—Respondent in appeal cannot take cross objections unless he has filed memorandum of objections 465a
- O. 41, R. 23—From evidence appellate Court noticing that consideration for suit transaction immoral—No issue and finding by trial Court on that point — Case should be remanded for such finding 187b
- O. 41, R. 27 — Fresh evidence -- When Judge can allow in appeal pointed out 407a
- O. 41, R. 33—Power under O. 41, R. 33 can be exercised in favour of party not on record in appeal — Exercise of such power is discretionary with Court and depends on peculiar circumstances of each case 806a
- O. 41, R. 33—Ex-parte decree against some defendants restored by High Court—Against rest ex-parte decree set aside—Suit tried by another Sub Judge and dismissed as based on false document—Plaintiff alone appealing—Appeal dismissed—High Court can set aside the ex-parte decree against the defendants who had not appealed 529
- O. 43, R. 1—Order dismissing petition to arrest surety is not appealable 342(1)a
- O. 43, R. 1 (S) and O. 40, R. 1—Appeal under Cl. 15, Letters Patent, lies from order of single Judge rejecting application under S. 40, R. 1 FB 570b
- O. 44, R. 1, Proviso — Issue of notices to interested parties is not necessary to decide whether application should be rejected — Where issue of

Civil P. C.

- notice is directed, appeal should not be rejected under proviso 658
- *—O. 41, R. 1—Before leave to appeal as pauper is granted it is incumbent upon pauper appellant to satisfy Court that judgment is erroneous 519a
- O. 47, R. 1 — Review cannot be granted merely because judgment or order proceeds on incorrect exposition of law 662
- O. 47, R. 1—Order under can be reviewed if conditions laid down by O. 47, R. 1 are existent FB 631a
- *—O. 47, R. 1—Mistake of law cannot be apparent on face of record—(Per Waller, J., Pandalai, J., differing) FB 631b
- *—O. 47, R. 1—Collusive adjudication —Proof of claim by collusive creditors by Official Receiver —Appeal to District Judge -- District Judge annulling adjudication—There is error on face of record and District Judge has power to review FB 631c
- O. 47, R. 1 and S. 151—Dismissal of suit—Each party allowed to bear his costs—Court mentioning as one of reasons in order as to costs, that in case decision of lower Court in another suit is reversed in pending appeal in High Court right of plaintiff to sue in former suit may be revived —Plaintiff is not entitled to have suits revived—Other remedies open, relief under S. 151 cannot be granted 485a
- O. 47, R. 1—Dismissal of suit—Review on ground of discovery of new and important matter—Such matter must be existing at date of decree 485b
- O. 47, R. 1—Ex parte order regarding binding nature of debts of father on sons—Ex parte order as to delivery of property is void—Duty of Court indicated 345
- *—O. 47, R. 1 — Discovery of new argument based on fact or law is no ground for review 290
- O. 47, R. 1 — Pauper application dismissed in default as no steps taken for prosecution can be restored on finding that some steps were taken 5a
- O. 47, R. 4 (2) (b) — Under O. 47, R. 4, "Strict proof" means formal proof 217a
- Sch. 2, para. 3—Partition suit referred to arbitration—Compromise without Court's sanction consented to be guardians on behalf of minors and accepted by arbitrators—Such guardians cannot subsequently plead that consent will not affect minor's rights 862b

Civil P. C.

—Sch. 2, para. 3 (1) — Reference to arbitration though Court—Scope of inquiry is scope of suit—Neither arbitrator can exceed his duties nor Court has jurisdiction to pass decree in terms of award where arbitrator has so exceeded 862a

—Sch. 2, para. 14—In the absence of objection by party Court is not bound suo motu to remit award under para. 14—High Court will not interfere in revision with decree passed on award as made 697

—Sch. 2, para. 15 — All arbitrators not functioning at hearing —Objection not taken and merits of award not affected thereby—Order confirming award is not open to revision 862c

Companies Act (7 of 1913)

—S. 22—Registrar can refuse to register alteration of articles 129a

*—S. 40—Mere entry of shareholder's name in company's register does not amount to allotment 320a

—S. 82—Registrar can refuse to register alteration of articles 129a

—S. 162 — Company for conduct of lottery is illegal even if some objects are philanthropic—It should be wound up 16b

Company

*—Mere entry of share-holder's name in company's register does not amount to allotment 320a

Contract

—Competency—Law of Ceylon—Age of majority is 21—Person who is 18 is exempt from liability in Ceylon 756e

—Voluntary subscription is payable only when work is commenced on its basis—Right of suit—Contract 524b

Contract Act (9 of 1872)

—S. 4 — Insurance company at C—Policy taken at M through agent of company—Acceptance of proposal posted at C and assured informed by agent at M—Held acceptance was made at M and that policy was effected at C 764

—S. 11—No decree on contract by minor—Representation of majority is no ground for passing decree 94a

—S. 23—Outgoing karnam recommending person to act till minor heir attains majority on agreement by such person to pay pecuniary consideration — Agreement is opposed to public policy and cannot be enforced 768

Contract Act

—S. 30—Lottery is distribution dependent on chance only—It is different from wager 16a

—S. 30—Company for conduct of lottery is illegal even if some objects are philanthropic—It should be wound up 16b

*—S. 37—Voluntary subscription is payable only when work is commenced on its basis 524b

—S. 39—Toll contractor committing default—District Board exercising option of re-sale—Sale postponed for want of bidders without consent of contractor—Subsequent re-sale and suit for loss incurred—Limitation runs from first date of re-sale and not date of actual sale 704a

—S. 43—One of co-vendors paying compensation to vendee in pursuance of clause in sale deed is entitled to contribution from other co-vendors even though they were not consulted when payment was made 332a

—S. 51—Article duty paid means article for which duty is to be paid by seller—Sale of articles in bonded warehouse—Duty increased before delivery—Purchaser must tender full price including increased duty for getting delivery 24

*—S. 62—Promissory note insufficiently stamped containing acknowledgment of prior liability is admissible to save limitation 251 (2)a

*—S. 62 — Pro-note insufficiently stamped—Execution and loan admitted in written statement—Decree on note cannot be passed—Loan if independent of pro-note decree can be given on admission but otherwise mere admission does not give plaintiff cause of action—In latter case S. 58 Evidence Act does not cure defect 117

—S. 63—Toll contractor committing default—District Board exercising option of re-sale—Sale postponed for want of bidders without consent of contractor—Subsequent re-sale and suit for loss incurred—Limitation runs from first date of re-sale and not date of actual sale 704a

—S. 65—Suit for wages based on alleged contract—Contract not proved—Relief on quantum meruit cannot be granted unless asked 344

Contract Act

- *—S. 65—Contract void for noncompliance of provisions of Ss. 44 and 45, Madras District Municipalities Act—Neither principle of quantum meruit nor that of quantum valebat applies 332b
- S. 65—Contract of supply of goods—Contract being void—If S. 65 applies doctrine of quantum valebat applies—Obiter 332c
- S. 65—Benefit received under void contract must be restored 145
- S. 73—Act is not repealed by S. 73 729b
- S. 73—Chit fund—Subscriber purchasing chit at auction and executing security bond for regular payment of future instalments—Clause empowering stake holder to demand amount due for remaining instalments in lump sum on default of one instalment is not penal 657
- —S. 73 Illus (n) and (r)—Non-payment of money due itself constituting breach of contract—No interest can be allowed in addition to recovery of money unless plaintiff gives adequate proof that by reason of breach of contract special loss or damage was sustained and if unless such claim for interest is not one coming under category of cases specified in Interest Act (1839), S. 1 729c
- S. 74—Chit fund—Stipulation making prize winners liable to pay all future instalments on default is not penal 252
- S. 107—Toll contractor committing default—District Board exercising option of re-sale—Sale postponed for want of bidders without consent of contractor—Subsequent re-sale and suit for loss incurred—Limitation runs from first date of re-sale and not date of actual sale 704a
- *—S. 126—One of joint promisors paying entire debt—He is not surety nor entitled to subrogation in place of creditor in respect of securities held by latter 39
- S. 135—Giving time does not mean mere forbearance to sue 756b
- S. 135—Mere taking of additional security does not discharge surety 756c
- S. 135—Giving of time—Acceptance of interest in advance amounts to giving of time 756d
- *—S. 135—Principal and surety—Surety bond for allowing execution of decree pending appeal—Consent decree

Contract Act

- passed in appeal—Surety is not discharged if consent decree is not outside scope of surety bond 309a
- S. 135—Agreement to discharge principal debtor with reservation of right against surety does not discharge surety 309b
- S. 135—Contract by creditor giving time to principal debtor for payment discharges surety 309c
- *—S. 141—One of joint promisors paying entire debt—He is not surety nor entitled to subrogation in place of creditor in respect of securities held by latter 39
- —S. 178—Person before adjudication borrowing money and assigning railway receipt to bank—Official Assignee after adjudication claiming goods of insolvent under S. 52 (2) (c)—As assignment of railway receipt effects valid pledge of goods Official Assignee cannot succeed—Assignment of railway receipt coupled with letter of lien over goods passed constructive possession to bank 207a
- S. 178—"Person"—Not restricted to "mercantile agent"—Includes owner not in possession of goods 207c
- S. 253—Partnership—Dissolution may be inferred from circumstances 353 (2)b
- Co-operative Societies Act (2 of 1912)
- S. 2 (d)—Legal adviser of society is "officer" of society 682a
- S. 43—Member of the Bar who is also member of Co operative Society, instructed by the society to engage in legal proceedings on behalf of society—His position is only that of vakil and not that of officer, or servant of society 682b
- Cosharer
- Right to profits against co-sharer in possession is not right to mesne profits and can be transferred 710 (1)b
- Cotton Duties Act (2 of 1896)
- Ss. 6, 8, and 9—Power of Collector to make assessment given by S. 9 cannot be limited either by any defect in return or even by absence of any return 748a
- Ss. 8 and 25—Fine imposed under S. 25 is not "duty." 748d
- Ss. 8 and 9—Assessee failing to make return under S. 8 cannot plead lapse of time between production of goods and initiation of steps to assess them by way of defence to a claim for arrears of duty 748e

Cotton Duties Act

—S. 9—Statute imposing duty should be strictly construed in so far as imposition of such duty is concerned—This principle does not extend to procedure to collect it 748c

—S. 9—Owner of goods failing to submit return cannot escape duty though assessed after he had sold factory 748f

Court-fees

—Substance of suit determines court-fees 439a

—Determination—Question of court-fee payable has to depend on allegations in plaint 431b

—Ascertainment — Regard must be had to allegation in plaint 430a

—Defendant making claims as to items in account to be taken in suit, is not required to pay court-fees on sums claimed—Accounts 353 (1)

Court-Fees Act (7 of 1870)

—Ss. 7 (4) (a) and 7 (iv) (c)—Decree against plaintiff on mortgage executed by plaintiff's father—Prayer for declaration that decree is not binding on plaintiff's share of property—S. 7 (iv) (a) applies—Substance of relief claimed and not mere form of plaint should be looked into 430b

* —S. 7 (4) (a)—Suit by vendor to set aside sale deed and for recovery of possession of property—Court-fee for relief for possession is not necessary 231(2)

—S. 7 (4) (c) (as amended in Madras)—Suit for partition, possession and declaration setting aside previous alienation—Plaintiff's share determines valuation—S. 7 (4) (c) applies and not S. 7 (4) (a) 93

—S. 7 (4) (c)—Suit by landholder to eject tenants after notice praying for declaration of his kudivaram rights—S. 7 (4) (c) applies and not S. 7 (5) or S. 7 (11) (cc) 42

—S. 7 (4) (f) — Additional prayer for rendition of accounts in suit for division of property by metes and bounds. 431c

 —S. 7 (4) (f)—Suits for taking accounts in partnership and partition suits

—Appellants can file appeals on any valuation they like—Procedure for collecting deficit court-fee indicated 330

* —S. 7 (5)—Attachment of property in execution of decree—Claim to property on basis of sale in favour of claimant dismissed—Suit within one year to avoid attachment—Value for purposes of jurisdiction is not market value of land but value under S. 7, Cl. 5 439b

Court-fees Act

* —S. 7 (5)—Suit by vendor to set aside sale-deed and for recovery of possession of property—Court fee for relief for possession is not necessary 231 (2)

—S. 7 (5) or S. 7 (11) (cc) and S. 7 (4) (c)—Suit by landholder to eject tenants after notice praying for declaration of his kudivaram rights—S. 7 (4) (c) applies and not S. 7 (5) or S. 7 (11) (cc) 42

—S. 7 (5) (xi) — Suit for recovery of raiyati land held on patta—Plaint cannot be valued on value of land as building site 367 (1)a

—S. 11—Plaintiff asked to pay additional court-fee in suit for partnership accounts—No mention in final decree as to from which of the defendants such court-fee was to be realized—Executing Court has jurisdiction to pass any order regarding it and to collect it as costs relating to execution 787

—S. 12—Court-fee—Decision favourable to plaintiff—Even revision application by Government does not lie 506a

—S. 12—Government not party—Decision on court-fee favourable to plaintiff—Whether Government can apply in revision—Quaere 506b

—S. 12—Wrong principle applied in question of court-fees—High Court can interfere in revision 367 (1)b

* —Ss. 13 and 15 — Deficit court-fee cannot be recovered after disposal of case 321

—S. 17 and Sch. 1, Arts. 1 and 2—Suit on two promissory notes of Rs. 600 and Rs. 400—Court-fee should be paid on distinct amounts—Court-fee for Rs. 400 should be paid as under Art. 2 and not Art. 1 178

—Sch. 1, Art. 1—Term "set-off" may include equitable set-off 203a

—Sch. 1, Art. 1—Suit on promissory note—Claim for specified amount by way of set-off by reason of breach of covenant of contract of sale out of which transaction in suit arose — Claim came under Art. 1 203b

—Sch. 1, Arts. 1 and 2—Suit on two promissory notes of Rs. 600 and Rs. 400—Court-fee should be paid on distinct amounts—Court-fee for Rs. 400 should be paid as under Art. 2 and not Art. 1 178

—Sch. 2, Art. 17 (a) —Reversioner's suit for declaring alienation by widow not binding on them decreed—Transferee held entitled to certain sum from ultimate reversioners—Receiver ordered to be appointed on happening of contingent event —Transferee appealing against whole decree and claiming larger sum—Court-fees payable are under Art. 17 (a) for all reliefs 108

Court-fees Act

—Sch. 2, Art. 17-A (i)—Prayer for declaration that mortgage is not binding on plaintiff comes under Art. 17-A (i) 430c

—Sch. 2, Art. 17-B—Severance in status—Subsequent suit for division by metes and bounds and for possession of plaintiff's share — Suit falls under Art. 17-B 431a

Criminal Law Amendment Act (14 of 1908)

—S. 17 (1)—Simply because object of unlawful association and object of some individual person are identical such person cannot be held to be assisting association unless connexion between two is proved 369

—S. 17 (1) — Charge of picketing against accused—Two separate sentences under both Criminal Law Amendment Act and Ordinance (5 of 1932) are illegal 337

—S. 17 (1)—Congress is unlawful association and can be taken judicial notice of (Obiter) 123c

—S. 17 (1)—“Assists” means intentionally assists 123d

Criminal Procedure Code (5 of 1898)

—Ss. 110 and 162 — Inquiry under Ch. 8 is not inquiry into offence, and statement given to police cannot be shut out by use of S. 162 683 (2)

—S. 132—Protection given by two sections—Difference pointed out 268a

—S. 132 — Application of section—Only complaint and sworn statement should be referred to 268b

—S. 132—Construction—Policy of legislature is to afford adequate protection to public servant 268c

—S. 145—Pujari having possession on behalf of trustee cannot set up that that possession is his own 245b

—S. 146—Party to dispute obtaining lease for indefinite period from receiver by practising fraud on Court—Lease can be summarily set aside without filing suit after notice under Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 111 67(2)

* —S. 147—Dispute as to possession and right to perform puja — Magistrate can deal with latter claim also 245a

Criminal P. C.

—S. 162—Inquiry under Chap. 8 is not inquiry into offence and statement given to police cannot be shut out by use of S. 162 688(2)

*—S. 162 — Assertion made before police in order to show that witness is making statement in witness box which he did not make before police cannot be filed 372(2)

—S. 162—Statement made by witnesses to police in course of investigation cannot be used to corroborate witnesses' evidence 233d

—S. 162—Statement to police during investigation of offence different from one under trial can be used by accused for cross-examination 65(1)

—S. 164—Statement by person made under S. 164 to one Magistrate found to be false—Trial of case by another Court in which different version is given by same person—Complaint by latter Court is proper in respect of false statement made to Magistrate 767b

—S. 164 — Statements recorded by Magistrate under S. 164 are evidence in judicial proceedings within Penal Code (1860), S. 193, Expl. (2) 125a

—S. 164—Statements under S. 164—Offence triable exclusively by Sessions—Sessions Court can file complaint—Sanction asked by Public Prosecutor—Complaint can be filed even after six months. 125b

—S. 188, Proviso 1—Mere dishonest retention of stolen property in foreign territory—Certificate of political agent is necessary for trial 461(1)

*—S. 195—Same act constituting offence under Ss. 193 and 471, I. P. C.—Prosecution under S. 471 alone without complaint of District Munsif before whom document is used does not lie 413a

—S. 197—Karnam acting as village Magistrate 270a

—S. 197—Village Magistrate charged with offence under S. 411, I. P. C.—Sanction under S. 197 is not necessary 270b

—S. 197—Construction — Policy of legislature is to afford adequate protection to public servant 268c

—Ss. 209 (2) and 436—Magistrate discharging accused on ground that he has no jurisdiction to entertain complaint is not order of discharge and Sessions Judge is not competent to deal with it under S. 436 413b

Criminal P. C.

—S. 209 (2)—Order of discharge must be based on ground that charge is groundless 413c

*—Ss. 219 and 226—S. 226 cannot be applied with reference to additional evidence taken under S. 219 247c —Ss. 233 and 235—Trial of offences under Ss. 170 and 175, I. P. C., together is illegal 434(1)a —S. 237 — For application of S. 237 there should be no doubt about facts 843b

—Ss. 253 and 254—Complaint under certain sections—Charge under different section amounts to discharge under sections complained against 65(2)a —S. 254—Complaint under certain sections—Charge and acquittal under another—Retrial—ordered—Trying Magistrate cannot frame charge under sections complained against 65(2)b

*—S. 298—Duty of Judge or jury drawing presumptions or inferences from evidence—explained 233b

—S. 342—Accused defended by counsel—Failure of Magistrate to put explicit question is immaterial 233c

—Ss. 349, 380 and 562 — Distinction between case submitted under S. 562 and one submitted under S. 349 pointed out 728b

—S. 350 (1)—Magistrate who framed charge after hearing prosecution witnesses transferred — His successor cannot ignore charge but accused has right under S. 350 to have any of witnesses recalled or reheard 841

*—S. 367—Judgment signed but not pronounced by Magistrate — Judgment pronounced by successor of such Magistrate—Accused is not entitled to de novo trial 251 (1)

—S. 367 — Judgment should not be unnecessarily long 233c

—Ss. 380 and 562 (2) — Magistrate to whom case is referred under S. 562 (2) has no power to set aside conviction under S. 380 — He can only either convict or make or direct further inquiry 728a

—S. 403—Acquittal by Court wanting in territorial jurisdiction — Accused can plead autrefois acquit unless failure of justice is caused FB 765

—S. 403—Mistaken order of acquittal in previous case when discharge alone

Criminal P. C.

was possible is no bar to subsequent trial 98

—S. 417—Government must sparingly use right of appeal against acquittal 230a

—S. 422—Notice of appeal not sent to officer appointed by Government — No objection by Government — Appellate order should not be interfered with unless injustice is caused 277a

—S. 422 — Notice to complainant is not compulsory 277b

—S. 435—Findings of fact for which there is evidence would not be interfered with 279 (1)a —S. 436—Magistrate discharging accused on ground that he has no jurisdiction to entertain complaint is not order of discharge and Sessions Judge is not competent to deal with it under S. 436 413b

*—S. 437—Person committed to Sessions Court for offence under S. 201, I. P. C.—Subsequent examination of witness under S. 219, Criminal P. C., by committing Magistrate—Sessions Judge adding charge under S. 302, I. P. C., also on basis of such evidence — Such charge must be quashed 247b

—S. 439 — Offence committed found to be technical one—No further inquiry was ordered 434 (1)b

—S. 439—Court cannot revise its own order 247a

—Ss. 476 and 164—Statement by persons made under S. 164 to one Magistrate found to be false — Trial of case by another Court in which different version is given by some person—Complaint by latter Court is proper in respect of false statement made to Magistrate 767b

—Ss. 476 and 164—Statements under S. 164—Offence triable exclusively by Sessions—Sessions Court can file complaint—Sanction asked by Public Prosecutor—Complaint can be filed even after six months 125b

—S. 476—False evidence given—Person should be tried — Age, relationship and other circumstances are to be considered by trying Magistrate 125c

—S. 476—Several complaints by one order — Several accused must file separate appeals 125d

—S. 476 — Finding that inquiry into offence is expedient in interest of justice is necessary 67 (1)

Criminal P. C.

- S. 476 A — Several complaints by one order — Several accused must file separate appeals 125d
- S. 476 B — Complaint under S. 476 — S. 476 is not exhaustive as to powers of appellate Court 767a
- S. 483 — Marriage is not legal institution — Offspring is entitled to maintenance against father only if and when mother's tavazhi or tarwad is unable to maintain them 794
- S. 488 — Wife can only claim maintenance under S. 488 on scale appropriate to her station in life 688(1)
- S. 491 — Costs — High Court has no jurisdiction to award costs in application for issuing writ of habeas corpus FB 102
- S. 494 — Mistaken order of acquittal in previous case when discharge alone was possible is no bar to subsequent trial 98
- S. 517 — Accused from whom bulls were seized by police acquitted of charge of theft — Bulls should be returned to them — Criminal Court should not decide question of ownership 434 (2)
- S. 531 — Acquittal by Court wanting in territorial jurisdiction — Accused can plead autrefois acquit unless failure of justice is caused FB 765
- S. 537 — Where accused is prejudiced by not having notice of facts which constitute ingredients of offence his conviction of such offence must be set aside 843c
- Ss. 562, 349 and 380 — Distinction between case submitted under S. 562 and one under S. 349 pointed out 728b
- Ss. 562 (2) and 380 — Magistrate to whom case is referred under S. 562 (2) has no power to set aside conviction under S. 380 — He can only either convict or make or direct further inquiry 728a

Criminal Trial

- Accused's confession if it is the only evidence against him must be taken as whole 888 (2)a
- * — Case and counter case — Procedure to be followed indicated FB 367 (2)
- Complaint under certain sections — Charge and acquittal under another — Retrial of charge ordered — Trying Magistrate cannot frame charge under sections complained against 65 (2)b

Decree

- Execution — More fact that judg-

Decree

- ment-debtor does not object to amount for which execution is taken at one stage, does not bar him from raising the plea in subsequent execution proceeding 844c
- Decree obtained against minor's father and death of father — Minor not impleaded in execution but widow brought on record as legal representative — Sale held in execution should not be set aside merely on ground that minor is not brought on record 833b
- Execution — Judgment-debtor preventing delivery by obstruction must take consequences of his action — Sale confirmed on 30th August 1921 and delivery petition on 22nd September 1921 — One item not delivered and petition 'closed' — Subsequent petitions for delivery on 23rd September 1924 on which delivery was ordered by 9th December 1924 and again on 11th March 1926 — Latter petition dismissed as time-barred — Fresh petition on 3rd March 1927 held neither barred by time nor by rule of res judicata by order of dismissal of petition of 11th March 1926 as that order was simply the dismissal of misconceived petition 745b
- Execution — Application for execution against minor judgment-debtor impleading guardian with bona fide belief that he was living — Application gives fresh starting point of limitation though guardian is found to be dead before application 696
- Decree in another suit cannot be set aside in absence of fraud or collusion 639h
- Execution — Compromise decree — Parties deliberately limiting recourse to execution proceedings to some contingency — Decree cannot be executed except on happening of that contingency 466a
- Execution — Compromise decree — Execution specifically barred except on one matter — Execution taken not on such matter — Failure to appear on notice of execution does not make every part of decree executable 466f
- Execution — Court has inherent power to dismiss execution application for default FB 418c
- * — Execution — Application finally and properly dismissed cannot be revived — Test for applicability of principle of revival indicated FB 418d

Decree

—Execution—Executing Court cannot go behind decree 197a

—Execution — Decree-holder cannot prove that property was family property and that defendant was manager thereof 175b

—Execution — Maintenance decree creating charge on some items and making whole property liable—Security need not be proceeded against in first instance unless not doing so is mala fide—Analogy of mortgage decree does not apply 33 (1)

Deed

—Construction—Held that transaction in question resembled more closely a lease and was not mortgage pure and simple 852c

—Construction—Substance and not merely form of colour of transaction should be looked into 795a

—Construction—Settlement—Awarding of share of inheritance to illegitimate children by Sudra donor is not conclusive of the meaning attached to the word "santhathi"—Obiter 659a

—Construction—Gift—Cases on construction of deeds in other cases are not of much use as authority—Donor to enjoy the properties during lifetime and after him his male santhathi or adopted santhathi to take them—Donor not to sell or mortgage during lifetime — Donor gets heritable estate 659b

* —Validity—Order in lunacy is binding on parties thereto or those claiming under them—Unless such order is superseded, alienation by lunatic, even during lucid interval is null and void 624

—Construction—"Veedham" explained 516b

—Construction—Deed or will—Irrevocability and immediate disposition—Registration as deed—Provision for unborn sons and appointment of wife to work as executrix—Document held to be settlement deed and not will 492

—Construction—Arrest of A in execution—B filing surety bond—On construction of his bond held that B could not be discharged from his liability in circumstances of the case 360a

—Construction—Deed should be construed as a whole and not in isolated parts 194c —Construction—Grant of village—"M" does not necessarily mean mauza 194d —Construction—Registered mortgage-deed setting out terms of contract—No subsequent conduct of parties should be looked to for interpreting it 171c

Deed

Easements Act (5 of 1882)

—S. 7—Artificial stream is one which is artificial at source or flows through artificial channel—Proprietors of adjoining lands of artificial streams cannot enjoy their water without grant or prescription 10a

—S. 7, Illus (j)—Surplus water from Government lands stored in small ponds, or natural depressions and used for irrigation—Government is entitled to levy charge for use of such water and no easement to use such water can be acquired 648

—S. 13—Natural rights are not restricted 184b

—S. 18—Customary right to do ceremonies under tree belonging to another is valid and can be proved 390b

Election

—Injunction to restrain should not be ordinarily granted 103

Equity

—Specific contract between parties—Principle of equity can still be applied, if what subsequently occurs is contemplated by neither side 844a

Estoppel

* —Benamidar mortgagor—Transferee from heirs of benamidar can sue for redemption and mortgagee is estopped from denying right of mortgagor 635

Evidence

—Statement given on oath must be believed unless inherently improbable or contradicted 225a —Party cross-examining his own witness—Whole evidence need not be rejected 137d

Evidence Act (1 of 1872)

—S. 27—Statement leading to discovery of articles is admissible 233a

—S. 34—Mere filing of accounts and exhibiting them does not prove various items in them—Other corroborative evidence is necessary 756a

—S. 35—Oral admission acted on and recorded by Court in its judgment is admissible in evidence 184a

* —S. 41—Order in lunacy is binding on parties thereto or those claiming under them—Unless such order is superseded, alienation by lunatic, even during lucid interval, is null and void 624

Evidence Act

- S. 41—Whether judgment refusing probate of will is judgment in rem—Quaere 114b
- S. 43—Suit for damages for malicious prosecution—Value of judgment in criminal Court — Civil Court should undertake independent inquiry and not take into consideration grounds of acquittal in criminal Court 429b
- *—S. 58 — Pro-note insufficiently stamped—Execution and loan admitted in written statement—Decree on note cannot be passed—Loan if independent of pro-note decree can be given on admission but otherwise mere admission does not give plaintiff cause of action—In latter case S. 58 does not cure defect 117
- S. 65—Party not producing document in his possession should not be allowed to prove contents by secondary evidence 451c
- S. 68 (as amended by Act 31 of 1926) —Retrospective effect—Whether S. 68 as amended by Act 31 of 1926 is not retrospective so far as the operation of admitting evidence is concerned—Quaere 612a
- Ss. 68 and 69 — Plaintiff taking steps to secure attesting witness and not responsible for non-service—Witness dead during appeal—Plaintiff can prove document by other means—His own evidence is sufficient 612b
- S. 68, Proviso (as amended by Act 31 of 1926)—Admission by executant as to execution of mortgage — Attesting witnesses need not be called 432a
- S. 90—Ancient document—Certified copy from proper office—Proof of identity of parties and occasion when it was made is sufficient to prove document and its contents 860a
- *—Ss. 91 and 58—Pro-note insufficiently stamped—Execution and loan admitted in written statement—Decree on note cannot be passed—Loan if independent of pro-note decree can be given on admission but otherwise mere admission does not give plaintiff cause of action—In latter case S. 58 does not cure defect 117
- S. 91—Pro-note with contemporaneous consideration inadmissible — Suit fails 71
- S. 92 — Consent decree whether evidence is admissible to explain ambiguity 516c

Evidence Act

- S. 92—Document evidencing disposition—Evidence to show that it is enforceable in some manner other than expressly stated is inadmissible—But evidence to show it to be sham and meant to be inoperative is admissible 48b
- S. 101—Burden of proof is on party alleging it 137e
- S. 101—Person purchasing property in wife's name — Wife is benamidar unless otherwise proved 137f
- Ss. 101 to 103—Landlord entitled to rent—Exemption on special plea must be proved by person raising it — Facts of plea within tenant's knowledge—Onus is on tenant 101
- S. 101 — Burden of proving that registered deed was sham is on person alleging when he was party to deed 48a
- S. 101 — Shipping—Bills of lading containing in margin description of goods as given by merchant and also clause stating contents unknown—Burden is on merchant to show that specification is correct—Shippers have to deliver goods tendered 7
- S. 103—Onus of proving actual profits received is on defendant — Onus shifts to plaintiffs, if he claims more, to prove that defendant ought to have received more 825a
- S. 106—Landlord entitled to rent—Exemption on special plea must be proved by person raising it—Facts of plea within tenant's knowledge — Onus is on tenant 101
- *—S. 114 — Duty of Judge or jury drawing presumptions or inferences from evidence explained 233b
- S. 114—Burden of proof is on party alleging it 137e
- S. 114—Person purchasing property in wife's name—Wife is benamidar unless otherwise proved 137f
- S. 115—Decree-holder attaching one of two properties of judgment-debtor with wrong description—Sale held and certificate issued under erroneous description but application for delivery of possession dismissed — Application to amend sale certificate—Sale set aside by consent of parties, judgment-debtor taking time to pay—Judgment-debtor cannot subsequently contend that setting aside of sale was without jurisdiction 753
- *—S. 115—Father getting some properties from widow and relinquishing his reversionary right—Son inheriting:

Evidence Act

such property is not estopped from suing for remaining property as nearest reversioner after death of widow 637a

—S. 115 — No estoppel unless other party has changed position on faith of representation 471g

*—S. 142—Court's discretion in allowing cross-examination by party calling him should not be exercised unless necessity appears from examination in chief — Permission to cross-examine is necessary — It should not be tacit but be expressed in some form—S. 142 does not apply to the case 137b

—S. 145—Statement made by witness to police in course of investigation cannot be used to corroborate witness's evidence 233d

*—S. 154 — Court can allow cross-examination of one's own witness without declaring him to be hostile 137a

*—Ss. 154 and 142—Court's discretion in allowing cross-examination by party calling him should not be exercised unless necessity appears from examination in-chief — Permission to cross-examine is necessary — It should not be tacit but should be expressed in some form—S. 142 does not apply to the case 137b

—S. 154 — Discretion should not be interfered with in appeal 137c

—S. 154—Party cross-examining his own witness—Whole evidence need not be rejected 137d

Execution

—Res judicata—Decision against persons in his absence on matter of which he had no notice is not binding on him 844b

—Decree obtained against minor's father and death of father—Minor not impleaded in execution but widow brought on record as legal representative—Sale held in execution should not be set aside merely on ground that minor is not brought on record 833b

—Whether property awarded by decree has been damaged on date of delivery can be considered in execution 825e

—Sale — Title of bona fide stranger auction purchaser cannot be attacked by party to suit in which decree is passed 806d

*—Suit against defendants 1 to 6 alleging to be in possession of deceased's property—Deceased by will giving life interest to defendant 2 and vested remainder to defendant 4—Defendants 4 to 6 exonerated before trial—After decree defendant 2 dying—Execution taken against property coming to defendant 4—Defendant 4 not being judgment-debtor or his legal representative, property in her hands cannot be proceeded against—Nonappearance by her to application for transfer of decree cannot create constructive res judicata 508a

Execution

—Plaintiffs representing temple knowing rights of parties—Party exonerated cannot be allowed to be proceeded against 508b —Execution proceedings — Execution taken for amount greater than that mentioned in decree—Failure of judgment-debtor to appear is not res judicata 466e

—Ex parte decree of foreign Court passed without jurisdiction — Decree transferred to British India for execution — Application in foreign Court to set aside decree—Decree is nullity and continues to be inexecutable in British India 393

Execution Sale

—Purchase of property in suit by puisne mortgagee subject to decree to enforce prior mortgage—No irregularity arises by not impleading purchaser in execution of mortgage decree 838c

Fugitive Offenders' Act (1881, 44 and 45 Vict. Ch. 69)

—S. 19—Magistrate cannot discharge accused except on ground enumerated — Justifiability of arrest cannot be looked into 503(1)

Government of India Act (1919, 9 and 10, Geo. 5 Ch. 101)

—S. 107—Court-fee— Decision favourable to plaintiff—Even revision application by Government does not lie 506a

Government Servants' Conduct Rules

*—Fundamental R. 52—Government servant accepting private job during leave period and drawing leave allowance—Leave not revoked by Government — Government is not entitled to refund of allowance paid 173

Grant

—Service grant — Sale of zamindari does not give right to recover possession of village granted to third persons and not resumed 221b

—Shrotriom grant may be a grant of kudivaram as well as melwaram 194b

Guardian and Ward

—Guardian cannot impose unconditional personal liability on minor by

Guardian and Ward

executing promissory note in name of minor 710 (2) b

Hindu Law

—Adoption — Widower adopting son after death of his wife—Wife though not present at time of adoption still becomes mother of adoptee—Adoptee inherits to relations of adoptive mother

FB 550 a

*—Adoption — Consent of nearest sapinda given not for spiritual benefit of deceased but for his own ends and under wrong impression — Adoption to spite nearest heirs after long delay—Adoption is invalid 540

—Alienation — All members of joint family parting with their rights of joint family property — Question between alienees is not one between coparceners. 871b

—Alienation by female heirs—Presumptive reversioner confirming alienation is barred from challenging it after succession opens to him 856a

—Alienation by limited owner—Necessity—Meaning explained 639b —Alienation—Widow — Compromise in good faith for benefit of the estate is binding on estate 639c —Alienation—Widow—Duty of lender —If lender makes proper inquiries and acts honestly, he is protected, although it turns out that in point of fact there was no real necessity 639d

—Alienation—Widow — Legal necessity—The incurring of legal expenses for establishing valuable right and paying off of revenue due to Government are necessities recognised by law 639f

—Alienation — Guardian — Personal decree against—Minor's property is not liable if no decree is passed against minor as well 175a

—Alienation — Coparcener — Alienee's right is fluctuating one — Family property as at time of suit and not as at time of alienation should be taken 158

—Debts — Legal necessity — Adults joining in execution — Evidence of circumstances of need for borrowing—Lender making reasonable inquiries — Lender need not see to actual solicitation 867a

* —Debts — Legal necessity—Adult member joining in execution of deed admitting legal necessity—No presumption of legal necessity arises 867b —Debt—Partition suit by son—Mortgage executed by father challenged—Mortgagee relying as to binding character of mortgage on actual application of money for purpose binding on son—He cannot, on failure to prove this, raise plea that he made inquiries 836a

Hindu Law

*—Debts — Decree obtained against father for surety debts incurred under obligations undertaken that judgment-debtor will file insolvency petition—Sons are bound to pay and sons cannot dispute liability under bond—Even if sons are exonerated under decree they are liable for such debt under pious obligation unless debt is illegal or immoral 817a —Debts—Father — All decree debts passed against father are not ipso facto binding on son 817c

 —Debts—Promissory note executed by father while joint with sons—Endorsements by father after partition saving limitation—Sons are liable for the debt 708

—Debt — Pious obligation—Sons are liable for father's debt which is neither illegal nor immoral irrespective of fact whether father is manager of joint family or whether joint family is composed of persons other than father and son 690

—Debt—Widow is not bound to discharge husband's debts from income of property 163b —Guardianship — Natural father is not natural guardian of his son given in adoption 710 (2) a —Guardian—Husband of Hindu minor wife is representative of wife and competent to make application 407e

*—Joint family—Partnership business —Joint family business cannot be business of some group of members of joint family or members of branch of family less than the whole joint family 920a

—Joint family—Partnership business —Held on evidence that though a joint family consisted of father and his four sons yet the business was ordinary partnership business of three brothers only 920b

—Joint family — Creditor against father of joint Hindu family can attach and proceed against whole of joint property even though his sons are not parties to suit 839 —Joint family —Usufructuary mortgage—Several leases executed by several members to mortgagee for convenience — Whole mortgaged property made responsible for realisation of arrears of rent due by any member—Charge for arrears of rent is binding on family of mortgagors as a whole 613d

Hindu Law

—Joint family consisting of father and son — Self-acquired property of son—Onus of proving that it is thrown into common stock is on person who asserts to be joint property — Admission by son in mortgage deed that such property is in possession and enjoyment as of right by both father and son shifts onus on son to prove that such property is not thrown into common stock 565 (2)a —Joint family — Sale by Official Receiver conveying only right, title and interest of insolvent father — Suit by minor sons for partition decreed before sale—Share of sons in property is not sold 475b

*—Maintenance—Widow — Widow's right is one which accrues from day to day during her life-time—Specific family property charged with maintenance payable to widow for previous year on certain date — On death of widow before such date her heirs are entitled to recover proportionate amount due to her after last payment till date of death 699a

—Maintenance—Law to be applied is rule of Hindu law and in its absence rule of justice, equity and good conscience 699c

—Maintenance — Widow— Obligation to maintain widow is dependent on taking property of her husband whether by inheritance or survivorship 699d —Partition — Suit on behalf of minor—Death of plaintiff—Suit does not abate—Legal representative can continue suit — Severance of status takes place from filing of suit for partition on showing that suit was for benefit of minor: 41 Mad 442=42 I C 860=A I R 1918 Mad 379 and A I R 1930 Mad 486, Overruled. FB 890a —Partition—Suit for partition is not personal action which dies with the person FB 890b —Partition—Minor—It is not confined merely to personal benefit but extends to that of his mother, widow, etc. FB 890c —Partition—Agreement for consideration between two co-parceners not to exercise right of partition is valid 847

Hindu Law

—Partition — Partition suit by son—Mortgage executed by father — Mortgagee putting forward claim only as mortgagee and not as simple debtor—Part of mortgage debt not proved to be binding on son — Mortgagee cannot in second appeal ask Court to make provision for such debt in partition decree 856b

—Partition—Partial Partition — Suit for partial partition is maintainable as between members of joint family and alienee from member or members 774a

*—Partition — Partial partition — Division in status effected among members of joint family—As between two alienees from members, suit for partial partition is competent 774b

—Religious endowment—Manager of temple property can grant perpetual lease in special and unusual circumstances 852a

—Religious endowment — Ancient grant of perpetual lease recognized and treated as valid by subsequent matatipathis—Even though deed does not contain recitals as to necessity, transaction can be presumed to be one for necessity 852b

—Religious endowment — Power of shebait to incur debt is analogous to that of manager of infant heir 639a

—Religious endowment — Alienation for keeping up daily worship is necessity 639c —Religious endowment—Trustee can purchase provisions on credit 639g —Religious endowment—Pledgee of temple property advancing money to avert threatened sale in execution of decree need not go into merits of decree 639i —Religious endowment — Permanent lease by head of mutt enures for his lifetime 481

—Reversioner—Release deed executed by father on his own behalf and on behalf of minor son—Son cannot question it, where such action is eminently prudent and beneficial 856b

*—Succession—Sudra — Illegitimate son of Subra is coparcener with legitimate sons after death of putative father and entitled to sue for partition 397

—Surrender—Surrender must be of entire property in possession, enjoyment or control of family—Chance of setting aside alienation by widow does not form part of property 860b *—Texts—Words "prathigrahithriyamatha" in Dattaka Mimansa are used in general sense FB 550b

Hindu Law

*—Widow—Father getting some properties from widow and relinquishing his reversionary right — Son inheriting such property is not estopped from suing for remaining property as nearest reversioner after death of widow 637a

*—Widow — Alienation—No recital as to purpose of loan— Attestation by reversioner is not presumptive proof of necessity 637b

—Will—Construction of—To decide whether it creates trusts or mere charge on estate, will must be taken as a whole 204a

—Will—Two or more donees, when tenants-in-common and when joint tenants stated 204b —Will—Tenancy is common or joint —Incidents of possession same—Onus to waive separate rights is on him who asserts it 204c

Income-Tax Act (11 of 1922)

—S. 4 (2)—Money received in British India is presumed to be profits SB 14a

—S. 4 (2)—Person having two funds one of which was taxed—There is no irrebuttable presumption that all remittances are made out of taxed fund—Foreign untaxed fund sending remittance less than its profits is profit received in British India SB 14b

*—Ss. 8 and 10— Notification dated 25th August 1925—Interest from securities is not included therein SB 489a

—S. 10—Exemption—Burden of proof is on assessee SB 489b

—S. 10 (2) (iii)—Capital of fund contributed by subscribers—Subscribers to get back amount paid with fixed interest —Such guaranteed interest is interest on capital borrowed and can be deducted in computing profits FB 347

*—Ss. 32 (1) and 31 (3) — Assistant Commissioner not enhancing total assessment but increasing it on some items and reducing it on others — No appeal lies SB 1

*—S. 60—Government of India Notification of Finance Department (Central Revenues) No. 21, dated 12th October 1929—Government of India can under S. 60 deal with income-tax and supertax —But notification No. 21 dated 12th

Income-tax Act

October 1929 deals only with income-tax SB 701

Indian Securities Act (10 of 1920)

—S. 18—S. 18 does not give more time than what is allowed by Limitation Act, Art. 80 376c

Insurance

—Insurance company at C — Policy taken at M through agent of company— Acceptance of proposal posted at C and assured informed by agent at M—Held acceptance was made at M and that policy was effected at C 764

—Policy should be construed by collecting meaning of parties from language employed—Courts will lean against forfeiture of policy 680

Interest

—Indemnity clause entitling adequate compensation for loss sustained— Reasonable interest can be allowed as compensation 715b

—Interest cannot be granted on equitable principles in absence of contract— Defendant toll contractor stipulating to pay 12 per cent on arrears of kist, plaintiff having right to resale—Right of resale of toll exercised by plaintiff and suit for loss occasioned by such resale — Interest cannot be allowed 704b

—Claim for arrears of rent — In absence of agreement to pay interest, interest cannot be allowed 613c

—Money had and received—Interest is payable only from date of demand 320b

—Post diem—No stipulation for—Such contract may be implied and interest awarded 171a —Compound interest—No compound interest can be awarded unless it has been specially agreed to 171b

Interest Act (32 of 1839)

—S. 1—Claims coming under Act— Interest can be allowed if conditions prescribed are satisfied 729a

—S. 1—Act is not repealed by contract Act (1872), S. 73 729b

—S. 1—Non-payment of money due itself constituting breach of contract — No interest can be allowed in addition to recovery of money unless plaintiff gives adequate proof that by reason of breach of contract special loss or damage was sustained and if unless such claim for interest is not one coming under category of cases specified in S. 1 739c

—S. 1—Money had and received — Interest is payable only from date of demand 320b

Interpretation of Statutes

—Illustration should not be taken as part of statute under every circumstance
—But they should not be lightly disregarded 795b —Statutes which are frequently repealed, re-enacted or amended should not be construed by reference to language of similar legislation elsewhere 791a

—Section must be read in the sense in which words in section are accepted by authority and not by unintentional use of such word 782b

—Legislature enables something to be done—Power to do everything which is necessary for purpose of carrying out the purpose in view is implied 748b —Statute imposing duty should be strictly construed in so far as imposition of such duty is concerned—This principle does not extend to procedure to collect it 748c

—Court making order under S. 78, Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (1 of 1925), has jurisdiction to do all acts necessary for execution of such order 689

—Successive Acts—Continuous practice followed—Intention of legislature is to confirm that practice SB 489c

—Some rules stated 207d

—Objects and reasons—Court cannot refer to them to determine proper construction of particular sections 120b

—Preamble—Words clear—Section should be given effect to irrespective of preamble 120c —Words—By mere construction words which limit operation of general language of section should not be added 120d —Repealing Act does not affect proceeding instituted under previous Act unless expressly provided 57c

Jurisdiction

—Consent of parties cannot give jurisdiction 471c

—Writ of — Erroneous decision on law point is no ground for issuing writ when exercised within jurisdiction 133 (2)b

Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894)

—S. 23—Value to be paid is value to owner as it exists at date of taking—Old owner taking property subject to restrictions—It is necessary to inquire how far these restrictions affect value 190

Land Customs Act (19 of 1924)

—S. 7, (1) (c)—Onus is on prosecution
1933 Indexes (Mad.)—5 & 6

Land Customs Act

to prove that goods were taken by land from foreign territory to British territory at a time when they were dutiable 888 (2)b

—S. 7—Carrying non-dutiable goods without permit—Offence is to be dealt with by customs officer and not by complaint to Magistrate 888 (2)c

Landlord and Tenant

—Claim for arrears of rent—In absence of agreement to pay interest, interest cannot be allowed 613c

—Poramboke land—Registration of land as cattle stand in settlement register does not imply grant to villagers—Assignment of such land—Discretion vests in Government and cannot be questioned by civil Court 610

—Agricultural tenant—Reasonable notice by landlord is necessary to ask tenant to quit—Till notice, he is tenant and mesne profits cannot be demanded prior to that time 165

Land Tenure

—Grant of patta—Effect—The grant of patta constitutes fresh grant 913a

Lease

—Agricultural lease—Land leased by auction—Acceptance of bid effects oral contract of lease 451b

Legal Practitioner

—Vakalatnama providing “avasyamanal (if necessary or expedient) you are to compromise suit or raise contest”—Compromise is in the discretion of pleader and not of Court 734

—Order passed on payment of costs—Advocate has authority to accept and legal consequences flow from such act even if advocate has accepted without realizing consequences. 410c

Letters Patent (Mad)

—Cl. 15—Appeal under Cl. 15 lies from order of single Judge rejecting application under O. 40, R. 1, Civil P. C. FB 570b —Cl. 15—Order ordering respondent in appeal to be brought on record as legal representative of deceased appellant is not appealable 417

*—Cl. 21—High Court has no power to grant injunction apart from O. 39 Civil P. C. in appeal or revision from mofussil Courts 500 (2)

Limitation

—Toll contractor committing default—District Board exercising option of re-sale—Sale postponed for want of bidders without consent of contractor—Subsequent re-sale and suit for loss incurred —Limitation runs from first date of re-sale and not date of actual sale 704a

Limitation

—Plaint amended — Amendment relates back to date of institution of suit for question as to limitation 153c

Limitation Act (9 of 1908)

—Construction — Exemption not covered by sections in Act cannot be imported by Court FB 418b

*—S. 14—For applicability of S. 14 not only the cause of action should be the same but relief also must be the same 778

*—S. 14—Suit filed against dead person—Application to bring legal representative does not lie — Even if Court wrongly allows application S. 14 does not apply 454

—S. 14—Proceedings attacking validity of decree under S. 47, Civil P. C., on the ground of fraud of guardian—Subsequent suit on the same ground and for the same relief—Prior proceedings prosecuted under legal advice — Such period to be excluded for limitation 197b

*—S. 15—Final decree in mortgage suit and execution application for sale of mortgaged properties—Dismissal of petition for non-payment of batta — Declaratory suit by another that mortgaged property belonged to mosque and that mortgage was invalid and unenforceable decreed — Mortgagee decreeholder's appeal from such decree allowed — Subsequent execution application for sale of mortgaged properties beyond three years from date of dismissal of prior application does not come under S. 15 nor is it revival of old application and is barred by limitation FB 418a

*—S. 15—Injunction or order staying execution must be express and application cannot be stayed by implication FB 418c

*—S. 18—Fraud under S. 18 may be of any person not necessarily of decreeholder 626

*—S. 19—Admission of execution of document for amount already due and of its contents before registrar is acknowledgment of liability under document 713

—Ss. 19 and 20—Admission by wife of lunatic of debt in her petition for appointment of guardian—Husband dying

Limitation Act

and wife never appointed guardian—Admission is not valid acknowledgment 686
—S. 19—Inclusion of decree debt in insolvency petition by debtor amounts to acknowledgment 565 (1)a —S. 19—Mention of decree debt in statement of insolvent amounts to implied admission that debt is subsisting 565 (1)b

—S. 19—President of committee has authority to acknowledge 332d

*—S. 19 — Promissory note insufficiently stamped containing acknowledgment of prior liability is admissible to save limitation 251 (2)a —S. 19 (2)—Document containing acknowledgment—Date scored out—Document can be treated as undated 104a

—S. 19 (2)—Undated acknowledgment contained in document filed in Court—Date of filing is date of making acknowledgment 104b

—S. 20 and Art. 182 (5)—Payment by one defendant for himself and not certified—Limitation is not extended against other either under Art. 182 (5) or S. 20 67d

—S. 20—No agreement to pay interest in contract — Subsequent entry as to payment of interest saves limitation 251 (2)b —Ss. 23 and 29—Madras Estates Land Act (1908), Ss. 45, 163 and 211 and Sch. B, Art. 7—Unauthorized occupation begun more than an year—S. 45 cannot be invoked — No fresh start every year — Remedy of landlord is under S. 163 521

—Art. 62—Assignment by mother of mortgagee in favour of minor daughter and herself—Assignment void as regards interest of minor daughter—Realization of full mortgage amount by assignee—Suit by minor daughter against assignee for her share of amount is maintainable 806g

*—Art. 62—Scope—Art. 62 cannot be appropriately applied where the plaintiff is not entitled to money when it was received by the defendant 524a

—Arts. 62, 97 and 116—Vendor delivering part of property—Suit as to rest against stranger and vendor dismissed—Subsequent suit for damages for breach of covenant of title is governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 97 or Art. 62—Time runs from dismissal of suit for possession and not from date of sale 126

Limitation Act

— Art. 65 — Attachment before judgment—Surety bond executed in pursuance of order under O. 21, R. 43, Civil P. C.—Limitation for enforcing liability of surety is three years from date of decree 219a

— Art. 80—S. 18, Indian Securities Act, does not give more time than what is allowed by Limitation Act, Art. 80 376c

— Art. 80—Suit on war-bond—Limitation runs from date of presentment 376d

— Art. 97—Suit for compensation by vendee for breach of covenant in sale deed—Limitation is six years from date of failure of consideration 382c

— Arts. 97, 62 and 116—Vendor delivering part of property—Suit as to rest against stranger and vendor dismissed—Subsequent suit for damages for breach of covenant of title is governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 97 or Art. 62—Time runs from dismissal of suit for possession and not from date of sale 126

— Arts. 106 and 120—Suit for accounts of dissolved partnership—Art. 106 applies and not Art. 120 353 (2)d

*— Arts. 111 and 116—Sale of portion of mortgaged property—Vendee undertaking to pay off mortgage-debt—Failure to do so and sale of whole of mortgaged property in execution of mortgage-decree—Suit by vendor for mortgage-debt and interest against first vendee—Art. 116 and not Art. 111 applies and limitation begins to run from date of sale of whole property 424

— Art. 116—Suit for compensation by vendee for breach of covenant in sale deed—Limitation is six years from date of failure of consideration 382c

— Art. 116—Execution sale—Auction-purchasers getting no lawful delivery but selling that property to plaintiff—Sale-deed laying down that vendor to give plaintiff lawful delivery after getting sale certificate from Court—Failure to do so—Judgment-debtor setting up adverse possession—Plaintiff suing for return of consideration—Art. 116 applied—Time would run when vendor became incapable of fulfilling his undertaking 153b

— Arts. 116, 97 and 62—Vendor delivering part of property—Suit as to rest against stranger and vendor dismissed—Subsequent suit for damages for breach of covenant of title is governed by Art. 116 and not by Art. 97 or Art. 62—

Limitation Act

Time runs from dismissal of suit for possession and not from date of sale 126

 — Art. 117 — Foreign judgment — Appeal dismissed—"Judgment in that suit" is appellate and not original judgment 511a

— Art. 117—Judgment means decree 511b

— Art. 120 — Madras Survey and Boundaries Act (1897), S. 13 — Order passed under R. 3 of Board's standing order No. 31—S. 13 does not apply—Suit for eviction in such case would be governed by Art. 120 668b

— Art. 120 — Property brought in Court—No fresh start 503 (2)b

— Arts. 120 and 106 — Suit for accounts of dissolved partnership — Art. 106 applies and not Art. 120 353 (2)d

— Art. 120—Partition suit—Mahomedan family — Female asking for accounts from managing cosharer of property for 10 years, i. e. for period prior to six years of suit—Demand for accounts within one year of suit—Suit is within time 200

— Art. 134 — Possession not taken by transferee—Art. 134 does not apply 533a

*— Art. 134—Trustee having beneficial interest transferring trust property — Suit to set aside alienation within 12 years of death or removal of transferring trustee is not barred—Art. 134 does not apply 533c

— Art. 144—Possession permissive in beginning — Onus that it has become adverse is on person setting up that plea — Land held on service tenure — Its possession does not become adverse when no services are performed 668a

*— Arts. 144 and 134—Trustee having beneficial interest transferring trust property—Suit to set aside alienation within 12 years of death or removal of transferring trustee is not barred — Art. 134 does not apply 533c — Art. 180—Judgment-debtor preventing delivery by obstruction must take consequences of his action — Sale confirmed on 30th August 1921 and delivery petition on 22nd September 1921 — One item not delivered and petition "closed" — Subsequent petitions for delivery on 23rd September 1924 on which delivery was ordered by 9th December 1924 and again on 11 March 1926—Latter petition dismissed as time barred — Fresh petition on 3rd March 1927 held neither barred by time nor by rule of res judicata by order of dismissal of petition of 11th March 1926 as that order was simply the dismissal of misconceived petition 745b

Limitation Act

*—Art. 181 — Decree declared 'un-executable by execution Court — Order set aside on appeal — Fresh period of limitation runs from date of latter order 785

—Arts. 181 and 182—Surety bond executed by two persons to produce movables can be enforced without recourse to suit—Limitation runs from date of bond or date of failure to produce property — Proceedings taken against judgment debtor in execution of decree or against one of the sureties for enforcing bond in which other is simply impleaded without any relief being claimed against him are not steps against other surety to enforce bond so as to save limitation 722

*—Art. 181 — Preliminary decree — Appeal against preliminary decree withdrawn and dismissed—Time for applying for final decree is three years from such order of dismissal 442

*—Art. 181—Execution of decree—Appeal and stay order—Limitation for continuing execution is three years from date on which stay comes to an end 325

—Art. 182 — Application otherwise than in accordance with law 872b

—Art. 182 — Step in aid of execution — Conditions necessary so far as Madras is concerned are (1) step must be one which Court has to take : (2) Court must be asked to take it—Application for time to apply for substituted service is not step in-aid 675a

*—Art. 182—Final decree in mortgage suit and execution application for sale of mortgaged properties—Dismissal of petition for non-payment of batta—Declaratory suit by another that mortgaged property belonged to mosque and that mortgage was invalid and unenforceable decreed — Mortgagee decree-holder's appeal from such decree allowed — Subsequent execution application for sale of mortgaged properties beyond three years from date of dismissal of prior application does not come under

Limitation Act

S. 15 nor is it revival of old application and is barred by limitation FB 418a

*—Art. 182—Attachment before judgment — Surety bond executed in pursuance of order under O. 21, R. 43, Civil P. C.,—Limitation for enforcing liability of surety is three years from date of decree 219a

—Art. 182 (as amended by Act 9 of 1927) — Right of execution not barred when amending Act came into force—Subsequent application will be governed by amended Act 85

—Art. 182, Expl. 1—Final decree in partition suit awarding several plots to several sharers — Whether application for delivery of one plot can save application for another plot from limitation —Quaere 789b

—Art. 182, Expl. 1—Declaration of joint character of certain items of property in partition suit—Decree is joint decree and application by one for delivery of his share can save application by another from limitation 789c

*—Art. 182, (2) — Partition suit—Preliminary decree and appeal from such decree — Final decree passed pending appeal — Limitation for execution of final decree is from date of final decree and not date of appellate order from preliminary decree 315b

—Art. 182 (3)—Payment of batta for auction sale of property is step in-aid of execution 438

*—Art. 182 (3) — Review and revised decree — Limitation for execution of decree runs from date of revised decree even as against persons not parties to the review proceedings 276

*—Art. 182 (4) — Scope — Decree which has already become barred by limitation cannot be revived for purpose of execution by a subsequent amendment 315c

—Art. 182 (5)—Application for execution against minor judgment-debtor impleading guardian with bona fide belief that he was living—Application gives fresh starting point of limitation though guardian is found to be dead before application 696

—Art. 182 (5) and S. 20—Payment by one defendant for himself and not certified—Limitation is not extended against others either under Art. 182 (5) or S. 20 674

Limitation Act

* — Art. 182 (5)—Mere drawing out of money without any application is not step-in-aid 597

—Art. 182 (5)—Execution — Application returned for amendment is sufficient to save limitation 568b

—Art. 182 (5)—Time for considering whether application is within time starts from date of final order on last application 540 (1)

—Art. 182 (5)—Application by decree-holder for transfer—Satisfaction by judgment-debtor pleaded—Counter-petition by decree-holder—Batta and affidavit filed in support — Vakalatnama filed in appeal—These held not steps-in-aid 403

—Art. 182 (5)—Subsequent remittance to jail authorities by money order is application to Court and is step in aid 83

Madras Abkari Act (1 of 1886)

— S. 55—Sale for default under Abkari Act does not give property free of encumbrance as sale for recovery of arrears of revenue 649a

—S. 55—Sale under Abkari Act — Purchaser ignorant of encumbrances — Default by purchaser to make deposit — Re-sale subject to encumbrance for lesser price—Difference in price less amount of encumbrances only can be recorded 649c

Madras Agency Tracts Interest and Land Transfer Act (1 of 1917)

— S. 4 (2)—Application under S. 4 (2) is not suit and order refusing it is not decree 695

Madras Civil Courts Act (3 of 1873)

— S. 14—S. 14 does not prevail over Suits Valuation Act (1887), S. 8 721a

—S. 14—Valuation for purposes of suit should also guide valuation for purposes of appeal 721b

*—S. 14—Attachment of property in execution of decree — Claim to property on basis of sale in favour of claimant dismissed—Suit within one year to avoid attachment—Value for purposes of jurisdiction is not market value of land but value under S. 7, Cl. 5 Court-fees Act 439b

Madras Co-operative Societies Act (6 of 1932)

—S. 2 (e)—Legal adviser of society is "officer" of society 682a

— S. 51 (1) (b), (c) — Member of the Bar who is also member of Co-operative Society, instructed by the Society to engage in legal proceedings on behalf of society — His position is only that of

Madras Co-operative Societies Act

vakil and not that of officer, or servant of society 682b

Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920)

—S. 22—Decision against Municipal Council is binding against its chairman 59a

—Ss. 44 and 45—Non-compliance with provisions of Ss. 44 and 45 makes contract void 332a

*—Ss. 44 and 45—Contract void for non-compliance of provisions of Ss. 44 and 45 — Neither principle of "quantum meruit" nor that of "quantum valebat" applies 332b

—S. 49 — Scope — Election Commissioner declaring election void on ground not taken in petition and declaring another candidate elected in his place — Action of Commissioner is one in excess of jurisdiction 133 (2)d

—S. 49 (2) (f)—Persons standing in superior or subordinate positions to councillor should be excluded 260d

—S. 49 (2) (f)—Disqualification under, can be ground for election petition 133 (2)a

—S. 51—Decision by District Judge under S. 51 is not open to revision by High Court 260a

—S. 51 — Scope — Objections under S. 51 may embrace disqualifications existing before the election 260c

— S. 83 (a)—Place where people are given only food and drink gratuitously but not allowed to rest during night time is not choultry 782a

—S. 83 (a)—Only places which require that no income should be derived for exemption from tax are playgrounds — Obiter 782c

—S. 142—"Public" drains — Word is not confined to drains maintained by the Municipal Council 428

—S. 177 (amending Act 10 of 1930)—There is no intention to exempt future elections from conditions necessary for all elections 260b

—S. 306—By-law No. 1—By-law No. 1 does not authorize Municipal Chairman to issue any notice of any kind nor make failure to obey notice punishable 416

—Sch. 4, R. 16 — Office is different from shop—Depot where goods manufactured elsewhere are sold without any office work being done is not office 496-

Madras District Municipalities Act

- Sch. 4, R. 20 — Decision on what amounts to office is revisable 496a
- Election R. 11 (2) — Election Commissioner has discretion to declare fresh election or declare another as elected 133(2)c

Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908)

- S. 3 (2) (d) — Grant of melwaram right only — It is estate 194a
- Ss. 3 (5), 10 and 6 — Private land granted by zamindar to adopted son for maintenance — Land registered as raiyati with adopted son as land holder — Tenants settled on land under adopted son have occupancy rights 462a
- S. 3 (5) — Owner of life-estate is landholder 462b
- S. 4 — Landlord entitled to rent — Exemption on special plea must be proved by person raising it — Facts of plea within tenant's knowledge — Onus is on tenant 101
- Ss. 7 and 11 — Zamindar cannot interfere with raiyat clearing stones and and boulders from land — He is only entitled to customary fee or to compensation for damages if any 525b
- S. 11 — Suit for recovery of raiyati land held on patta — Plaintiff cannot be valued on value of land as building site 367(1)a
- S. 13 (3) — Raiyat digging well in patta land at his sole expense — Landlord cannot charge higher rate of rent 257
- S. 26 (3) — Rent payable under grant is not binding after life-time of landlord on person entitled for rent unless such rent is lawful 427
- Ss. 45, 163, 211 and Sch. B, Art. 7 — Unauthorized occupation begun more than year — S. 45 cannot be invoked — No fresh start every year — Remedy of landlord is under S. 163 521
- Ss. 55 and 146 — Purchase of land from raiyat not recognized by landlord — Purchaser can file suit under S. 55 for grant of patta or apply for transfer under S. 146 384c
- S. 74 — Defendant stating that no melwaram is due and applicant had murdered defendants' predecessor and filed application out of spite — Statements being relative to the inquiry are privileged 537b
- * — S. 75 — Defamation — Absolute privilege applies to statements before tribunal exercising judicial functions — Of-

Madras Estates Land Act

- ficer acting under S. 75 is such tribunal 537a
 - S. 75 — Collector deciding rent payable in cash — Question whether rent is payable in cash or kind is not res judicata 231(1)a
 - S. 77 — Real but unregistered owner cannot upset rent sale 495
 - S. 112 — Service by effixture without attempting to effect personal service makes sale nullity 855
 - S. 112 — Only registered pattadar can maintain suit under S. 112 384b
 - S. 112 — Non-service of notice on defaulter is fatal and renders sale illegal 374a
 - S. 112 — In case of more than one pattadar service must be effected on each pattadar 374b
 - Ss. 146 and 55 — Purchase of land from raiyat not recognized by landlord — Purchaser can file suit under S. 55 for grant of patta or apply for transfer under S. 146 384c
 - S. 146 — Omission to follow procedure laid down in S. 146 bars similar relief being asked in civil Court 384d
 - S. 151 — Suit by zamindar against occupancy raiyat for declaration that he is entitled to stones and rocks on the holding does not fall under S. 151 525a
 - S. 151 — Suit for recovery of raiyati land held on patta — Plaintiff cannot be valued on value of land as building site 367 (1)a
 - S. 153 — Inference from — Nothing can be inferred from S. 153 in favour of occupancy raiyat 525c
 - Ss. 189 and 192 — S. 192 relates only to procedure and does not extend jurisdiction conferred upon Revenue Courts by S. 189 — Revenue Court has no jurisdiction to try suit under O. 21, R. 63, Civil P. C. 865
 - Ss. 192 and 189 — S. 192 relates only to procedure and does not extend jurisdiction conferred upon Revenue Courts by S. 189 — Revenue Court has no jurisdiction to try suit under O. 21, R. 63, Civil P. C. 865
 - Sch. B, Art. 7 and Ss. 45 and 163 — Unauthorized occupation begun more than year — S. 45 cannot be invoked — No fresh start every year — Remedy of landlord is under S. 163 521
- Madras General Clauses Act (1 of 1891)
- S. 8 (f) — Interpretation of Statutes — Repealing Act does not affect proceed-

Madras General Clauses Act

ings instituted under previous Act unless expressly provided 57c

Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (3 of 1895)

—S. 7—Collector when passing order under S. 7 is not Court 618b

—S. 10—Outgoing karnam recommending person to act till minor heir attains majority on agreement by such person to pay pecuniary consideration—Agreement is opposed to public policy and cannot be enforced 768

—Ss. 13 and 21—Suit to eject trespasser on inam land is not barred by S. 13 or S. 21 279 (2)d

—S. 13—Execution—Decision in that land being not service inam was saleable—Collector subsequently deciding land to be service inam—Fresh execution against portion of same survey number—Previous order held operated as res judicata—Collector's decision though ordinarily binding did not affect question 130a

—S. 23 (1), Proviso—Order of suspension by Collector—No appeal lies nor has Revenue Board revisional powers 618a

Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (1 of 1925)

—Ss. 53 (4) and 71—Scheme before Act—Application under S. 53 (4) lies 57a

—S. 53 (4)—Applications can be continued even after passing of Act (1927) without payment of further court-fee 57b

—S. 70—Order in proceedings under the section is open to appeal 305a

—S. 70—Notice served on managing or executive trustee is sufficient 305b

—S. 78—Court making order under S. 78 has jurisdiction to do all acts necessary for execution of such order 689

—2 of 1927

—Ss. 7 (1) and 57 (4)—Applications can be continued even after passing of Act (1927) without payment of further court-fee 57b

—S. 9 (11)—Service inam held by temple servant falls within definition 549a

—S. 44—Land simply forming emolument of person liable to perform service—Court cannot make order in respect of such service under S. 44 549b

—Ss. 51 (4) and 78—Persons in office prior to Act—Suit by them under S. 78 is maintainable—Non-appointment by committee is irrelevant 120a

—S. 78—Persons in office prior to Act—Suit by them under S. 78 is main-

Madras Hindu Religious Endowment Act

tainable—Non-appointment by committee is irrelevant 120a

—S. 78—Court can inquire into claims against strangers—Interference is however discretionary—If difficult questions of title arise or prolonged investigation is involved Court will order separate suit 120e

Madras Irrigation Cess Act (7 of 1865)

—S. 1 (b)—Surplus water from Government land stored in small ponds or natural depressions and used for irrigation—Government is entitled to levy charge for use of such water and no easement to use such water can be acquired 646

Madras Local Authorities Entertainments Act (20 of 1927)

—S. 6—Tickets sold for value of more than four annas—Defence that excess over four annas was to go towards accessory expenses held unsustainable 461 (2)

Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920)

—S. 3 (9)—Landholder includes "landholder" as defined in Estates Land Act and also other kinds of landholders not contemplated in that Act 95a

—Ss. 41 (1) and 42 (b)—Failure of Panchayat President to do duty imposed on him—President of District Board has no power to interfere 326b

—S. 88, Prov. 2—Inamdar holding both warams—Lessee is tenant and not intermediate landholder and comes within Prov. 2 to S. 88 95b

—S. 93—Residence of person within area of Board—Money lending outside—He can be taxed for income coming within the Board area, whether taxed elsewhere or not 92

—S. 93—Actual receipt of income within area must be proved—Mere residence is not sufficient 22b

—S. 193—Licence fee is not tax 148a

—S. 193—License fee—Questions of legality and reasonableness are separate 148c

—Ss. 193 and 212 (9)—Excessive fees cannot be recovered summarily 148d —Ss. 193 and 166—S. 193 is imperative 148e

—S. 202—Bye-laws under—Reasonableness can be considered by criminal Courts 148b

—S. 208—President who has ceased to be such refusing to hand over documents to successor is guilty under S. 208 326a

Madras Local Boards Act

—S. 225—Suit for refund of house-tax illegally collected with interest thereon falls within scope of S. 225 791b

—S. 225—Inquiry as to historical origin of contract of suits for money had and received and reference to jurisdiction of Indian Court, are irrelevant to construction of S. 225 791c

—S. 228—President is not bound to accept income-tax assessment as the only basis for assessment of professional tax 681a

—S. 228—President is not privileged from divulging grounds on which he makes assessment 681b

Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (3 of 1918)

—S. 5 (1) (b) and (d)—Cl. (d) not in force—Cl. (b) is not made ineffectual by Cl. (d) 99a

—S. 5 (1) (b)—Selling mixture of water and milk is offence under Cl. (b) 99b

—S. 20—Rules framed before extension of Act do not apply to that area 99c

Madras Revenue Recovery Act (2 of 1864)

—S. 36—Sale for default under Abkari Act does not give property free of encumbrance as sale for recovery of arrears of revenue 649a

—S. 36—Confirmation by Collector is not necessary for completion of sale 649b

—S. 36—Sale under Abkari Act—Purchaser ignorant of encumbrances—Default by purchaser to make deposit—Resale subject to encumbrance for lesser price—Difference in prices less amount of encumbrances only can be recovered 649c

Madras Survey and Boundaries Act (4 of 1897)

—Ss. 11, 12 and 13—Dispute as to whether certain land is Government property or forms part of estate is boundary dispute 279 (2)a —S. 13—Order passed under R. 3 of Board's Standing Order No 31—S. 13 does not apply—Suit for eviction in such case would be governed by Limitation Act (1908), Art. 120 668b

—S. 13—Decisions under Act if not challenged become res judicata 664c

—S. 13—Survey officer deciding boundary dispute has jurisdiction to decide incidental question of title and his decision is conclusive 279(2)b

—S. 13—Decision of survey officer breaks adverse possession 279 (2)c

Mahomedan Law

—Guardianship—Mother is neither

Mahomedan Law

natural nor legal guardian of minor daughter—Transfer by mother as de facto guardian of minor's interest in immovable property is void 806f

—Gift—Immovable property—Transfer of possession necessary—Mother gifting property to son and continuing to live with him—Proof of delivery of possession necessary—Intention as constituting delivery—Subsequent conduct of donee is material—Mere registered deed is not enough 86

Malabar Compensation for Tenants Improvements Act (1 of 1900)

—S. 10—Whether compensation can be given for paddy crops—Quaere 482c

Malabar Law

—Kanom—Mortgagor's power to lease mortgaged property is limited by rule that he should not render security insufficient by such act—Onus of proving that security is unimpaired is on lessee. 876a

—Kanom—Kanom is recognized as anomalous mortgage 876c

—Marriage is not legal institution—Offspring is entitled to maintenance against father only if and when mother's tavazhi or tarwad is unable to maintain them. 794

—Assets of deceased Sthani go to Kovilagam from which he has sprung 376a —Maintenance arrears—Mere delay or omission to make demand does not amount to waiver of claim 265a —Maintenance—Private acquisition of members should be taken into account in fixing maintenance allowance where tarwad income is insufficient to provide suitable subsistence 265b —Maintenance—Arrears claimed in lump sum—Court has discretion to fix rate 265c —Maintenance—Karnavan is not personally liable for maintenance dues of members 265d

—Chit fund—Stipulation making prize winners liable to pay all future instalments on default is not penal 252

—Karar by majority of adult members of tarwad or tavazh—Binding nature on other members considered 169

Malabar Tenancy Act (14 of 1930)

—S. 33—Tenant occupying house built on land for ten years can avail of section 460b

Mesne profits

—Onus of proving actual profits received is on defendant—Onus shifts to plaintiff, if he claims more, to prove that defendant ought to have received more 825a

*—Receiver appointed in mortgage suit—Sale of property in execution of another money decree—Purchaser is not entitled to income collected by receiver as against subsequent purchaser under mortgage decree 293a

—Agricultural tenant —Reasonable notice by landlord is necessary to ask tenant to quit—Till notice he is tenant and mesne profits cannot be demanded prior to that time 165

Minor

—Benefit—It is not confined merely to personal benefit but extends to that of his mother, widow, etc FB 890c

—Court has to see that next friends act bona fide for interest of minor and not for their personal benefit FB 890d

—Decree obtained against minor's father and paternal uncle as trespassers --Death of father — Latter cannot represent interest of minor in execution of such decree 833a

—Decree obtained against minor's father and death of father—Minor not impleaded in execution but widow brought on record as legal representative —Sale held in execution should not be set aside merely on ground that minor is not brought on record 833b

—Guardian's disobedience of Court's order to appear should not prejudice minor's case 821e

—Assignment by mother of mortgage in favour of both minor daughter and herself—Suit on such mortgage—Merely by fact of such assignment, interest of mother is not adverse to that of minor daughter so as to disqualify her from being appointed as guardian 806e

—Decision as a result of gross negligence of guardian does not operate as res judicata as against minor 806h

—Law of Ceylon—Age of majority is 21—Person who is 18 is exempt from liability in Ceylon 756e

—Guardian cannot impose unconditional personal liability on minor by executing promissory note in name of minor 710(2)b

—Sale by guardian — Two thirds of purchase money for purpose binding on minor—Sale is binding on minor 352

Minor

—Sale of minor's property by guardian—Covenant in sale deed that vendee should resell to minor or his heirs on his selling property—Minor cannot sue for specific performance of such covenant

FB 322b

Mortgage

—Mortgage with power of sale — If mortgagee exercises right of sale given to him bona fide, Court will not interfere even though sale is disadvantageous unless price is so low as to be evidence of fraud 736a —Redemption—Suit for redemption by subsequent usufructuary mortgagee against prior usufructuary mortgagee—Latter can claim reasonable interest only if he is entitled to do so under T. P. Act (1882), Ss. 67 and 88 672

*—Benamidar mortgagor—Transferee from heirs of benamidar can sue for redemption and mortgagee is estopped from denying right of mortgagor 635

—Prior mortgagee impleading second mortgagee and obtaining decree—Property purchased in private sale and satisfaction of decree entered—Subsequent suit by 2nd mortgagee impleading prior mortgagee—Property purchased in execution—Latter decree prevails—2nd mortgagee being first purchaser in Court auction is entitled to possession 595

—Priority between purchaser of same property in execution of mortgage decrees by different mortgagees to which mortgagor alone made party—Deciding factor is priority in date of sales and not dates of mortgages FB 583

—Party bound by mortgage decree cannot set up paramount title in execution 569b

*—Suit on simple mortgage—Interim receiver can be appointed for taking rent and profits only when mortgagor is personally bound to pay debt or commits waste 447a

—Movable property — Mortgagee is entitled to right of sale 241

Mortgagor and Mortgagee

*—Receiver appointed in mortgage suit—Sale of property in execution of another money decree—Purchaser is not entitled to income collected by receiver as against subsequent purchaser under mortgage decree 293a

Negotiable Instruments Act (26 of 1881)

*—S. 4 — War bond is promissory note 376b

Negotiable Instruments Act

—S. 4—Definition of promissory note under—Promise to pay to some person or persons or to their order or to bearer is essential 306a

*—S. 4—Promissory note—Test for determining whether document is promissory note indicated 306b

—S. 35—Liability of indorser is subject to contract to contrary either express or implied—Father and minor son partitioning—Father endorsing promissory note in son's favour as its result—Implied contract to contrary can be inferred 61a

*—S. 60—Promissory note discharged by execution of another note—Subsequent endorsement on discharged note—Endorsee gets no right of action on instrument 300a

—S. 60—Difference indicated 300b

—S. 60—Promissory note discharged by maker—Discharged note left with payee subsequently endorsed to another—Maker is not estopped from pleading discharge or non-liability under the note 300c

*—S. 69—War bond is promissory note 376b

—Ss. 79 and 80—Suit on hundia under—No agreement to pay interest in document—Statutory interest must be allowed 299

—S. 82—Difference indicated 300b

Partition

—Suit for partition is not personal action which dies with the person + B 890b —Court has jurisdiction to award other sharers their share if they want it 739a —Consent decree—Preliminary decree is not obligatory—Parties by execution application treating decree as final cannot subsequently resile 516a

—Suit for partition, possession and declaration setting aside previous alienation—Plaintiff's share determines valuation—Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (4) (c), applies and not S. 7 (4) (a) 93

—In partition of family property there cannot be guarantee of title 61b

Partnership

—Partner made to pay whole debt of partnership is entitled to contribution 755

Part Performance

—Doctrine applies where contract is in its own nature enforceable 364

Penal Code (45 of 1860)

*—S. 71—Conviction under Ss. 147 and 323—Separate sentence is legal 338

—S. 71—Charge of picketing against accused—Two separate sentences under

Penal Code

both Criminal Law Amendment Act and Ordinance are illegal 337

—S. 79—Protection given by two sections—Difference pointed out 268a

—S. 114—Abettor present—He can be charged for actual offence 123a

—S. 117—Instigating railway workers to lie on line in the event of strike is offence 279 (1)b

*—Ss. 147 and 323—Conviction under Ss. 147 and 323—Separate sentence is legal 338

—Ss. 148, 149 and 326—Unlawful assembly with common object—Substantive offence under S. 326 committed in prosecution of common object by some—All can be convicted under S. 326 read with S. 149, even though no conviction under S. 148 is passed 842

—S. 159—For affray there must be two or more persons 843a

—S. 160—Where accused is prejudiced by not having notice of facts which constitute ingredients of offence his conviction of such offence must be set aside 843c

—Ss. 170 and 175—Trial of offences under Ss. 170 and 175, together is illegal 434 (1)a

*—Ss. 193 and 471—Same act constituting offence under Ss. 193 and 471—Prosecution under S. 471 alone without complaint of District Munsif before whom document is used does not lie 413a

—S. 193—Though perjury is offence every perjurer should not be charged 230b

—S. 193—False evidence given—Person should be tried—Age, relationship and other circumstances are to be considered by trying Magistrate 125c

—S. 193, Expl. (2)—Statements recorded by Magistrate under S. 164, Criminal P. C., are evidence in judicial proceeding within S. 193, Expl. (2) 125a

—S. 201—Accused placing deceased while unconscious on railway line, and death caused—Some evidence regarding marks of struggling and strangulation but death not caused by strangulation—No evidence that accused believed deceased to be dead before placing on railway line nor evidence to show that it was done to screen an already committed murder—Held accused was guilty of murder 798

—S. 225-B—Detention to be valid need not be in writing—Judgment-debtor

Criminal Code

- escaping from custody commits offence under S. 25B 278
- S. 294-A — Scheme held fell within S. 294-A 129b
- S. 294-A — Lottery is distribution dependent on chance only—It is different from wager 16a
- S. 294-A—Company for conduct of lottery is illegal even if some objects are philanthropic—It should be wound up 16b
- S. 302—Accused placing deceased while unconscious on railway line, and death caused—Some evidence regarding marks of struggling and strangulation but death not caused by strangulation—No evidence that accused believed deceased to be dead before placing on railway line nor evidence to show that it was done to screen an already committed murder—Held accused was guilty of murder 798
- *—Ss. 323 and 147—Conviction under Ss. 147 and 323—Separate sentence is legal 338
- S. 325—Where accused is prejudiced by not having notice of facts which constitute ingredients of offence his conviction of such offence must be set aside 843c
- Ss. 326, 148 and 149 — Unlawful assembly with common object—Substantive offence under S. 326 committed in prosecution of common object by some—All can be convicted under S. 326 read with S. 149 even though no conviction under S. 148 is passed 842
- S. 378—Rescue of attached property—Action should not be left to be taken by private complainant 840b
- S. 379—Property not belonging to judgment-debtor attached and handed over to other persons on giving security—Real owner rescuing property from such persons is not guilty of theft—Obiter 840a
- S. 411—Village Magistrate charged with offence under S. 411 — Sanction under S. 197, Criminal P. C. is not necessary 270b
- *—Ss. 471 and 193—Same act constituting offence under Ss. 193 and 471—Prosecution under S. 471 alone without complaint of District Munsif before whom document is used does not lie 413a
- Pleadings
- Plea of exemption from limitation—New grounds of exemption cannot be

Pleadings

- allowed to be proved without amendment of plaint 395
- Nature of application is to be determined from substance and not from heading 130b
- Possession will be presumed by person having title if property is not capable of actual or effective enjoyment by taking produce 871a
- Powers of Attorney Act (7 of 1882)
- S. 5—Presentation by husband as agent of wife under powers of attorney is valid 407d
- Practice
- Abandonment—Execution sale — Objections—Inquiry by Munsif—Sale set aside on technical grounds — Appeal against order—Appellate Court confirming sale—Other objections not pressed by either party before any Court nor any mention made in revision application to set aside appellate Court's order of having pressed them—Presumption is that they were abandoned in lower Court 179b
- Appeal—Civil Miscellaneous Appeal can be argued only on question of law 460a
- Court-fee—It is customary to allow some time to pay court-fees when pauper application is dismissed 883d
- Duty of Court — Trial Court can strike out defence when order is disobeyed—But order should be free from ambiguity—Ambiguous order should be construed in favour of defendant 821b
- Duty of Court—Court cannot close case of plaintiff without hearing his evidence in full, unless it intends to grant him decree in full 821d
- High Court—Case involving difficult questions should not be dealt with on motion 920c
- High Court — Application under R. 5, Civil P. C., can be treated as one under R. 4, Civil P. C. 920d
- Judgment — Miscellaneous application contested—Pleadings heard—Merits of controversy must be determined—Petition is "struck off" is not legal disposal 510
- New case—Party should not be allowed to raise new case in appeal founded on facts which opposite party had no opportunity to meet in appeal 675c
- New plea — Limitation — Ground saving limitation not taken in plaint—Plea cannot be allowed without amendment of plaint 874

Practice

—New plea—Burden of proof—Point that onus had been wrongly thrown cannot be taken for first time in Letters Patent appeal 353 (2)c —Order—Interpretation—Right order of adjudication against deceased debtor intended to be passed but expressed as adjudging deceased's estate—Effect will be given to intention and not to form 25b

—Relief—Simply because defence is struck out, plaintiff is not entitled to relief claimed—He must prove his case to satisfaction of Court 821c

—Remand—To remand matter for decision to person who has no jurisdiction—Whether mere irregularity—Quaere 471e —Remedy—Party having effectual remedy by suit in Revenue Court should not be allowed to seek it by means of civil suit 384a

Precedent

—English decision should be quoted with great care 293d —Jurisdiction to decide rightly or wrongly does not mean refusal to follow binding precedents—Glaring error—High Court will interfere 94b

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (3 of 1909)

—S. 7—Administration under S. 108

—S. 7 does not apply—Official Assignee cannot examine deceased's representatives and if he does he cannot take proceedings under S. 7 74e

—S. 8—Administration of deceased debtor's estate—Only Part 3 applies—But S. 8 applies by necessary implication 74e

—Ss. 36, 108 and 7—Administration under S. 108—S. 7 does not apply—Official Assignee cannot examine deceased's representatives and if he does he cannot take proceedings under S. 7 74a

* *—S. 52 (2) (c)—Person before adjudication borrowing money and assigning railway receipt to Bank—Official Assignee after adjudication claiming goods of insolvent under S. 52 (2) (c)—Assignment of railway receipt effects valid pledge of goods Official Assignee cannot succeed—Assignment of railway receipt coupled with letter of lien over goods passed constructive possession to Bank 207a

—S. 58—Official Assignee believing property of deceased debtor to be in possession of third persons but unable to take possession—Assignee can apply to Court for its production 74b

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act

—S. 58—Administration of deceased debtor's estate—Application for production of property—Official Assignee has to prove that property is in non-applicant's possession—Report is no evidence 74d

—Ss. 108 and 7—Administration under S. 108—S. 7 does not apply—Official Assignee cannot examine deceased's representatives and if he does he cannot take proceedings under S. 7 74a

—S. 109—Administration of deceased debtor's estate—Only part 3 applies—But S. 8 applies by necessary implication 74e

—Sch. 2, R. 117—Administration of deceased debtor's estate—Application for production of property—Official Assignee has to prove that property is in non-applicant's possession—Report is no evidence 74d

Press (Emergency Powers) Act (23 of 1931)

—Ss. 2 (6) and 18—Painting "Boycott British Goods" on road is not making news sheet—Painter is not guilty under S. 18 123b

Prevention of Molestation and Boycotting Ordinance (5 of 1932)

—Ss. 3 (a) and 4—Gist of offence of molestation laid down 147

—S. 4—Charge of picketing against accused—Two separate sentences under both Criminal Law Amendment Act and Ordinance is illegal 337

Principal and Surety

*—Surety bond for allowing execution of decree pending appeal—Consent decree passed in appeal—Surety is not discharged if consent decree is not outside scope of surety bond 309a

—Contract by creditor giving time to principal debtor for payment discharges surety 309c

Promissory note

—Guardian cannot impose unconditional personal liability on minor by executing promissory note in name of minor 710 (2)b

—Government securities are payable at specified places 376e

*—Promissory note insufficiently stamped containing acknowledgment of prior liability is admissible to save limitation 251 (2)a —Promissory note can be transferred otherwise than by endorsement 133 (1)

Promissary Note

*—Pro-note insufficiently stamped—Execution and loan admitted in written statement—Decree on note cannot be passed—Loan if independent of pro-note decree can be given on admission but otherwise mere admission does not give plaintiff cause of action—In latter case S. 58, Evidence Act, does not cure defect 117

—Pro-note with contemporaneous consideration inadmissible—Suit fails 71

Provincial Insolvency Act (5 of 1920)

—S. 4—Adjudication of father and sale of property by Official Receiver—Order as to removal of obstruction—Subsequent suit by son of insolvent under S. 9 Specific Relief Act, dismissed—High Court should not interfere in revision 609

*—S. 4—Ss. 53 and 54 T. P. Act are only rules of evidence—Even voidable transfers can be set aside 527

—Ss. 4 and 5—Hindu joint family of father and minor sons—Insolvency of father and sale of insolvent's property by Official Receiver but without previous declaration under S. 4 as to liability of son's share—Partition suit by sons and decree—Son's share found liable to father's mortgage debt—Official Receiver cannot apply for delivery of possession under S. 4 of son's share but must file separate suit—Insolvency Court cannot execute civil Court's decree 475c —Ss. 4 and 5—Execution powers of insolvency Court are only analogous to and not identical with that under O. 21, Civil P. C. 475d

—Ss. 4 and 68—Official Receiver passing order on claim petition which he had no jurisdiction to do—No appeal preferred under S. 68—Application under S. 4 is not barred 471b

*—S. 4—If transfer by insolvent is not bona fide further transaction by transferee also falls—Court can set aside such further transaction under S. 4. 271b

—S. 17—Continuation of proceedings after death of debtor—Alienation by debtor can be set aside under Ss. 53 and 54 25a

—S. 17—Interpretation—Right order of adjudication against deceased debtor intended to be passed but expressed as adjudging deceased's estate—Effect will be given to intention and not to form 25b

Provincial Insolvency Act

—S. 28—Insolvency of manager of Hindu family—Receiver can lease out whole property—Lease does not amount to dispossession of other members so as to make him liable for mesne profits 73

—S. 28 (2)—Objection that suit has been brought without leave under S. 28 (2) not taken in Court of first instance should be deemed to have been waived and cannot be raised in appeal. 917b

—S. 28 (2)—Suit against two persons for maintenance—One of them adjudicated insolvent—Suit continued as such without impleading Official Receiver—Execution of decree obtained in suit and property sought to be brought to sale—Execution proceedings are invalid as against Official Receiver 858

—S. 28 (2)—Sale by Official Receiver conveying only right, title and interest of insolvent father—Suit by minor sons for partition decreed before sale—Share of sons in property is not sold 475b

—S. 35—Order under can be reviewed if conditions laid down by Civil P. C. O, 47, R. 1 are existent FB 631a

*—S. 35—Collusive adjudication—Proof of claim by collusive creditor rejected by Official Receiver—Appeal to District Judge—District Judge annulling adjudication—There is error on face of record and District Judge has power to review FB 631c

—S. 41—Insolvency proceedings do not end on mere adjudication—Discharge has to be obtained 360b

—S. 49—Judgment-debtor becoming insolvent—Decree assigned—Direction in decree to prove debt in insolvency—Assignor referring to this direction in insolvency Court—Debt was deemed to have been proved 168

—S. 51—Insolvency petition filed after properties of judgment-debtor are sold in Court auction—Such properties do not vest in official receiver FB 851b

*—Ss. 51 and 52—S. 52 is inapplicable where property has been brought to sale—But creditor who brings property to sale is entitled to first charge for costs under S. 51 as "benefit" Benefit under S. 51 means net realization after paying costs 703

*—S. 52—Immovable property which is not attached is not in the possession of Court within S. 52 152a

*—S. 52—Decree creating charge—Property brought to sale in execution—

Provincial Insolvency Act

- Order under S. 52 stopping sale is not appealable 152b
- Ss. 53, 54 and 75—No second appeal lies in cases under Ss. 53 and 54 653a
- S. 53—Burden of proof is on party questioning bona fides 271a
- *— Ss. 53 and 54—If transfer by insolvent is not bona fide further transaction by transferee also falls—Court can set aside such further transaction under S. 4 271b
- Ss. 53 and 54—Order under — No second appeal lies 185a
- Ss. 53 and 54 — Continuation of proceedings after death of debtor—Alienation by debtor can be set aside under Ss. 53 and 54 25a
- S. 54—Transfer of practically whole of property to one creditor in order to secure not only past debts but also fresh loans—Transfer can be avoided 653c
- *— S. 54 — Period of three months should be calculated from date of registration 185b
- S. 54—Res judicata applies to insolvency proceedings—Receiver's application for setting aside alienation dismissed—Creditor cannot again apply 9b
- S. 56—Official Receiver is only executive officer 471d
- Ss. 68 and 75 — Adjudication of father and sale of property by Official Receiver—Order as to removal of obstruction—Subsequent suit by son of insolvent under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, dismissed—High Court should not interfere in revision 609
- Ss. 68 and 4 — Official Receiver passing order on claim petition which he had no jurisdiction to do—No appeal preferred under S. 68—Application under S. 4 is not barred 471b
- S. 75—Order according to law supported by ample material—No revision lies 653b
- S. 75—Leave to amend insolvency petition can be granted in appropriate cases even after expiry of period of limitation prescribed for main proceeding 608
- S. 75—Lower appellate Court entertaining appeal which does not lie to it—Second appeal lies from its decision 475a
- S. 75 — Ex parte order regarding binding nature of debts of father on sons
- Sale—Ex parte order as to delivery of

Provincial Insolvency Act

- property is void—Duty of Court indicated 345
- S. 78 — Judgment-debtor becoming insolvent — Decree assigned—Direction in decree to prove debt in insolvency—Assignor referring to this direction in insolvency Court—Debt was deemed to have been proved 168
- Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (9 of 1877)
- Art. 17—Suit for return of money less than Rs. 500 recovered as tax and injunction to prevent defendant from levying it again — Reliefs independent and necessary—Suit is not of small cause nature 22a
- Art. 28—Suit for recovery of property as heir of deceased daughter is not cognizable by Small Cause Court 346a
- Art. 35 (h) (ii)—Whether cutting of trees under mistake of fact falls under Art. 35 (h) (ii)—Quaere 636a
- Art. 35 (h) (ii) — Logs of timber placed in custody of Court — Removal from Court on Court's order by one of the parties—Suit for timber or for their value removed from Court valued less than Rs. 500—Suit is triable as Small Cause Suit and no second appeal lies 636b
- Railways Act (9 of 1890)
- S. 122 (1)—Crossing railway line to reach platform is offence 372 (1)
- Registration Act (16 of 1908)
- S. 17 (1) (b), Excep. 2—Letter by mortgagee relinquishing mortgage amount requires registration 432b
- — S. 17 (1) (b)—Assignment of vendor's lien over property worth more than Rs. 100—Document is compulsorily registrable 181
- S. 17 (1) (d)—Agricultural leases are excluded by S. 117, T. P. Act, but if in writing they should be registered 451a
- S. 32—Presentation of document for registration by minor claiming under it is valid 407b
- Ss. 32 and 73 (1)—Difference between Ss. 73 (1) and 32 pointed out 407c
- Ss. 73 and 33—Presentation by husband as agent of wife under powers of attorney is valid 407d
- S. 73 — Husband of Hindu minor wife is representative of wife and competent to make application 407e
- Res judicata
- Decision as a result of gross negligence of guardian does not operate as res judicata as against minor 806h

Riparian Rights

—Unless there is declaration by Court as to due service of notice, constructive res judicata as to service does not arise 406

Right of Suit

*—Voluntary subscription is payable only when work is commenced on its basis 524b

Riparian Rights

—Artificial stream is one which is artificial at source or flows through artificial channel—Proprietors of adjoining lands of artificial streams cannot enjoy their water without grant or prescription 10a

Sale of Goods Act (3 of 1930)

*—S. 34—Contract to supply in instalments—Repudiation of instalment by buyer is not repudiation of whole contract where seller elects to keep contract alive 176b

*—S. 37 (3)—Contract to supply goods—Refusal by buyer to take delivery and repudiation of entire contract on ground of defective tender—Subsequent plea as to goods being defective cannot be raised 176a

Sea Customs Act (8 of 1878)

—S. 57—Article duty paid means article for which duty is to be paid by seller—Sale of articles in bonded warehouse—Duty increased before delivery—Purchaser must tender full price including increased duty for getting delivery 24

Shipping

—Bills of lading containing in margin description of goods as given by merchant and also clause stating contents unknown—Burden is on merchant to show that specification is correct—Shippers have to deliver goods tendered 7

Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877)

—Interpretation of sections in Act—English principles can be applied unless there is express divergence 386a

—S. 9—Adjudication of father and sale of property by Official Receiver—Order as to removal of obstruction—Subsequent suit by son of insolvent under S. 9 dismissed—High Court should not interfere in revision 609

—S. 12—Specific performance should not be refused on ground of mere technical plea or imaginary hardship 736c

*—S. 21—Sale of minor's property by guardian—Covenant in sale deed that vendee should resell to minor or his

Specific Relief Act

heirs on his selling property—Minor cannot sue for specific performance of such covenant FB 322b

—S. 22 (2)—“Hardship on the defendant,” in S. 22 (2) is used in the sense of some collateral hardship and not merely diminution of purchase money 736b

*—S. 35 (c)—Decree for specific performance operates in favour of both parties—Held on facts defendant is not entitled to specific performance 386b

*—S. 35 (c)—S. 35 (c) applies both to vendor and purchaser irrespective of fact whether he is plaintiff or defendant 386c

*—S. 42—Suit for declaration that order of dismissal of karnam passed by Revenue Board is invalid and ultra vires though without consequential relief, is maintainable—S. 42 is not exhaustive as regards declaratory suits 618c

—S. 42—Money deposited in Court towards decree—Suit by daughter-in-law of decree-holder merely for declaration that money was self acquired property of her husband without consequential relief is not maintainable 503(2)a

—S. 42—Suit for mere “honours” does not lie 264

*—S. 45—High Court's power to issue mandatory order does not extend against Governor-in Council or Governor with ministers 319b

—S. 50—Writ of mandamus—High Court has no power to issue 319a

Stamp Act (2 of 1899)

—S. 2 (15)—Partition list which does not itself effect partition, but is agreement for effecting future partition on terms agreed is liable to stamp duty not under S. 2 (15) but Stamp Act (Madr.), Sch. 1 (a), Art. 4 162

—S. 2 (22)—Definition of promissory note under—Promise to pay to some person or persons to their order or to bearer is essential 306a

*—S. 2 (22)—Promissory note—Test of determining whether document is promissory note indicated 306b

*—S. 35—Pro-note insufficiently stamped—Execution and loan admitted in written statement—Decree on note cannot be passed—Loan if independent of pro-note decree can be given on admission but otherwise mere admission does not give plaintiff cause of action—In latter case S. 58, Evidence Act, does not cure defect 1117

Stamp Act

—S. 36—Suit on promissory note—Attention of Judge brought when hearing of case was over and judgment was in preparation, to fact that note was not sufficiently stamped—Judge stating that he had not applied his mind to admissibility, considering such question and dismissing suit—Held dismissal was proper 781

—Sch. 1-A, Art. 4 and S. 2 (15) (as amended by Madras Act 6 of 1922) — Partition list which does not itself effect partition, but is agreement for effecting future partition on terms agreed, is liable to stamp duty but not under S. 2 (15) 162

Succession Act (10 of 1865)

—Ss. 98 and 106—Property bequeathed to two persons for life and remainder absolutely to specified class of persons—Latter take vested remainder on date of testator's death—Distinction between vested and contingent interest pointed out 885a

—S. 98—S. 98 contemplates cases of deferred possession 885b

—(39 of 1925)

—S. 222—Application for probate by executor—Any beneficiary can intervene—Proceedings are in representative character—Death of executor—Beneficiaries can continue proceedings 114a

—S. 273—Banker knowing fiduciary character of customer, paying him money for purposes inconsistent with his fiduciary character and duty is not entitled to indemnity given by S. 273 628a

Suits Valuation Act (7 of 1887)

—S. 8—S. 14, Madras Civil Courts Act (1873), does not prevail over S. 8 721a

Tariff Act (8 of 1894)

—S. 10—Article duty paid means article for which duty is to be paid by seller—Sale of articles in bonded warehouse—Duty increased before delivery—Purchaser must tender full price including increased duty for getting delivery 24

Tort

*—Defamation—Absolute privilege applies to statements before tribunal exercising judicial functions—Officer acting under S. 75 is such tribunal 537a —Defamation—Defendant stating that no melvaram is due and applicant had murdered defendants' predecessor and filed application out of spite—Statements being relative to the inquiry are privileged 537b —Malicious prosecution—Suit for damages—Elements to be satisfied pointed out 422a

Tort

Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882)

—Ss. 4 and 137—S. 137 is made part of the Contract Act 207b

—Ss. 6 (a) and S. 43—Illustration—Illustration to S. 43 is repugnant to S. 6 (a)—Alienation of spes successionis is not validated by S. 43, even if prohibition against alienation is subsequently removed 795c —Document is compulsorily registrable 181

—S. 6 (e)—Word "mere" implies bare right to sue—Transfer of property with right to past profits—Claim to profits on ground of such transfer is valid 710 (1)a —S. 8—Assignment of vendor's lien over property worth more than Rs. 100

—Ss. 11 and 28—Intention to grant absolute estate—Conditions repugnant are void—Absolute estate subject to defeasance clause not contrary to any law is valid—In latter case disposition by prior transferee does not prevent operation of defeasance clause—Nor can events subsequent to vesting divest persons in whose favour gift over is made 80

—S. 36—Provision in S. 36 is applicable only as between transferor and transferee of benefit of payment and not between principal persons 699b

—Ss. 40, 82 and 95—Family mortgage-debt apportioned among brothers—Covenant that if one brother is forced to pay debt payable by another, the latter's property will be liable for such amount paid by former creates charge over the property—Purchase of defaulter's property with actual or constructive notice of covenant in partition deed—Brother who has been forced to pay is entitled to enforce charge against purchaser—Purchaser is not entitled to subrogation if he has discharged some debts of his vendor—He may be entitled only to contribution under Ss. 82 and 95 715a

—Ss. 43 and 6 (a)—Illustration—Illustration to S. 43 is repugnant to S. 6 (a)—Alienation of spes successionis is not validated by S. 43, even if prohibition against alienation is subsequently removed 795c

T. P. Act

 —S. 48—Priority between purchasers of same property in execution of mortgage decrees by different mortgagees to which mortgagor alone made party—Deciding factor is priority in date of sales and not dates of mortgages FB 583

* —S. 53—Ss. 53 and 54 are only rules of evidence—Even voidable transfers can be set aside 527

* —S. 54—Contract to resell—Term of resale—Term held to be not only offer to resell but there was completed contract to resell FB 322a

 —S. 55 (4)—Assignment of vendor's lien over property worth more than Rs. 100—Document is compulsorily registrable 181

* —S. 58—Future income can be mortgaged but should be expressly included 447b

—S. 58—"Equitable mortgage," explained 293b

—S. 58—English decisions should be quoted with great care 293d

—S. 58 (d)—Usufructuary mortgagee has no right to sue for sale of mortgaged property unless there is express personal covenant to pay money—Held that document in question did not contain such covenant 613a

—S. 58 (d) —Usufructuary mortgagee—Lease executed by mortgagor—Arrears of rent stipulated to be paid at time of redemption and to be charge on mortgaged property—Such charge can be enforced by sale of mortgaged property 613b

—S. 58 (d)—Usufructuary mortgagee—Rights of mortgagor and such mortgagee as to possession explained 293e

—S. 66—Mortgagor's power to lease mortgaged property is limited by rule that he should not render security insufficient by such act—Onus of proving that security is unimpaired is on lessee 876a

—S. 66 — Mortgagor's right to lease mortgaged property—Conditions for exercise of such right mentioned 876b

* —S. 67—A obtained decree against B—B had mortgaged his property to C—A attached B's properties — Under Civil P. C., O. 21, R. 58, C preferred a claim petition stating that he had purchased property mortgaged to him from B—C's claim was dismissed and the order becoming conclusive under O. 21, R. 63, C brought present suit on his mortgage and 1933 Indexes (Mad.)—7 (4 pp.)

T. P. Act

contended that his claim petition having been dismissed the mortgage revived under law—Held that A who had purchased the mortgage-property under his decree could challenge validity of mortgage though he had notice of it under O. 21, R. 66—Held also that order under O. 21, R. 61 was not order in rem and hence mortgage in favour of C did not revive—Held further that the mortgage had become extinguished in sale 879b

—Ss. 67 and 88—Suit for redemption by subsequent usufructuary mortgagee against prior usufructuary mortgagee—Latter can claim reasonable interest only if he is entitled to do so under Ss. 67 and 88 672

—S. 69—Mortgage with power of sale—If mortgagee exercises right of sale given to him bona fide, Court will not interfere even though sale is disadvantageous unless price is so low as to be evidence of fraud 736a

—S. 69-A—English law — Appointment of receiver is not restricted only to mortgagee entitled to immediate possession 293c

—S. 72 — Usufructary mortgagee — Lease executed by mortgagor—Arrears of rent stipulated to be paid at time of redemption and to be charge on mortgaged property—Such charge can be enforced by sale of mortgage property 613b

* —S. 74 — Subrogation — Mortgagee paying off prior mortgage is entitled to subrogation whether he knows of existence of subsequent mortgage or not 398

—Ss. 82, 95 and 100 — Family mortgage-debt apportioned among brothers—Covenant that if one brother is forced to pay debt payable by another, the latter's property will be liable for such amount paid by former creates charge over the property — Purchase of defaulter's property with actual or constructive notice of covenant in partition-deed—Brother who has been forced to pay is entitled to enforce charge against purchaser—Purchaser is not entitled to subrogation if he has discharged some debts of his vendor—He may be entitled only to contribution under Ss. 82 and 95 715a

— S. 98 — Kanom is recognized a anomalous mortgage 876

T. P. Act

- S. 100—Deposit of money with another—Purchase of property by latter with money deposited and his own money—Depositor is not entitled to charge on property purchased unless deposit was made specifically for such purchase 917a
- *—S. 101—A obtained decree against B—B had mortgaged his property to C—A attached B's properties—Under Civil P. C., O. 21, R. 58, C preferred a claim petition stating that he had purchased property mortgaged to him from B—C's claim was dismissed and the order becoming conclusive under O. 21 R. 63, C brought present suit on his mortgage and contended that his claim petition having been dismissed the mortgage revived under law—Held that A who had purchased the mortgage property under his decree could challenge validity of mortgage though he had notice of it under O. 21, R. 66—Held also that order under O. 21, R. 61 was not order in rem and hence mortgage in favour of C did not revive—Held further that the mortgage had become extinguished in sale 879b
- S. 108—Question of determination of mesne profits—Receiver appointed to auction land—Security bond to raise second crops and give certain amount of paddy—Executant is in position of lessee 465b
- S. 108 (c)—Covenant of quiet enjoyment does not extend to disturbance by trespasser 465c
- S. 111—Party to dispute obtaining lease for indefinite period from receiver by practising fraud on Court—Lease can be summarily set aside without filing suit after notice under Transfer of Property Act 67 (2)
- S. 117—Agricultural leases are excluded by S. 117 but, if in writing, they should be registered 451a
- Ss. 130 and 137—Promissory note can be transferred otherwise than by endorsement 133 (1)
- S. 137—S. 137 is made part of the Contract Act 207b
- Trusts Act (2 of 1882)
- S. 11—Court can sanction reasonable amount for an object unprovided for by the author of trust which is beneficial and essential to beneficiary 242

Trusts Act

—S. 20—Purchase of house is not investment in security. 628b

—S. 90—Assignment by mother of mortgagee in favour of minor daughter and herself—Assignment void as regards interest of minor daughter—Realization of full mortgage amount by assignee—Suit by minor daughter against assignee for her share of amount is maintainable 806g

Vendor and Purchaser

—Discovery of vendor's defective title in portion of property purchased subsequent to sale—Whole sale is not ab initio void 382b

*—Contract to resell—Term of resale—Terms held to be not only offers to resell but there was completed contract to resell FB 322a

*—Contract to supply goods—Refusal by buyer to take delivery and repudiation of entire contract on ground of defective tender—Subsequent plea as to goods being defective cannot be raised 176a

*—Contract to supply in instalments—Repudiation of instalment by buyer is not repudiation of whole contract where seller elects to keep contract alive 176b

Will

—Specific direction as to investment of money—Administrators cannot invest in any other manner without Court's sanction 628c

Words and Phrases

—"Profits" and "receipts"—Profits is the surplus by which receipts exceed expenditure 825d

—Place where people are given only food and drink gratuitously but not allowed to rest during night time is not choultry 782a

—Santhathi—Settlement—Awarding of share of inheritance to illegitimate children by Sudra doner is not conclusive of the meaning attached to the word "santhathi" (Obiter) 659a

—"Veedham" explained 516b

COMPARATIVE TABLES

TABLE No. I.

Showing seriatim the pages of OTHER REPORTS, JOURNALS AND PERIODICALS for the year 1933, with corresponding references of the ALL INDIA REPORTER.

N.B.—Column No. 1 denotes pages of OTHER JOURNALS.

Column No. 2 denotes corresponding references of ALL INDIA REPORTER.

I. L. R. 56 Madras=All India Reporter

ILR	A. I. R.	ILR	A. I. R.	ILR	A. I. R.	ILR	A. I. R.	ILR	A. I. R.
1	1932 M 733	289	1932 M 779	430	1933 M 456	625	1933 M 309	796	1933 M 386
7	1933 " 137	300	" " 729	433	" " 322	641	" " 429	808	" " 598
26	" " 16	304	1933 " 176	443	" " 259	646	" " 457	833	" " 708
40	1932 " 593	310	" " 55	447	" " 166	654	" " 434	837	" " 489
63	" " 748	314	" " 42	453	" " 152	657	" PC 183	846	" " 583
85	" " 745	316	" " 157	458	" " 315	679	" M 701	879	" " 710
92	" " 771	320	" " 83	469	" " 411	687	" " 678	886	" " 401
115	" " 566	323	" " 519	475	" " 372	689	" " 417	892	" " 613
134	" " 724	329	" " 1	481	" " 338	692	" " 627	904	" " 624
149	" " 720	334	" " 24	486	" " 427	696	" " 646	909	" " 780
154	1933 " 65	339	" " 63	490	" " 418	705	" " 330	913	" " 688
157	" " 67	343	" " 33	508	" " 242	712	" " 305	915	" " 570
159	" " 367	346	" " 114	517	" " 398	716	" " 439	951	" " 511
163	" " 3	356	" " 225	520	" " 442	724	" " 424	964	" " 686
169	1932 " 734	366	" " 279	534	" " 158	731	" " 549	970	" " 682
177	1933 " 207	391	" " 320	546	" " 293	734	" " 626	980	" " 680
198	" " 28	395	" " 9	560	" " 241	737	" PC 167	984	" " 695
212	1932 " 605	398	" " 299	563	" " 500	744	" M 506	987	" " 688
231	1933 " 233	401	" " 231	570	" PC 148	749	" " 618	989	" " 691
251	1932 " 757	405	" PC 134	570	" " 550	996	" " 765
273	1933 " 74	415	" M 347	579	1934 M 231	759

64 Madras Law Journal=All India Reporter

MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.
1	1933 PC 20	142	1933 PC 33	317	1933 M 395	489	1933 M 411	596	1933 PC 120
18	" M 257	148	" " 38	320	" " 207	493	" " 417	599	" " 52
22	" " 157	150	" M 367	336	" " 126	496	" " 401	605	" M 455
24	" " 430	153	1932 " 748	341	" PC 61	500	" " 397	606	1934 " 227
27	1932 PC 275	172	1933 " 376	345	" M 403	503	" " 427	612	1933 PC 108
34	1933 " 1	184	" PC 78	351	" " 337	505	" PC 75	629	" M 466
48	1932 " 269	193	" " 26	354	" " 322	513	" " 117	637	" " 406
63	1933 M 259	199	" M 176	361	" " 279	514	" " 83	640	" " 489
66	" " 158	204	" " 306	382	" " 185	519	" M 372	650	" " 492
75	" " 276	208	" " 137	386	" " 309	523	" " 398	655	" PC 143
77	1932 PC 234	222	" PC 55	397	" " 527	526	" " 424	660	" " 141
79	1933 M 117	228	" " 43	401	" " 540	531	" " 393	664	" M 418
84	1932 PC 251	235	" M 242	403	" PC 63	536	" " 386	676	" " 451
86	1933 M 241	241	" " 300	413	" " 87	544	" PC 101	682	" " 293
88	" " 233	251	" " 315	421	" " 68	555	" " 72	692	" " 438
103	" PC 29	260	" " 347	427	" " 71	562	" " 134	695	" " 442
112	" M 500	277	" PC 39	431	" M 434	568	" M 439	706	" " 533
117	" " 299	284	" " 91	433	" " 519	574	" " 524	715	" PC 169
119	" " 152	290	" " 7	437	" " 456	576	" " 431	719	" M 457
122	" " 330	298	" " 85	439	" " 225	577	" " 481	728	" " 498
127	" " 231	302	" " 67	449	" " 407	586	" " 399	732	" " 523
130	" " 320	307	" " 58	455	" PC 95	586	" PC 122	735	" " 500
133	" PC 11	314	" M 338	466	" " 124	590

65 Madras Law Journal=All India Reporter

MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.
1	1933 PC 148	29	1933 M 252	58	1933 M 550	137	1933 M 627	150	1933 PC 178
6	" M 247	37	" PC 150	87	" PC 183	139	" " 626	154	" " 171
15	" " 529	48	" " 176	103	" " 167	142	" " 678	163	" " 193
24	" " 502	54	" M 549	108	" M 583	143	" " 173	173	" M 631
25	" " 506	56	" " 503	131	" PC 164	146	" " 429	179	" " 646

65 Madras Law Journal=All India Reporter—(concl'd.)

MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.	MLJ	A. I. R.
186	1933 M 618	342	1933 M 691	458	1933 M 756	620	1933 M 729	772	1933 M 856
193	" " 258	347	" " 342	471	" " 628	629	" " 794	775	" " 865
194	" " 613	350	" " 710	478	" " 688	630	" " 890	779	1934 " 15
203	" PC 155	355	" " 686	479	" PC 202	673	" " 781	781	1933 " 883
222	" M 570	359	" " 694	491	" M 736	675	" " 855	785	1934 PC 89
247	" PC 180	362	" " 658	507	" " 722	678	" " 782	789	" M 12
252	" M 178	364	" " 305	513	" PC 208	682	" " 797	791	1933 " 841
253	" " 598	367	" " 682	518	" M 748	684	" " 925	793	1934 " 24
271	" " 675	374	" " 696	526	" " 787	690	" " 854	795	" " 8
277	" " 679	376	" " 697	529	" " 765	693	" " 824	797	1933 " 842
279	" " 624	380	" " 713	532	" " 768	696	" " 774	798	" " 920
282	" " 637	383	" " 695	534	" " 767	703	1934 " 16	811	" PC 198
285	" PC 145	386	" " 688	533	" " 563	719	1933 " 851	813	" " 233
290	" M 664	387	" " 662	541	" PC 222	723	" " 843	819	" M 879
293	" " 653	390	" " 715	548	" M 806	725	" " 791	826	" " 876
302	" " 657	402	" " 703	569	" " 804	732	" " 840	833	" " 858
305	" " 745	405	" " 728	572	" " 511	734	" " 821	837	" " 888
311	" " 708	407	" " 780	582	" " 789	741	" " 847	841	1934 " 73
315	" " 689	410	" " 699	586	1934 " 99	747	" " 785	844	" " 49
317	" " 649	414	" " 681	588	1933 " 795	752	" " 839	849	" " 59
324	" " 680	417	" " 690	592	" " 762	755	" " 862	860	" " 70
327	" " 701	420	" " 721	597	" " 798	761	" " 913	866	" PC 40
334	" " 366	423	1934 " 231	609	" " 817	761	" " 913	866	" PC 40
335	" PC 198	455	1933 " 764	617	1934 " 226	769	" " 871	873	" M 52

37 Madras Law Weekly=All India Reporter

MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.
1	1932 PC 269	170	1933 M 309	361	1933 PC 43	495	1933 M 427	655	1932 M 716
13	" " 275	180	" " 315	366	" M 342	497	" " 126	662	1933 " 466
19	1933 M 158	183	" " 225	370	" " 395	501	" " 398	672	" " 451
27	" " 7	199	" " 43	373	" PC 39	503	" " 424	677	" " 432
32	" " 207	207	" " 305	379	" M 347	508	" " 527	681	" " 622
48	" " 258	210	" " 176	396	" PC 72	512	" PC 75	685	" " 260
49	1932 " 739	214	1932 " 768	401	" " 46	516	" " 83	691	" PC 101
57	1933 PC 20	220	1933 " 233	407	" " 67	521	" " 87	701	" " 108
71	" M 173	233	" " 137	410	" M 393	528	" " 16	716	" M 492
74	" " 178	250	" " 338	414	" " 456	534	" " 71	720	" " 345
75	" " 25	253	" PC 29	415	" " 434	537	" " 136	723	" " 71
79	" " 157	260	" M 306	417	" " 386	547	" M 413	725	" " 498
81	" PC 1	264	" " 148	425	" " 519	552	" " 439	729	" " 540
93	" M 252	272	" " 390	429	" " 332	557	" " 442	735	" " 503
101	" " 367	277	" PC 38	437	" " 328	566	" PC 36	736	" " 502
104	" " 299	279	" " 11	441	" " 372	570	" " 55	737	" " 533
106	" " 330	288	" M 353	445	" PC 63	576	" " 134	746	" PC 120
110	" " 500	296	" PC 68	452	" M 411	581	" M 455	748	" M 431
114	" " 152	300	" M 321	455	" " 403	582	" " 435	749	" " 500
117	" " 300	302	" " 376	460	" " 417	584	" PC 124	751	1934 " 227
127	" " 219	313	" " 344	462	" " 397	607	" M 418	758	1933 " 489
130	" " 185	314	" PC 26	465	" " 428	617	" PC 118	767	" PC 122
134	1932 " 559	319	" " 78	466	" " 374	622	" " 117	772	" " 141
137	1933 " 242	327	" " 61	469	" " 540	623	" M 429	775	" " 145
143	" " 245	331	" " 58	471	" " 407	628	" " 481	780	" " 148
146	" " 231	335	" " 52	476	" " 337	631	" " 524	784	" " 143
149	1932 " 676	340	" M 322	480	" PC 85	633	" " 495	788	" M 293
151	1933 " 211	346	" " 340	484	" M 399	635	" PC 106	798	" " 529
154	" " 257	349	" PC 33	487	" " 406	639	" " 91	806	" " 430
157	" " 117	354	" M 265	489	" " 454	645	" M 457	806	" " 430
162	" " 133	358	" " 362	491	" " 401	652	1932 Notes 19a	808	" " 320

38 Madras Law Weekly=All India Reporter

NOTE.—The pages of cases not mentioned below are cases either considered, not reportable or not sanctioned by the Hon'ble Judges.

MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.
1	1933 PC 155	68	1933 PC 178	96	1933 M 570	138	1933 M 598	199	1933 M 569
16	" " 183	71	" " 150	119	" " 628	155	" " 618	201	" " 563
29	" " 167	80	" M 503	125	" " 649	161	" " 613	204	" " 565
33	" " 169	83	" " 610	131	" " 623	169	" " 533	205	" " 597
37	" " 171	85	" " 511	133	" " 627	190	" " 595	208	" " 646
45	" M 550	94	" " 549	135	" " 624	194	" " 503	214	" " 521

Comparative Tables

53

38 Madras Law Weekly=All India Reporter—(Concl'd.)

MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.	MLW	A. I. R.
218	1934 M 510	347	1933 M 745	533	1933 M 704	668	1933 M 247	858	1934 M 12
221	" " 523	353	1934 " 231	539	" " 806	676	" " 890	860	1933 " 885
224	" " 568	382	1933 " 694	557	" " 785	714	" " 825	865	" " 883
226	" " 496	385	" " 691	562	" " 765	728	" " 833	868	" " 821
230	" " 637	389	" " 703	564	" " 767	730	" " 854	874	" " 888
232	" " 544	392	" " 688	558	" " 789	734	" " 836	875	" " 840
240	" " 537	393	" " 688	572	" " 787	736	" " 847	877	" " 872
244	" " 657	394	" " 699	575	" " 762	745	" " 851	880	1934 " 40
247	" " 664	397	" " 695	579	" " 804	749	" PC 222	887	" " 49
254	1934 " 13	399	" " 689	582	" " 781	755	" M 925	891	1933 " 917
257	1933 " 631	401	" " 682	583	" " 797	760	" " 843	896	" " 471
263	" " 465	408	" " 710	585	" " 768	762	" " 858	902	1934 " 115
266	" " 635	409	" PC 202	587	" " 794	766	" " 438	921	1933 " 876
268	" " 325	420	" M 729	588	" " 833	768	" " 855	927	" " 862
270	" " 658	428	" " 728	595	" " 778	771	1933 " 226	933	" " 870
272	" " 659	430	" " 710	599	" " 672	773	1933 " 860	940	1934 " 52
273	" " 655	435	" " 696	604	" " 662	779	1934 " 16	946	" " 65
296	" PC 164	436	" " 690	607	" " 681	792	1933 " 920	952	1933 " 871
301	" M 675	439	" " 713	610	" " 795	803	" " 839	955	" " 856
306	" PC 193	443	" PC 180	614	" " 770	805	" PC 225	957	1934 PC 89
315	" M 678	447	" M 721	621	" PC 211	813	" M 879	961	" M 75
316	" " 755	450	" " 722	626	" " 216	818	1934 " 1	972	1933 PC 233
319	" " 679	455	" " 748	628	" " 214	830	1933 " 868	979	" M 888
321	" " 686	463	" " 715	633	1934 M 99	832	1934 " 24	983	1934 " 84
325	" " 708	474	" " 701	635	1933 PC 218	834	1933 " 913	985	" " 73
327	" " 680	481	" " 756	642	" M 782	841	1934 " 8	987	" " 55
330	" " 697	494	" " 653	646	" PC 208	843	1933 " 852	994	1933 PC 198
333	" " 726	498	" " 774	651	" M 780	846	1934 " 25	995	" M 841
337	" " 753	504	" " 764	653	" " 817	849	" " 9	996	1934 " 95
341	" " 734	507	" " 736	660	" " 791	849	" " 9	996	1934 " 95
344	" " 725	522	" " 793	666	" " 824	855	" " 15	1000	" " 113

1933 Madras Weekly Notes=All India Reporter.

NOTE:—The pages of cases not mentioned below are cases either considered not reportable or not sanctioned by the Hon'ble Judges.

MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.
1	1933 PC 1	138	1933 PC 38	239	1933 PC 67	406	1933 PC 120	591	1933 M 411
10	" " 29	139	" M 839	241	1934 M 202	409	" " 124	594	" " 455
18	" M 500	141b	" " 432	254	1933 " 338	429	" " 101	595	" " 395
21	" " 241	144	" " 430	257	" " 406	439	" " 108	597	1934 " 31
23	" " 315	146	" " 259	258	" " 427	453	" M 511	611	1933 " 618
29	" " 447	148	" " 263	260	" " 401	460	" " 500	617	" " 489
36	" " 330	149a	1932 " 527	265	" " 386	461	" PC 143	622	" " 352
39	" " 176	149b	1934 " 48	272	" PC 75	465	" " 106	623	" " 442
43	" " 152	152	1933 " 340	276	" " 71	468	" M 498	631	" " 431
45	" " 309	155	" " 276	278	" " 136	471	" " 492	632	" " 397
54	" " 96	157	" " 320	286	" " 72	478	" " 466	634	" " 399
60	" " 242	159	" " 836	291	" " 83	486	1934 " 1	636	" " 407
65	" " 225	161	" PC 55	296	" M 347	496	" " 135	642	" " 635
75	" " 345	166	" " 58	303	" PC 95	498	1933 " 729	644	" " 454
77	" " 838	170	" " 68	312	" M 185	505	" " 701	646	" " 694
79	" " 852	174	" " 85	315	" " 322	508	" " 549	649	" " 126
81	1932 PC 168	178	" " 61	324	" " 503	510	" " 925	652	" " 457
88b	1933 M 434	185	" M 342	330	" " 321	514	" " 624	657	" " 393
90	" " 372	187	" " 362	331	1934 " 227	517	" " 646	660	" " 342
94	" " 841	189	" " 456	335	1933 " 540	522	" PC 122	663	" " 117
95	" " 251	190	" PC 63	341	" " 856	527	" M 435	667	" " 438
98	" " 367	199	" M 153	344	" " 481	543	1934 " 176	669	" " 328
100	" " 125	206	" " 527	347	" " 876	546	1933 " 337	672	" " 451
102	" " 148	208	" " 346	352	" " 675	549	" " 502	677	" " 366
109	" " 842	210	" " 306	357	" PC 87	553	" PC 145	678	" " 252
110	" " 840	213	" " 305	363	" M 689	557	" " 141	685	" PC 176
112	" PC 52	215	" " 178	365	" " 686	559	" " 169	689	" M 353
117	" " 33	216	" " 258	368	" " 524	566	" M 418	696	" " 821
121	" M 710	217	" " 413	370	" " 424	575	" PC 148	701	" " 659
125	" " 299	225	" " 231	374	" PC 134	579	" M 519	705	" PC 150
126	" " 344	227	1932 PC 186	379	" " 118	582	" " 649	713	" M 765
127	" " 844	235	1933 M 393	384	" M 583	587	" " 868	716	" " 728
133	" PC 43	237	" " 417	402	" " 439	589	" " 626	716	" " 728

1933 Madras Weekly Notes=All India Reporter.—(Concl'd.)

MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.	MWN	A. I. R.
718	1933 M 943	882	1933 PC 193	989	1933 M 748	1182	1934 M 825	1310	1933 M 16
720	" " 688	889	" " 198	996	" " 703	1191	" PC 202	1322	" " 183
730	" " 326	895	1934 M 103	998	" " 721	1201	" M 300	1324	1933 " 890
737	" " 506	902	1933 " 767	1000	" " 699	1209	" " 664	1355	" " 797
739	" PC 167	905	1934 " 95	1003	" " 768	1215	" " 533	1357	" " 879
743	" M 710	920	1933 " 851	1005	" " 722	1222	" " 885	1362	1934 " 59
744	1934 " 82	925	" " 780	1010	" " 860	1226	" " 495	1368	" " 24
745	1933 " 798	927	" " 870	1012	1932 " 436	1228	" " 510	1370	" " 8
755	" PC 178	929	" " 872	1013	1933 " 715	1230	" " 521	1371	1933 " 569
758	" " 183	931	" " 874	1023	1934 " 45	1233	" " 568	1373	1934 " 113
769	" " 155	934	1934 " 143	1025	1933 PC 208	1235	1934 " 126	1377	1933 " 795
782	1934 M 49	937	1933 " 764	1029	" M 688	1243	" " 25	1380	1934 " 15
785	1933 PC 180	939	1934 " 73	1033	" " 736	1251	1933 " 613	1382	" " 12
789	" M 627	941	1933 " 913	1046	" " 713	1276	" " 794	1384	1933 PC 117
792	1934 " 231	947	" " 173	1061	" " 550	1281	1934 " 85	1385	1934 M 103
816	1933 PC 198	949	" " 678	1081	" " 598	1286	1933 " 854	1398	" " 40
819	" M 696	950	" " 87	1095	" " 756	1288	1934 " 81	1404	" " 138
821	" " 690	952	" " 610	1106	" " 503	1289	" " 68	1408	" " 230
823	" " 871	955	" " 708	1110	" " 774	1292	" " 99	1409	" " 88
825	" " 701	957	" " 920	1116	" " 787	1293	" " 44	1433	" " 115
831	" " 697	967	" " 679	1124	" " 762	1298	1933 " 657	1449	" PC 3
834	" " 523	968	" " 680	1128	" " 367	1301	" " 637	1452	1933 " 233
842	" " 293	970	" " 745	1129	1934 " 248	1303	" " 565	1469	1934 M 65
850	" " 570	975	" " 695	1145	1933 " 804	1304	" " 429	1473	" " 173
869	1934 " 97	977	" " 682	1173	" " 824	1304	" " 658	1476	" " 52
873	" " 175	982	" " 681	1175	" " 855	1308	" " 31	1481	" " 55
879	" " 82	985	" " 691	1177	" " 847	1309	1934 " 31	1481	" " 55

1933 Madras Criminal Cases=All India Reporter

NOTE.—The pages of cases not mentioned below are cases either considered not reportable or not sanctioned by the Hon'ble Judges.

MCrC	A. I. R.	MCrC	A. I. R.	MCrC	A. I. R.	MCrC	A. I. R.	MCrC	A. I. R.
1	1933 M 123	61	" " 434	178	1933 M 337	223	1934 M 176	276	1934 M 95
12	" " 99	73	" " 251	185	" " 230	228	1933 " 502	308	" " 175
16	" " 338	75	" " 842	186	" " 416	230	" " 758	335	1933 " 688
25	" " 125	85	" " 372	187	" " 434	248	" " 843	337	" " 794
28	" " 147	90	1934 " 202	200	" " 413	251	" " 765	358	1934 " 248
29	" " 148	129	1933 " 129	215	" " 888	257	" " 688	370	" " 88
53	" " 367	134	" " 503	217	" " 326	258	" " 728	384	1933 PC 208
61	" " 840	149	" PC 124	219	" " 372	270	" " 767	390	1934 M 52
63	" " 841	149	" PC 124	219	" " 372	270	" " 767	390	1934 M 52

19 & 20 All India Criminal Reports=All India Reporter

Please refer to COMPARATIVE TABLE NO. I in A I R 1933 Allahabad.

34 Criminal Law Journal and 141 to 146 Indian Cases=All India Reporter

Please refer to COMPARATIVE TABLE NO. I in A I R 1933 Lahore.

1933 Criminal Cases=All India Reporter

Please refer to COMPARATIVE TABLE NO. I in A I R 1933 Nagpur.

TABLE No. II

Showing Seriatim the pages of the ALL INDIA REPORTER, 1933 MADRAS with corresponding references of OTHER REPORTS, JOURNALS AND PERIODICALS.

N.B.—Column No. 1 denotes pages of the ALL INDIA REPORTER 1933 MADRAS.
Column No. 2 denotes corresponding references of OTHER JOURNALS.

A I R 1933 Madras=Other Journals

AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals
1	63 M L J 805	5	140 I C 226	10	36 M L W 688	16	5 M Cr C 351
SB	36 M L W 868		1932 M W N 1262		140 I C 311		1933 Cr C 64
	1932 M W N 1298	7	139 I C 623	14	63 M L J 796		56 Mad 26
	140 I C 850		63 M L J 736	SB	36 M L W 873	22	36 M L W 659
	56 Mad 329		1932 M W N 1233		1932 M W N 1282		140 I C 273
3	63 M L J 446		37 M L W 27		141 I C 330		1932 M W N 1248
	139 I C 475	9	1932 M W N 1201	16	1932 M W N 904	24	1932 M W N 946
	36 M L W 465		36 M L W 699		63 M L J 554		63 M L J 565
	1932 M W N 955		63 M L J 778		139 I C 644		36 M L W 588
	56 Mad 163		140 I C 461		36 M L W 610		139 I C 847
5	36 M L W 586		56 Mad 395		33 Cr L J 792		56 Mad 354

A. I. R. 1933 Madras=Other Journals—(Contd.)

AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals
25	1932M W N 1102	65 (2)5	M Cr C 346	99	34 Cr L J 16	145	145 I C 412
	63 M L J 727		1933Cr C 109		1933Cr C 127	147	140 I C 773
	37 M L W 75	67(1) 63	M L J 670		1933M Cr C 12		34 Cr L J 96
	141 I C 822	36	M L W 636	101	36 M L W 795		1933M Cr C 28
28	1932M W N 840		1932M W N 1081		63 M L J 884		1933Cr C 257
	63 M L J 598		140 I C 323		141 I C 29	148	140 I C 524
	36 M L W 558	5	M Cr C 363	102	33 M L W 718		34 Cr L J 26
	141 I C 429	33	Cr L J 930	FB	140 I C 530		1933M Cr C 29
	56 Mad 198		1933Cr C 80		63 M L J 867		1933M W N 102
33(1)	1932M W N 1200	56	Mad 157		55 Mad 1049		1933Cr C 263
	36 M L W 714	67 (2)	1932M W N 1154		5 M Cr C 408		37 M L W 264
	140 I C 408	36	M L W 651		34 Cr L J 32	152	37 M L W 114
	63 M L J 843		140 I C 281		1933Cr C 130		64 M L J 119
	56 Mad 343	5	M Cr C 337	103	140 I C 441		141 I C 817
33(2)	63 M L J 383	33	Cr L J 956	104	63 M L J 785		1933M W N 43
	1932M W N 1044		1933Cr C 111		36 M L W 865		56 Mad 453
	139 I C 348	70	36 M L W 633		1932M W N 1330	153	143 I C 504
	36 M L W 504		63 M L J 703		140 I C 774	157	1932M W N 1338
	55 Mad 1025		140 I C 197	105	36 M L W 694		140 I C 872
39	36 M L W 490		1932M W N 1340		1932M W N 1240		37 M L W 79
	139 I C 562	71	140 I C 193		140 I C 458		64 M L J 22
	63 M L J 615		1932M W N 1260	108	36 M L W 828		56 Mad 316
	1932M W N 969		37 M L W 723		1932M W N 1324	158	37 M L W 19
	55 Mad 949	73	36 M L W 581		63 M L J 822		64 M L J 66
42	1932M W N 1197		139 I C 838		141 I C 324		141 I C 122
	63 M L J 759		1932M W N 1189	110	63 M L J 788		1933M W N 199
	36 M L W 701	74	1932M W N 959		36 M L W 750		56 Mad 534
	140 I C 462		36 M L W 703		140 I C 591	162	145 I C 529
	56 Mad 314		63 M L J 810	112	63 M L J 761	163	145 I C 407
43	63 M L J 319		56 Mad 273		36 M L W 756	164	142 I C 386
	139 I C 465		143 I C 265		1932M W N 1314		145 I C 690
	37 M L W 199	80	139 I C 867		140 I C 588	165	36 M L W 844
48	63 M L J 707		36 M L W 733	114	1932M W N 1252	166	1932M W N 1335
	36 M L W 817		63 M L J 911		63 M L J 899		63 M L J 941
	141 I C 456		1932M W N 1277		36 M L W 922		141 I C 54
54	1932M W N 1147	83	1932M W N 1198		141 I C 287		56 Mad 447
	36 M L W 754		63 M L J 792		56 Mad 346	168	145 I C 764
	140 I C 582		36 M L W 738	117	140 I C 833		145 I C 758
55	63 M L J 719		140 I C 498		64 M L J 79	169	145 I C 762
	36 M L W 638		56 Mad 320		37 M L W 157	171	141 I C 538
	1932M W N 1191	85	1932M W N 1116		1933M W N 663	173	37 M L W 71
	140 I C 324		63 M L J 725	120	140 I C 826		1933M W N 947
	56 Mad 310		36 M L W 716	123	63 M L J 906		65 M L J 143
57	1932M W N 1120		140 I C 500		140 I C 767		145 I C 694
	63 M L J 780	86	1932M W N 1178		1932M W N 1357	175	64 M L J 199
	36 M L W 883		63 M L J 887		34 Cr L J 90	176	37 M L W 210
	140 I C 769		36 M L W 931		1933Cr C 155		141 I C 632
59	36 M L W 664		141 I C 843		1933M Cr C 1		56 Mad 304
	140 I C 326	92	1932M W N 652	125	140 I C 756		1933M W N 39
	1932M W N 1274		36 M L W 120		34 Cr L J 92		141 I C 533
61	1932M W N 1149		138 I C 607		1933Cr C 157	178	37 M L W 74
	36 M L W 777		55 Mad 853		1933M Cr C 25		1933M W N 215
	63 M L J 880		63 M L J 741		1933M W N 100		65 M L J 252
	141 I C 70	93	36 M L W 793	126	140 I C 805		145 I C 394
63	36 M L W 644		1932M W N 1322		64 M L J 336	179	142 I C 730
	1932M W N 1187		140 I C 585		37 M L W 497	181	142 I C 548
	63 M L J 722	94	140 I C 325		1933M W N 649	184	141 I C 101
	140 I C 378		1932M W N 1338	129	63 M L J 917	184	37 M L W 130
	56 Mad 339	95	140 I C 329		36 M L W 942		64 M L J 382
65(1)	1932M W N 1074	96	36 M L W 781		141 I C 177		1933M W N 312
	63 M L J 794		140 I C 600		1933M Cr C 129		145 I C 599
	5 M Cr C 349		63 M L J 945	130	140 I C 779	187	145 I C 604
	36 M L W 759		1933M W N 54	133(1)	35 M L W 755	190	145 I C 588
	141 I C 276		36 M L W 641		1932M W N 653	194	140 I C 270
	1933Cr C 81	98	1932M W N 1230		138 I C 262	197	1932M W N 1317
	34 Cr L J 137		140 I C 322	133(2)	140 I C 540		142 I C 708
	56 Mad 154		5 M Cr C 386		63 M L J 932	200	142 I C 719
	19 A I Cr R 248		34 Cr L J 12		37 M L W 162	203	142 I C 721
65(2)	36 M L W 623		1933 Cr C 129	137	56 Mad 7	204	37 M L W 32
	139 I C 852		19 A I Cr R 93		64 M L J 208	207	64 M L J 320
	33 Cr L J 825	99	140 I C 260		37 M L W 233		56 Mad 177
	1932M W N 1218		1932M W N 1350		144 I C 629

A. I. R. 1933 Madras=Other Journals—(Contd.).

AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals
207	143 I C 641	257	141 I C 148	300	1933M W N 1201	342 (2)	144 I C 252
215	145 I C 767		37 M L W 154	305	37 M L W 207		65 M L J 347
217	145 I C 766	258	37 M L W 48		141 I C 799	344	1933M W N 126
218	145 I C 765		1933M W N 216		1933M W N 213		37 M L W 313
219	1932M W N 1296		143 I C 246		65 M L J 364		142 I C 683
	37 M L W 127		65 M L J 193		56 Mad 712	345	1933M W N 75
	142 I C 368	259	36 M L W 914	306	64 M L J 204		37 M L W 720
221	142 I C 711		64 M L J 63		37 M L W 260		143 I C 613
224(1)	142 I C 656		141 I C 181		1933M W N 210	346	1933M W N 208
224(2)	142 I C 658		1933M W N 146		142 I C 121		142 I C 613
225	1933M W N 65		56 Mad 443	309	37 M L W 170	347	64 M L J 260
	37 M L W 188	260	1932M W N 1068		141 I C 852	FB	1933M W N 296
	56 Mad 356		141 I C 293		64 M L J 386		37 M L W 379
	144 I C 414	263	37 M L W 685		56 Mad 625		143 I C 894
	64 M L J 439		36 M L W 917		1933M W N 45		56 Mad 415
230	1933Cr C 288		141 I C 167	315	1933M W N 23	352	142 I C 152
	1333M Cr C 185	264	1933M W N 148		37 M L W 180		1933M W N 622
	34 Cr L J 948		1932M W N 1090		64 M L J 251	353 (1)	...
	145 I C 371		143 I C 104		56 Mad 453	353 (2)	37 M L W 288
231(1)	145 I C 380	265	1932M W N 1203	319	142 I C 187		1933M W N 689
231(2)	64 M L J 127		142 I C 735	320	141 I C 120		144 I C 573
	37 M L W 146		37 M L W 354		64 M L J 130	358	144 I C 608
	142 I C 29	268	1932M W N 1225		1933M W N 157	360	145 I C 531
	1933M W N 225		5 M Cr C 397		56 Mad 391	362	1933M W N 187
	56 Mad 401		1933Cr C 371		37 M L W 808		142 I C 643
233	1932M W N 801		143 I C 115	321	37 M L W 300		37 M L W 358
	5 M Cr C 289		34 Cr L J 528		142 I C 25	364	...
	64 M L J 88	270	1932M W N 1075		1933M W N 330	366	142 I C 201
	37 M L W 220		5 M Cr C 361	322	37 M L W 340		1933M W N 677
	1933Cr C 389		1933 Cr C 373	FB	64 M L J 354		65 M L J 334
	56 Mad 231		143 I C 102		142 I C 315	367(1)	142 I C 195
	143 I C 46		34 Cr L J 526		1933M W N 315		1933M W N 1128
	34 Cr L J 481	271	1932M W N 821		56 Mad 433	367(2)	37 M L W 101
	20 A I Cr R 64		143 I C 372	325	142 I C 534	FB	64 M L J 150
241	1933M W N 21	276	36 M L W 919		38 M L W 268		1933M W N 98
	64 M L J 86		64 M L J 75	326	1933Cr C 303		141 I C 539
	37 M L W 151		141 I C 175		1933M W N 730		56 Mad 159
	142 I C 96		1933M W N 155		144 I C 215		1933M Cr C 53
	56 Mad 560	277	1932M W N 722		1933M Cr C 217		34 Cr L J 175
242	142 I C 108		138 I C 385		34 Cr L J 677		19 A I Cr R 345
	64 M L J 235		5 M Cr C 230	328	37 M L W 437		1933Cr C 550
	37 M W N 137		33 Cr L J 596		142 I C 395	369	1932M W N 1265
	1933M W N 60		1933Cr C 378		1933M W N 669		5 M Cr C 390
	56 Mad 508	278	1932M W N 1222	330	37 M L W 106		1933Cr C 552
245	1932M W N 1079		5 M Cr C 402		64 M L J 122		144 I C 765
	5 M Cr C 382		142 I C 242		141 I C 602		34 Cr L J 823
	140 I C 900		1933Cr C 346		1933M W N 36	372(1)	142 I C 202
	34 Cr L J 88		34 Cr L J 284		56 Mad 705		34 Cr L J 291
	37 M L W 143	279(1)	1932M W N 1153	332	37 M L W 429		1933Cr C 555
	1933Cr C 344		5 M Cr C 365		144 I C 784		1933M Cr C 219
247	1932M W N 1162		1933Cr C 346	337	64 M L J 351		1933M W N 90
	5 M Cr C 373		143 I C 107		142 I C 21	372(2)	64 M L J 519
	142 I C 138		34 Cr L J 524		37 M L W 476		37 M L W 441
	34 Cr L J 278	279(2)	36 M L W 847		34 Cr L J 277		1933Cr C 555
	1933Cr C 374		141 I C 307		1933M W N 546		1933M Cr C 85
	65 M L J 6		64 M L J 361		1933Cr C 439		143 I C 424
	38 M L W 668		56 Mad 366		1933M Cr C 178		56 Mad 475
251(1)	36 M L W 881	290	141 I C 381	338	1933M Cr C 16		34 Cr L J 582
	141 I C 174	293	141 I C 372		37 M L W 250		1932M W N 1114
	1933M W N 95		64 M L J 682		1933M W N 254	374	37 M L W 466
	34 Cr L J 117		37 M L W 788		64 M L J 314		143 I C 245
	19 A I Cr R 243		1933M W N 842		142 I C 31		64 M L J 172
	1933Cr C 365		56 Mad 546		34 Cr L J 273	376	37 M L W 302
	1933M Cr C 73	298	142 I C 17		1933Cr C 441		142 I C 286
251(2)	36 M L W 918	299	37 M L W 104		56 Mad 481		1932M W N 1111
	141 I C 169		64 M L J 117	340	1933M W N 152	382	144 I C 726
252	140 I C 838		1933M W N 125		37 M L W 346		1932M W N 1093
	37 M L W 93		141 I C 809		147 I C 526	384	144 I C 733
	65 M L J 29		56 Mad 398	342(1)	1933M W N 185		37 M L W 417
	1933M W N 678	300	141 I C 136		142 I C 581	386	1933M W N 265
257	1932M W N 1328		37 M L W 117	342(2)	37 M L W 366		64 M L J 586
	64 M N J 18		64 M L J 241		1933M W N 660

A. I. R. 1933 Madras=Other Journals—(Contd.)

A I R	Other Journals	A I R	Other Journals	A I R	Other Journals	A I R	Other Journals
386	144 I C	621	424 56 Mad	724	457 37 M L W	645	503 (2) 144 I C	602
	58 Mad	796	427 1933M W N	258		64 M L J	719	38 M L W	194
390	37 M L W	272		64 M L J	503	1933M W N	652	1933M W N	1100
	143 I C	880		37 M L W	495	56 Mad	646	506 65 M L J	25
398	37 M L W	410		143 I C	608	145 I C	308	1933M W N	737
	64 M L J	531		56 Mad	486	460 142 I C	592	144 I C	516
	1933M W N	657	428	37 M L W	465	461 (1) 1932M W N	1229	38 M L W	80
	144 I C	557		143 I C	90	5 M Cr C	389	56 Mad	744
395	64 M L J	317	429	37 M L W	623	143 I C	190	508 144 I C	30
	142 I C	193		143 I C	825	34 Cr L J	545	510 144 I C	503
	1933M W N	595		56 Mad	641	1933Cr C	707	38 M L W	218
	37 M L W	370		65 M L J	146	461 (2) 1932M W N	1272	1933M W N	1228
397	64 M L J	500		1933M W N	1304	5 M Cr C	405	511 1933M W N	453
	37 M L W	462	430	64 M L J	24	142 I C	191	38 M L W	85
	142 I C	597		141 I C	80	34 Cr L J	285	144 I C	853
	1933M W N	632		1933M W N	144	1933Cr C	707	65 M L J	572
398	1933M W N	235		37 M L W	806	462 142 I C	744	56 Mad	951
	64 M L J	523	431	64 M L J	576	465 144 I C	16	516 144 I C	95
	37 M L W	501		37 M L W	748	38 M L W	263	519 37 M L W	425
	143 I C	780		1933M W N	631	37 M L W	662	64 M L J	433
	56 Mad	517		143 I C	755	1933M W N	478	56 Mad	323
399	37 M L W	484	432	1933M W N	141	64 M L J	629	1933M W N	579
	64 M L J	586		37 M L W	677	471 146 I C	204	144 I C	940
	143 I C	454		147 I C	464	38 M L J	896	521 144 I C	963
	1933M W N	634	434 (1)	1933Cr C	662	475 147 I C	494	38 M L W	214
401	1933M W N	260		1933M Cr C	187	481 1933M W N	344	1933M W N	1230
	64 M L J	496		146 I C	195	64 M L J	577	523 64 M L J	732
	37 M L W	491		34 Cr L J	1183	37 M L W	628	144 I C	237
	143 I C	139	434 (2)	1933M W N	88	146 I C	52	1933M W N	834
	56 Mad	886		37 M L W	415	482 145 I C	174	38 M L W	221
403	64 M L J	345		1933M Cr C	64	485 144 I C	103	524 64 M L J	574
	142 I C	197		64 M L J	431	489 64 M L J	640	37 M L W	631
	37 M L W	455		143 I C	510	SB 37 M L W	758	1933M W N	368
406	1933M W N	257		1933Cr C	662		1933M W N	617	143 I C	496
	37 M L W	487		34 Cr L J	586		144 I C	422	525
	64 M L J	637		56 Mad	654		56 Mad	837	527	1933M W N	206
	142 I C	765	435	37 M L W	582	492	1933M W N	471		64 M L J	397
407	64 M L J	449		1933M W N	527		64 M L J	650		37 M L W	503
	37 M L W	471		143 I C	476		37 M L W	716		146 I C	530
	142 I C	646	436	143 I C	759		146 I C	46	529	37 M L W	793
	1933M W N	636	438	64 M L J	692	495	37 M L W	633		65 M L J	15
410	1932M W N	1118		1933M W N	667		143 I C	741		145 I C	289
	142 I C	903		144 I C	58		1933M W N	1226	533	37 M L W	737
411	64 M L J	489		38 M L W	766	496	144 I C	486		64 M L J	706
	37 M L W	452	439	37 M L W	552		38 M L W	226		144 I C	541
	1933M W N	591		1933M W N	402	498	1933M W N	468		1933M W N	1215
	143 I C	578		64 M L J	568		37 M L W	725	537	144 I C	115
	56 Mad	469		144 I C	243		64 M L J	728		38 M L W	240
413	1933M W N	217		56 Mad	716		147 I C	710	540 (1)	64 M L J	401
	37 M L W	547	442	37 M L W	557	500 (1)	1933M W N	460		37 M L W	469
	1933M Cr C	566		64 M L J	695		37 M L W	749		144 I C	167
	1933M Cr C	200		143 I C	412		64 M L J	735	540 (2)	1933M W N	335
	144 I C	519		1933M W N	623		144 I C	929		37 M L W	729
	34 Cr L J	800		56 Mad	520	500 (2)	1933M W N	18		146 I C	346
416	1933Cr C	531	447	1933M W N	29		37 M L W	110	544	144 I C	22
	1933M Cr C	186		143 I C	650		64 M L J	112		38 M L W	232
	146 I C	77	451	37 M L W	672		141 I C	607	549	1933M W N	508
	34 Cr L J	1158		64 M L J	676		56 Mad	563		144 I C	606
417	1933M W N	237		1933M W N	672	502	1933M W N	549		65 M L J	54
	64 M L J	493		144 I C	27		37 M L W	736		38 M L W	94
	37 M L W	460	454	37 M L W	489		1933Cr C	779		56 Mad	731
	142 I C	679		143 I C	596		65 M L J	24	550	38 M L W	45
	56 Mad	689		1933M W N	644		144 I C	154	FB	65 M L J	58
418	37 M L W	607	455	37 M L W	581		34 Cr L J	676		145 I C	534
FB	1933M W N	566		64 M L J	605		1933M Cr C	228		1933M W N	1061
	64 M L J	664		1933M W N	594	503 (1)	1933M W N	324		56 Mad	759
	143 I C	1		143 I C	432		1933M Cr C	134	563	143 I C	903
	56 Mad	490	456	1933M W N	189		37 M L W	735		38 M L W	201
424	64 M L J	526	FB	37 M L W	414		1933Cr C	799		65 M L J	538
	37 M L W	503		64 M L J	437		65 M L J	56	565 (1)	143 I C	681
	1933M W N	370		142 I C	622		144 I C	896		38 M L W	204
	144 I C	550		56 Mad	430		34 Cr L J	883

A. I. R. 1933 Madras=Other Journals—(Contd.)

AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals
565 (1)	1933M W N 1303	637	145 I C	862	688 (1)38 M L W	392	710 (2)56 Mad	879
565 (2)	144 I C	513	1933M W N 1301		1933M W N	1029	713	65 M L J	380
568	143 I C	844	639	144 I C	584	1933Cr C	1178	38 M L W	439
	38 M L W	224	516	1933M W N	517	34 Cr L J	950	1933M W N	1046
	1933M W N	1233		65 M L J	179	145 I C	378	145 I C	654
569	144 I C	472		38 M L W	208	56 Mad	913	715	65 M L J	390
	38 M L W	199		56 Mad	696	1933M Cr C	335	38 M L W	463
	1933M W N	1371		145 I C	594	688 (2)1933M W N	720	1933M W N	1013
570	38 M L W	96	619	1933M W N	582	38 M L W	393	721	38 M L W	447
FB	1933M W N	850		38 M L W	125	1933Cr C	1244	1933M W N	998
	65 M L J	222		144 I C	525	34 Cr L J	951	65 M L J	420
	145 I C	449		65 M L J	317	65 M L J	478	147 I C	707
	56 Mad	915	653	65 M L J	298	1933M Cr C	257	722	38 M L W	450
583	1933M W N	384		38 M L W	494	145 I C	379	1933M W N	1005
FB	65 M L J	108		145 I C	876	56 Mad	987	65 M L J	507
	38 M L W	169	655	38 M L W	278	689	1933M W N	363	145 I C	1004
	144 I C	833		146 I C	26	65 M L J	315	725	38 M L W	344
	56 Mad	846	657	38 M L W	244	38 M L W	399	145 I C	1008
595	144 I C	365		65 M L J	302	145 I C	335	726	38 M L W	333
	38 M L W	190		1933M W N	1298	690	1933M W N	821	145 I C	1014
597	144 I C	66		146 I C	1026		38 M L W	436	728	1933M W N	716
	38 M L W	205	658	38 M L W	270		65 M L J	417	65 M L J	405
598	143 I C	854		65 M L J	362	691	38 M L W	385	38 M L W	428
	38 M L W	133		1933M W N	1308		65 M L J	342	145 I C	659
	65 M L J	253		145 I C	831		1933M W N	985	34 Cr L J	1045
	1933M W N	1081	659	1933M W N	701		145 I C	1011	193Cr C	1312
	56 Mad	808		38 M L W	272		56 Mad	939	1933M Cr C	253
603	144 I C	44		145 I C	300	694	1933M W N	646	729	1933M W N	498
609	143 I C	833	662	65 M L J	387		65 M L J	359	38 M L W	420
610	144 I C	20		38 M L W	604		38 M L W	382	145 I C	721
	38 M L W	83		145 I C	993		145 I C	855	65 M L J	620
	1933M W N	952	664	65 M L J	290	695	1933M W N	975	734	38 M L W	341
612	144 I C	89		38 M L W	247		38 M L W	397	146 I C	219
613	38 M L W	161		1933M W N	1209		65 M L J	383	736	1933M W N	1033
	65 M L J	194		146 I C	72		145 I C	941	38 M L W	507
	1933M W N	1251	668	147 I C	501		56 Mad	984	65 M L J	491
	56 Mad	892	672	38 M L W	599	696	1933M W N	819	145 I C	1023
618	1933M W N	611		145 I C	744		38 M L W	435	745	1933M W N	970
	144 I C	400	674	147 I C	586		65 M L J	374	38 M L W	347
	38 M L W	155	675	193M W N	352		145 I C	714	65 M L J	305
	65 M L J	186		38 M L W	301	697	1433M W N	831	145 I C	397
	56 Mad	749		65 M L J	271		38 M L W	330	748	38 M L W	455
622	37 M L W	681		145 I C	933		65 M L J	376	1933M W N	989
	144 I C	202	678	38 M L W	315		147 I C	476	145 I C	917
624	1933M W N	514	FB	1933M W N	949	699	65 M L J	410	65 M L J	518
	38 M L W	135		56 Mad	687		38 M L W	394	753	38 M L W	337
	65 M L J	279		65 M L J	142		1933M W N	1000	755	38 M L W	316
	56 Mad	904		146 I C	459		145 I C	961	145 I C	858
	147 I C	479	679	1933M W N	967	701	1933M W N	505	756	38 M L W	481
626	1933M W N	589		38 M L W	319	SB	56 Mad	679	1933M W N	1095
	38 M L W	131		65 M L J	277		65 M L J	327	65 M L J	458
	56 Mad	734		145 I C	852		38 M L W	474	146 I C	608
	145 I C	388	680	1933M W N	968		145 I C	989	762	1933M W N	1124
	65 M L J	139		38 M L W	327	703	38 M L W	389	38 M L W	575
627	38 M L W	133		65 M L J	324		65 M L J	402	145 I C	927
	1933M W N	789		147 I C	453		1933M W N	996	65 M L J	592
	144 I C	923		56 Mad	980		145 I C	999	764	1933M W N	937
	56 Mad	692	681	1933M W N	982	704	1933M W N	825	38 M L W	504
	65 M L J	137		65 M L J	414		38 M L W	533	65 M L J	455
628	144 I C	479		38 M L W	607		145 I C	476	145 I C	998
	38 M L W	119		146 I C	116	708	1933M W N	955	765	1933M W N	713
	65 M L J	471	682	1933M W N	977		38 M L W	325	FB	1933M Cr C	251
631	1932M W N	153		34 M L W	401		65 M L J	311	56 Mad	996
FB	38 M L W	257		65 M L J	367		145 I C	404	65 M L J	529
	65 M L J	173		145 I C	438		56 Mad	833	38 M L W	562
	145 I C	346		56 Mad	970	710 (1)	1933M W N	743	145 I C	878
635	1933M W N	642	686	1933M W N	365		38 M L W	408	1933Cr C	1372
	38 M L W	266		38 M L W	321		145 I C	228	34 Cr L J	1080
	145 I C	230		65 M L J	355	710 (2)	1933M W N	121	767	1933M W N	902
636	145 I C	888		116 I C	49		65 M L J	350	1933M Cr C	270
637	65 M L J	282		56 Mad	964		38 M L W	430	65 M L J	534
	38 M L W	230	688 (1)	65 M L J	386		145 I C	716

Comparative Tables

59

A. I. R. 1933 Madras=Other Journals—(Conclud.)

AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals	AIR	Other Journals
767	38 M L W 564 1933Cr C 1373 147 I C 794	797	65 M L J 682 1933M W N 1355	841	35 Cr L J 79 38 M L W 995	865	146 I C 600
768	1933M W N 1003 65 M L J 532 38 M L W 585 145 I C 972	798	1933M W N 745 1933M Cr C 230 38 M L W 522 145 I C 953	842	1933M W N 109 1933M Cr C 75 65 M L J 797	867	1933M W N 950 147 I C 694
770	38 M L W 614		65 M L J 597		39 M L W 63	868	1933M W N 587 38 M L W 830
774	1933M W N 1110 38 M L W 495 146 I C 64 65 M L J 696	804	34 Cr L J 1109 1933M W N 1145 38 M L W 579 65 M L J 569	843	1933Cr C 1519 146 I C 478 1933M W N 718 1933M Cr C 248	870	1933M W N 927 38 M L W 933
778	38 M L W 595 146 I C 361	806	145 I C 975 65 M L J 548 38 M L W 539		35 Cr L J 75 1933Cr C 1519	871	1933M W N 823 147 I C 680
780	1933M W N 925 65 M L J 407 38 M L W 651 145 I C 871	817	147 I C 83 38 M L W 653 65 M L J 609	844	146 I C 475 1933M W N 127 146 I C 317	872	38 M L W 952 65 M L J 769
781	56 Mad 909 38 M L W 582 65 M L J 673 147 I C 369	821	146 I C 634 1933M W N 696 38 M L W 868 65 M L J 734	847	1933Cr C 1520 146 I C 475 1933M W N 1177	874	1933M W N 931 1933M W N 847
782	38 M L W 642 65 M L J 678 146 I C 307	824	147 I C 83 38 M L W 653 65 M L J 609	851	146 I C 317 1933M W N 1177 38 M L W 736	876	38 M L W 921 65 M L J 826
785	38 M L W 557 145 I C 930 65 M L J 747		1933M W N 1182 38 M L W 714 38 M L W 588	852	65 M L J 741 146 I C 1057 1933M W N 920	879	1933M W N 1357 65 M L J 819
787	1933M W N 1116 65 M L J 526 38 M L W 572 145 I C 946	833	146 I C 372 1933M W N 159 38 M L W 734	854	146 I C 1057 1933M W N 920 38 M L W 745	883	146 I C 566 65 M L J 781
789	38 M L W 568 145 I C 968 65 M L J 582	836	146 I C 535 1933M W N 77 38 M L W 728	855	1933M W N 1286 65 M L J 690 146 I C 628	885	1933M W N 1222 38 M L W 860
791	38 M L W 660 146 I C 499 65 M L J 725	838	146 I C 528 1933M W N 139 38 M L W 803		1933M W N 1175 65 M L J 675 38 M L W 768	888(1)	147 I C 383 38 M L W 874
794	33 M L W 587 145 I C 970 1933Cr C 1399 65 M L J 629	839	146 I C 516 1933M W N 110 1933M Cr C 61	856	147 I C 195 1933M W N 341 65 M L J 772	888(2)	146 I C 564 1933M Cr C 215
	1933M W N 1276 1933M Cr C 337 34 Cr L J 1159	840	65 M L J 732 1933Cr C 1517 147 I C 738	858	146 I C 417 65 M L J 833 1933M W N 1010	913	65 M L J 837 38 M L W 979
795	145 I C 965 33 M L W 610 65 M L J 588		1933M W N 94 1933M Cr C 63 146 I C 523	860	146 I C 417 65 M L J 833 1933M W N 1010	917	147 I C 46 1934Cr C 9
797	1933M W N 1377 145 I C 974 38 M L W 582	841	65 M L J 791	862	38 M L W 773 146 I C 1093 65 M L J 755	920	1933M W N 957 38 M L W 792
				865	38 M L W 927 65 M L J 775	925	147 I C 417 65 M L J 798
							1933M W N 510 65 M L J 684 38 M L W 755

LIST OF CASES OVERRULED AND REVERSED IN A. I. R. 1933 MADRAS

Akkanna v. Srirangaraja Bhattar (1930), M. W. N. 32=A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 486=123 I. C. 806.	Overruled in A. I. R. 1933 Mad. 890 (F.B.)
Chelimi Chetty v. Subbamma (1918), 41 Mad. 442=34 M. L. J. 213=22 M. L. T. 432=1917 M. W. N. 792= A. I. R. 1918 Mad. 379=42 I. C. 860.	" " 1933 Mad. 890 (F.B.)
Krishnayya Rao v. Venkata Kumara Mahipathi Surya Rao (1928), 51 Mad. 893=28 M. L. W. 422=55 M. L. J. 894=A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 994=116 I. C. 673 (F.B.).	" " 1933 P. C. 202.
Official Peceiver, Secunderabad v. Lak- hminarayana (1931), 54 Mad. 727=33 M. L. W. 562=(1931) M. W. N. 444= 61 M. L. J. 774=A. I. R. 1931 Mad. 474=132 I. C. 297.	Reversed in A. I. R. 1933 P. C. 134.
Sonachalam Pillai v. Kumaravelu Che- ttiar (1928) 51 Mad. 128=54 M. L. J. 8=27 M. L. W. 216=A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 77=107 I. C. 625 (F.B.).	Overruled in A. I. R. 1933 P. C. 183.

THE
ALL INDIA REPORTER
1933

MADRAS HIGH COURT

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 1
Special Bench

BEASLEY, C. J., SUNDARAM CHETTY
AND BURN, JJ.

Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras
v.

T. Namberumal Chetty & Sons — Assessee.

Original Petn. No. 29 of 1932, Decided on 31st August 1932.

 Income-tax Act (11 of 1922), S. 32 (1)—
Assistant Commissioner not enhancing total assessment but increasing it on some items and reducing it on others—No appeal lies—Income-tax Act (11 of 1922), S. 31 (3).

When in an appeal the assistant commissioner does not enhance the total income assessable to income-tax but by means of a reduction under one head and an increase under another head allows the Income-tax officer's total assessment to remain the same or reduces it; then merely by reason of the fact that the assistant commissioner has increased the income under one head an appeal does not lie to the Income-tax commissioner. The enhancement referred to in Ss. 31(3) and 32 (1) is an enhancement of the assessment and it means an enhancement of the assessment as a whole and not an enhancement of a particular item of income in the assessment which does not result in the enhancement of the assessment as a whole. [P 2 C 2]

M. Patanjali Sastri—for the Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras.

G. T. Ramanujachariar — for the Assessee.

Beasley, C. J.—The question referred to us by the Commissioner of Income-tax is :

“When the assistant commissioner in an appeal to him from the order of assessment of the Income-tax Officer enhances the assessment under one head of income without causing an increase in the total income (by not including altogether income assessed under another head), does an appeal lie to the commissioner under S. 32 against that order.”

This is a novel point and the facts which give rise to the question are as follows : The petitioners were assessed by the Income-tax Officer, Madras, 2nd Circle, on a total income of Rs. 41,154 made up as follows : (1) Property Rupees 46,092, and (2) other sources, dividends, interest on debentures and remittances of profits from Trichur, Rs. 2,206 less, (3) loss in business Rs. 7,144 making a total as before mentioned of Rs. 41,154. The tax levied was Rs. 4,068-12-0. The petitioners appealed to the assistant commissioner and claimed that the figure adopted by the Income-tax Officer under “other sources” should be reduced by Rs. 2,048. This point the assistant commissioner conceded. In the course of the appeal however the assistant commissioner whilst conceding that point which of course reduced pro tanto the total income assessable of the assessee was of the opinion that the Income-tax Officer had incorrectly allowed two deductions from the income arrived at under the first heading, namely, “property”. He went into the matter and computed the income of the assessee under the heading of property at Rupees 47,744 instead of Rs. 46,092 the computation of the Income-tax Officer. The result was that the total income assessed by the Income-tax Officer was reduced by this method by Rs. 396, as the total income was found to be Rs. 40,758 by the assistant commissioner. The petitioners here argue that they were entitled under S. 32, Income-tax Act, to prefer an appeal to the Commissioner, arguing that there had been an enhancement of the assessment. S. 32 (1) reads as follows :

“Any assessee objecting to an order passed by an assistant commissioner under S. 28 or to an order enhancing his assessment under sub-S. (3), S. 31, may appeal to the Commissioner within thirty days of the making of such order.”

The argument of the assessee is that the computation of the income of an assessee arising under any or all of the various heads of income set out in the Act is itself an assessment and that therefore what the assistant commissioner did by increasing the amount under "property" amounts to an enhancement of the assessment thereby giving the assessee the right of appeal to the Income-tax commissioner. On the other hand, the Income-tax commissioner contends that "assessment" in S. 32 means the assessment of the total income of the assessee. Unfortunately we gain no help by any definition of the word "assessment" in the Act because it is not therein defined. We have to see whether any other sections of the Act do give us any assistance. In my view, some assistance is to be gained from S. 23 (1) which provides that if the Income-tax officer is satisfied that a return made under S. 22 is correct and complete, he shall assess the "total income" of the assessee, and shall determine the sum payable by him on the basis of such return. Then again sub-S. (3) of the same section provides that where the assessee has not made a return the Income-tax officer shall by an order in writing assess the "total income" of the assessee. There are some other sections which may possibly throw some light upon this question. S. 30 speaks of "the assessment" which seems, in my view, to mean that there is only one assessment and not several. Then we have to see what the assessee is entitled to do by way of an appeal to the assistant commissioner.

Under S. 30, if he objects to the "amount" or "rate" at which he is assessed under S. 23 or S. 27, he may prefer an appeal to the assistant commissioner and again by the use of the word "amount" it seems to me to follow that what is meant is the total amount of the income and not the smaller amounts which go to make up the total. When he has got to the assistant commissioner, the assistant commissioner in disposing of the appeal may, in the case of an order of assessment, confirm, reduce, enhance or annul the assessment or set it aside. Having done that it is only when he has enhanced the assessment that under S. 32 any appeal lies to the Income-tax commissioner. If, on an appeal to the assistant commissioner, the assistant commissioner upholds in toto the assessment of the Income-tax officer there has been no enhancement of the assessment nor any reduction of it; clearly in such a case as that no appeal lies to the commissioner of Income-tax. A fortiori, if, on appeal to the assistant commissioner, he accedes to some of the contentions of the assessee and reduces the total amount of the assessment, no appeal lies to the Income-tax commissioner. The question here is, whether, when the assistant commissioner does not enhance the total income assessable to Income-tax but by means of a reduction under one head and an increase under another head allows the Income-tax officer's total assessment to remain the same or reduces it, merely by reason of the fact that the assistant commissioner has increased the income under one head, does an appeal lie to the Income-tax commissioner?

The Income-tax commissioner in his order of reference is of the opinion that the enhancement referred to in Ss. 31 (3) and 32 (1) is an enhancement of the assessment and that it means an enhancement of the assessment as a whole and not an enhancement of a particular item of income in the assessment which does not result in the enhancement of the assessment as a whole. Income-tax, in his view, is one tax and not a collection of taxes on different items of income—that is obviously correct—and assessment to income-tax is one whole and not a group of assessments of different items of income. With that view I entirely agree. It cannot be correct that the computation of an income under each head set out in the Income-tax Act is itself an assessment. It is merely a computation of an item of income or class or classes of income which go to make the whole and, when the whole has been arrived at, there is an assessment. In my opinion, the view taken by the Income-tax commissioner upon this point is the correct one and the answer to the question referred must be that an appeal in such a case does not lie. Costs to the Commissioner of income-tax Rs. 250.

Sundaram Chetty, J.—I agree.

Burn, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./M.N.

Reference answered.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 3

BEASLEY, C. J. AND CORNISH, J.

B. Chenchuram Naidu — Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Muhammed Bahavuddin Sahib—Defendant—Respondent.

Court of City Civil Appeal No. 14 of 1929, Decided on 26th April 1932, against decree of City Civil Judge, Madras, in Original Suit No. 376 of 1928.

* Civil P. C. (1908), O. 23, R. 1—Subject-matter is cause of action—Withdrawal of suit for ejectment for want of notice is no bar to subsequent suit even in absence of leave.

Subject-matter means the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed. In a suit for ejectment there were two defendants. Defendant 1 was a tenant paying rent to the plaintiff and defendant 2 was also made a party to the suit. He put in a written statement in which he put the plaintiff to proof of his title and alleged that he had not been given a written notice to quit which was a fact. The plaintiff withdrew his suit without obtaining liberty to file fresh suit against defendant as there was no notice to quit, thus exonerating him and proceeded with his suit against defendant 1. Subsequently the plaintiff sued defendant 2 for ejectment.

Held: that the withdrawal of the previous suit was no bar as the subject-matter was not the same: 42 Bom 155, Foll. [P 4 C 2]

K. Krishnaswamy Ayyar and T. V. Venugopala Iyyar—for Appellant.

Rafiuddin Ahmad—for Respondent.

Beasley, C. J.—This was a suit in ejectment. The plaintiff, the appellant here, claimed to be the owner of the suit land and entitled to eject the defendant from the superstructure on it. The learned City Civil Judge dismissed the appellant's suit. A suit had been filed in 1924 in the same Court, O. S. No. 422 of 1924, by the appellant against another person as defendant 1 and the respondent here as defendant 2 to eject them. The suit was withdrawn as against the respondent here by the appellant but at the time when he withdrew the suit he did not ask for liberty to file a fresh suit against the respondent. The learned City Civil Judge held that that was a statutory bar to the filing of the suit under appeal against the respondent. Upon that ground he dismissed the suit. He also went into the merits of the case and held that the appellant failed to prove his title and upon that ground also he dismissed the suit.

The first thing we have got to consider here is whether the appellant was prevented from filing the suit under appeal against the respondent by reason of the fact that he withdrew his claim against the respondent in the previous suit without reserving his right to file this suit. That was a suit in which there were two defendants. Defendant 1 was a tenant paying rent to the plaintiff and the respondent was also made a party to the suit. The respondent put in a written statement in which he put the plaintiff to proof of his title and alleged that he had not been given a written notice to quit which was a fact. During the hearing of the case, the appellant withdrew his suit against the respondent thus exonerating him and proceeded with his suit against defendant 1. The learned City Civil Judge who tried that suit gives an account of what took place in his judgment as follows:

"Plaintiff has now exonerated defendant 2. The suit against him is accordingly withdrawn but liberty to litigate his right, if any, in respect of the suit house is reserved to him."

A separate order was passed subsequently some days afterwards and it runs as follows:

"Plaintiff exonerates defendant 2. Suit against defendant 2 is withdrawn. No costs, defendant 2's right to litigate his claim in this house, if any is reserved to him."

The learned trial Judge has construed those orders as reserving liberty to defendant 2 to litigate his claim, and indeed that is what the latter of the two orders distinctly says. We have had the advantage also of the statement of Mr. Rafiuddin, who appeared on behalf of defendant 2 in that suit and represents the respondent here: who has told us that he asked that this reservation of defendant 2's right should be made and it is quite obvious that it was as a result of that request that the order to which reference has already been made, was made. We accept what Mr. Rafiuddin had told us and although it does not appear to us to have been quite unnecessary to make any reservation of defendant 2's right, however we are satisfied that that right was reserved at the express request of Mr. Rafiuddin so that the learned trial Judge's interpretation of those orders is perfectly correct and therefore there was no reservation of liberty to the appellant, the plaintiff in the suit, to file another suit against the respondent. But was such leave necessary? The question here is whether the suit under appeal was a suit for the same subject-matter as the previous suit. That of course was a suit to eject the respondent and this suit also claims the same relief against the respondent. But it does not necessarily follow that because in an ejectment suit the claim is the same the statutory bar under O. 23, R. 1, is raised against the appellant. It is argued before us that the reason why defendant 2 was exonerated in the earlier suit was because no written notice to quit had been given to him. On the other side it is argued that it was because of the point raised with regard to the appellant's title.

It is argued that it was because he was unable to prove his title that he exonerated the respondent. One answer to that is that he proceeded with his suit against defendant 1 and it was equally important to him to prove his title against defendant 1. If he had no title he could not succeed against defendant 1 any more than he could against defendant 2. It seems to us to be much more probable that the appellant did not proceed against the respondent here, defendant 2, because he had not given him notice to quit. It was no good going on with the suit against the respondent and succeeding in proving his title if the claim was bound to fail by reason of the defect that he had not given him written notice. What has to be considered here is what is the meaning of a "subject-matter" and we derive great assistance upon this point from Rukma Bi v. Mahadeo Narayan (1), which seems to us to be directly in point. That was a suit brought by the plaintiff to eject the defendant. Finding however that there was no sufficient notice to quit, he withdrew the suit without obtaining the leave of the Court. Subsequently the plaintiff having given a formal notice to quit brought a fresh suit for ejectment. The defendant contended that the withdrawal of the former suit without permission operated as a bar to the second suit under O. 23, R. 1, Civil P. C., 1908. It was held that the withdrawal did not operate as a bar as the previous suit was not a suit for the same subject-matter as the second suit within the meaning of O. 23, R. 1, Civil P. C., 1908, and that "subject-matter" means "the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed."

Scott, C. J., at p. 158 says:

"The question is whether the previous suit was a suit for the same subject-matter within the meaning of O. 23, R. 1. We are of opinion that 'subject-matter' means, to use the words of O. 1, R. 1 'the series of acts or transactions alleged to exist giving rise to the relief claimed.' Obviously the first series of acts or transactions which formed the basis of the first suit was incomplete, or the plaintiff would have been able to prosecute his suit to decree. It was incomplete because there was no notice to quit. The second series of acts or transactions is complete because the notice to quit has been given, and therefore the two suits are not in respect of the same subject-matter. . . . In the first suit between the present parties there was no cause of action because notice had not been given. In the present suit there is a cause of action because notice has been given. Therefore the causes of action are not the same."

With those observations we entirely agree. To hold otherwise would be to place a defendant, against whom an ejectment suit is launched without previously giving him the required written notice and against whom the suit is withdrawn for that reason, in an impregnable position. Never thereafter would the owner of the property be able to eject him from his premises. In fact the tenant would become the owner of the property. That never could have been the intention of O. 23, R. 1. We therefore hold that, although the learned trial Judge was right in his interpretation of his own orders, he was wrong in holding that the suit was barred by reason of the provisions of O. 33, R. 1. We now go on to examine his other findings. The respondent's case was that the appellant was not the owner of the property, i. e., the land upon which the superstructure stands. The appellant claimed to have purchased the land from one Sundaram Naidu. (His Lordship then considered the evidence on the fact of ownership and concluded.) We are quite satisfied that the suit property was Sundaram Naidu's and it follows that by reason of his sale the appellant became the owner of the property and was therefore entitled to sue in ejectment. Under these circumstances this appeal must be allowed with costs throughout. The further question with regard to valuation will be dealt with in the trial Court.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 5

RAMESAM, J.

T. S. Subbaraya Devai—Defendant—Petitioner.

v.

R. Sundaresa Devai—Plaintiff—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 230 of 1931, Decided on 3rd May 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Trichinopoly, D/- 4th September 1930.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9, R. 9—Pauper application dismissed in default as no steps taken for prosecution can be restored on finding that some steps were taken — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 141 and O. 47, R. 1.

A pauper application was dismissed for default, after refusing a prayer for adjournment, on the ground that no steps were taken to prosecute the application. Later on an application for restoration was made which was granted on the Court being satisfied that some steps had been taken.

Held: that the Court had jurisdiction to do so both under O. 9, R. 9 read with S. 141 and O. 47, R. 1: 41 Mad 286; A I R 1926 Mad 875; A I R 1927 Mad 355; A I R 1929 Mad 757 and A I R 1931 Mad 656 (F B), Dist; A I R 1922 P C 112, Ref. [P 6 C 1, 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115—No grave injustice—Court is not bound to interfere.

The Court is not bound to exercise jurisdiction under S. 115 except in cases where not doing so will cause grave injustice even if there is an irregularity. [P 6 C 2]

M. S. Vaidyanatha Ayyar—for Petitioner.

P. J. Kuppanna Rao — for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This is a revision petition filed under S. 115, Civil P. C., against an order of the Subordinate Judge of Trichinopoly dated 4th September 1930 by which he restored to file a pauper petition, O. P. No. 7 of 1930, which had been previously rejected on 26th July 1930. The facts of the case may be thus briefly stated. The respondent filed an application for permission to sue in forma pauperis. This application was numbered as O. P. No. 7 of 1930 and it came on for orders on 26th July 1930. The Subordinate Judge passed the following order on that day:

"Petitioner had not taken steps even to summon witnesses to prove the incumbrances on his property. There is no satisfactory explanation for not doing so. Petition dismissed."

Then there was an application for restoring O. P. 7. On that the Subordinate Judge passed the following order:

"I am unable to construe the order of this Court dismissing the petition as one on the merits. No witnesses had been summoned to prove the incumbrances. His pleader was absent and he was unable to say what really happened in the case. It is brought to my notice that his sister was expected by a later train with the mortgage deeds in question. Mr. Balakrishna Ayyar who appears for the petitioner says that she did turn up that day. Under these circumstances I feel I ought to give him an opportunity to prove his pauperism. The petition will be restored on petitioner paying Rs. 25 to the other side for their costs in one week."

The revision petition is against this latter order. The second petition was filed under O. 9, R. 9 taken with S. 141 and also under O. 47, R. 1. Mr. Vaidyanatha Ayyar who appears for the petitioner contends that neither provision of law applies to this case and that the petition is not maintainable. Now it seems to me what happened on 26th July was this. The pauper petition stood posted for that day. The vakil for the petitioner was absent. This appears from the later order. The party himself appearing must have asked for adjournment. The Subordinate Judge observed that steps were not taken even to summon witnesses to prove the incumbrances on the property. He was therefore of opinion that there were no grounds for granting adjournment. The application for adjournment was therefore refused. The pauper petition then was dismissed because it was not prosecuted. The petitioner might at least have gone into the witness-box but he did not. So that it seems to me that there were two applications on that day, one, for permission to sue as a pauper and secondly an application to have that matter adjourned. The adjournment application was refused. The other petition merely followed by a consequential order. Now it seems to me that O. 9, R. 9 taken with S. 141 is applicable in so far as the pauper petition was dismissed for default on the first occasion. In the course of his argument Mr. Vaidyanatha Ayyar referred to the following cases: Pichamma v. Sreeramulu (1), which refers to the distinction between an order passed under O. 17, R. 2 and an order passed under O. 17, R. 3. If a suit is disposed of on the merits and not for default the remedy is by way of appeal. But it seems to me that in this case the pauper application was dismissed for default. The Subordinate Judge did not say that he finds that the plaintiff was not a pauper.

1. (1919) 41 Mad 286=43 I C 566 (F B).

The next decision referred to, Krishnamurthy v. Ramayya (2), where it was held that if a pauper petition was dismissed it does not bar a second application to sue as a pauper. This may be; but it does not touch the present question whether the first pauper petition which was dismissed for default may not be restored. Two other cases are referred to: V. Ramaraghava Reddi v. Rajah of Venkatagiri (3) and Alagasundaram Pillai v. Pichuvier (4). In the first of these cases it was held that default of appearance was not a reason contemplated by O. 47, R. 1 and that O. 9, R. 9 was not applicable to execution proceedings. In the second of the cases it was held that O. 9, R. 9 was not applicable to execution proceedings. The same view was taken in Arunachalam v. Veerappa Chettiar (5). In this case we are not concerned with an execution application but with an application for permission to sue in forma pauperis. It may be that even to such an application O. 9, R. 9 by itself is not applicable but O. 9, R. 9 taken with S. 141 may be applicable. A similar reasoning will not avail to execution applications according to the three cases abovementioned because execution proceedings are proceedings in suits, and there is no need to refer to S. 141 and O. 9, R. 9 by itself is not applicable to execution proceedings. I do not think it follows from those three cases that O. 9, R. 9 does not apply to cases where an application to sue in forma pauperis was dismissed for default. I therefore think that so far as the pauper application was concerned it was dismissed for default and O. 9, R. 9 taken with S. 141 is applicable to it and that the Subordinate Judge exercised jurisdiction.

The other point argued is that O. 47, R. 1 is not applicable to an order of this kind, i. e., remedy by way of review. It is true that the cases mentioned show that a dismissal for default is not a ground for review under O. 47, R. 1. But I think the said application may be regarded as one for review of the order dismissing the application for adjournment. When the application for an adjournment was dismissed, he could find no ground for granting an adjournment because all the proper facts were not represented to him. But later on it was mentioned to him that the plaintiff's sister had actually started with the mortgage deeds and had arrived later on in the day. This was a fact not known on 26th July but known to the Subordinate Judge only later on. Now, a review is permissible only on the ground of discovery by the party of other evidence which could not be known to him with due diligence or other sufficient cause. The Privy Council has held in Chhajju Ram v. Neki (6), that the sufficient cause must be at least ejusdem generis with the earlier reason. Now the discovery of a ground by the party is one of the grounds mentioned earlier in the section. The discovery of a reasonable ground for adjournment by the Court later on, I think is a ground ejusdem generis with the earlier reason and the Court had found later on that the party did take some steps, though he had not taken out summons, to get his sister down to the place with all the mortgage documents. This fact being discovered by the Court as a good reason for review within the meaning of the Privy Council decision, I think the Subordinate Judge had good ground for reviewing his order dismissing the application for adjournment. And if that order is set aside, automatically the pauper application becomes restored. So even from the point of view of O. 47, R. 1 I do not think the order of the Subordinate Judge is irregular.

Finally I must consider on the facts of this case even if I am not strictly correct in either of the grounds mentioned by me above, I am not bound to exercise jurisdiction under S. 115 except in cases where not doing so will cause grave injustice. I am not satisfied that this is a case where I should interfere under S. 115 even if there was an irregularity. For all these reasons I decline to interfere with the order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge and dismiss the revision petition with costs.

P.R.S./M.N. Application dismissed.

2. A I R 1926 Mad 875=96 I C 962=50 Mad 63.

3. A I R 1927 Mad 355=99 I C 951.

4. A I R 1929 Mad 757=120 I C 567=52 Mad 899 (F B).

5. A I R 1931 Mad 656=134 I C 806 (F B).

6. A I R 1922 P C 112=72 I C 566=49 I A 144=3 Lah 127 (P C).

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 7

ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, J.

(Devessery) Pathraj Kathavala — Plaintiff—Petitioner.

v.

New Bombay Steamships Ltd.—Defendant—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 938 of 1929, Decided on 6th April 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Cochin, in S. C. S. No. 80 of 1927.

Shipping—Bills of lading containing in margin description of goods as given by merchant and also clause stating contents unknown—Burden is on merchant to show that specification is correct—Shippers have to deliver goods tendered—Evidence Act (1872), S. 101.

The effect of the specification in the margin of a bill of lading of the description of the goods, which according to the merchant, truly represented the quality and quantity of the goods that were shipped, when considered along with the clause in the bill of lading, namely "the contents, weights and value unknown" etc., is not that there is a prima facie case, that the specification in the margin is correct. The merchant has to prove that the goods were according to specification. And the shipping company is only responsible for delivering the same bags or cases that were shipped: A I R 1921 Mad 691, held Reversed. Lebeau v. General Navigation Co., (1873) 8 C P 88, Rel on.

N. R. Sessa Ayyar—for Petitioner.V. K. John—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—The plaintiff is the petitioner in this civil revision petition. He was the plaintiff in S. C. S. No. 80 of 1927 on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Cochin, the defendant being the firm of B. N. V. Kini Brothers, agents of the Bombay Steamships Ltd. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover the price of five bags of certain grains, which he alleged formed part of a consignment which he shipped from Bombay to Cochin in the defendants' steamer "S. S. Indira." The allegation is that the plaintiff sent 157 bags of grains of different kinds by the said steamer from Bombay to Cochin and that when delivery was made at Cochin there was shortage of two bags of oorid and three bags of long dhal. In the place of the above, the defendant offered five bags of onions. The plaintiffs declined to accept the case, and accordingly filed a suit to recover the price of two bags of oorid and three bags of long dhal. The plea of the defendant was that though in the bill of lading, in the margin the names of the particular grains said to be the contents of the bags delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant are mentioned, yet the bill of lading contains the statement:

"weight, contents and value, when shipped are unknown, and that delivery by the company of packages externally in good condition as received shall be conclusive evidence of the delivery of the full weight and contents and that the defendant was not liable."

The learned Judge who tried the suit came to the conclusion that the five bags in question contained the marks of the plaintiff. In the mate's receipt—which was granted to the plaintiff when the goods were taken into the ship along with the boat-note and after the same were accepted by the person who took charge of the same—mention was made that the consignment is "said to be" of particular grains. In exchange for the mate's receipt, a bill of lading was given to the plaintiff in the usual course, and as already remarked, in the margin of the bill of lading there is a description of the number of bags and of the particular grain which the bags were said to contain. Being of opinion that the company was not conclusively bound by the mention in the margin of the bill of lading of the particular kinds of grains the bags were said to contain, and that the company was discharged of its obligations by delivery to the plaintiff of the total number of bags containing the initials (marks) of the plaintiff the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff has preferred the present civil revision petition.

On plaintiff's behalf his learned advocate drew my attention to the Import Manifest and the Outturn Report which have been exhibited as Exs. C and D in this case and he emphasized upon the duty that the Master of the ship was under to give to the harbour authorities a correct description of the goods landed in any particular harbour. It was argued that having regard to the description of the goods in Exs. C and D it must be taken that the goods that were actually carried from Bombay to Cochin were goods of the description mentioned in the margin of the bill of lading. He also contended that there must be a specific finding on the question whether the five bags in dispute were the identical bags that were shipped by the plaintiff at Bombay. On behalf of the respondent the learned counsel, who appeared for the company, drew my attention to the mate's receipt as well as to the contents of the bill of lading. The mate's receipt only stated that so many bags were received which were "said to contain" particular grains, and there were the conditions in the bill of lading already mentioned by me, namely "the nature of the contents unknown," and "delivery by company of packages externally in good condition shall be conclusive evidence of the delivery of the full contents."

The learned counsel also strongly relied on the circumstance that the learned Judge has found that those five bags contained the plaintiff's marks under which the consignment was shipped by the plaintiff. It seems to me that one thing is clear, that the company was bound to deliver the exact bags that were shipped at Bombay, subject of course to the conditions and exceptions contained in the bill of lading and that the company was not entitled to take advantage of any misdescription of the goods with a view to withhold from the plaintiff the exact bags that were actually shipped by the plaintiff. If for example, the description of the bags was that they contained grains of an inferior quality but it was proved that the grains contained in the bags were of a superior quality, it is not open to the company to say that they would deliver to the plaintiff only grains of an inferior quality. In fact subject to the exceptions and conditions mentioned in the bill of lading relating to loss by perils of the sea etc., the company is bound to deliver the identical bags that were shipped at Bombay by the plaintiff to be carried to Cochin.

The argument that was advanced on behalf of the petitioner is, that both in the boat-note, (which however has not been produced in this case) and in the bill of lading itself, there is a specification in the margin of the number of bags shipped and of the contents of the same, (the names of the particular grains which the bags contained being specified there) and therefore the onus is upon the defendant company to prove that those descriptions were wrong. It is clear that the marginal notes to the bill of lading did not mention "onions" and the five bags in question offered to the plaintiff at Cochin were bags which contained "onions." What then is the effect of the specification in the margin of a bill of lading of the description of the goods, which, according to the merchant, truly represented the quality and quantity of the goods that were shipped, when considered along with the clause in the bill of lading, namely "the contents, weights and value unknown," etc. This question came up for consideration before this Court in the case reported in The British Steam Navigation Co., Ltd. v. Krishna-swami Ayyar (1). There the receipt that was granted to the shipper contained the words "said to contain" such and such goods. There was also the other usual clause, namely "contents and weight unknown." On those facts the learned Judge who tried the suit on the original side of this Court came to the conclusion that the company was bound to deliver the goods specified in the circumstances. That decision however was reversed by a Bench of this Court consisting of Sir John Wallis, C. J., and Krishnan, J. The learned Judges held that such questions had been decided in England and that the real meaning to be attached to such shipping documents was that the shipping company was not prepared to accept the description given by the merchant, and that for their purpose of determining the freight due to them they were prepared to accept the classification and the weight mentioned by the merchant. After referring to the course of business in such matters, namely, that the shipper takes a boat-note, delivers the goods to some person in charge of the ship and gets a mate's receipt for the goods, and then in exchange for the same gets a bill of lading from the agent or the master of the ship in the usual course, the learned Judges made the following observation :

"Reliance was placed upon the mate's receipts and the bill of lading as shifting the burden on to the defendant company. The mate's receipts expressly say "said to be" so many bags. When the shipping company takes care to give a receipt of that sort, so that it may not be used as an admission against them as to the number of bags received by them, it seems to me that there is no justification for using it as making out a prima facie case as to the number of bags actually put on board."

There the question was as regards the weight and the number of bags, not, as in the present case before me, as regards the contents. But the same remark as regards the words "weight not known" occurring in such bills of lading would also apply, in my opinion to the other portion of the bill of lading, namely,

"contents not known." A similar question arose for decision in New Chinese Antimony Co. Ltd. v. Ocean Steamship Co. Ltd. (2). The action was there tried by Sankey, J., as he then was, and he held that the shipowner was liable. On appeal, the Court of appeal reversed that decision and took occasion to remark as what would be the exact significance in law of such a condition occurring in a bill of lading. Viscount Reading, Chief Justice, at p. 669 observed as follows :

"I think that the true effect of this bill of lading is that the words 'weight unknown' have the effect of a statement by the shipowners' agent that he has received a quantity of ore which the shippers' representative says, weighed 937 tons but which he does not accept as being of that weight, the weight being unknown to him, and that he does not accept the weight of 937 tons except for the purpose of calculating freight and for that purpose only."

Then the remarks of Brett, J., in Lebeau v. General Navigation Co. (3), at p. 96 are quoted, which seem to be apposite for the present case. This is what that learned Judge said in the case in Lebeau v. General Navigation Co. (3) at p. 96 :

"When a closed case is offered to him with a representation as to the nature of its contents on the bill of lading, he may accept it without alteration of the bill of lading; but if he alters the bill of lading by inserting a statement that the contents are unknown, it is clear, as a matter of business, and it seems from the American cases, to be the law, that he thereby declines to accept the declaration of the shipper. He says in effect: 'I accept this case as it appears on the outside; I know nothing about the inside and will be bound by no statement in reference to it'. It appears to me that this completely does away with the statement made by the shipper with respect to the nature of the goods, and both parties must then be taken to agree to the bill of lading in the modified form by which there is no binding statement as to the contents of the package."

Scrutton, L. J. put the following illustration at p. 673 :

"Suppose a box described as a 'box of jewels' were deposited for safe custody at a Bank, and a receipt were given for it in the words 'received, contents unknown', there would be no evidence of the receipt of any jewellery."

Having regard to the well-recognised interpretation which these and similar words occurring ordinarily in bills of lading have received, I think that the description in the bill of lading in question in the margin that the bags contained grains of particular description is not conclusively binding on the defendant. No doubt the defendant is bound (subject to the exceptions and conditions mentioned in the bill of lading) to deliver at Cochin the bags that were handed to him by the plaintiff at Bombay. As regards the identity of the bags, one of the defendant's witnesses gave evidence to the effect that the five bags in question contained the marks of the plaintiff. He was not cross-examined with reference to that point, and the learned Judge states that the bags in question had plaintiff's marks on them and that in the absence of any other suggestion the bags in question should be taken to be among the bags that were tendered to the defendant at Bombay. For the foregoing reasons I think that the judgment of the learned Judge is not shown to be incorrect, and the civil revision petition is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N. Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 9

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Chella Rangappa—Appellant.

v.

Yerravenkatagiri Rangappa and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 480 of 1929, Decided on 16th September 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Anantapur, D/- 7th March 1929 in O. P. No. 19 of 1928.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11—S. 11 is not exhaustive.

Section 11 is not exhaustive and the binding force of a previous judgment depends not upon S. 11 but upon general principles of law: 6 All 269 (P C), Foll; A I R 1921 P C 11 and A I R 1922 P C 80, Ref. [P 10 C 1,2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11—Res judicata applies to Insolvency proceedings—Receiver's application for setting aside alienation dismissed—Creditor cannot again apply—Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 54.

The doctrine of res judicata is applicable to proceedings in insolvency and hence when an application by the receiver under S. 54, is dismissed on merits once, one of the creditors cannot again apply for setting aside the transfer: 6 All 269 (P C), Rel on. [P 10 C 2]

T. R. Ramachandra Iyer and R. Srinivasa Ayyangar—for Appellant.

S. Ranganatha Ayyar and T. R. Arunachalam—for Respondents.

Judgment.—In this O. P. No. 19 of 1928 the petitioner, a creditor of the estate of respondent 2 (insolvent), seeks to set aside a sale to respondent 1 of certain properties. Respondent 3 is the Official

2. (1917) 2 K B 664=86 L J K B 1417=117 L T 297=23 Com Cas 1=14 Asp M L C 131.

3. (1873) 8 C P 88=42 L J C P 1=27 L T 447=21 W R 146=1 Asp M C 435.

Receiver of Anantapur. The petition is stated to be under S. 4, Provincial Insolvency Act, and para. 4, alleges that the sale was "in fraud of other creditors." This same sale was the subject of O. P. No. 13 of 1924 filed by the Official Receiver now respondent 3. That petition was stated to be under Ss. 4, 54 and 56, Provincial Insolvency Act, and prayed that:

"the execution sale in favour of the 1st counter-petitioner (now respondent 1) be set aside as fraudulent and preferred."

Issue 3 in that O. P. was "whether the sale amounts to a fraudulent preference" and issue 4,

"whether in any event the sale can be set aside under S. 4, Insolvency Act."

The learned Subordinate Judge held that on the facts there was no fraudulent preference and that the provisions of S. 4 could not be invoked. It was, of course, obvious that S. 56 did not apply. The matter came before the High Court in C. M. S. A. No. 115 of 1927 on a question as to whether a second appeal lay from the District Judge, and Ramesam and Devadoss, JJ., gave judgment as follows (Ex. A):

"We think that the order of the Subordinate Judge was passed under Ss. 51 and 54, Provincial Insolvency Act. He especially refuses to apply S. 4 of the Act. The order is therefore not an order under S. 4"

Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Ayyar now argues that the appellant (petitioner) is free to proceed with his present petition as (1) it is "res judicata" that there has been no decision under S. 4 which is the basis of this petition, and (2) that the respondent cannot plead res judicata to the decision under S. 54 as S. 11, Civil P. C., does not refer to insolvency proceedings which are not "suits." We agree with his contention as to (1) as Ex. A is clear and in insolvency proceedings the Official Receiver represents the general body of creditors of whom the present appellant is one.

As to the second point it is true that no authority has been cited before us to the effect that insolvency proceedings can be the subject of res judicata, but there is ample authority for the proposition that S. 11, Civil P. C., is not exhaustive and that as stated by the Privy Council in Ram Kripal Sukul v. Mt. Rup Kuari (1):

"the binding force of such a judgment (i. e. a previous judgment) depends not upon S. 18 of 1. (1884) 6 All 269=11 I A 37 (P C).

Act 10 of 1877, but upon general principles of law."

The section referred to corresponds to S. 11, Civil P. C.:

"If, say their Lordships, it were not binding there would be no end to litigation."

This is manifestly so and is especially applicable to insolvency proceedings. Were it otherwise it would be impossible for anyone, whose possession of property received from an insolvent had been unsuccessfully impeached as a fraudulent transfer of preference, to be able to sell that property or even to enjoy its proceeds with any sense of security. This is a position which is clearly opposed to the principle "nemo debet bis vexari." The above Ram Kripal v. Mt. Rup Kuari (1) case was decided in 1883. Since then the Privy Council have reaffirmed their statement of the law bearing on the point in Hook v. Administrator-General of Bengal (2) and Ramachandra Rao v. Ramachandra Rao (3), the latter a case under the Land Acquisition Act.

On the authorities above cited we are of opinion that the doctrine of "res judicata" is applicable to proceedings in insolvency and that the present petition is therefore unsustainable. We therefore agree with the learned District Judge and dismiss this appeal with customary costs throughout including pleader's fees. This disposes of the memorandum of objections.

P. R. S. / M. N.

Appeal dismissed.

2. A I R 1921 P C 11=60 I C 631=48 I A 187=48 Cal 499 (P C).

3. A I R 1922 P C 80=67 I C 408=19 I A 129 45 Mad 320 (P C).

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 10

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

(Allam) Narasimhulu and others—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

(Gutta) Bhadrappa and others—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 334 and 470 of 1930, Decided on 23rd August 1932, against decrees of Sub-Judge, Ellore, in A. S. Nos. 184 and 211 of 1928.

(a) Riparian Rights—Artificial stream is one which is artificial at source or flows through artificial channel—Proprietors of adjoining lands of artificial streams cannot enjoy their water without grant or prescription—Easements Act (1882), S. 7.

An artificial stream is a stream which flows at its source by the operation of man, or if it flows at its source by the operation of nature, flows in a channel made by man. Where water is made to flow in an artificial channel from a natural stream, such a channel is an artificial stream. Where a stream is artificial and flows in a channel made by artificial means through the lands of adjoining proprietors, the rights of such proprietors are not prima facie the same as those of proprietors on the banks of natural streams. The right to the enjoyment of a natural stream or water belongs to the proprietor of the adjoining lands as a natural incident to the right to the soil itself. He has a right to have it come to him in its natural state, in flow, quantity and quality and to go from him without obstruction. Such a right in no way depends on prescription or any presumed grant. But in the case of artificial water courses the acquisition of rights in them must be by grant or prescription : 43 I C 235 ; A I R 1927 Bom 251 ; A I R 1925 P C 236 : Nuttal v Bracewell, 2 Ex 1 and Sutcliffe v. Booth, 32 L J Q B 136, Dist. [P 12 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100—Misconstruction of important document in deciding question of fact—Interference is possible in second appeal.

If by reason of a misconstruction of an important document the Courts below come to an erroneous finding on a question of fact, the High Court can interfere in second appeal. [P 13 C 2]

T. M. Krishnaswami Ayyar, Ch. Raghava Rao and M. Appa Rao—for Appellants.

P. Venkataramana Rao and K. Subba Rao—for Respondents.

Judgment.—These are connected appeals and arise out of a suit brought by plaintiff (respondents) for a declaration that only the raiyats of the lands within the ayacut of Solavani and Karicherlavari tanks are entitled to use the water flowing through the suit Solavani channel and that the defendants have no right to use that water for cultivating as wet their lands on either side of the channel and for an injunction restraining them from taking the water of the channel to their lands for wet cultivation by putting up cross bunds or palmyrah spouts and also for directing the defendants to restore the channel to its original condition. Both the lower Courts have found the plaintiffs' contention to be substantially true and passed a decree in their favour, granting the reliefs asked for by them subject to a slight qualification, S. A. No. 470 of 1930 has been filed by defendant 12 and S. A. No. 334 of 1930 by some of other defendants. Plaintiffs and others own about 400 acres of mamool wet land under the ayacut of Solavani and Karicherlavari tanks. The source of supply for those tanks is Tammileru, which is doubtless a natural stream. From that stream the suit channel called Solavani channel was cut in order to serve as a feeder to the aforesaid tanks. After these tanks became full, the water flowing through the suit channel used to be taken to two other tanks mentioned in the plaint. There is another tank called Kotta Cheruvu to which water is supplied from Tammileru by means of a branch from Dondulur channel.

It is found by both the Courts below that the defendants' contention that the water from Tammileru flows through the suit channel into Kotta Cheruvu is false. Most of the defendants' lands lying on either side of the suit channel have been found to be dry, and it is only since 1917 or 1918 that the defendants have been trying to convert those lands into wet. Defendant 12's land alone is found to be mamool wet, but the finding of both the lower Courts is, that that land is fed by Kotta Cheruvu and that no right to take the water of the suit channel for irrigating that land has been established. There is no doubt that the plaintiffs and others who own wet lands under the ayacut of Solavani and Karicherlavari tanks, have permanent rights of occupancy therein, and the suit channel is a feeder for those two tanks. After a full consideration of the evidence and circumstances of this case, it is found by both the Courts below that the raiyats holding wet lands within the ayacut of Solavani and Karicherlavari tanks are entitled to the exclusive user of the water flowing through the suit channel and to the unobstructed flow of water through the same, in order to fill up the aforesaid tanks for the purpose of irrigating their wet lands, within the ayacut. As observed by the learned District Munsif, the rights so acquired can be traced to an implied grant by the zamindar and by reason of the long enjoyment of the entire quantity of water flowing from the suit channel in the aforesaid manner, as of right, an easement by prescription or a customary right has been acquired even as against the zamindar. These findings are amply borne out by the evidence and must be accepted in these second appeals.

It is however contended that the suit channel should be deemed to be a natural stream and therefore the defendants who own lands on either side of it, are entitled to riparian rights which could not be lost by mere non-user. The Courts below have held that the suit channel is not a natural stream but only an artificial water course. That finding is challenged by setting up the contention that as the suit channel flows out of Tammileru which is a natural stream, it must also be taken to be a natural stream.

But the opinion expressed by text-writers is against this contention. An artificial stream is a stream which flows at its source by the operation of man, or, if it flows at its source by the operation of nature, flows in a channel made by man. In the present case, water is made to flow in an artificial channel from a natural stream and such a channel is an artificial stream (vide p. 327 of the Law of Riparian Rights by L. M. Doss). Where a stream is artificial and flows in a channel made by artificial means through the lands of adjoining proprietors, the rights of such proprietors are not prima facie the same as those of proprietors on the banks of natural streams. The right to the enjoyment of a natural stream of water belongs to the proprietor of the adjoining lands as a natural incident to the right to the soil itself. He has a right to have it come to him in its natural state, in flow, quantity and quality, and to go from him without obstruction. Such a right in no way depends on prescription or any presumed grant. But in the case of artificial water courses the acquisition of rights in them must be by grant or prescription: vide pp. 106 and 107 of the Law of Waters by Coulson and Forbes, 4th Edn. The same view is expressed in Gale on Easements (10th Edn.) at pp. 274 and 275. The learned author says that in the case of an artificial water-course, any right to the flow of water must rest on some grant or arrangement either proved or presumed, from or with the owners of the lands from which water is artificially brought or on some other legal origin. The contention of Mr. Raghava Rao for the appellants seems to be that by reason of the artificial channel having been cut from a natural stream, the owners of lands on either side of the channel must be deemed to have the same riparian rights as in the case of natural streams. But I think it is too broad a proposition which practically obliterates the distinction between a natural stream and an artificial water course; and even the decisions relied on by him do not support such an unqualified proposition.

What those decisions appear to lay down is, that even in the case of an artificial water course, special circumstances may be shown to exist so as to confer all such rights as a riparian owner would have had in the case of a natural stream. In Nuttall v. Bracewell (1), there were special circumstances for finding in favour of the acquisition of riparian rights in respect of an artificial stream. As a result of an agreement between two riparian owners of lands abutting a natural stream, there was a diversion of the water of the natural stream through an artificial channel, ultimately returning the water to the natural stream without doing any injury to any one. It was considered that it was within the competence of a riparian proprietor to grant a portion of his rights to another provided the latter did not make an unreasonable use of the water so as to cause sensible injury to the higher or lower down proprietor. In this case reference was made to Sutcliffe v. Booth (2), as an authority for the position that an artificial stream may be on the same footing as a natural one as regards rights of riparian proprietors. But it is clear from the decision in Sutcliffe v. Booth (2) that in order to acquire all the rights of riparian proprietors, it must be shown that a water course, though artificial, was originally made under such circumstances and so used as to give all the rights owned by the riparian proprietors in respect of a natural stream. There is nothing in the decision of the Patna High Court reported in Krishna Dayal Giri v. Bhawani Koer (3), which goes beyond the limitations prescribed in the aforesaid English decisions. The facts established in that case led to the inference that even in respect of the artificial water-course rights incidental to a natural stream have been acquired. Even in the decision in Yesu Sakharam v. Ladu Nana (4), the same principle has been adopted. The ordinary rule that in the case of an artificial water course

1. (1867) 2 Ex 1=4 H & C 714=36 L J Ex 1 =12 Jur N S 989=15 L T 313.

2. (1863) 32 L J Q B 136=9 Jur N S 1037.

3. (1918) 3 Pat L J 51=43 I C 295.

4. A I R 1927 Bom 251=101 I C 330=51 Bom 243.

any right of the owner to the flow of the water must rest on prescription or grant from or contract with the owner of the land from which the water is artificially brought was held to be subject to a qualification which as laid down by the Privy Council in Maung Bya v. Maung Kyi Nyo (5), is as follows:

"There is however a well established principle of law, namely, that a water course originally artificial may have been made under such circumstances and have been used in such a way that an owner of land situate on its banks will have all the rights over it, that a riparian owner would have if it had been a natural stream."

It is clear from the above mentioned authorities, that unless the defendants establish circumstances under which the suit channel was made and the manner in which it was used so as to give rise to an inference that those who own lands on either side of this channel have all the rights of riparian owners as such, the contention put forward by Mr. Raghava Rao must be held to be untenable. As both the lower Courts have found, the water of the suit channel was never used for irrigating the lands on either side of it till 1917 or 1918 and it is only since then, attempts have been made to make use of the water in violation of the rights owned by the ryots having lands under the ayacut of Solavani and Kari-cherlavari tanks.

I have therefore no hesitation to find that the defendants can claim no riparian rights in respect of the suit channel. It is also perfectly clear, that even assuming that they have such natural rights, they were lost by reason of the acquisition of a right of easement to the exclusive user of the water of the suit channel and of the uninterrupted flow of the same to the said two tanks, acquired by the ayacutdars who own wet lands under those tanks. S. A. No. 334 of 1930 is therefore dismissed with costs.

In the other appeal, a special contention is raised on behalf of defendant 12 by reason of his land being a mamool wet land. It follows from what I have stated above, that he can claim no riparian right by reason of his land abutting the suit channel. If so, he must prove that by grant or prescription or any other arrangement he has acquired the right to take the water of the suit channel for irrigating that land. Both the Courts below have fully considered the evidence regarding defendant 12's claim and given an adverse finding. The learned District Munsif finds that there is no sufficient reliable evidence to establish that defendant 12 and his predecessors have been taking water as of right from the suit channel for over the statutory period for irrigating the land purchased by him under Ex. 8. The learned Subordinate Judge has taken the same view of the evidence and come to the same conclusion. The concurrent finding of both the Courts below on a pure question of fact is to be accepted in second appeal, unless there are adequate grounds for interfering with it. Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Ayyar pressed an argument in order to show that that finding is vitiated by a misconstruction of the sale deed, Ex. 8, obtained by defendant 12 in 1920, which may be deemed to be his title deed for the land. I need hardly observe that if by reason of a misconstruction of an important document the Courts below came to an erroneous finding on a question of fact, this Court can interfere in second appeal. It has therefore to be seen whether Ex. 8 was really misconstrued or not. (The judgment after considering the document held.) I am of opinion that the appreciation of the oral evidence by both the Courts below is not in any way vitiated by a misconstruction of this document. The finding of the learned District Munsif is also supported by what he observed in the locality at the time of his personal inspection. It is conceded by the plaintiffs that the water of Kotta Cheruvu was taken to defendant 12's land through a side channel and a small sluice and by means of a palmyrah spout placed over the suit channel. There is, in my opinion, no adequate ground for interference with the finding of the lower Courts. In the result, S. A. No. 470 of 1930 is also dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 14

Special Bench

BEASLEY, C. J., SUNDARAM CHETTY
AND BURN, JJ.

In the matter of the Indian Income-tax Act 11 of 1922.

M. S. M. M. Meyappa Chettiar—Assessee—Petitioner.

v.

Commr. of Income-tax, Madras.

Original Petn. No. 54 of 1931, Decided on 30th August 1932.

(a) Income-tax Act S. 4 (2)—Money received in British India is presumed to be profits.

The ordinary presumption is that when money is received in British India from another country, the remittance is out of profits. [P 15 C 1]

(b) Income-tax Act (1922), S. 4 (2)—Person having two funds one of which was taxed—
There is no irrebuttable presumption that all remittances are made out of taxed fund—Foreign untaxed fund sending remittance less than its profits is profit received in British India.

It is not correct to say that where a person has two funds in his possession, one of them being a fund which has been subjected to income-tax and the other being a fund which remains to be taxed, the presumption that any remittance he makes is out of the one already subjected to tax can never be rebutted, or that it is an irrebuttable presumption.

An assessee had a fund in British India which was taxed and another fund outside British India. Certain sums were sent out from the former and invested through the latter fund out of British India. The tax on the fund in British India was paid from a remittance received from the latter fund. The profits of the foreign fund were more than the remittance.

Held : that the remittance was not out of the sums sent from the former fund which was taxed but was a remittance of foreign profit received in British India and that it could be taxed : Sugden v. Leeds Corporation, (1914) A. C. 483 and A I R 1930 Mad 457, Dist. [P 16 C 1, 2]

K. S. Krishnaswamy Ayyangar for R. Kesava Ayyangar—for Assessee.

M. Patanjali Sastri—for Commr. of Income-tax.

Beasley, C J.—The question referred to us is :

“Whether on the facts of this case any presumption as to the receipt of profits can be raised and if it can, whether the presumption has not been rebutted.”

The facts of the case which can be stated quite shortly are as follows : The assessee carries on a business in Rangoon; and in Ipoh he is the sole proprietor of a business, which at the material times it is alleged by the assessee earned no profit at all, and he is also a partner in another money lending business with other persons which did result in a profit at the material times. In 1926 sums of money amounting to Rs. 4,10,000 were sent from Ipoh to Rangoon to the petitioner there, the last sum being a sum received in December 1926. In the Rangoon books there is a ledger account for Ipoh and in Ipoh there is a ledger account for Rangoon, and money passing from one place to the other is set out in the respective ledger accounts. The income-tax authorities assessed that sum of Rs. 4,10,000 received from Ipoh by the petitioner in Rangoon to income-tax as being a remittance of foreign profits to British India levied an income-tax of Rs. 91,262 and odd upon it. The matter came before the High Court on a reference and the reference was answered against the petitioner (the same petitioner here) apparently not upon the merits but for some other reason ; so that that assessment remains and a sum of Rs. 91,262 odd has been paid by the petitioner to the income-tax authorities ; and the question before us is, where did that sum of money come from ?

Now it appears and it is quite plainly proved from the assessee's own books that in February and March 1927 a large sum of money, very nearly equivalent to the sum sent by Ipoh to Rangoon the previous year, was sent by Rangoon to Ipoh, the total amount being Rupees
4,08,662. In order to pay the incometax levied by the income-tax authorities the assessee sent from Ipoh Rupees 91,262-14-0 by telegram from the Chartered Bank on 27th April 1928 and the receipt of that sum was duly entered in the Rangoon books as a credit on 28th
April 1928 and as a debit to the suspense account on 9th May 1928. The petitioner's case here is that tax having been paid on the Rs. 4,10,000 sent from Ipoh to Rangoon in 1926 that was a tax-free fund and that that tax-free fund or amount was sent back to Ipoh where there was that tax-free fund or tax-paid fund in the hands of the assessee and in addition to that there was another fund which was a profit fund which of course would be liable to income-tax. We are not deciding here whether the money sent from Rangoon to Ipoh was in fact the money sent from Ipoh to Rangoon the previous year. We are dealing with this reference merely on the assumption that it was. The assessee's endeavour here and before the Income-tax Commissioner was to show that the Rupees

91,262 odd sent from Ipoh to Rangoon with which to pay the income-tax levied came out of the tax paid or tax-free fund in his hands at Ipoh. Had he been able to prove any such thing as that, then, in our opinion, he would have been entitled to maintain that, as the fund had already been taxed, this sum of Rupees 91,262 odd could not be taxed again because that sum has been assessed to income-tax by the Income-tax Commissioner as a remittance received in British India out of profits of the foreign firm at Ipoh.

We are asked here to say that the presumption that a remittance is out of profits has been rebutted here, the ordinary presumption being that, when money is received in British India from another country, the remittance is out of profits. The assessee however contends that an overriding presumption in their favour has been raised and that is that where there are two funds at the disposal of a person, one, a fund upon which income-tax has been levied and another fund which is still liable to income-tax the presumption is that the former will be drawn upon to make payments and not the latter and that this presumption has not been rebutted in this case. What do the entries in the assessee's account books at Ipoh show? The Income-tax Commissioner has found that the whole of the money sent from Rangoon to Ipoh, namely, Rs. 4,08,662 was, when it was received in Ipoh, re-invested with constituents and that, that being so, the assessee cannot be heard to say that the Rs. 91,262 odd remitted by him from Ipoh to Rangoon for the purpose of paying income-tax came out of that fund. The following are the entries to be found in the books of the assessee: on 17th February 1927 a sum of Rs. 77,250 equivalent to $50,000 was remitted by the Rangoon business to the Ipoh business; on 26th February 1927 a sum of Rupees 1,00,912 equivalent to $65,000 was remitted; on 4th March 1927 a sum of Rs. 93,000 equivalent to $60,000 was remitted; on 11th March 1927 a sum of Rs. 77,500 equivalent to $50,000 was remitted; and finally on 28th March 1927 a sum of Rs. 60,000 equivalent to $38,799 was remitted making a total of Rs. 4,08,662. Let us see how these sums of money were dealt with and the dates upon which they were. On 17th February 1927, the same date on which the sum of $50,000 was received, an identical sum was advanced to a constituent; on 26th February 1927 the date on which the sum of $65,000 was received, similarly an identical sum was lent out to somebody in Penang; on 4th March 1927 the same date on which the sum of $60,000 was received, a sum of $59,000 was advanced to a constituent and a sum of $1,000 was advanced to another making a total of $60,000; on 11th March 1927, the same date on which the sum of $50,000 was received, an identical amount was lent out to a constituent in Penang; and on 28th March 1927, the same date upon which the sum of $38,799 was received, a sum of $38,803 was advanced to another constituent; so that with the exception of a very small amount, the whole of the Rs. 4,08,662 was by 28th March 1927 re-invested with other constituents and was no longer in the hands of the assessee.

We have got to consider again the date upon which the remittance in order to pay income-tax took place. That was on 27th April 1928. At that time according to the books the whole of the money received from Rangoon was still invested with the constituents of the assessee's firm. Therefore upon the assessee's own showing and by reason of the entries made in his own books presumably made upon instructions by the agent who was carrying on the business there none of the Rs. 91,262 odd ever came out of the fund remitted from Rangoon to Ipoh. That being so, it is obvious that it did not come out of the fund upon which income-tax had already been paid. But in spite of these very clear entries which are admissions completely destructive of the assessee's case we are asked to say that they cannot be taken as evidence of the fact that this sum of money received from Rangoon was not intact in the hands of the assessee and that the Rs. 91,262 odd did not come out of it. In support of this contention a passage in the judgment of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Haldane, in Sugden v. Leeds Corporation (1) was relied upon. The passage referred to is at p. 253 and it is as follows:

1. (1914) A C 483=108 L T 578=83 L J K B 840=77 J P 225=11 L G R 662=6 Tax Cas 211=57 S J 425=29 T L R 402.

"If the annual payments would properly have been payable out of profits, but the person bound to make them has chosen to defray them out of some other source of income, this does not affect his right to retain the amount of the tax he has deducted."

We are told that in that case the Leeds Corporation in their books of account had shown that sums of money had been paid out of certain sources of income that they had the right to make the payments out of another fund or another source of income and that in spite of their accounts showing that they had made these payments out of a certain source, they were entitled to say thereafter that the payments were made out of another fund. Whatever may be the facts of that case, I cannot for one moment think that that observation of the Lord Chancellor can have any application to the facts of this case. It is argued, of course, that here there is the certain presumption, that is to say, that where a person has a fund in his hands which has already been subjected to income-tax, and another fund in his hands which is liable to income-tax if he is called upon to make any payment in the course of his business or otherwise he is much more likely to make the payment out of the fund which has already been taxed rather than out of the fund which remains to be taxed. That may be a reasonable presumption to draw but, in my view, this is not a case at all of drawing any presumption. No presumption of the kind suggested by the assessee arises here, in view of the fact that we have got the book entries of the assessee himself which clearly show that the remittance of Rs. 91,262 odd was not made out of a fund which had already been subjected to income-tax. There were profits in the Ipoh business and the ordinary presumption arises therefore that there being profits more than sufficient or sufficient to cover the amount of the sum remitted, the remittance of Rs. 91,262 odd was a remittance from the profits of Ipoh business.

To allow the contention of the assessee here would be to say that where a person has two funds in his possession, one of them being a fund which has been subjected to income-tax and the other being a fund which remains to be taxed the presumption that any remittance he makes is out of the one already subjected to tax can never be rebutted, or it is an irrebuttable presumption. That of course cannot possibly be the law. In this case even if that presumption had arisen, it would be clearly rebutted by the book entries of the assessee himself. In what other way can the income-tax authorities rebut such a presumption? If they are not to be allowed to pray in aid the book entries made by the assessee himself or by his agent it is very difficult to see how they can possibly rebut the presumption which is sought to be raised in aid of the assessee here.

Another case, namely, the Quilon case Subbiah Iyer v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras (2), was referred to. There the facts that book entries had been made by the assessee, that the payments made from Quilon to British India were out of current account, that the book entries made by the assessee in his British India books showed that the remittance was of capital and that the genuineness of those entries was not challenged were taken as circumstances rebutting the ordinary presumption which arose that the remittance from Quilon to British India was a remittance out of profits. It is an amazing contention that though an assessee can avail himself of book entries in order to rebut such a presumption, the income-tax authorities are not similarly entitled to rely upon book entries to rebut any other presumptions which may be raised in favour of an assessee. Under these circumstances, our answer to the question referred to us must be in favour of the Income-tax Commissioner. Costs Rupees 250 to the Commissioner.

Sundaram Chetty, J.—I agree.

Burn, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./M.N. Answer accordingly.

2. A I R 1930 Mad 457=127 I C 225 (S B).

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 16

BEASLEY, C. J. AND CORNISH, J.

Universal Mutual Aid & Poor Houses Association, Limited, Madras—Appellant.

v.

A. D. Thoppa Naidu and others—Respondents.

Original Side Appeal No. 8 of 1932, Decided on 9th March 1932, against decision of Stone, J., D/- 1st February 1932.

(a) Penal Code (1860), S. 294-A—Lottery is distribution dependent on chance only—It is different from wager—Contract Act (1872), S. 30.

What constitutes a lottery is that some gain, which need not be a money prize necessarily, is to come to the subscriber dependent upon pure chance, any element of skill being absent. It is distinct from a wager which is between two parties whereas a lottery is a multipartite agreement: A I R 1927 Mad 583 (F B), Expl.

[P 20 C 1]

(b) Penal Code (1860), S. 294-A—Company for conduct of lottery is illegal even if some objects are philanthropic—It should be wound up—Companies Act (1913), S. 162—Contract Act (1872), S. 30.

Where the main objects of a company is the conduct of a lottery, the mere fact that some of its objects were philanthropic will not prevent the company from being ordered to be wound up as being one formed for an illegal purpose. The purpose would still be illegal even where the illegal business is merely annexed to the real one which is philanthropic: English cases referred.

[P 20 C 2]

T. R. Venkatarama Sastri and V. Viswanatha Sastri—for Appellants.

Ch. Raghava Rao, T. V. Ramanathan and K. R. Srinivasa Raghava Ayyangar—for Respondents.

Beasley, C. J. — This is an appeal from a judgment of Stone, J., ordering the winding-up of the appellant company. The learned trial Judge has found that the company was formed for an illegal purpose, the purpose being an offence under S. 294-A, I. P. C., that is to say, conducting a lottery or keeping an office for the purpose of drawing a lottery or publishing proposals relating to the drawing in such lottery. No exception can be taken to the Memorandum of Association of the Company where the objects of the company are quite unobjectionable. Had the affairs of the appellant company been conducted strictly in accordance with those objects, no complaint whatever could have been made against it. It is argued on behalf of the respondents that the Articles of Association disclose purposes far beyond those appearing in the Memorandum of Association. It is contended that the Articles disclose that the object of the company was to conduct a lottery. The appellants, on the other hand, contend that the object of the company was to benefit charity and that there was nothing illegal in the conduct of the company. Reference must be made at this stage to the Memorandum of Association. There we find that, amongst other objects, one object is to raise general donation funds to carry out charitable objects. Of the special donation fund raised, not less than 30 per cent is to be invested entirely and permanently in Government securities and not more than 70 per cent on the security of immovable property. Of the interest from the before-mentioned investments, not less than 75 per cent is to be utilised in granting personal loans to the donors and in paying relief bonuses to their heirs. At the extraordinary general meeting of the company held on 25th November and 17th December 1930 in lieu of certain existing articles certain new articles were incorporated after sanction by the share-holders. The important articles are Arts. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21. Under these articles a donation certificate is to be granted to a person for each sum of Rs. 100 he pays either in a lump payment or by instalments as a contribution to the Poor Houses Special Donation Fund of the Association; and one lakh of such certificates is to form one series. Out of the interest accruing on the 70 per cent of the fund invested on security of immovable property, not less than 75 per cent is to be utilised every year in granting loans ranging from Rs. 1,000 to Rupees 10,000 to 200 donation certificate-holders on their personal security without interest and relief bonuses to the heirs of 200 donation certificate-holders who die before getting the loan of Rs. 1,000 or more for every complete series.

The names of the donors that are to get such loans are to be determined only by means of drawings. A donation certificate is to cease to exist when once it is drawn; or, if an advance of Rs. 500 is made to any heir of a donation certificate-holder, all rights to claim any benefits in respect of the same certificate are extinguished. The scheme is one under which anybody who takes a donation certificate of Rs. 100 becomes entitled to a loan of Rs. 1,000 free of interest and anyone who takes certificates for Rs. 1,000 becomes entitled to a loan of Rs. 10,000 free of interest—if he is lucky enough to get his certificate drawn in any of the annual drawings. A person can take a certificate in each and all of the series. But only 200 donation certificates are to be drawn each year. Similarly Rs. 500 is to be paid to the heirs of a deceased donation certificate-holder, but there are only to be 200 of such payments in each year; and the heirs of those deceased donation certificate holders who have got loans are not to be paid the relief bonus. Subsequently, the articles were still further altered and, in lieu of interest free loans, cash bonuses were substituted. Instead of a donation certificate holder getting loans of from Rs. 1,000 to Rupees 10,000 according to the number of certificates held, he was to get a cash bonus ranging from Rs. 500 to Rs. 5,000, that is to say, a half of the loan amounts.

The question to be considered is whether this scheme is a lottery or not. A lottery is not defined in the Penal Code and we must therefore look elsewhere for a definition. One definition of lottery is found in Webster's Dictionary—viz., a distribution of prizes by lot or chance. In the present case is there anything which is determined by lot or chance? It is contended by the respondents that there is in the case of the loans because the loan is dependent upon whether a certificate is drawn or not and the benefit is therefore dependent upon chance. It clearly is dependent upon chance. Here the drawing is the chance and it cannot seriously be contended that the certificate-holder is dependent for his benefit upon anything else than chance. Suppose a certificate-holder has only one certificate. If he is lucky, he may get his benefit during the first year itself; if he is not lucky, he may not get it, we are told, for at least sixty years. He may hold 12 certificates in which case he has 12 chances in every yearly drawing and under the cash bonus scheme he may be entitled to a cash bonus from Rs. 6,000 to 1,20,000 if all of them are drawn. The question is whether this necessarily leads to the conclusion that the scheme is a lottery and, in considering the question, English decisions upon the point may be more usefully considered since there is no definition of a lottery in the Penal Code. One of these is Sykes v. Beadon (1). In that case there was a Government securities trust or combination of more than twenty persons formed on the principle of investing the subscriptions of the members and dividing the capital fund and profits among themselves by means of certificates convertible by annual drawings by lot into preference dividend bonds bearing interest with a bonus. In the opinion of Jessel, M. R., this was a lottery and therefore illegal under the Lottery Act. On p. 190, Jessel, M. R. says:

"The holders of certificates are persons who subscribe money to be invested in funds which are to be divided amongst them by lot, and divided unequally. That is, the persons who get the benefit of the drawings get a bond bearing interest and a bonus which gives them different advantages from the persons whose certificates are not drawn, and it depends upon chance which gets the greater or the lesser advantage. It is therefore, a subscription by a number of persons to a fund for the purpose of dividing that fund by chance and unequally."

Another case is Taylor v. Smetten (2). In that case Taylor sold packets each containing a lb. of tea at 2 sh. 6d. a packet. In each packet a coupon was inserted entitling the purchaser to a prize and the prizes varied in character and value. It was held that this constituted a lottery. It was conceded that the tea was worth the money paid for it, but what the purchaser did was, he bought the tea coupled with the chance of getting something of value by way of a prize but without the least idea what that prize might be. In making his purchase he exercised no choice. What he bought he bought without any option or action of his own will, but as the result of mere chance or accident. Another case is the Premium Bonds case Re. International Securities Corporation Limited (3). It is a case very similar to this. The learned trial Judge in the course of his judgment refers to an Australian case. According to the head-note—there is unfortunately no report available in Madras—the facts were very similar to those in the present case. The head-note is set out in the judgment of the trial Court and it is therefore not necessary to repeat it here. In that case on the facts it was held that that was a distribution of prizes by lot or chance and therefore a lottery. It was argued that there was no difference between a lottery and a wager. This argument was necessary because the appellants at first relied very strongly upon the decision of a Full Bench of this Court of which I was a member, viz., Narayana Ayyangar v. Vellachami

1. (1879) 11 Ch D 170=18 L J Ch 522=40 L T 243=27 W R 464.

2. (1883) 11 Q B 207=52 L J M C 101=48 J P 26.

3. (1909) 99 L T 581=24 T L R 837.

Ambalam (4), a chit fund case. It was there held that the promotion of a chit fund, wherein the number of subscribers is determined beforehand and in which every subscriber is entitled by its rules to get from the promoters of the fund the whole of the capital subscribed for by him either before or at the closing of the fund at a fixed time, is not a wagering contract within S. 30, Contract Act, even though some of the subscribers become by the rules entitled to get much more than they paid and such persons are determined by the drawing of lots. The head-note also states that this was not an offence within S. 294-A, I. P. C., and it is this no doubt that has caused this case to be thought to support the appellants. The facts are set out at p. 697 (of 50 Mad.) as follows:

"In this case the defendants were the promoters of the chit fund in question. According to the rules framed by them for the fund they proposed to work the chit as soon as 500 people became subscribers, each agreeing to subscribe one rupee a month. The rules further provided that the chit was to run for 50 months and at the end of each month Rs. 50 was to be given by the defendants to the person who was determined by the casting of lots out of the 500. Any person whose name was so drawn by lot either in the first month or in any of the succeeding 49 months got Rs. 50 and he was thenceforward relieved from paying the further monthly instalments. After the 50th lot was cast the chit fund was to be closed and all the remaining 450 people were to be given by the defendants each Rs. 50. Under such rules the plaintiffs who subscribed for two chits subscribed Rs. 36 for 18 months at the rate of Rs. 2 a month. As the defendants refused to run the chit fund after the 18th month the plaintiffs brought this suit for Rs. 36 and interest. The defendants pleaded that the chit fund was a lottery, that the transaction between the parties amounted to a wagering contract and that it was therefore unenforceable. Upholding the defendant's plea the Munsif dismissed the suit. Hence this revision petition."

In his order of reference to the Full Bench, Waller, J., stated that the two questions which arose were: (1) whether the fund was a lottery and (2) if it was, whether the subscriptions were recoverable. When the case came before the Full Bench, as it then constituted, a finding was called for as to whether an offence as defined by S. 294-A, I. P. C., was committed when the transaction was formed. The District Munsif found as follows:

"The plea was raised by the defendants. The onus is on them. Nothing is placed before me by them wherefrom I could determine how the chit fund was organized and advertised and whether any one who liked could join by merely paying subscriptions, points considered to be essential for a satisfactory solution of the question whether the chit fund was a lottery. As observed in the order of remand, the rules of the fund as given in the printed book filed with plaint are not sufficient to make this clear. In spite of facilities having been afforded to defendants, they have not chosen to appear before me and let in evidence though I waited till this day. I must therefore answer the question in the negative."

When the case was further considered as there was the finding that no offence under S. 294-A, I. P. C., had been committed, we proceeded to consider the only other point, viz., whether this amounted to a wagering contract. Throughout the judgment of the Full Bench there is a discussion of that aspect of the case and that only. It is quite clear that there was no decision by the Full Bench that the chit fund in question was not a lottery. Thus it was that at a late stage in the argument when the real effect of the Full Bench decision became apparent it was contended on behalf of the appellants that wagering was the same thing as keeping a lottery. In my view the two are not the same. In Carill v. Carbolic Smoke Ball Co. (5), at p. 490, Hawkins, J., defines a wager thus:

"A wagering contract is one by which two persons, professing to hold opposite views touching the issue of a future uncertain event, mutually agree that, dependent upon the determination of that event, one shall win from the other, and that other shall pay or hand over to him a sum of money or other stake, neither of the contracting parties having any other interest in that contract than the sum or stake he will so win or lose, there being no other real consideration for the making of such contract by either of the parties If either of the parties may win but cannot lose, or may lose but cannot win it is not a wagering contract."

In Hampton v. Walsh (6), at 192, a wager was described as a contract by A to pay money to B on the happening of a given event in consideration of B paying money to him on the event not happening. In Thacker v. Hardy (7), Cotton, L. J. says:

"The essence of gaming and wagering is that one party is to win and the other to lose upon a future event, which at the time of the contract is of an uncertain nature; that is to say, if the event turns out one way A will lose, but if it turns out the other way he will win."

5. (1892) 2 Q B 484.

6. (1876) 1 Q B D 189.

7. (1878) 4 Q B D 685=48 L J Q B 289=39 L T 595=27 W R 158.

In Earl of Ellesmere v. Wallace (8), Russell, J., held that there cannot be more than two parties or two sides to a bet and that there may be a multiparty agreement to contribute to a sweepstakes, which may be illegal as a lottery if the winner is determined by chance, but not if the winner is determined by skill. In the present case none of the parties are betting against each other. There are no two sides unless the subscribers on the one hand and the company on the other can be said to be sides. The scheme under consideration seems to me to have none of the elements of a wager but to possess all of those of a lottery as defined. It was also argued for the appellants that it was essential to a lottery that there should be a money prize. This is clearly not necessary as the case of Taylor v. Smetten (2) shows. Nor can it affect the question that the subscriber receives the whole of the amount subscribed by him on some future date. What constitutes a lottery is that some gain is to come to the subscriber dependent upon pure chance, any element of skill being absent. In my view the learned trial Judge was right in holding that the conduct of the appellant company was illegal under S. 294-A, I. P. C. It was further contended that, as the company was formed for the purpose of benefiting charities and the lottery was merely an annexe to the original business no offence can be held to have been committed. This in my view is clearly wrong. S. 294-A, I. P. C., is sufficiently wide in its terms to negative any such contention as this and moreover there is an English case which shows the contrary, namely, Leng (Sir W. C.) & Co. (Sheffield Telegraph v. Sillitoe) (9), the Football Coupon case. There, a newspaper company was convicted of carrying on a ready money football betting business contrary to the Ready Money Football Betting Act of 1920. It was found as a fact by the Justices that on the date specified in the charge some persons bought the newspaper solely, and that other persons bought it partly, to obtain the coupon, and so to acquire the chance or possibility of winning a prize. Lord Hewart, C. J., says at 373:

8. (1929) 2 Ch. 1=98 L J Ch 177=140 L T 628
=73 S J 142=45 T L R 238.

9. (1929) 1 K B 366=98 L J K B 262=140 L T
500=93 J P 26=26 L G R 695=72 S J
810=45 T L R 94.

"What is necessary for a conviction under the Act is that the defendant should be shown to be carrying on a ready money foot-ball betting business within the definition in S. 2 of the Act. In my opinion, it is quite immaterial that a person who is charged with carrying on such a business can show that he is also carrying on another business however well established and well known it may be. If he annexes to an existing business a business which comes within the statute he is liable to the penalties provided by S. 1. And to appreciate the relation between the printer or publisher and his clients, it is not necessary to make a guess or to strike an average. What has to be examined is the nature of the transaction which takes place between the printer or publisher and the individual purchaser of the thing published."

In the present case from the handbook published by the company it is quite clear that the public are invited to purchase the certificates because of the chance there is of securing valuable prizes. Although some of the objects of the company may be philanthropic, it seems clear that the main object of the company was to conduct a lottery. No argument upon the facts that the illegal business was merely annexed to the real business can prevail nor could it, even if those facts were proved, in law prevail. It is further contended that no order for the compulsory winding up of the company ought to be made because it is still possible for the company to conduct itself so as only to carry out the original purposes for which it was formed and that the objectionable features of it can be removed. It seems to me however that by the removal of its obnoxious features the substratum of the company goes. Under these circumstances, the learned trial Judge was quite right in ordering it to be compulsorily wound up. This appeal must therefore be dismissed with costs.

Cornish, J.—I am of the same opinion. I think it is impossible to regard the scheme of interest-free loans or cash bonus scheme which supplanted it as anything but a lottery. According to the scheme as adumbrated in the Articles of Association and in the prospectus issued by the company a donation of Rs. 100 to a fund called the Poor Houses Special Donation Fund gives the donor a certificate and the chance of that certificate winning one of the 200 prizes ranging in amount from Rs. 500 to Rs. 10,000 at the annual drawing of certificates for these cash bonuses. The articles and the prospectus expressly provide that the prize winners, as also the amount of the prize won by each, shall be determined only by means of drawings. The scheme purports to ensure a certificate holder receiving at least Rs. 500 in respect of his certificate, for the arrangement is that if the certificate is not drawn for a prize in the holder's lifetime his heirs will receive on his death a payment of Rs. 500, called a Death Relief Bonus. But the winning of the other cash bonuses is purely a matter of chance dependent on the luck of the draw. And this feature, in my judgment, entirely distinguishes the case from Wallingford v. Mutual Society (10), where the fact that the apportionment of the loans to members of a benefit society was regulated by lot, was held not to bring the arrangement within the Lottery Acts. The lot merely decided the order in which the loans were to be made to the members of the society, and the loans were not in the nature of prizes dependent on the chance of the draw.

There is no definition of "lottery" in the Penal Code; so that the word, as it occurs in S. 294-A, I. P. C., must bear its ordinary meaning, which is, a distribution of prizes by lot or chance without the use of skill: see Re. International Securities Corporation Ltd. (3) and Earl of Ellesmere v. Wallace (8) at p. 52. An absolutely gratuitous distribution on chances, none of which had been paid for by the participants would not, in the opinion of Darling, J., in Willie v. Tounge and Stenbridge (11), amount to a lottery. But that is not the case here. It is true that the prize money was provided from the interest received from investments made by the company of the money subscribed by the certificate holders. But the money was subscribed with the knowledge and with the object that it was to be invested and that a specified proportion of the interest derived from the investments was to be distributed amongst the subscribers in cash prizes according to the luck of the draw. That was the great inducement held out in the company's prospectus to subscribe and become a certificate holder. The prospectus at p. 34 in describing the advantages of taking certificates, says:

"The maximum amount of cash bonus one can get in respect of each certificate in the drawings is Rs. 10,000. That is to say, if a person holds two certificates in each of the 12 series, he will be entitled to a cash bonus up to Rs. 2,40,000 at Rs. 10,000 for each certificate in case all of them come up first in the drawings."

In fact, the subscribers embarked their money in the company for the purpose of participating in chances of drawing these big money prizes. In my judgment the cash bonus scheme was clearly a lottery. The learned advocate for the appellant laid great stress on the Full Bench ruling in Narayana Ayyangar v. Vallachami Ambalam (4), in aid of his contention that there was no substantial difference between a chit fund scheme and the present scheme. The Full Bench however did not rule that a chit fund was not a lottery. There was no occasion for it so to decide in view of the finding, called for from the lower Court, that the necessary elements of an offence under S. 294-A, I. P. C., were absent. The decision was confined to the question whether the subscribers to the chit fund could enforce the contract against the promoter; and it was held that they could, because the contract was not a wagering, and consequently a void contract. But a lottery does not mean the same thing as a wagering contract, and Ramesam, J., who delivered the judgment of the Full Bench, was careful to point this out in criticising the use of the word "lottery" by Spencer, J., in Veeranan Ambalam v. Iyyachi Ambalam (12) to signify a wagering contract. The distinction between the two will be found further illustrated in Stoddart v. Sagar (13) and in Russel, L. J.'s judgment in Earl of Ellesmere v. Wallace (8).

It remains to be considered what should be done with the company. It is clear from the articles and the prospectus that the company is conducting this lottery as an important integral part of its business. According to the prospectus the sum to be annually expendible in providing cash bonuses does not fall far short of the amount to be allocated to the charitable undertakings of the company. But a lottery per se is not illegal in British India. An Act, 5 of 1844, instituted an Act for suppressing all lotteries not authorized by Government, declared unauthorized lotteries to be common nuisances. But it was repealed by

12. A I R 1926 Mad 168=92 I C 968.

13. (1895) 2 Q B 474=64 L J M C 234=15 R 579=18 Cox C C 165=73 L T 215=44 W R 287=59 J P 598.

10. (1881) 5 A C 635=50 L J Q B 49=43 L T 258=29 W R 81.

11. (1907) 1 K B 448.

Act 27 of 1870 which amended the Penal Code by introducing S. 291-A. The illegal aspects of a lottery therefore have to be found in S. 294-A, and consist in the keeping of any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery not authorized by Government or in publishing such lottery. There can, I think, be no doubt that the company in keeping an office, as it does, for the conduct of this lottery, and in publishing in its articles and prospectus the scheme of the lottery, is acting in contravention of S. 294-A. The business, at least a very substantial part of it which it is carrying on, is consequently an illegal business; and, such being the position, the case of Re. International Securities Corporation Ltd. (3) is good authority for ordering the compulsory winding up of the company.

P.R.S./M.N.

*Appeal dismissed.A. I. R. 1933 Madras 22

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

V. S. R. M. Chockalingam Chettiar and another—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Taluk Board, Devakotta—Defendant
—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 882 of 1928, Decided on 15th August 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Devakotta, in A. S. No. 16 of 1927.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 102—Suit for return of money less than Rs. 500 recovered as tax and injunction to prevent defendant from levying it again—Reliefs independent and necessary—Suit is not of Small Cause nature—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), Art. 17.

A suit was for the recovery of a sum (less than Rs. 500) collected as profession tax for a particular year, and also for an injunction against the defendant in respect of levying this tax for the succeeding two years. The relief by way of injunction as claimed in the plaint was not merely prefatory or ancillary to the return of the money nor could it be said that all the reliefs which the plaintiffs sought in respect of the plaint mentioned years could be obtained, without asking for an injunction.

Held: that as both the reliefs, which were independent ones, could not be granted by a Small Cause Court, the suit was not of a Small Cause nature and second appeal lay: A I R 1932 Mad 226; 30 Mad 101 and A I R 1930 All 702, Dist. [P 23 C 1]

(b) Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), S. 93—Actual receipt of income within area must be proved—Mere residence is not sufficient.

He who, within the area of the Taluk Board is in receipt of income from money lending, is liable to pay the profession tax. The actual receipt of the income within the limits of that area must be shown. It is not enough to show his residence alone within that area: A I R 1920 Mad 314 and A I R 1923 Mad 574, Rel. on.; A I R 1932 Mad 509 and A I R 1932 Mad 226, Foll.; 21 I C 847, Dist. [P 23 C 2]

Watriap S. Subramania Ayyar—for Appellants.

K. Rajah Ayyar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—Plaintiffs are the appellants. They filed a suit against the Taluk Board of Devakotta for a refund of Rs. 254-9-9 being the profession-tax illegally collected for the year 1923-24, by the defendant, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from assessing them to profession-tax on similar grounds for the succeeding years, 1924-25 and 1925-26. A decree for the refund of the money was passed by the first Court in plaintiff's favour, but the lower appellate Court set aside that decree, and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. Hence this second appeal.

A preliminary objection is raised by Mr. Rajah Ayyar for the respondent, that no second appeal lies in this case. If this is a suit cognizable by a Small Cause Court, no second appeal will lie, as the amount or value of the subject-matter of the suit does not exceed Rs. 500 (S. 102, Civil P. C.). It is also clear that a suit to obtain an injunction is exempted from the jurisdiction of a Small Cause Court. The present suit is for the recovery of a sum (less than Rs. 500) alleged to have been collected as profession-tax for a particular year, and also for an injunction against the Taluk Board in respect of levying this tax for the succeeding two years. The relief by way of injunction as claimed in the plaint is not merely prefatory or ancillary to the return of the money, as in the case reported in Raman Chetty v. Taluk Board of Sivaganga (1), nor can it be said that all the reliefs which the plaintiffs seek in respect of the plaint mentioned years could be obtained, without asking for an injunction as in the case reported in Ramachandra Ayyar v. Noorulla Sahib (2). In the present suit the plaintiffs want to get a refund of the sum paid for one year, and seek to prevent the defendant from levying this tax for the next two years, by getting an injunction. The latter relief claimed is an independent one, and not subservient to the refund of the money asked for.

1. A I R 1932 Mad 226=189 I C 620.

2. (1907) 30 Mad 101=16 M L J 477 (F B).

The aforesaid decisions relied on by Mr. Rajah Ayyar, have no application.

It is however contended that though this prayer is treated as an additional prayer it comes within the purview of the decision of the Allahabad High Court reported in Harbans Deo v. Raja Kunwar, A. I. R. 1930 All. 702. The case dealt with in that decision has no analogy to the present. In a suit for money the plaintiff asked for an injunction restraining the defendant from transferring his immovables, and it was found that the addition of this absurd prayer was only a dodge, to oust the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. In such an extreme case, the learned Judges thought fit to discard that prayer as a fictitious one. There is no reason to brand the prayer for injunction in this suit, in that manner. It seems to be a bona fide prayer, without which the plaintiffs could not avert the levy of this tax for those years. As the plaint stands, it cannot be said, that all the reliefs asked for can be given by a Small Cause Court. I think this suit is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court. The preliminary objection is overruled.

On the merits the question has to be decided on a proper construction of S. 93, Madras Local Boards Act 14 of 1920. It is common ground that the plaintiffs are residents of Poolankurichi (which is within the limits of the Taluk Board area), but do not carry on any money lending business there. The money lending business in respect of which the profession-tax in question was levied, is actually carried on in Rangoon. It is not contended that this tax is leviable under the first category mentioned in the section. The second category of cases is covered by the following provision, viz.:

"Every person who within such area and for the period laid down in S. 96 is in receipt of any income from money lending."

We have to see whether the plaintiffs were assessable to profession-tax for the year 1923-24, in respect of the income of the money lending business at Rangoon, viz., Rs. 25,000. The contention of the appellants is, that as no portion of that income was actually received by them at Poolankurichi, the place of their residence within the area of their Taluk Board, Devakotta, no profession-tax was payable to that Board. Whereas the respondent's contention seems to be, that by reason of their residence within the area of the Taluk Board, they are liable to pay this tax to the Board, though the income accrued to them at Rangoon and was not actually received at Poolankurichi. The words in the section seem to me to be plain and unambiguous. He who within the area of the Taluk Board is in receipt of income from money lending is liable to pay the tax. The actual receipt of the income within the limits of that area must be shown. It is not enough to show his residence alone within that area. The authorities are clear on this point. With reference to a similar provision in S. 8 (1), Income-tax Act 7 of 1918, it was held that though a person is a resident in British India, owning a money lending business carried on for him by his agents outside British India, he is not liable to be taxed, where the income derived from that business is not remitted to British India: Board of Revenue, Madras v. Ramanathan Chetty (3).

The aforesaid section relates to all income from whatever source it is derived, if it accrues or arises or is received in British India. In construing that section, proof of actual receipt of the income within British India was held to be necessary for levying the income-tax under the Act. The same view was upheld in a later Full Bench decision of this Court in Board of Revenue v. Ripon Press (4) and the decision in Aurangabad Mills, Ltd., In re (5) was also followed. These rulings are applicable to the present case by way of analogy. But there is a recent decision by a Division Bench of our High Court reported in Perianan v. Devakotta Taluk Board, A. I. R. 1932 Mad. 509, which is exactly in point. In that case the person had a money lending business at Rangoon, but was a resident within the limits of the Taluk Board of Devakotta. In construing S. 93, Madras Local Boards Act 14 of 1920, Waller, J., says that the plain meaning of the section seems to be that that part of his income is chargeable which he actually receives within the area of the Taluk Board. Same is the view of Jackson, J., in the decision reported in Raman Chetty v. Taluk Board of Sivaganga (1).

3. A I R 1920 Mad 344=53 I C 976=43 Mad 75 (S B).

4. A I R 1923 Mad 574=77 I C 621=46 Mad 706 (F B).

5. A I R 1921 Bom 159=64 I C 9=45 Bom 1286.

Some stress was placed by Mr. Rajah Ayyar on the decision in Mahadeva Sastri v. Municipal Council, Kumbakonam (6). That decision was with reference to S. 53, District Municipalities Act 4 of 1884, whose wording is different. Under that section, if the holder of any office or appointment (specified) resides within the Municipal area he is made liable to pay the profession-tax. A pensioner residing in that area, is the holder of an office. Though he drew his pension outside that area, he would still come within the purview of that section. This decision has no application to the present case. (The judgment then considered the evidence and finding that the income was not received within the area of the Board concluded.) I therefore hold that under S. 53, the plaintiffs were not assessable to profession-tax for 1923-24, as no portion of the income of the Rangoon money lending business was actually received by them within the aforesaid Taluk Board area. In the result the appeal is allowed, and the decree of the District Munsif is restored with costs here and in the lower appellate Court.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

6. (1913) 21 I C 847.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 24

BEASLEY, C. J. AND BURN, J.

(Adam Hajee) Peer Mahommed Essack—Appellant.

v.

Hajee Sukur Ganny—Respondent.

Original Side Appeal No. 83 of 1931, Decided on 29th July 1932, against decision of Stone, J., D/- 31st July 1931.

Tariff Act (1894), S. 10—Article duty paid means article for which duty is to be paid by seller—Sale of articles in bonded warehouse—Duty increased before delivery—Purchaser must tender full price including increased duty for getting delivery—Sea Customs Act (1878), S. 37—Contract Act (1872), S. 51.

The words "article duty paid" in S. 10 does not mean articles upon which the duty has been paid at the time of the making of the contract. What is meant is that it is to be a sale of an article in respect of which the liability to pay duty is upon the seller and he sells the article duty free.

[P 25 C 1]

The plaintiff contracted to purchase certain articles for home consumption from a bonded warehouse. Between the date of contract and demand for delivery the import duty was increased and the customs authorities refused delivery till that duty was paid. The plaintiff brought a suit for damages for nondelivery.

Held: that the seller was entitled to refuse delivery until the contract price and the additional duty was tendered to him. The fact that the duty had not been paid by seller made no difference.

[P 25 C 2]

G. Ramakrishna Ayyar and C. Srinivasa Chari—for Appellant.

T. N. Sambasivan—for Respondent.

Beasley, C. J.—This appeal raises an interesting point. The appellant was the plaintiff in the trial Court and in the suit he claimed damages from the defendant for nondelivery of some bags of sugar. The defendant, the respondent here, was the seller of those bags which had been imported from Java and at the time of the sale lay in a bonded warehouse. The sale was effected on 28th February 1930 and on the next day the import duty on sugar was increased by Rs. 3 per bag. On that day the plaintiff demanded delivery of the sugar from the defendant and delivery was refused because the Customs House authorities refused to allow delivery to be given unless the increased duty in respect of the bags was paid. The sale was a sale of ready goods for ready delivery. Stone, J., has found as a fact that the sale was of goods in a bonded warehouse and there is ample evidence to support that finding—indeed, there is no evidence on the appellant's side to the contrary. Evidence was necessary upon the point because it was argued that a sale of goods of this description meant a sale of goods in a warehouse which was not a bonded warehouse, not requiring the payment of any extra customs duty. It should be mentioned that the appellant possesses another warehouse in Madras but the limit of its accommodation is 1,000 bags of sugar and that the suit claiming damages was in respect of bags which lay in the bonded warehouse. I see no reason whatever to find fault with the findings of fact of the learned trial Judge on this point.

What we have now got to consider is whether the appellant was entitled to demand delivery of the bags of sugar without paying the increased duty. It is argued that by reason of S. 10, Tariff Act, 1894, the liability to pay the increased duty does not fall upon the appellant at all, but upon the respondent, because the respondent has not brought himself within the provisions of that section. That section obviously was enacted for the purpose of making it plain, in the absence of any agreement, upon whom the liability to pay duty upon articles which had been agreed to be sold was where the duty had increased between the time the contract of sale was made and the delivery of the goods. It was in order to make quite clear what the position both of the seller and the purchaser of the goods would be under such circumstances. Here, in between the time of entering into the contract of sale of these bags of sugar and their delivery, the import duty was increased by Rs. 3 per bag. Upon whom was the liability to pay that increase? The section in question, S. 10, reads as follows:

"In the event of any duty of customs or excise of any article being imposed, increased, decreased or remitted after the making of any contract for the sale of such article without stipulation as to the payment of the duty where duty was not chargeable at the time of the making of the contract, or for the sale of such article duty-paid where duty was chargeable at that time. . ."

It is the latter part of the section which has application here. This was a case of the sale of an article in respect of which there was a duty chargeable and that duty chargeable was subsequently increased. Here sub-Cl. (a), S. 10 comes into play. It is as follows:

"If such imposition or increase so takes effect that the duty or increased duty, as the case may be, (or any part thereof) is paid, the seller may add so much to the contract price as will be equivalent to the amount paid in respect of such duty or increase of duty, and he shall be entitled to be paid and to sue for and recover such addition."

Sub-Cl. (b) has no application here. The point taken before us, although it does not appear to have been taken at all before the learned trial Judge, was that the words "article duty paid" in the section mean articles upon which the duty has been paid at the time of the making of the contract.

In my view, that is not the meaning of those words. What in my view, is meant is that it is to be a sale of an article in respect of which the liability to pay duty is upon the seller and he sells the article duty free. If it had been intended that in order to comply with the provisions of that section or to bring himself within the provisions of that section a seller must already have paid the duty, then I should expect the section to read "for the sale of such article upon which the duty has been paid." That is not what the section says. Stone, J., says that it was the duty of the purchaser who is under that section liable to pay the increased duty to tender the proper amount to the seller before he was entitled to demand delivery. That of course is one alternative. It is also pointed out by the learned trial Judge that the seller himself might have paid the duty and recovered the increase from the purchaser; but this is a suit by the appellant to recover damages for non-delivery of the goods and, in my view, the respondent was perfectly entitled to refuse to give delivery until the proper price, that is to say, the agreed purchase price plus the increased duty, had been tendered to him. The fact that the duty had not been paid in this case makes no difference at all. It is found as a fact that the sale was of goods in a bonded warehouse and by reason of S. 37, Sea Customs Act, it does not matter at all whether the old duty had been paid. Under that section if the old duty had been paid and the goods had been allowed to remain in the bonded warehouse and subsequent to the payment of the old duty a new duty, the increased duty, had been put upon the goods, then that duty would have to be paid if and when goods were removed from the warehouse if the purpose for which the goods was removed, was home consumption; and that is this case. So that it did not make any difference at all whether the old duty had been paid or not. The new duty would still have to be paid under S. 37, Sea Customs Act, the goods not having been removed from the warehouse before the date of its imposition. It being found that this was a sale of goods in a bonded warehouse, the question as to whether or not old duty has been paid is immaterial. In my view, S. 10, Tariff Act, means a sale of goods duty-free. For these reasons, this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Burn, J.—I agree with my Lord the Chief Justice.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 25

PANDALAI, J.

S. A. S. Subbiah Iyer—Appellant.

v.

Official Receiver, Tinnevely—Respondent.

Appeal No. 434 of 1930, Decided on 31st August 1932.

(a) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920). S. 17—Continuation of proceedings after death of debtor—Alienation by debtor can be set aside under Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 53 and 54.

When a debtor against whom a petition in insolvency has been presented dies before adjudication and the proceedings are continued under S. 17 the Official Receiver or creditors can invoke the power of the Court to set aside settlements and alienations voidable under Ss. 53 and 54. The order passed is not against the estate of the deceased but against the deceased himself and transfers by him can be set aside: A I R 1928 Mad 476 and 480, Rel. on. [P 27 C 1]

(b) Practice—Order—Interpretation—Right order of adjudication against deceased debtor intended to be passed but expressed as adjudging deceased's estate—Effect will be given to intention and not to form—Provincial Insolvency Act (1920). S. 17.

The language used by every Court is only the vehicle of its thought and every Court is entitled to full faith and credit for its orders being understood in the way it was intended. Advantage will not be allowed to be taken of slips or errors of language due to a bona fide belief that the Court is adopting the form appropriate for the occasion. Where the Judge who passed the order of adjudication against a debtor who died before it was passed against him on a creditor's application intended to pass the right order of adjudging the deceased debtor as insolvent but expressed himself as adjudging the estate because he thought that that was the proper way to word the order against a dead man, effect must be given to the order in the way in which it was intended. [P 27 C 2]

T. R. Venkatarama Sastriar and P. R. Srinivasan—for Appellant.

B. Sitarama Row for R. Krishna-swami—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The two lower Courts have arrived at opposite conclusions on the question whether when a debtor against whom a petition in insolvency has been presented dies before adjudication and the proceedings are continued under S. 17, Provincial Insolvency Act, the Official Receiver or creditors can invoke the power of the Court to set aside settlements and alienations voidable under Ss. 53 and 54. The first Court gave a negative answer and the lower appellate Court an affirmative answer to this question. I venture to think that the difficulty felt by the lower Courts is due rather to the form of the order of adjudication which the insolvency Court passed in the case rather than to anything obscure in the provisions or language of the Act. The facts are simple and undisputed. A creditor's petition (I. P. No. 58 for 1927) was filed against one S. K. Krishna Iyer. He died some 15 months afterwards before any order of adjudication was passed. Notice of the petition was sent to his minor son (respondent 2) and on 4th February 1929 the Court passed an order that the estate of respondent 1 (Krishna Iyer) be and the same hereby is adjudged as insolvent and that the Official Receiver, Tinnevely, is appointed Receiver to administer it. Respondent 2 (son of Krishniah) was ordered to produce the accounts and documents of title before the Official Receiver in one month and to perform all the other duties imposed by the said Act and also to apply for discharge of the estate within one year from the date of the order. In the course of the subsequent proceedings the Official Receiver applied to set aside certain alienations under Ss. 53 and 54. The appellant, the alienee, took inter alia the objection that the application was incompetent as his transferor had not been declared insolvent but only his estate.

This objection was literally correct but only literally so. For it assumed firstly, that when proceedings are continued against the debtor after his death before the order for adjudication, the order passed under S. 17 must be not of the debtor himself but of his estate only and secondly, that when an order is passed as in the present case expressed to be adjudging the estate insolvent, it means in the circumstances something different, from an order against the debtor. Both these assumptions are wrong. As to the first point, it is concluded by the authority of Venkatarama Ayyar v. Official Receiver, Tinnerelly (1) and Ramathi Anni v. Kanniappa Mudaliar (2). In those cases on facts similar to the present, the Court had passed orders adjudging the deceased debtor insolvent. The objection raised was that on the language of S. 17 as amended by the Act of 1920 there could be no order of adjudication against a dead man and it was argued that that was the effect of altering the words "as if he were alive" which occurred in the old section to "as far as may be necessary for the realization and distribution of the property of the debtor."

This contention was fully dealt with in the latter case and rejected in both cases by this Court, the result being that the proper order to pass in a case like the prosent is to adjudge the deceased debtor and not his estate. I asked learned counsel on both sides for any rule or precedent by which an order adjudging the estate insolvent is contemplated by the Provincial Insolvency Act. They did not refer to and I am not aware of any such. It is to be noted that the Provincial Insolvency Act, does not contain any provision similar to Ss. 108 and 109, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, corresponding to S. 130, English Bankruptcy Act, empowering the insolvency Court to administer insolvent estates. Therefore considerations and decisions applicable to that power must not be confused with cases falling within S. 17, Provincial Insolvency Act, which corresponds to S. 93, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and S. 112, English Bankruptcy Act. The form of the order of adjudication in this case is probably due to this distinction not being borne in mind. However that maybe, the contention that when a debtor dies after the petition but before adjudication the powers of the Court under Ss. 53 and 54 are automatically withdrawn because the transferor being dead cannot be adjudged insolvent is clearly untenable in view of the decisions above-mentioned by which I am bound. It follows that if the order of adjudication in the present case had been in terms one adjudging the debtor, and not his estate insolvent, the ground of the appellant's objection to the proceedings under Ss. 53 and 54 would disappear. Learned counsel for appellant seemed to suggest that he could still maintain his objection and base it on the changed language of S. 17 of the Act. With respect, I fail to see how he can do so except by showing that the two decisions are wrong.

1. A I R 1928 Mad 476 = 51 Mad 344 = 109 I C 94.

2. A I R 1928 Mad 480 = 51 Mad 495 = 110 I C 107.

Not only am I bound by them but I respectfully agree with them that the change of language in S. 17 was not intended to limit by a side wind the powers of the Court in insolvency when the debtor dies after petition but before adjudication to the power of administration of insolvent estates of persons who die before the petition—a power which is not conferred on Provincial Courts of insolvency at all. Learned counsel had to admit that the language of the section cannot have the effect of so limiting the Courts' power where the debtor dies after adjudication. If so, the words which are perfectly general cannot have a different effect merely because the debtor dies at an earlier stage—before adjudication. I am therefore of opinion that the substantial ground of the objection fails. But the second part of the objection which is based on the form of the order remains. I have stated that the proper form of order of adjudication in the case was to adjudge the debtor himself and not his estate. I was at first inclined to give some effect to this objection. But on consideration I think I ought not to do so. The phraseology of an order is certainly important as is shown by this very case. But after all, the language used by every Court is only the vehicle of its thought and every Court is entitled to full faith and credit for its orders being understood in the way it was intended. Advantage will not be allowed to be taken of slips or errors of language due to a bona fide belief that the Court is adopting the form appropriate for the occasion. I have no doubt that the Judge who passed the order of adjudication intended to pass the right order but expressed himself as adjudging the estate because he thought that that was the proper way to word the order against a dead man.

Either the decision in Ramathi Anni v. Kanniappa Mudaliar (2) was not then reported or was not brought to his notice. In those circumstances I must give effect to the order in the way in which it was intended. After all if full effect is given to the appellants' objection all that follows is that the insolvency Court has not yet passed any order of adjudication. Not only will it then be open to the Court to make a fresh order if necessary but the only effect it will have will be to throw into confusion all that may have happened in the insolvency within the last three years to which no one has taken any objection and in which the appellant has no interest whatever. The appellant's objection has really no merits and no decree or order will be interfered with on account of any irregularity or error not affecting the merits or the jurisdiction of the Court. I am therefore of opinion that the order of adjudication should be read, understood and given effect to as if the debtor himself had been adjudicated. The appeal fails and is dismissed. There will be no order as to costs.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 28REILLY AND ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, JJ.

(Mara) Ramanarasu—Appellant.

v.

Matta Venkata Reddi and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 13 of 1928, Decided on 24th March 1932, against appellate order of Dist. Judge, Kistna, in Appeal No. 60 of 1927.

Civil P. C. (1908). O. 21. R. 2—Transaction extinguishing decree partially or wholly is adjustment—Fresh contract otherwise legal though involving promise by judgment-debtor to do something in future is adjustment.

Any transaction which extinguishes the decree as such in whole or in part and results in a satisfaction of the whole or a portion of the decree in respect of the particular relief or reliefs granted by the decree is an adjustment of the decree. So if a decree-holder enters into a fresh contract with the judgment-debtor with reference to the satisfaction of the decree then unless there be anything illegal with reference to the new contract the new contract, even if it stipulates that the judgment-debtor is to do something in future, would be a ground for the judgment-debtor applying to the Court to enter up satisfaction of the decree : 28 I C 376, Rel on.; A I R 1922 All 13, Expl.; A I R 1930 Mad 410, not Foll.; A I R 1928 Cal 527, Ref.

[P 31 C 2]

G. Lakshmanan—for Appellant.

P. Venkataramana Rao—for Respondents.

Reilly, J.—In O. S. No. 24 of 1922 on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Bezvada, the appellant before us obtained a decree for sale on a mortgage against one Venkata Reddi for something over Rs. 3,500. In O. S. No. 25 of 1922 he obtained a decree on another mortgage deed executed in his favour by Venkata Reddi's brother, Rami Reddi. In O. S. No. 25 of 1922 he brought the property to sale and himself purchased it for Rs. 1,750 less than what was due on Rami Reddi's mortgage, and for the Rs. 1,750 he obtained a personal decree against Rami Reddi. After that he brought the property covered by Venkata Reddi's mortgage to sale in execution. That sale was held on 25th October 1926. A man called Saiyed Murtuza Sahib was the successful bidder at that auction and he deposited in Court on that occasion Rs. 952-8-0 as 25 per cent of the amount of his bid. A few days after that sale it is admitted that the decree-holder, Venkata Reddi and Saiyed Murtuza entered into an agreement, which is embodied in Ex. A, dated 3rd November 1926. Ac-ording to Ex. A the land put up for sale in execution of the decree against Venkata Reddi, for which Saiyed Murtuza had been the successful bidder was to be transferred to the decree-holder with the crops on it except the crops on two fields, and the amount paid by Saiyed Murtuza into Court, Rs. 952-8-0 was to be got back from the Court and paid to the decree-holder; to part of the land which the decree-holder had bought in execution of his decree against Rami Reddi, Venkata Reddi was to give up a claim which it appears he had put forward; four other items of land were to be transferred to Venkata Reddi or, if he chose, in respect of one of them Rs. 1,000 was to be paid by the decree-holder; the other consideration on his side was the amount of his decree against Venkata Reddi and the balance of his decree against Rami Reddi.

It will be seen that the agreement embodied in Ex. A covers several matters beyond the scope of the decree against Venkata Reddi in O. S. No. 24 of 1922. On 9th November 1926 Venkata Reddi presented a petition to the Subordinate Judge in which he alleged that the decree against him in O. S. No. 24 of 1922 had been adjusted in this way to the satisfaction of the decree-holder and prayed that satisfaction of the decree might be recorded. The petition it appears was posted to 4th December 1926, and on that day it was dismissed for default because as Venkata Reddi explains though he was in the Court-house, he was not in the Court room when he was called. On that very day he put in another petition, E. A. No. 2198 of 1926, to the same effect, and that is the petition with which we are concerned. The decree-holder when he got notice of that petition, alleged that he had been induced by fraud to execute Ex. A, Venkata Reddi's object being to keep possession of the land concerned in O. S. No. 24 of 1922 and to reap the crops upon it. He denied that there had been any satisfaction of his decree, and he contended that at any rate Ex. A was not admissible in evidence because it was unregistered.

The Subordinate Judge after taking evidence found that there had been no adjustment of the decree in O. S. No. 24 of 1922 and also found that Ex. A was inadmissible in evidence because it was unregistered. Venkata Reddi preferred an appeal to the District Judge, who found that Ex. A was admissible in evidence in consequence of the amendment of the law by Act 2 of 1927 and also found as a fact that there had been adjustment of the decree to the satisfaction of the decree-holder and therefore he ordered satisfaction to be recorded. Against that decision the decree-holder has brought the present second appeal.

It is not denied, and it has not been denied at any stage that the decree-holder executed Ex. A on the date it bears. The allegation that he was induced to do so by fraud has not been pressed before us nor apparently before the District Judge. It is not denied that it was intended by the decree-holder, when he executed Ex. A, that the terms of Ex. A should supersede the decree which he had obtained against Venkata Reddi. It is contended however that on the date of Ex. A there was no actual adjustment in satisfaction of the decree, but that Ex. A was only an agreement that the decree-holder would be satisfied, if certain things were done in accordance with Ex. A, which have not been done. And it is contended for the decree-holder before us that there can be no adjustment of a decree within the meaning of R. 2, O. 21, of the Code by a mere promise to do something when that promise has not yet been carried out. In this case it is admitted that the promises contained in Ex. A have not been carried out. It has been found that the land has not been put into the possession of the decree-holder as was intended. It has been found, and it is admitted, that the documents of transfer which were to be executed by the parties, have not been executed. Therefore it is represented that all we have in this case on the side of Venkata Reddi is a promise to do things, which he has not done, and that it is contended could not be accepted by the decree-holder as an adjustment within the rule. The words of R. 2, O. 21 are:

"where any money payable under a decree of any kind is paid out of Court, or the decree is otherwise adjusted in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder."

Mr. Lakshmana for the decree-holder contends in effect that a decree can be adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder by something being paid by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder or by some property being transferred by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder or, as I understand him by something being given up by the judgment-debtor to the decree-holder, but that an adjustment cannot be made to the satisfaction of the decree-holder within the meaning of the rule by a mere promise that the judgment-debtor will do something at some future date, though that promise may be a legally enforceable contract. That seems to me to be an exceedingly difficult proposition to establish.

It is admitted that a decree-holder who has a decree for the payment of Rupees 1,000 in his favour may accept in adjustment of that decree to his satisfaction an immediate payment of Rs. 100; but it is contended that a decree-holder in whose favour there is a decree for the payment of Rs. 100 cannot legally accept in adjustment of that decree to his satisfaction, a promise that the judgment-debtor will pay to him at some future date Rs. 1,000. The argument must go so far as that he cannot accept such a promise in whatever form it is either in a bond with sureties or in a mortgage deed. I cannot see any basis for such a contention; but it is alleged that there is authority to be found in Lachman Das v. Ramnath Kalikamlivala (1). The head-note of that case in the report perhaps seems to suggest something of that sort. There it is stated:

"the judgment-debtor filed a petition alleging that the question of the execution of the decree had been settled out of Court by means of an agreement between the parties under which the judgment-debtor was to make a present payment to the decree-holder and further to convey to him certain items of immovable property. The decree-holder denied that any such adjustment as alleged had taken place and the judgment-debtor was unable to show that any part of the alleged agreement, which according to his own account of it, was to be performed by him had been so performed. Held that such an agreement as alleged could not be set up by the judgment-debtor under R. 2, O. 21, Civil P. C., as a bar to execution."

But I think when we examine that case with care, we shall find that it is no authority for any proposition so wide. In Piggot, J's., judgment at p. 252 will be found a statement "that agreement was to the effect that the decree-holder would accept satisfaction of his decree in a modified form and would abandon the execution proceedings which were being taken, as soon as four specified conditions had been fulfilled by the judgment-debtor," and it was found that none of them had been fulfilled. That was not a case therefore where it was found that the decree-holder had agreed to accept as immediate satisfaction a promise that something would be done in future by the judgment-debtor but a case where the decree-holder had agreed that, if at some future date the judgment-debtor did something, then he at that future date would accept satisfaction. The case so examined is no authority for the proposition that a promise to do something at a future date cannot be accepted by a decree-holder as a legal and immediate adjustment in satisfaction of his decree. Walsh, J., in that case made a quotation with approval which appears to come from Ramakrishna v. Eastern Development Corporation Ltd., London (2), a decision of Seshagiri Ayyar and Bakewell, JJ., in this Court. The words of that judgment on which Walsh, J. relied—I quote them as they actually appear in Ramakrishna v. Eastern Development Corporation Ltd. (2), not with the slight variation with which Walsh, J., quoted them—are :

1. A I R 1922 All 13=64 IC 990=14 All 258.

“An inchoate contract would not give the judgment-debtor a right to plead against execution that this contract should be completed and that he should then be permitted to plead that the transferee was only his alias and has no locus standi.”

That an inchoate agreement cannot be pleaded as an adjustment within the meaning of R. 2, O. 21 I should have thought need hardly be stated, as it certainly cannot be disputed. I understand an inchoate agreement to be an agreement not yet concluded by the parties, an agreement which is still in the stage of negotiation; and it is perfectly obvious that a judgment-debtor cannot claim that the decree against him has been adjusted to the satisfaction of the decree-holder while the matter is still in the stage of negotiation. However Mr. Lakshmana also relies upon a decision of Cargenven, J., in Muthu Vaithilinga Mudaliar v. Subbaraya Chettiar (3). There the learned Judge understands Ramakrishna v. Eastern Development Corporation Ltd. (2), to mean that :

“so long as an agreement remains executory and has not been fully executed, it cannot amount to an adjustment under O. 21, R. 2.”

I think that is not what was laid down in Ramakrishna v. Eastern Development Corporation Ltd. (2), and, although the learned Judge adopted that as a proposition of law, with great respect I cannot agree with it. In Lodd Govindoss v. Ramdoss (4), Sadasiva Ayyar, J., said that :

“an adjustment referred to in O. 21, R. 2, Civil P. C., is a transaction which extinguishes the decree as such in whole or part.”

Why should not a decree be extinguished by a new contract that the judgment-debtor will do something in future, if the decree-holder is willing to take such a contract instead of the decree which he has in his hands. A promise to do something in future is legal consideration, and, if a decree-holder thinks it is to his advantage instead of using his decree, the weapon which he has in his hand, to accept in its stead a promise that the judgment-debtor will do something in future, or if quite apart from any question of advantage, he chooses to accept such a promise, what is there in law to prevent him from doing so? And why should not that be a legal adjustment? It may well be said that, if a judgment-debtor comes into Court and alleges that the decree-holder has given up the weapon available in his hand, the decree which he can execute, and in its place has accepted a promise that the judgment-debtor will do something at a future date and if that is disputed, then the evidence that the decree-holder has done such a thing should be carefully scrutinised. It may very well be a foolish thing for a decree-holder to do; it may be unreasonably generous; it may be likely to give him a great deal of trouble in future. But, if it is proved that he has done so, that he has accepted a new contract in place of his decree as immediate satisfaction of that decree at the time of his acceptance, there is no legal impediment in the way of his doing so and there is no justification for the Court refusing to find on proper evidence that he has done so.

In the present case the learned District Judge has differed from the Subordinate Judge and has found as a fact that the decree-holder on 3rd November 1926, when he executed Ex. A, did accept as an immediate adjustment and satisfaction of his decree a new contract between the parties. Unfortunately the learned District Judge has not discussed the evidence on this subject. The part of his judgment which deals with this matter is far briefer than it should have been; but he has arrived at a finding of fact, and, if we examine the evidence in this case, I do not think we can say that there is no evidence to support that finding of fact. In the circumstances it appears that there were some reasons for the decree-holder entering into a new arrangement with Venkata Reddi instead of pressing on with the execution of his decree. (The judgment after giving reasons and holding that the filing of the petition was hurried so as to save the deposit of one-fourth amount from lapsing and discussing the evidence concluded.) It appears to me therefore that, although the learned District Judge has not discussed the evidence in this case, there is clear evidence to support his finding that there was an actual adjustment to the satisfaction of the decree-holder on the date of Ex. A. Whether that was an adjustment into which the decree-holder was wise or unwise to enter is not a matter with which we are concerned. There is a finding of fact, with evidence to support it, that he did accept an immediate adjustment in satisfaction of his decree on that date. With that finding there is no sufficient reason for us to interfere, and, that being so, in my opinion this appeal fails and should be dismissed with costs.

2. (1918) 43 I C 537.

3. A I R 1930 Mad 410=123 I C 604.

4. (1915) 28 I 76.

Anantakrishna Ayyar, J.—(After stating facts, his Lordship proceeded.) I may state at once that I must accept in this second appeal the finding of the learned District Judge that there was a completed contract between the parties. The wording of the agreement entered into by the parties lends support to the finding, as also the evidence of the decree-holder given in these proceedings. The main argument advanced by the learned advocate for the decree-holder, appellant before us, was that the defendant, mortgagor, had not really carried out what he had to perform under the terms of this agreement, and that the agreement only evidenced a promise on his part to do something in future and that such a promise would not be a ground for the Court recording satisfaction of the decree. I find myself unable to accept that contention. On the analogy of S. 62, Contract Act :

“if the parties to a contract agree to substitute a new contract for the old, the contract originally entered into between the parties need not be performed.”

If the decree-holder entered into a fresh contract with the judgment-debtor with reference to the satisfaction of the decree, then, unless there be anything illegal with reference to the new contract, the new contract would surely be a ground for the judgment-debtor applying to the Court to enter up satisfaction of the decree. No doubt if the substance of the new contract be to vary the terms of the decree, or to allow execution in a manner different from that directed by the decree, then, having regard to the provisions of S. 47, Civil P. C., and the scheme of the Code as pointed out by the Privy Council in Kotaghiri Venkata Subbamma Rao v. Vellanki Venkatarama Rao (5), the Court would not accept that new contract as a satisfaction of the decree when in essence it purports to vary the terms of the decree with a view to enable the parties to carry out in execution something contrary to the provisions of the decree. But when the new contract is not open to any such objection and is otherwise legal, I fail to understand why the same should not be a ground for the defendant asking the Court to enter up satisfaction of the decree. No doubt if the contract between the parties was that it is only the actual carrying out of the terms of the contract that should be the consideration for entering satisfaction of the decree, then no doubt unless those terms be carried out, it may not be open to the judgment-debtor to apply to the Court successfully to have the adjustment recorded. But the contention that even though there was a completed contract between the parties, yet if the contract be to do something in future and was really of an executory nature, then the defendant could not apply to record the adjustment is, I think, not supported by any provision of law to which our attention was drawn in this case. What the exact meaning of the expression “adjustment of a decree” as used in O. 21, R. 2, is, has been explained by Sadasiva Ayyar, J., in Lodd Govindoss v. Ramdoss (4). The learned Judge there stated that decree in respect of the particular relief or reliefs granted by the decree"

“any transaction which extinguishes the decree as such in whole or in part and results in a satisfaction of the whole or a portion of the

is an adjustment of the decree. That opinion of the learned Judge was followed in Azizur Rahman v. Aliraja Choudhary (6). The learned advocate for the appellant however argued that the decision in Lachman Das v. Ramnath Kalikamlirala (1) is against this view. As my learned brother has pointed out in his judgment just now delivered, the head-note to the report of that case would seem to go beyond the terms of the adjustment. That would seem to be a case where the decree-holder agreed to accept particular acts if actually done by the judgment-debtor as satisfaction of the decree which he was entitled to execute. It is the actual performance of particular acts mentioned by the judgment-debtor that was considered to be the real gist of the contract between the parties, which would enable the judgment-debtor to apply for recording satisfaction of the decree. Having regard to the terms of the judgment of Piggot, J., I am not obsessed by that decision. On the other hand, as I have already remarked, it is open to the parties to provide for particular acts being done, or particular terms being actually carried out, as the consideration for the decree-holder agreeing to enter satisfaction of the decree. The decision in Ramakrishna v. Eastern Development Corporation Ltd. (2) only lays down, as far as I am able to understand it, that inchoate agreements could not be taken to be the basis for recording satisfaction of the decree. Unless there be a completed contract between the parties, an inchoate agreement would only be a step, or steps, in the negotiations between the parties which may ultimately end or not end in a completed contract. No doubt there are certain observations in the judgment reported in Muthu Vaithilinga Mudaliar v. Subbaraya Chettiar (3), where the learned Judge, Cargenven, J., observes that a mere promise may not be enough to enable judgment-debtor to apply under O. 21, R. 2; but the learned Judge in his judgment also uses the words "inchoate agreement"; and, as I already remarked, there is nothing in law which would enable the judgment-debtor to rely upon an inchoate agreement for recording satisfaction.

If on the other hand, the learned Judge really meant to lay down that a promise, though supported by consideration and otherwise legal, would never be the basis for an application under O. 21, R. 2, unless the same be actually carried out, then, with all respect, I find myself unable to agree. In the case before me, the terms of the agreement, coupled with the evidence given by the decree-holder himself, make it reasonably clear that the intention of the parties as evidenced by the agreement was that the same should be taken as an adjustment of the decree, since certain things contemplated by the parties could not be carried out except on this view of the agreement. If there is any doubt upon this point as to the meaning of the agreement, the decree-holder's evidence makes the matter reasonably clear. No doubt the agreement entered into by the decree-holder in this case seems to be rather of a complicated nature; and whether he was well-advised in having entered into this contract in this particular case, is not for me to say. There is no finding that there was any fraud practised upon him, or that he was induced to sign the document without knowing the contents of the same. His deposition given in these proceedings makes it clear that he knew what the arrangement was. Being therefore of opinion that in this case there was a legal contract supported by consideration—a completed contract entered into between all the parties interested—by which the decree in question should be taken as satisfied and that the rights of the parties should be worked out on the basis of the new agreement, (which further contains a default clause, by which the parties are, in case of any default, allowed recourse to civil or criminal proceedings as may be deemed proper), I think that the defendant was entitled to have the relief prayed for by him in his application under R. 2, O. 21, granted to him. I agree with my learned brother that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

P.R.S., M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 33 (1)

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

S. Srinivasa Ayyar and another—Appellants.

v.

Lakshmi Ammal—Respondent.

Appeal No. 89 of 1929, Decided on 18th August 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Tinnevely, D/- 6th August 1928.

Decree—Execution — Maintenance decree creating charge on some items and making whole property liable—Security need not be proceeded against in first instance unless not doing so is mala fide—Analogy of mortgage decree does not apply—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 6.

In the case of maintenance decrees providing concurrent remedies of a decree against the family properties and a charge on specific items thereof, it is not incumbent on the plaintiff to proceed against the security in the first instance unless the defendant satisfies the Court that the plaintiff's action in not doing so is mala fide, oppressive and not taken for a legitimate purpose. Considerations applicable to mortgage decrees do not apply in such cases. [P 33 C 1, 2]

N. A. Krishna Ayyar—for Appellants.C. A. Seshagiri Sastri and S. Panchapagesa Sastri—for Respondent.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The lower Court has made an order allowing execution and the defendants contend that that order is wrong, on the ground that the plaintiff is bound to proceed in the first instance against the properties charged under the decree. The decree sought to be executed is one for maintenance obtained by the plaintiff against her husband's co-parceners. Para. 2 directs the defendants to pay the plaintiff maintenance at a certain rate out of the assets of their joint family; and under para. 4 some specific items of property are charged with the maintenance awarded. The plaintiff applied in the lower Court by way of execution, for attachment of the defendant's family house—an asset of their joint family but not an item over which the charge was created. The appellants' contention is, that the plaintiff should not be permitted before exhausting her remedies against the security, to attach their other properties. The appeal raises the question whether in the case of maintenance decrees providing concurrent remedies, there is a rule of law which makes it incumbent on the plaintiff to proceed against the security in the first instance.

The analogy of mortgage decrees which has been pressed on us is, in our opinion inapplicable and no useful purpose will be served by our referring to the cases cited at the Bar. Considerations that apply to decrees obtained by widows for maintenance are different from those that apply to mortgage decrees. The object of charging specific properties with the maintenance awarded to a widow is to safeguard her right and to make it prevail against persons claiming under subsequent transfers; while the decree confers on her this special right, there is no reason to hold that her ordinary right is curtailed while that very decree in terms provides concurrent remedies. If the defendant succeeds in showing that the plaintiff's application is made mala fide and oppressive and not made for a legitimate purpose, the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse the plaintiff's application and compel her to pursue her remedy against the security. But, in the present case, the facts show that far from the plaintiff's action being mala fide, the defendants who own extensive property, are withholding maintenance with the object of spiting the plaintiff. We confirm the lower Court's order and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Reilly, J.—I agree. If I may say so with respect, the decree made by the Subordinate Judge and amended by this Court on appeal does not appear to me to have been very happily worded. But I think there is no doubt that the plaintiff (respondent before us) is within her rights as given by that decree in applying for execution in respect of the particular arrears in question in this case against the assets of the joint family other than the charged property.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed. A. I. R. 1933 Madras 33 (2)REILLY AND ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, JJ.Shanmugasundara Mudaliar and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

S. Ratnavelu Mudaliar—Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 464 of 1928, Decided on 23rd March 1932, against Sub-Judge, Chingleput, D/- 13th November 1928.

 Civil P.C. (1908), S. 144—Test is restoration to injured party—Benefit to opposite party immaterial—Money ordered to be deposited for obtaining stay—On success of appeal money though not withdrawn by other party was refunded with interest.

It is the injury which has been caused to a party who has been ultimately successful as the final result of the litigation, that the Court seeks to remedy by virtue of proceedings taken in restitution. Such a party is to be placed, so far as it may be done, in the same position which he would have occupied had not the injury been done to him. The fact that the other party has gained no advantage does not affect the question. [P 37 C 1]

Hence a party against whom a decree was passed was ordered to deposit half the amount in Court as a condition for obtaining stay of execution and was successful in appeal was held entitled to the return of the deposit made with interest though the other party had not withdrawn the deposit which he was authorized to do on furnishing security: A I R 1929 Pat 593; A I R 1925 Bom 313; 24 C L J 467 and A I R 1922 P C 269, Rel. on.; A I R 1925 Bom 313, Ref. [P 28 C 2]

N. S. Srinivasa Ayyar and G. Jagadisa Ayyar—for Appellants.

Reilly, J.—In O. S. No. 5 of 1922, on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Chingleput, the appellants as trustees of a certain temple obtained a decree for money against defendant 1 and others. Defendant 1 among others appealed to this Court against that decree in Appeal No. 218 of 1925. Pending that appeal, defendant 1 applied for stay of execution of the Subordinate Judge's decree, the amount of which we are told by the date of his appeal with interest had come to about Rs. 7,000. The appellants opposed that stay application, and eventually an order was made by Jackson, J., on the stay petition that execution would be stayed if defendant 1 paid into Court Rs. 3,500 and gave security for the remainder of the decree and that if the Rs. 3,500 was paid into Court in accordance with the order, then the present appellants should be allowed to draw it only on giving security for that amount. Defendant 1 paid that Rupees 3,500 into Court and gave security for the remainder of the decree, and thereupon execution of the decree against him and the other defendants was stayed pending the appeal against that decree to this Court. But although defendant 1 paid that Rs. 3,500 into Court, it appears that the present appellants never gave security for the amount, and so they never withdrew it from Court. The appeal of defendant 1 and others against the Subordinate Judge's decree for money was successful so far as defendant 1 and some of the other defendants were concerned; and after his success defendant 1 applied to the Subordinate Judge, in whose Court the Rs. 3,500 had been deposited by him for restitution. He claimed the Rs. 3,500 with interest upon it. The Subordinate Judge made an order that the Rs. 3,500 should be paid back to him and that the present appellants should pay interest at 6 per cent on that amount as part of the restitution to be made to defendant 1. The present appeal is against that order so far as it directs the present appellants to pay interest on the Rs. 3,500 to defendant 1.

It is urged for the appellants, first, that they never compelled defendant 1 to pay that amount into Court, and secondly, that they never got any benefit out of it, as they never withdrew the amount from Court; and for both those reasons it is contended that although defendant 1 is entitled to get back the Rs. 3,500, he is not entitled to any interest as part of the restitution now due to him. I cannot agree with the suggestion that the payment of the Rs. 3,500 into the Subordinate Judge's Court by defendant 1 was a voluntary payment. It is true that the appellants by the time defendant 1 came to this Court for an order for stay of execution had not taken any proceedings to execute their decree. But there was a decree for money standing against defendant 1, which he knew might be executed at any moment against him, and he was quite within his rights in coming to this Court and asking that, pending his appeal against that decree, execution might be stayed. When the present appellants got notice of that application, they did not consent to the decree being stayed on security under R. 5, O. 41, and they were quite within their rights in not consenting. Nor did they disclaim any intention of executing their decree.

On the contrary they asserted their right and intention to execute it. Jackson, J., stayed execution of that decree on certain terms; he made an order that, if there was to be any stay at all, Rs. 3,500 must be paid into the Subordinate Judge's Court. That order was obviously intended for the benefit of the present appellants and must have been made at their instance. It certainly would never have been made, if they had disclaimed a desire for any such order. In the circumstances I think it is impossible to say that defendant 1 made the deposit of Rs. 3,500 in the Subordinate Judge's Court as a voluntary payment. Defendant 1 had to pay that amount because a decree, which the appellants were prepared to execute and declared that they intended to execute, had been wrongly made against him, as events have turned out, and for the time from the date he made that payment until the disposal of the appeal against the decree he was deprived of that money. Having been deprived of his money as the result of a decree, which the appellants insisted on executing, but which turns out to be wrong he is clearly entitled to restitution.

Mr. Srinivasa Ayyar, who appears for the appellants here, does not deny that restitution in such cases, if it is to be complete, must often include not only the actual money which has been deposited but interest thereon, and that is provided by S. 144, Civil P. C. But he contends that, when we are trying to ascertain what is the exact restitution which should be made in such a case, whether it should be the money deposited alone or the money with the addition of interest upon it, the test to be applied is, not the injury which has been done to the judgment-debtor who has had to pay the amount under a mistaken decree, but the benefit which has been obtained by the other party, or at least that no interest should be ordered where, although the judgment-debtor has suffered an injury in consequence of such compulsory payment, the decree-holder has not derived any benefit from it. It appears to me that that is not the way to apply the principle of restitution, which is recognized in the Code. The provision in the Code is to be found in S. 144, which lays down that :

" in so far as a decree is varied or reversed, the Court of first instance shall, on the application of any party entitled to any benefit by way of restitution or otherwise, cause such restitution to be made as will, so far as may be, place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree or such part thereof as has been varied or reversed."

Now, reading that provision in its ordinary plain meaning, the restitution mentioned appears to me to be on its face the restoration to the injured party of what he has lost, not primarily the deprivation of the other party of what he has wrongfully gained. It is the party entitled to restitution who can apply to the Court and claim the help of the Court in the matter : it is for his benefit that the provision is introduced. The restitution must be such as will put the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for the wrong decree. The party who is to be assisted by Court must be put into the position which he would have occupied but for the wrong decree. Is it an answer to that provision to say that it cannot be given effect to because the other party happened to gain no benefit by the wrong decree or order which had been made ? I can see nothing in the section to lead us to suppose that it can be defeated in that way. And, if we go further into the section, we find the words :

" For this purpose the Court may make any orders, including orders for the refund of costs and for the payment of interest, damages, compensation and mesne profits which are properly consequential on such variation or reversal."

Take damages : Can it be suggested that the measure of damages in such cases is, not what the wronged party has suffered, but what the other party has gained ? Take compensation : Is the wronged party to be deprived of compensation merely because the other party has made no actual profit out of the mistaken decree or order, which is afterwards reversed ? I think, if we read the section in its natural way, it will be found to be directed to the benefit of the wronged party and its object to be, so far as possible, to put him back into the position in which he would have been but for the wrong decree or order, which is afterwards reversed. Surely that is how the matter should be treated. The Court unfortunately by a mistaken decree has done a wrong to the judgment-debtor. When the Court has done a wrong, it is the Court's duty, so far as possible, to put it right. The Court is not directly interested in depriving the other party of a benefit which he may have got from a mistaken order or decree. It is the wrong that has been done which the Court should wish to put right. The actual benefit which may have been gained by the other party may often be almost impossible to estimate ; but that is not the matter in which the Court is interested. If we look at Rodger v. The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris (1), in which this matter was discussed by Lord Cairns, I think it will be seen that it is the wrong which has been done by the mistaken order or decree with which the Court is primarily concerned and which the Court must always wish to rectify, not the incidental advantage which the other party may have been fortunate enough to get. That principle has been applied in a case somewhat like this, Dalu Ram v. Ramanand, A. I. R. 1929 Pat. 593. There the plaintiff was made to pay interest as part of the restitution of the money deposited by the defendant towards the decree, not only from the date when the plaintiff drew that money from Court, but from a much earlier date, when the defendant had deposited it in Court, although it was represented that between those two dates the plaintiff had got no benefit whatever from the money.

1. (1871) 3 P C 465=40 L J P C 1=24 L T 111=19 W R 449=7 Moo P C (n s) 314.

But it happens that in this case the present appellants are not at all in a strong position for urging that they got no benefit from defendant 1's deposit of Rs. 3,500. It is urged for them that they got no benefit from that because for some reason they found it inconvenient to give security and draw that money. Can we properly say that they got no benefit from the money simply because they did not choose, or were even unable, to give security? We know that they did not give it; but the moment they choose to give security or were able to give that security they could take the money out of Court. And, as part of the decree amount due to them was in Court ready for them to put their hands upon it the moment they succeeded in the appeal, if they did succeed in it, that was clearly a benefit to them, as was recognized in Hira Bhai Dahya Bhai v. Maneklal Ranchhod (2). In my opinion, if we had to decide this case on the basis whether the appellants had got any benefit by the deposit of the Rs. 3,500, I think we should have to find that they had derived at least some benefit from that deposit. But in my opinion that it is not the proper test. The proper test is whether defendant 1 has been injured or deprived of his legal right in respect of that Rs. 3,500, which he had to deposit in consequence of the wrong decree obtained against him by the appellants. In my opinion he was injured by having to make that deposit, and he cannot be properly compensated for that injury by the mere return of the Rs. 3,500. If he is to be compensated, if he is to get restitution within the meaning of S. 144 of the Code he is entitled to get interest also. In my opinion the order of the learned Subordinate Judge is right, and this appeal should be dismissed.

Anantakrishna Ayyar, J.—I agree. (After stating facts, his Lordship proceeded). Before us it was contended by the learned advocate for the appellants that on a proper construction of S. 144, Civil P. C., all that the Court could direct the unsuccessful decree-holders to do was to restore any benefit that they might have derived by virtue of the decree that was subsequently reversed by the appellate Court. In support of that argument the learned advocate drew our attention to some reported decisions. In my view, that is not the proper standpoint from which this case is to be looked at, in order to arrive at a correct decision on the point before us. The principle of restitution is based upon the legal maxim that the act of the Court should injure none: actus curiae neminem gravabit. That this is the principle is made clear by the judgment of Lord Cairns in Rodger v. The Comptoir Escompte De Paris (1) where the principles that ought to govern Courts in directing restitution in such cases are discussed. I do not propose to read all the passages, though many of them would be relevant to the point before me. The following are among the relevant passages occurring in that judgment:

"It is contended, on the part of the respondents here, that the principal sum being restored to the present petitioners, they have no right to recover from them any interest. It is obvious that, if that is so, injury and very grave injury, will be done to the petitioners. They will by reason of an act of the Court have paid a sum which it is now ascertained was ordered to be paid by mistake and wrongfully. They will recover that sum after the lapse of a considerable time but they will recover it without the ordinary fruits which are derived from the enjoyment of money. On the other hand, those fruits will have been enjoyed, or may have been enjoyed, by the person who by mistake and by wrong obtained possession of the money under a judgment which has been reversed. So far therefore as principle is concerned, their Lordships have no doubt or hesitation in saying that injustice will be done to the petitioners, and that the perfect judicial determination which it must be the object of all Courts to arrive at will not have been arrived at unless the persons who have had their money improperly taken from them have the money restored to them, with interest during the time that the money has been withheld" see pp. 475 and 476.

2. A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 313 = 87 I. C. 713.

Now as I read those passages, it seems to me that it is the injury which has been caused to a party who has been ultimately successful as the final result of the litigation that the Courts seek to remedy by virtue of proceedings taken in restitution. Such a party is to be placed so far as it may be done in the same position which he would have occupied had not the injury been done to him. If that is the principle then I think the answer to the question before me is quite clear. Defendant 1 was, as a result of the proceedings, taken by the appellants in pursuance of a decree, which was ultimately reversed, directed to put into Court a certain sum of money. If that decision had not been passed, defendant 1 would not have been deprived of the use of the money, and the injury done to him therefore could be remedied only by paying him back not only the principal amount of that money but also some compensation for the deprivation of the use of the money from date of deposit to date of judgment of the High Court reversing the lower Court's decree. The wordings of S. 144 also make this point clear. The section is not drafted merely with a view of depriving the decree-holder in the prior litigation of any benefit which he has actually in fact derived from the decree, but the section is drafted with a view to benefit, by way of restitution or otherwise, the party who had been injured by an act of Court found to be ultimately erroneous. The section says:

"In so far as a decree is varied or reversed the Court of first instance shall, on the application of any party entitled to any benefit by way of restitution or otherwise, cause such restitution to be made as will, so far as may be, place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree or such part thereof as has been varied or reversed."

I therefore decline to accept the contention raised before us by the learned advocate for the appellants, that we should view the case from the standpoint of the benefit that the appellants actually derived from the decree they obtained in the first Court. The learned advocate emphasized on the words "so far as may be" occurring in the section. As I understand the section, those words have no relevancy so far as the point now before us is concerned. It may happen that in very many cases restitution as ordinarily understood, is impossible. Property may have been sold and purchased by bona fide strangers, and in some cases it might be impossible to restore in specie the property of which the defendant might have been deprived. In such and similar cases, justice requires that the injured party should be restored if not to the very thing of which he was deprived, at least to as much of its equivalent as can be given to him in the place of the thing the restoration of which has become impossible. The subsequent wordings of the section namely:

"the Court may make any order . . . for payment of interest, damages etc."

make it clear that it is the injury that defendant 1 suffered that has to be compensated for in a case like the present. The learned advocate for the appellants referred us to some cases which he stated were inconsistent with the view that I am inclined to adopt in this case. On a careful perusal of the cases to which our attention was drawn, it is clear that those cases do not establish the proposition he contends for. I must remark that in properly understanding the expressions used by learned Judges in particular cases we must not forget to inquire what exactly was the relief that a party was actually claiming before the Court in such proceedings. If as a matter of fact a person in the position of defendant 1 claimed only interest from the time when the decree-holder actually drew the money out of Court, and was content with claiming the same only, and did not claim compensation from the time when he parted with the money, then the remarks occurring in judgments dealing with such contentions should be understood only with reference to the prayer actually contained in the petition before the Court. As far as I am able to see, the passages in the judgments referred to us do not lay down that a person in the position of defendant would not be entitled to anything more than the benefit which the decree-holder actually got by virtue of the prior decree. On the other hand, our attention was drawn to two cases Dalu Ram v. Ramnand, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 593 and Hirabhai v. Manek Lal (2), both of which support the position contended for by defendant. In Hirabhai v. Manek Lal (2) the money was in Court for some time. The decree-holder had no benefit in the sense that he was able to make interest out of that money, as during the period in question the money was lying idle in Court: yet the learned Judges decided that the decree-holder was bound to pay interest for the period during which money was lying in Court. To use the words of the judgment :

"The decree-holder has had the advantage of the money lying in Court until the appeal was heard and that would be a sufficient advantage to enable defendant 1 to succeed."

In the other case A. I. R. 1929 Pat. 593, the decree-holder was directed to withdraw the money from Court after furnishing security, and in that respect, that case is very similar to the one before us. The learned Judges decided that even in such a case the decree-holder was bound to pay interest to the defendant on the amount for the period during which the money was lying idle without the decree-holder having furnished security. If the test is the injury done to the defendant, then the circumstance that the decree-holder considered it to his benefit in any particular case not to actually draw the money out of Court but to have it ready in Court, would not make any difference, and I am not at all satisfied that it will not be to the benefit of the decree-holder to have an order in his favour that the money is to lie in Court and that he can draw it at any time on furnishing security. In this particular case that it was a benefit to the decree-holders to have money ready in Court is clear to me from another circumstance. Evidently defendant 1 wanted to have stay of execution in respect of the whole decree. The learned Judge was inclined to grant stay on defendant 1 furnishing security in respect of a moiety of the decree amount. The order passed by the learned Judge with reference to the other moiety, is, in my view, entirely due to the request made by the decree-holders that money may be directed to be paid into Court and that they should be allowed to draw the same on furnishing security. If such a thing was not to their benefit, I am unable to understand why they wanted such orders to be made with reference to that moiety of the decree amount. Therefore the question of benefit to the decree-holder is, in my view, entirely immaterial and irrelevant for the purposes of the present case; and even otherwise, in the present case I am clear that there was an order which was (as already stated) to the benefit of the decree-holders; and consequently, having got a benefit, it does not lie in their mouths to say that they are not liable or responsible for having deprived defendant 1 of the use of the money during the period. In addition to the case in Rodger v. The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris (1), I wish to refer to the observations of Sir Barnes Peacock in Hurro Chunder Roy Chowdhury v. Sooradhonee Debia (3), at p. 992 :

"It is the legal effect of a decree of reversal that the party against whom the decree was given is to have restitution of all that he has been deprived of under it. . . . A Court of appeal does not necessarily enter into the question, whether a decree, which it is about to reverse, has been executed or not. The decree of reversal necessarily carries with it the right to restitution of all that has been taken under the erroneous decree, in the same manner as an ordinary decree carries with it a right to have it executed; and I should have considered that a decree of reversal necessarily authorised the lower Court to cause restitution to be made of all that the party, against whom the erroneous decree had been enforced, had been deprived by reason of its having been enforced : see also the further observations at p. 993."

I wish also to refer to the observations of Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee, J., in Ashutosh v. Upendra (4), at 474 (of 24 (C. L. J.)) where the learned Judge after referring to the decision in Rodger v. The Comptoir D'Escompte de Paris (1), emphasises on the correct principle underlying the whole discussion, namely, that it is the legal injury that is done to the person in the position of the defendant that is sought to be remedied in such cases: see also a later Privy Council decision in Jai Berhama v. Kedar Nath Marwari (5). I think it is enough for our purpose to be guided strictly by the provisions of S. 144, Civil P. C., and having regard to its wordings, I think that defendant 1 is entitled to the benefit he claims in the present case, namely interest—as for the use of the money—of which he has been deprived, for the period during which that money was not available to him, he having been directed to part with that money, by a decree that has been ultimately reversed as erroneous. I agree that the appeal must be dismissed but without costs as nobody appears for the respondent. In order to make matters clear, I should add that defendant 1 claimed restitution with interest at 12% and the learned Subordinate Judge was—in my opinion—right in having allowed him only interest at 6%.

3. (1868) Beng L R Sup Vol 985=9 W R 402.

4. (1916) 38 I C 17=24 C L J 467.

5. A I R 1921 P C 269=69 I C 278=49 351=2 Pat 10 (P C).

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 39

RAMESAM AND MADHAVAN NAIR, JJ.

R. M. M. S. T. Vyravan Chettiar — Appellant.

v.

Official Assignee of Madras — Respondent.

Original Side Appeal No. 98 of 1929, Decided on 8th March 1932, against decision of Waller, J., D/- 8th October 1929.

* Contract Act (1872), S. 141—One of joint promisors paying entire debt — He is not surety nor entitled to subrogation in place of creditor in respect of securities held by latter—Contract Act (1872), S. 126.

Persons who are jointly and severally liable on promissory notes are not sureties under S. 126 of the Act, nor do such persons occupy a position analogous to that of a surety strictly so called to attract the provisions of S. 141. Hence where one of such joint promisors pays the entire debt he is not entitled to the benefit of any securities which the creditors may have held against the person whose debts were discharged: Duncan Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank, 6 A C 1, Expl. and Rel. on.; 15 Bom 48, Dist.; English cases referred. [P 42 C 1,2]

K. S. Krishnaswami Ayyangar—for Appellant.

O. T. G. Nambiar—for Respondent.

Ramesam, J.—The facts out of which this appeal arises may be stated as follows: Two Chetties R. M. M. S. T. Vyravan Chettiar who is the appellant before us and M. A. R. N. Ramanadhan Chettiar carrying on business under the vilasam of M. A. R. N. were in the habit of borrowing from the banks in Madras on joint promissory notes and utilizing the amounts in equal shares. There were two such promissory notes with which we are concerned. On each occasion the amount borrowed was Rs. 50,000. The total amount borrowed being one lakh, each debtor took Rs. 50,000 for his own purpose. The dates of the two notes are 8th July 1924 and 22nd April 1925. On 3rd August 1925 M. A. R. N. was declared insolvent. It is admitted that the insolvent paid interest on his share of the debt on 8th July 1924, 8th October 1924 and 8th January 1925. He had certain shares in the Indian Bank from whom those debts were borrowed, and under Art. 19 of the Articles of Association of the Indian Bank, the bank had a lien on the shares. After the insolvency of Ramanadhan Chetty, the bank demanded payment from the appellant and he paid the whole debt. In respect of the moiety of the insolvent's debt he now claims to be subrogated to the benefit of the lien which the Indian Bank had over the shares, and this is claimed under S. 141, Contract Act. The Official Assignee representing the insolvent claims that the shares had vested in him free of any such lien. The matter came on before our brother Waller, J., and he found that no specific agreement as was alleged by the appellant to the effect that each debtor was to be surety for the other in respect of his moiety of the debt was made out. He therefore dismissed the application. This appeal is filed against his order.

We entirely agree with the learned Judge that the evidence does not make out any specific agreement between the parties to the effect that, though as between the Indian Bank and the debtors they were jointly and severally liable, as between themselves each should be regarded as a surety for the other in respect of his moiety of the debt. Under the Contract Act the contract of guarantee is confined to cases where the guarantor agrees with the creditor to discharge the liability of a third person in case of his default. Cases where, on the face of the contract two persons are both jointly and severally liable, do not fall within the definition. In other words, the contract of guarantee as defined in S. 126, Contract Act, is confined to cases of suretyship strictly so called. In Duncan Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank (1), Lord Selbourne, L. C., distinguishes between three kinds of cases at p. 11. The first case there mentioned is the only case covered by the Contract Act. The second and third cases there enumerated are cases of suretyship loosely described as such. The second case is a case where there was an agreement between the principal and the surety only, the creditor being a stranger to it. The third case is a case where, without any contract of suretyship, there is a primary and secondary liability of two persons for one and the same debt, the debt as between the two being of one of those persons only, and not equally of both. After eliminating the cases of suretyship strictly so called, the noble Lord discusses at p. 12 how far the person secondarily liable as surety is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the creditor in the second and third cases. He refers to Lord Eldon's dictum in Younge v. Reynell (2) (at p. 689) and finally winds up by saying that even in the second and third cases the surety has some right to be placed in the shoes of the creditor where he paid the amount. The learned advocate for the appellant strongly relied upon this dictum and also the case in William Rouse v. Bradford Banking Co. Ltd. (3). But in this case there is an express agreement between the parties. He also referred to Rowlatt on Principal and Surety, p. 7. But the passage at p. 7 relies on the case in Duncan Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank (1) and does not carry the statement of the law beyond it. To make this passage applicable, the case must be one where the debt must be wholly of one and not equally of both. The whole foundation for the equitable doctrine of the English Courts of Equity is the argument of Sir Samuel Romilly in Craythorne v. Swinburne (4). That was a case of contract of guarantee in the strictest sense of the term. So also the cases reported in Younge v. Reynell (2) and Monypenny v. Monypenny (5). Mr. Krishnaswami Ayyangar relied on Sheldon on Subrogation, S. 169. But that section does not very much help the appellant.

1. (1881) 6 A C 1=50 L J Ch 355=43 L T 706
=29 W R 763.

The opening sentence shows that even in some States in America (Georgia, Alabama and Vermont) right of subrogation among the parties jointly bound as principals is denied, though in other States such right of subrogation seems to have been recognized. There is no case in England where the Courts have gone to this length. On the other hand, the statement of the law in Duncan Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank (1) makes it subject to the limitation that the debt should not be equally of both. The case in Goverdhan Das Gokuldas Tejpal v. The Bank of Bengal (6), is also a case of contract of suretyship strictly so called. The only point held there was that unless the surety pays down the whole money he is not entitled to the transfer of the security. We are not prepared to extend the legal position as laid down in English cases on the mere authority of the cases cited in Sheldon. The appeal fails and is therefore dismissed with costs.

Madhavan Nair, J.—(His Lordship after stating facts and contentions raised proceeded). In the application in support of his claim, the appellant relied on two specific agreements of suretyship—one agreement each time the money was borrowed—alleged to have been entered into between himself and the insolvent. In his evidence he set up a general "custom" amongst the Nattukottai Chetties that in such borrowing transactions each borrower becomes surety for the amount taken by the other. The learned Judge held neither the "agreements" set up nor the "custom" was proved and so dismissed the petition. On the evidence it is not seriously contended that the learned Judge's conclusions are incorrect. The evidence does not establish the agreements of guarantee set up nor does it support the alleged custom. Ss. 140 and 141, Contract Act, regulate as against the principal debtor the rights of a surety who performs or otherwise discharges the liabilities of the principal debtor. These sections are as follows: (His Lordship after quoting Ss. 140 and 141 proceeded). S. 140 lays down a general principle of which the most important practical application is to be found in S. 141; see Pollock and Mulla, p. 479. Under S. 141 a surety is entitled to the benefit of every security which the creditor has against the principal debtor. This was the section relied on by the appellant before Waller, J. If this section applies there can be no doubt that the appellant is entitled to claim a charge on the shares of the Bank held by it (the creditor) as a security against the insolvent.

Having regard to the finding of the learned Judge and our opinion that the agreements set up by the appellant have not been proved, what is now urged is not that S. 141, Contract Act, is directly applicable, but that the general princi-

2. Rev Rep 89.

3. (1894) A C 586.

4. 14 Ves 160=9 R R 264.

5. (1859) 121 R R 238=3 De G & J 572.

6. (1891) 15 Bom 48.

ple of equity underlying that section would apply to the appellant who though he is not a surety strictly speaking occupies a position analogous to that of a surety; and since he has admittedly discharged the liability of the insolvent by paying the creditor his portion of the debt, viz., Rs. 50,000, he is in equity entitled to the benefit of the security held by the Bank (the creditor), against the insolvent. This argument is sought to be supported by the decision in the well-known case of Duncan Fox & Co v. North & South Wales Bank (1). It is doubtful if this argument was put before the learned Judge but it is stated that the case was quoted before him. The question is purely one of law. It was held in that case that:

“ the acceptor of a bill of exchange knows that by his acceptance, he does an act which will make him liable to indemnify any indorser of it who may afterwards pay it. The indorser is a surety for the payment to the holder, and having paid it, is entitled to the benefit of any securities to cover it deposited with the holder by the acceptor. He is so entitled whether at the time of his endorsement he knew, or did not know, of the deposit of those securities. The surety's right in this respect in no way depends on contract, but is the result of equity of indemnification attendant on the suretyship.”

The facts of the case were these: R. & Sons offered a bill of exchange for a portion of the price due from them for a cargo of corn purchased from D. & Co. D. & Co. declined to take the bill of exchange. They were customers to N. S. W. Bank. One of the partners of R. & Sons had deposited with this Bank the title deeds of two of its own freehold properties and these were held by the Bank as securities for what the Bank might advance in the way of discount. R. & Sons told D. & Co., that if they would inquire of the bankers they would find it would be all right with their bill. The Bank manager refused to discount the bill without the indorsement of D. & Co., but said that he believed D. & Co. would incur no more than nominal liability by making the endorsement, placing the amount to the credit of D. & Co. R. & Sons later on stopped the payment of the bill when it became due and the bill was dishonoured. D. & Co. then became acquainted with the fact that securities had been deposited with bankers by R. & Sons to cover advances on their bills and brought an action against the Bank to have the benefit, so far as they would go, of the securities deposited with them claiming to be sureties to the bankers for what was due upon the bill. It was held that D. & Co. were sureties on their bill and that as such they were entitled to the benefit of these securities: see the head-note.

In examining the principles and authorities applicable to the question to be decided the Lord Chancellor distinguished between three kinds of cases: (1) those in which there is an agreement to constitute, for a particular purpose, the relation of principal and surety, to which agreement the creditor thereby secured is a party; (2) those in which there is a similar agreement between the principal and surety only, to which the creditor, is a stranger, and (3) those in which, without any such contract of suretyship, there is a primary and a secondary liability of two persons for one and the same debt, the debt being as between the two that of one of those persons only, and not equally of both, (the italics are mine) so that the other if he should be compelled to pay it, would be entitled to reimbursement from the persons by whom (as between the two) it ought to have been paid.

In all these three kinds of cases it was pointed out by their Lordships that the person who discharges the liability due to the creditor, would be entitled to the benefit of the security held by the creditor though a case of suretyship strictly speaking would fall only under class 1, as a contract of guarantee is confined to agreements where the “surety” agrees with the creditor that he would discharge the liability of the “principal debtor” in case of his default: see S. 126, Contract Act. Obviously classes 2 and 3 are not cases of suretyship strictly so called. Their Lordships observed that the case before them did not fall within the first or the second class as admittedly there was no agreement either between R. & Sons and D. & Co. constituting the relation of principal and surety to which the Bank was a party, or a similar agreement between the two, to which the Bank was a stranger; and that the case fell within the third class in which though there is strictly speaking no contract of suretyship

“ there is a primary and secondary liability of two persons for one and the same debt, by virtue of which, if it is paid by the person who is not primarily liable, he has a right to reimbursement or indemnity from the other."

It was for this reason that D. & Co. were held to have the rights of sureties though they were, strictly speaking, not sureties on the bill. In the case before us no contract between the appellant and the insolvent constituting the former a surety for the latter to which the Bank was a party, has been pleaded and the specific contracts of suretyship pleaded have not been substantiated. The appellant therefore argues that though he is not strictly speaking a surety, he falls within the third class enumerated above and that he occupies in equity a position analogous to that of a surety as mentioned therein as he has discharged the liability of the insolvent to the Bank. The question is whether he occupies this position. If he does then he is, by extension of the principle to the case of sureties strictly so called, entitled to the benefit of the 'security held by the Indian Bank. To fall within class 3 mentioned above and to assimilate his position with that of a surety strictly so called, a person who discharges the liability to the creditor should be only secondarily but not primarily liable to the creditor. This was the position of D. & Co. in Duncan Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank (1). Having regard to the facts of the present case, it cannot be said that this is the position of the appellant with respect to his liability on the promissory notes.

As already pointed out the liability on the promissory notes of the appellant and the insolvent is joint and several. There is only one debt in the present case, a debt which is equally a debt of both the parties. The Indian Bank can recover the entire amount either from the appellant or from the insolvent. Thus there is no question of one person being primarily liable for the debt and the other only secondarily liable. In these circumstances the principle of the decision in Duncan Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank (1), has no application to the present case and on the strength of that decision the appellant cannot claim that his position is analogous to that of a surety and that therefore he is entitled to the benefit of the security held by the creditor.

Various other cases were cited by the appellant's learned counsel, but all of them are distinguishable. In the case in William Rouse v. The Bradford Banking Co. Ltd (3), there was an express agreement between the parties. The case in Cray Thorney v. Swimburne (4) is one of the co-sureties and the cases in Younge v. Reynell (2) and Monypenny v. Monypenny (5), are all cases of strict suretyships. The case in Goverdhan Das Goculdas Tejpal v. The Bank of Bengal (6), is also a case of a contract on suretyship. Reference was made to a passage in Sheldon on Subrogation 256, Ch. 4. S. 169, which shows that the right of subrogation between joint debtors exists in some States in America, but the existence of such rights is denied in some other States. However no English decision has been cited in support of the contention that such right exists in England. In my opinion persons who are jointly and severally liable on promissory notes are not sureties under S. 126, Contract Act, nor do such persons occupy a position analogous to that of a surety strictly so called to attract the provisions of S. 141, Contract Act. For the above reasons I must hold that the appellant is not entitled to the benefit of the security held by the Indian Bank against the insolvent. I would therefore dismiss this appeal with costs.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 42

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Sobhanadri Rao Pantulu Garu and others In re—Petitioners.

Civil Revn. Petns. Nos. 1195 to 1229 of 1931, Decided on 30th August 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Masulipatam, D. - 26th August 1931.

Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (4) (c)—Suit by landholder to eject tenants after notice praying for declaration of his kudivaram rights—S. 7 (4) (c) applies and not Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (5) or S. 7 (11) (cc).

Where the inamdar claims both varams, and though he has no proof of actually letting the defendants into possession, he claims declaration of his title and the right to eject them after due notice, by virtue of his title to the kudivaram and the tenants do not dispute his claim to the melwaram, but assert occupancy right, the court-fee payable will be under S. 7 (4) (c) and not S. 7 (11) (cc) or S. 7 (5) as S. 7 (11) (cc) is applicable where the suit is based on lease but not when the plaintiff also wants a decree establishing his title and S. 7 (5) will not apply as the defendant admits the plaintiff to be the landholder but question only, his right to eject. A I R 1915 Mad 654, Ref. [P 43 C 1, 2]

*S. Varadachariar for N. Rama Rao—*for Petitioners.

P. Venkataramana — for Government.

Jackson, J.—This is a question of court-fees. The plaintiff, an inamdar, claims to have full right to both kudivaram and melvaram in the land which comprises the inam (para. 3), so the letting to tenants is for temporary periods (para. 4) and the inam is not an estate within the definition in Act 1 of 1908, (para. 5), all tenants are tenants at will (para. 6). In December 1926 the defendants who are temporary tenants were given notice to quit (para. 7), and the plaintiff prays for a decree establishing his right in the suit lands, and removing the defendants. This plaint plainly sets forth a familiar form of suit. The inamdar claims both varams, and therefore though he has no proof of actually letting the defendants into possession, he claims the right to eject them after due notice by virtue of his title to the kudivaram. The tenants do not dispute his claim to the melvaram, but assert occupancy right. The court-fee has been paid under S. 7, Cl. 11 (cc), Court-fees Act. The lower Court has ordered that the fees shall be computed under S. 7 (v) and the plaintiff appeals.

Clause 11 is applicable when the suit is based on a lease, but not when the plaintiff also wants a decree establishing his title: Balasiddhantam v. Perumal Chetti (1). So far the order of the lower Court is unexceptionable. But the learned Subordinate Judge finds that the suits are for the declaration of plaintiff's title to the plaint schedule lands which is not quite correct. The defendants, though they do not put plaintiff's title as high as he would like, at least admit that he is the land-holder of the land in question, and, so far, his title to the land is not in dispute. The only quarrel between them is whether he is entitled to the kudivaram, and that is not on the same footing as a dispute between alleged owner and trespasser. Cl. 5 (c) would apply to a case where the plaintiff is suing to be put into possession of an inam, and it can hardly have been contemplated that the plaintiff should pay the same court-fee when he sues for possession of an inam against a rival claimant and when as undisputed inamdar he asserts his title to the kudivaram. The appropriate section would therefore seem to be (4) (c) to obtain a declaratory decree (that he is entitled to the kudivaram) and consequential relief of possession. The record will be returned to the lower Court to value the suits accordingly.

P.R.S./M.N.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 43

CURGENVEN AND SUNDARAM

CHETTY, JJ.

*Manikyanayanim Varu and others—*Defendants—Appellants.

v.

*Lakshminarasimha Sastrulu and others—*Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Appeal No. 10 of 1930, Decided on 6th April 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Chittoor, D/- 14th March 1929, in O. S. No. 18 of 1927.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 4 — Decree against wrong legal representative not in possession of estate of deceased is not binding on estate even in absence of fraud.

A decree passed in a suit, wherein the true legal representatives of a deceased party were not brought on record, would not be binding on the estate of the deceased party in the hands of the true legal representatives because under O. 22, R. 4 it would not be sufficient for an applicant to allege that a particular person is the legal representative of a deceased defendant to enable a decree to be passed which should be valid even in absence of fraud against the true heir although that heir is not a party to the suit: A I R 1927 Bom 63, Foll. [P 48 C 1]

*T. Kumaraswamiah—*for Appellants.

*V. Ganapathi—*for Respondents.

Sundaram Chetty, J.—This appeal has been preferred by defendants 3 to 7 and arises out of a suit brought by plaintiff (respondent 1) for a declaratory relief in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Chittoor. The facts of the case have been set out in the judgment of the Subordinate Judge and a brief reference to them is necessary in order to understand the nature of the dispute in this case. Palayagar Chengama Nayanam Varu (No. 1) was in possession of 62 villages including the three villages mentioned in the plaint Sch. B as usufructuary mortgagee under two mortgage-deeds dated 17th May 1890 and executed by the Rajah of Karvetnagar. He died in or about 1893 leaving behind him four sons, namely Vijayappa Nayanam Varu, Govindaswami Nayanam Varu and defendants 3 and 4. By means of an award, a partition was effected among these four sons, whereby 14 out of the 62 villages including the three villages mentioned in Sch. B were allotted to the share of Govindaswami Nayanam Varu who died in 1897. His widow was Venkatamma. His elder brother Vijayappa Nayanam Varu had two sons, namely, Chengama Naidu (No. 2) and the present defendant 2. Defendants 5 to 7 are the sons of defendant 4. According to the plaintiff's case, Chengama Naidu (No. 2) was the adopted son of Govindaswami Nayanam Varu. The present defendant 1 is the minor son of Chengama Naidu (No. 2). Subsequent to the death of Govindaswami Nayanam Varu, his estate became a veritable apple of discord and was the subject-matter of several suits in a long series of litigation. Venkatamma denied the truth and validity of the adoption of Chengama Naidu (No. 2) which was set up by his natural father Vijayappa.

The disputes between them were referred to the arbitration of one Krishnamachariar, a pleader of Tirupathi, who passed an award on 5th January 1898 (Ex. E). Curiously enough this arbitrator purporting to act on a consent statement given by the parties effected a sort of division between them without deciding the question of adoption one way or the other. He divided the properties between Chengama Naidu (No. 2) and the widow Venkatamma in the proportion of 3: 1. It is under this award that Venkatamma got the three villages mentioned in Sch. B with absolute rights whereas the properties allotted to Chengama Naidu (No. 2) were subject to a defeasance clause to the effect that if Venkatamma should beget a male child he should be divested of the properties given to him under the award. The dispute did not end with this award, but it proved to be the beginning of further disputes. Venkatamma filed O. S. No. 21 of 1900 on the file of the Sub-Court of Chittoor, for a declaration that the award is void and that the alleged adoption is neither true in fact nor valid in law. To this suit Vijayappa and his son Chengama Naidu (No. 2)—the alleged adopted son and also the present defendants 3 and 4 were parties (Ex. 3).

In the written statement filed by defendant 3 and 4 they denied the truth and the validity of the alleged adoption, questioned the award as being a fraudulent one and also set up an oral will by the late Govindaswami Nayanam Varu, whereby he bequeathed all his properties in their favour to be divided equally between them, (Ex. 4). That suit ended in a razi and was dismissed. Subsequently, the present defendant 4 filed O. S. No. 16 of 1905 in the District Court of North Arcot for the recovery of Govindaswami's estate on the strength of the nuncupative will alleged to have been left by him. He also sought for a declaration that the alleged adoption of Chengama Naidu (No. 2) is neither true nor valid. Vijayappa and the alleged adopted son were defendants 1 and 2 in that suit. The present defendant 3 was also defendant 3 and Venkatamma was defendant 4 and her brother was defendant 5 in that suit. It would appear that a decree was passed in that suit declaring the adoption of Chengama null and void, but subsequently the decree was set aside and the suit was restored to file. It was numbered as O. S. No. 26 of 1908 on the file of the District Court of North Arcot. Eventually it ended in a razinama decree on 31st July 1909 (Exs. 7 and 8). The compromise was between the plaintiff in that suit and defendants 1, 2 and 3 therein.

Venkatamma and her brother were no parties to that compromise and they were exonerated from the suit. Under this razinama, one of the 14 villages above referred to, namely, Nandimangalam, was allotted to Chengama Naidu (No. 2) who was defendant 2 therein with the burden of paying one-third of the debts due by the deceased Govindaswami, and the other properties should be taken by the plaintiff and defendant 3 therein, (the present defendants 3 and 4) in equal shares with the corresponding liability of paying two-thirds share of the debts due by the deceased. This razinama was entered into without deciding the status of Chengama Naidu in either way but leaving that question completely open. As Venkatamma was exonerated from the suit with costs she was not bound by this compromise. The right which she acquired to the three villages as per the award referred to above remained unaffected by the razinama decree which was passed on 31st July 1909. There is no doubt that defendants 3 and 4 who survived the widow Venkatamma would be entitled to the estate of Govindaswami as the nearest reversioners, if the alleged adoption of Chengama Naidu (No. 2) be not true and valid. It is pretty clear that, though the question relating to this adoption was raised in ever so many proceedings, somehow the decision of this question was shelved and some arrangement with respect to the properties in dispute in those proceedings were entered into as a result of compromise, leaving the question relating to the adoption in a nebulous condition.

While matters stood thus, Venkatamma was dealing with the three villages given to her under the award by creating mortgages over the same and also leased them to the present plaintiff's father on 27th March 1907 for a period of 20 years fixing the annual rent at Rs. 550. It is alleged in para. 8 of the plaint that under the terms of the lease deed the lessee could appropriate the expenses incurred by him in connection with the litigation concerning the villages out of the rents and profits thereof. During the continuance of the lease, Venkatamma filed O. S. No. 34 of 1918 on the file of the Sub-Court, Chittoor, against the present plaintiffs and his brothers for the recovery of arrears of rent, namely Rs. 3,863-12-0. In the written statement filed by the defendants therein, they pleaded that a sum of Rs. 16,000 was due to them on account of the expenses incurred by them on behalf of Venkatamma in conducting the litigation relating to those villages. During the pendency of that suit, Venkatamma died and Chengama Naidu (No. 2) brought himself on record as her legal representative and was made plaintiff 2. The suit was subsequently transferred to the Additional Sub-Court, Chittoor, and numbered as O. S. No. 26 of 1920. A razinama was eventually put in on 17th March 1920 and was recorded by the Court (vide Ex. G.). Under this razinama, Chengama Naidu (No. 2), plaintiff 2 therein, agreed to pay to the defendants therein, a sum of Rs. 15,000 together with interest till payment and further created a charge for the realization of this sum over the three villages (mentioned in the present Sch. B), which formed the subject-matter of the lease granted by Venkatamma. It is on the strength of this razinama that the present plaintiff, who says that the amount due under this razi decree was allotted to him in a partition between him and his brothers, has filed this suit for a declaration.

The usufructuary mortgage right in the aforesaid 62 villages possessed by the family of Palayagar Chengama Nayanam Varu (No. 1) is now represented by the amount deposited in the Sub-Court, Chittoor, in pursuance of a redemption decree passed in O. S. No. 31 of 1919 in favour of the Mahant of Tirupathi who filed that suit for redemption, as he became the purchaser of the equity of redemption, in those 62 villages in execution of a decree obtained against the Rajah of Karvetnagar. Out of the proportionate amount due to Govindaswami Nayanam Varu in respect of his othi right in the 14 villages allotted to his share in the family partition, a certain amount would be payable to the owner of the othi right in the three villages mentioned in Sch. B by apportionment, and what the present plaintiff wants in this suit is a declaration of his right to receive that amount by virtue of the razinama decree in O. S. No. 26 of 1920, whereby a charge is created in his favour over the othi right in those three villages. This claim is opposed by defendants 3 and 4 who state that Chengama Naidu (No. 2) was never adopted by Govindaswami and the alleged adoption is also invalid in law. They further contend that on the death of Venkatamma, they became entitled to the estate of her husband Govindaswami as the nearest reversioners. They attack the razinama in O. S. No. 26 of 1920 as collusive and fraudulent and contend that they are in no way bound by that razinama; and the debt mentioned in that razinama is neither true nor binding upon them as reversioners to the estate.

Plaintiff's claim to enforce the charge created under the razinama in O. S. No. 26 of 1920 as against the othi right held by the deceased Govindaswami in the three villages now in question, is mainly based on the case set up in the plaint, namely, that Chengama Naidu (No. 2) who entered into that razinama as the legal representative of Venkatamma, was competent to do so as he was the validly adopted son of Govindaswami. The truth and validity of his adoption having been denied by the reversioners, namely the present defendants 3 and 4, this question was made the subject of issue 1. The learned Subordinate Judge has found that issue in the negative. As observed by him in para. 21 of his judgment, the direct evidence about the alleged adoption is so meagre and worthless that no reliance can be placed upon it. He has discussed the circumstances connected with this point, and in the face of the improbabilities and suspicious features connected with the story of adoption, it must be held that the finding of the lower Court is the only possible conclusion upon the evidence. No serious attempt has been made before us by the learned advocate for the plaintiff (respondent 1) to challenge the correctness of that finding. He had to concede the utter inadequacy of the proof adduced in support of the alleged adoption, but what he tried to do was to persuade us to hold that defendants 3 and 4 are in some way estopped from disputing the truth and validity of the adoption. In the first place, it must be observed that no such case of estoppel has been set up in the plaint. If the plaintiff really wanted to rely upon an estoppel, either as a rule of evidence or as part of the substantive law, which would preclude defendants 3 and 4 from disputing the adoption in the present case, he must have set up such a plea specifically in the plaint making the necessary averments for sustaining such a plea. Such a specific plea is conspicuous by its absence in the plaint, nor was any issue taken on this point in the trial Court.

The adoption on which alone the plaintiff based his claim in the plaint not having been made out, we have to hold that Chengama Naidu (No. 2) who intervened in O. S. No. 26 of 1920 after the death of Venkatamma (the plaintiff therein) as her legal representative, was not competent to represent the estate, and consequently the razinama entered into by him with the defendants therein, whereby a charge was created by him for a certain amount over the properties appertaining to the estate is invalid and unenforceable against the actual heirs who became entitled to the estate on the death of Venkatamma, namely, the present defendants 3 and 4.

It is however argued on behalf of respondent 1 that Chengama Naidu (No. 2) could at least be deemed to be a legal representative within the definition given in S. 2 (11), Civil P. C., if it could be shown that he was an intermeddler with the estate of the deceased by getting into possession of some portion thereof. The three villages in question having been leased out by Venkatamma to the father of the present plaintiff, they were not in the possession of Chengama Naidu (No. 2) when he brought himself on record in O. S. No. 26 of 1920 after the death of Venkatamma. It is not clearly shown that he was in possession of any other property appertaining to the estate of Govindaswami about that time, in order to make him a legal representative in the sense of an intermeddler with the estate. Here again, an attempt has been made to invoke for aid the plea of estoppel in order to prevent defendants 3 and 4 from disputing the status of a legal representative to Chengama Naidu (No. 2) in O. S. No. 26 of 1920. This contention is based upon the facts relating to certain proceedings carried on after the death of Govindaswami. One Mari Subbaraya Chetti filed O. S. No. 37 of 1909 on the file of the District Court of North Arcot to recover a sum of money due on a mortgage executed by Vijayappa as guardian of Chengama Naidu (No. 2) the alleged adopted son of Govindaswami. The widow Venkatamma and also the present defendants 3 and 4 were made parties to that suit. These defendants denied the adoption in their written statement. However the suit ended in a compromise: vide Exs. D and D-1. At about that time the will suit above referred to, namely O. S. No. 26 of 1908 filed by the present defendant 4, was pending. By virtue of the aforesaid compromise, the mortgagee was allowed to have a decree in his favour for the amount claimed by him irrespective of any decree that may be passed in the will suit.

As pointed out by the learned Subordinate Judge, the trend of the razinama Ex. D-1 is that, irrespective of any finding as to the will or adoption that may be given in O. S. No. 26 of 1908, the mortgagee could recover the amount due to him. This decree was allowed to be passed in that manner without having the effect of an admission of the adoption by defendants 3 and 4. Similarly, in the subsequent compromise entered into in O. S. No. 26 of 1908, vide Ex. 8, there was no reference to the adoption at all, and in fact it was neither affirmed nor negatived. A decree for money was obtained by one Chandra Veerasami Naidu against the estate of Govindaswami. That decree was transferred to Messrs. P. Orr & Sons. The latter executed the decree against Venkatamma (the widow) and Chengama Naidu (No. 2). The present defendants 3 and 4 were not made parties to the execution proceedings. It would appear that the present defendant 3 took a transfer of that decree in 1914 and paid off the money due to Messrs. P. Orr & Sons. It is argued that by such conduct defendants 3 and 4 must be deemed to have recognized Chengama Naidu at least as a joint legal representative with Venkatamma in respect of the estate of Govindaswami. It is significant that in the aforesaid two proceedings execution was taken out against the widow and Chengama Naidu (No. 2). If the latter was really treated as the adopted son of Govindaswami, there was no need to implead the widow. If there was no adoption the widow would be the proper and sole legal representative.

However as the adoption was being set up, though that question was never allowed to be decided one way or the other in any of the proceedings, the creditor who was interested in the recovery of the money due to him under the decree chose to implead both the widow and the alleged adopted son by way of abundant caution. There is hardly any doubt that the present defendants 3 and 4 were throughout denying the truth and the validity of the alleged adoption of Chengama Naidu (No. 2) and their objection was so constant and persistent that the Court had to order the deletion of the description of Chengama Naidu as the adopted son in some transfer deeds: vide Ex. 1. In O. S. No. 39 of 1922 on the file of the Sub-Court of Chittoor which was filed by B. Kuppuswami Reddi against the present defendant 1 and some others including the present defendants 3 and 4, the same questions were raised as would appear from the judgment in that suit: vide Ex. 12 which was on 18th November 1924. The alleged adoption of Chengama Naidu (No. 2) was found to be neither true nor valid and it was held that Venkatamma had no absolute rights in the three villages in question. In this tangled mass of proceedings, it is impossible to draw any reasonable inference, that the present defendants 3 and 4 have, by any declaration or conduct, intentionally caused or permitted the present plaintiff to believe that Chengama Naidu (No. 2) was either the adopted son of Govindaswami or his proper legal representative. In no proceeding to which the present plaintiff was a party could he show that anything was done by defendants 3 and 4 so as to create an estoppel in his favour. That being so, we are clearly of opinion that not only was Chengama Naidu (No. 2) not the adopted son of Govindaswami but he was also not the proper legal representative of Venkatamma in O. S. No. 26 of 1920. Even assuming that Venkatamma was absolutely entitled to the three villages mentioned in Sch. B, which formed the subject of the lease granted by her to the present plaintiff's father, we fail to see how Chengama Naidu (No. 2), if he was not the adopted son, could be her legal representative for the recovery of the money claimed in O. S. No. 26 of 1920 or for creating a charge over her properties for any amount alleged to be due by her.

The present defendants 3 and 4, either as reversioners to the estate of Govindaswami or as heirs to Venkatamma, could not be bound by the razinama filed in O. S. No. 26 of 1920 to which they were no parties. The debt mentioned in that razinama is impugned by them to be untrue and the razinama itself is attacked as collusive and fraudulent. That being so, the present plaintiff, who seeks to enforce the terms of that razinama as against defendants 3 and 4, should prove the truth and the binding character of the debt therein mentioned by adducing the necessary evidence. The recital in the razinama cannot be deemed to be proof of the debt or its binding character as against persons who were not parties to it. No independent proof has been adduced in this case. If Venkatamma herself was a party to that compromise and if the villages in question were her absolute property, it can be said that her heirs should be bound by that compromise and should take her estate subject to the encumbrances created by her. That is not the case here. What right had Chengama Naidu (No. 2) to interpose in her suit as her legal representative and to create a charge or an encumbrance over the villages which belonged to her? The answer to this question must be in the negative. The principle that a decree passed in a suit wherein the true legal representatives of a deceased party were not brought on record would not be binding on the estate of the deceased party in the hands of the true legal representatives, has been clearly stated in a decision of the Bombay High Court reported in Pukharaj Jestraraj v. Jamsetji Rustum (1).

This question has been discussed at some length by Marten, C.J. That learned Judge has observed that, in view of the altered wording of O. 22, R. 4, Civil P. C., it would not be sufficient for an applicant to allege that a particular person is the legal representative of a deceased defendant to enable a decree to be passed which should be valid against the true heir, although that heir is not a party to the suit. If a plaintiff who seeks to enforce a debt owing by the deceased adds wrong persons as legal representatives and obtains a decree, such a decree, even in the absence of fraud will not be binding against the true representatives or heirs of the deceased. This principle clearly governs the present case. The learned Subordinate Judge has failed to consider the vital questions in this case which are in a narrow compass, though he has discussed at length various subsidiary matters. From what he has stated in para 24 of his judgment it seems to us that he took it for granted that the razinama in question should be binding on defendants 3 and 4, if an outsider like the present plaintiff bona fide believed Chengama Naidu to be the legal representative to Govindasami when he entered into it. As we have already pointed out there is no estoppel alleged in the plaint against defendants 3 and 4, nor is it made out in the evidence in respect of the razinama in question. Even assuming that Chengama Naidu (No. 2) was believed to be a legal representative, is it not necessary for the plaintiff to prove the truth and the binding character of the debt specified in the razinama so as to enforce it against the true reversioners or heirs? The need for such proof has been entirely overlooked by the learned Subordinate Judge. We cannot therefore accept his finding on issue 4. We are clearly of opinion that the plaintiff has failed to make out that the razinama decree in O. S. No. 26 of 1920 relates to a true debt binding upon the reversioners to the estate of Govindasami or the heirs of Venkatanma. Consequently, the plaintiff is not entitled in this suit to any declaration, on the strength of that razinama decree as against the reversioners or heirs.

In the result the plaintiff's claim for a declaration in respect of the amount standing to the credit of the mortgagees in O. S. No. 31 of 1919 on the file of the Sub-Court, Chittoor, should fail, and this appeal is allowed with costs payable by the plaintiff respondent 1. He should pay the costs of defendants 3, 4 and 10 in the lower Court and bear his own costs. The other defendants will bear their own costs.

P.R.S., M.N.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 48

CURGENVEN AND SUNDARAM
CHETTY, JJ.

Thiagaraja Mudaliar and another—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Vedathanni—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Appeal No. 162 of 1929, Decided on 17th March 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Negapatam, in O. S. No. 22 of 1928.

(a) Evidence Act (1872), S. 101—Burden of proving that registered deed was sham is on person alleging who he was party to deed.

When a person wants to prove that a registered deed to which he was a party does not disclose the true intention of parties and that it was only a sham, the burden of proof lies on him: 21 Mad 56, Rel on. [P 50 C 1, 2]

(b) Evidence Act (1872), S. 92—Document evidencing disposition—Evidence to show that it is enforceable in some manner other than expressly stated is inadmissible—But evidence to show it to be sham and meant to be inoperative is admissible.

It is only when parol evidence is sought to be let in for proving that a document affecting a disposition is enforceable not according to its plain terms but in a modified form by something being substituted for or subtracted from or added to the terms expressly mentioned therein that S. 92 would be a bar and render such oral evidence inadmissible. But a party to a document is entitled to prove by oral evidence that the agreement or disposition in writing was only a sham and was not intended to be operative: 7 M H C R 189; A I R 1925 PC 75; 17 Cal 291(PC) and 8 Bom L R 761, Rel on; A I R 1927 All 422, Diss from; 34 Bom 59;

1. A I R 1927 Bom 63=100 PC 185=50 Bom 802.

38 Mad 226; A I R 1930 Mad 547; 7 I C 842, Dist. [P 50 C 2]

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 26, R. 1—Claim for great magnitude—Parties even if women should be examined by Court.

Especially in a claim involving thousands the parties, even if they are women should rarely be allowed to be examined on commission. They should be required to give their evidence direct to the Court even if it had to be taken in chambers unless there is good reason for not doing so.

[P 53 C 2]

The Advocate-General and A. V. Viswanatha Sastri—for Appellant.

T. V. Muthukrishna Ayyar and N. Muthuswami Ayyar—for Respondent.

Sundaram Chetty, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit filed by the plaintiff-respondent to recover a sum of Rupees 1,15,000 from out of the estate in the hands of defendants, on account of the arrears of maintenance due to her for a period of nearly 11½ years at the rate of Rs. 10,000 per annum. The plaintiff's case is, that her deceased husband Ramalinga Mudaliar and his elder brother, the late Somasundara Mudaliar, were brothers who were the last surviving male co-parceners of a very rich family known as the Vadapathimangalam family, that the plaintiff's husband died issueless on 23rd December 1912 at Tiruvarur and that soon after the annual ceremony of her deceased husband, she left the family house in which Somasundara Mudaliar was living and went over to her parent's house about the beginning of the year 1914 and from that time onwards she was living separately from the family of her husband's brother. The plaintiff's husband and his elder brother owned properties (moveable and immovable) of the approximate value of 50 lakhs. The extent of their wet and dry lands was about 1,500 velis (about 10,000 acres).

The annual income of the family properties would be about 2½ lakhs according to the estimate given in the plaint. For more than 12 years before his death the plaintiff's husband was living separately from his brother in one of the family houses situated at Vijiapuram near Tiruvarur and was also in separate enjoyment of a portion of the family properties. Immediately after the death of the plaintiff's husband, Somasundaram apprehended trouble on account of a possible claim being put forward by the plaintiff at the instigation of her relations for a moiety of the family properties, alleging a division in status between her husband and his brother. Feeling nervous at the idea of a possible litigation which would be fraught with disastrous consequences, Somasundara was anxious to secure some sort of admission from the plaintiff as to the undivided status of the family and with this object in view he got executed a document on 28th December 1912 containing a recital as to the undivided status of the family and in that document he also purported to make certain arrangements for the maintenance of the plaintiff, but it was however, distinctly understood between the parties that the provisions for the maintenance contained in the deed should not be given effect to or acted upon by them. This document was solely intended as a voucher for the recognition of the joint status of the family by the plaintiff and the real and final arrangement for the plaintiff's maintenance was agreed to be left over for future settlement at leisure on a scale commensurate with the position and status of the family. It is further alleged in the plaint, that the immovable properties set forth in that deed as having been allotted for the plaintiff's maintenance were never enjoyed by her but continued to remain in the possession and enjoyment of Somasundara himself as part of his family properties down to his death which occurred on 17th January 1925. During the lifetime of Somasundara, the plaintiff was making demands for adequate provision being made to her for her maintenance and he was promising to make suitable provision in conformity with the status of the family.

Somasundara died issueless leaving behind him his two widows who are defendants 1 and 2. In pursuance of an alleged authority given to defendant 2 by the late Somasundara, she adopted defendant 3 as her son on 1st July 1925, having entered into an ante-adoption agreement with the natural father of the minor on 21st June 1925. That agreement provides agreeably to the intentions of the deceased Somasundara that the plaintiff was to be given for her maintenance Rs. 6,000 and 500 kalams of paddy per year besides being permitted to enjoy for her lifetime the lands mentioned in the deed dated 28th December 1912. Those lands would yield an income of about Rs. 2,500 per year.

In the interests of the peace of this respectable family the plaintiff is inclined to accept Rs. 10,000 per annum on account of the arrears of maintenance due to her.

Defendant 1, senior wife of Somasundara, was disputing the validity of the adoption of defendant 3, and had also instituted O. S. No. 22 of 1925 on the file of the Tiruvavur Sub-Court for a declaration of the invalidity of the adoption. Defendant 2 for herself and as guardian of the minor defendant 3 states that she had no knowledge of the circumstances under which and the purpose for which the registered maintenance deed dated 28th December 1912 came into existence, and she accordingly puts the plaintiff to proof of the allegations made by her in respect of it. It is admitted that the plaintiff did not receive the income of the lands set apart for her maintenance under the said deed and therefore she should only be entitled to the profits of those lands in respect of her past maintenance after ascertainment of those profits by the Court.

The learned Subordinate Judge found the case set up in the plaint to be substantially true and held that the maintenance deed in question (Ex. 1) was never intended to be acted upon and was also never acted upon. In the view that that document purporting to be a maintenance deed was only a sham, he treated it to be inoperative and held that it would not debar the plaintiff from claiming a reasonable rate of maintenance for the plaint-mentioned period on account of arrears due to her. Considering all the circumstances of this case, he allowed the plaintiff's claim for arrears of maintenance at the rate of Rs. 6,000 per annum and passed a decree accordingly. As against this decision, defendants 2 and 3 have filed this appeal, while the plaintiff has filed a memorandum of objections stating that the full rate claimed by her in the plaint should have been allowed by the lower Court. When the present claim of the plaintiff is resisted on the strength of the registered deed, Ex. 1, to which she and her husband's brother Somasundara were parties, there is no doubt that the burden of proving that this deed which is ostensibly a deed of maintenance was only a sham is upon the plaintiff. As observed in the decision in Ranga Ayyar v. Srinivasa Ayyangar (1), there must be clear evidence to justify a Court in holding that the parties did not intend that any legal effect should be given to it. In order to substantiate such a case it should be shown for what purpose other than the ostensible one the deed was executed. It is necessary to understand under what circumstances Ex. 1 came to be executed.

* * * * *

In the view I have taken of the facts disclosed in this case, I consider that the deed in question, which sounds ostensibly like a deed of maintenance, was executed nominally, or in other words, not with the intention of giving effect to that deed as an operative contract, grant or disposition, but it was brought about in this form by Somasundara with the sole object of securing a sort of acknowledgment by the plaintiff of the undivided status of her husband. This object has been achieved by the insertion of a recital to that effect as a preamble to the maintenance deed, Ex. 1, but that is only a statement of a fact and not part of any contract, grant or disposition. Ex. 1, if treated as a contract, grant or disposition is shown to be wholly nominal or sham and as such it is void and unenforceable. It does not represent any real agreement arrived at as between the plaintiff and Somasundara. This is not a case where oral evidence is sought to be adduced for showing that Ex. 1 is enforceable not according to its plain terms, but in a modified form by something being substituted for or subtracted from or added to any of the terms expressly mentioned therein. It is only when parol evidence is sought to be let in for proving such a case, that S. 92, Evidence Act, would be a bar and render such oral evidence inadmissible. What the plaintiff seeks to prove in this case is that there was never any real disposition at all under Ex. 1. Evidence to prove such a plea does not come within the scope of S. 92. The observations in Harris v. Rickett (2), which was followed in G. Ruthna Mudaliar v. K. Arumuga Mudaliar (3), seem to be pertinent to the present case. Bramwell, J. says :

1. (1898) 21 Mad 56.

2. (1859) 28 L J Ex 197=4 H & N 1.

3. (1871-74) 7 M H C R 189.

"The principle of the rule is, that it must be assumed that the parties agreed that the written agreement should be the evidence of the contract. The difficulty is, that in this case there was evidence that the parties did not agree that the written agreement should be the evidence of the contract."

In Ruthna Mudaliar v. Arumuga Mudaliar (3), the principles laid down in the case of Pym v. Campbell (4) were followed, and Morgan, C. J., observes at p. 196 as follows :

"But it is said there is a written contract, the promissory note, and that no addition to, or variation from, its term can be made by parol. With respect to this, I take the law to be that notwithstanding a paper writing which purports to be a contract may be produced, it is still competent to the Court to find upon sufficient evidence that this writing is not really the contract, and the risk of groundless defence does not affect the rule itself, though it suggests caution in acting on it."

It is true that this decision was given before the passing of the Evidence Act. But this same principle has been adopted in later decisions given after S. 92, Evidence Act, had come into operation. In the case reported in Baijnath Singh v. Vally Mahomed Hajee Abba (5), their Lordships of the Privy Council have explained the scope of S. 92, Evidence Act, in the following passage occurring at p. 125 :

"The preamble to the Evidence Act recites that 'it is expedient to consolidate, define and amend the Law of Evidence', and S. 92 merely prescribes a rule of evidence; it does not fetter the Court's power to arrive at the true meaning and effect of a transaction in the light of all the surrounding circumstances."

This observation shows that in respect of S. 92, Evidence Act, oral evidence is admissible to prove that an agreement in writing was really no agreement at all but was only a sham as it was not intended to be operative. The dictum in Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's Commentary on the Evidence Act, namely :

"although evidence to vary the terms of an agreement in writing is not admissible, yet evidence that there is not an agreement at all is admissible," has been disapproved by Ashworth, J., in the decision reported in Lachman Das v. Ram Prasad (6), as not being the correct law. The learned Judge says at p. 685 (of 49 All.) that evidence in any shape cannot be admitted for the purpose of showing that there was no agreement at all or, in other words, that a deed was meant to be inoperative. If this be the correct view, I am afraid that several cases which have arisen in India wherein deeds of various kinds have been held to be nominal or sham transactions or intended to be inoperative on the strength of proof adduced in the shape of oral evidence and surrounding circumstances should be deemed to have been not rightly decided. With great respect, I have to dissent from the view expressed by the learned Judge in the aforesaid case.

In the case reported in Pertab Chander Ghose v. Mohendranath Purkait (7), the Privy Council have held that a tenant, who had executed a kabuliyat containing a stipulation which the landlord had told him would not be enforced could not be held to have assented to it and the kabuliyat was not the real agreement between the parties and the plaintiff could not sue upon it. This principle was followed by the Bombay High Court in the case reported in Navalbai v. Sivubai (8). Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., after referring to a relevant passage in the aforesaid Privy Council decision, observes at p. 763 as follows :

"So in this case if the plaintiffs were told that the document which in form is a sale deed, would not be enforced as such against them and on the faith of that representation Hariba executed the document, then the sale deed cannot be upheld as against him or the plaintiffs as a sale deed."

In the case reported in Ramdhani v. Kewal Mani, A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 156, it is observed that the authorities establish that though evidence to vary the terms of an agreement in writing is not admissible, yet evidence to show that there is not an agreement at all is admissible. The decisions in Pym v. Campbell (4) and Baijnath Singh v. Vally Mahomad Hajee Abba (5) have been cited and considered as authorities for the aforesaid principle. These decisions are in my opinion applicable to the facts and circumstances of the present case. There is an indication in the decision reported in Appa Dhond v. Babaji Krishnaji (9), that proof is permissible even where a deed is attacked as partly genuine and partly not genuine. Sir Macleod, C. J., 4. (1856) 6 E & B 370=25 L J Q B 277.

5. A I R 1925 P C 75=86 I C 392=3 Rang 106 (P C).

6. A I R 1927 All 422=100 I C 1029=49 All 680.

7. (1890) 17 Cal 291=16 1 A 233 (P C).

8. (1906) 8 Bom L R 761.

9. A I R 1922 Bom 107=64 I C 364=46 Bom. 85.

has expressed his view on this point at p. 87 as follows :

" But though the Courts have in the past recognized that the ostensible owner in a benami transaction can be ordered to restore the property to its original owner, I for my part would certainly not be willing to extend that doctrine and to hold that a transaction can be partly genuine and partly unreal, unless there are very strong reasons for obliging the Court to come to such a conclusion."

In view of all the aforesaid authorities, it should be held that the oral evidence let in by the plaintiff in this case is admissible and cannot be deemed to be obnoxious to the provisions of S. 92, Evidence Act.

As I have already observed, this is not a case where oral evidence is sought to be adduced for proving that the deed is operative not in the manner set forth therein, but in a different manner as settled by a contemporaneous oral agreement. Such a case would be one of substituting a new and different contract for the one expressed in writing. The plaintiff in the present case does not say that Ex. 1 should be held to be operative not as it purports to be but in a different manner or as a different kind of contract or grant. Such a plea would not be open to her and no evidence can be adduced to substantiate that plea. This is the principle of the decisions in Sangira Mallappa v. Ramappa (10) and Mottayappan v. Palani Goundan (11). This is the view which my learned brother Curgenvén, J., has expressed in the decision in D. Lakshmi Ayya v. C. Murahari (12). Similarly in Afar v. Surja Kumar Ghose (13) evidence to prove that the real intention of the parties was something at variance with one of the terms of the contract and that that term should be enforced in the manner intended but not in the manner expressed, was held to be inadmissible. These cases have really no application to the present case, in view of the findings of fact set forth above.

I uphold the finding of the lower Court, that the deed Ex. 1 was never intended to be acted upon as a maintenance deed. If it was not meant to be really operative as between the parties and to be acted upon, then it is virtually a sham and would not be an effective bar to the present claim of the plaintiff.

It follows therefore that the plaintiff is not bound to claim only the profits of Andiyur village provided for her in Ex. 1 on account of the arrears of maintenance now claimed by her. It is left to the discretion of the Court to fix a proper and adequate rate of maintenance having due regard to all the circumstances of the case. (The judgment then discussed the lower Court's findings and concluded). I consider that the rate allowed is moderate and perfectly reasonable. In this view, no higher rate can be allowed to the plaintiff as claimed by her in the memorandum of objections. In the result, I would dismiss both the appeal and the memorandum of objections with costs.

Curgenvén, J.—I confess to having felt some hesitation in deciding whether the view of this case taken by the lower Court and by my learned brother is justified by the evidence ; that is to say, whether the plaintiff's claim to arrears of maintenance can be allowed in spite of the provisions of the maintenance deed, or what is in form a maintenance deed, Ex. 1.

I fully agree that it is clear from all the surrounding facts—the removal of the plaintiff's husband, Ramalinga Mudaliar, to his brother Somasundara's house in spite of the opposition of his wife and others, the extreme and almost indecent haste with which the maintenance deed was put through, although there is no reason to suppose that any claim of this character was made upon Somasundara or any wish expressed for such provision, the state of distress and seclusion in which the widow must have been at the time, the gross inadequacy of the provision made for her in the deed, the abstention of the plaintiff from availing herself of the maintenance so provided—that this is not a case of voluntary acceptance after discussion of the terms of the provision made. It is quite evident that Somasundara was a masterful personality, that he intended to have things all his own way, and that he succeeded in imposing his will upon his brother's widow and such advisers as may have been available to her at the time. It is also pretty clear that he procured the execution of Ex. 1 with a view to avoid claims being made upon

10. (1910) 34 Bom 59=4 I C 257.

11. (1915) 38 Mad 226=20 I C 924.

12. A I R 1930 Mad 547=128 I C 512.

13. (1911) 7 I C 812.

him at some later date when the plaintiff perhaps would be in a better position to assert them—whether such claims might take the form of an allegation of divided status or of a demand for maintenance commensurate in amount to the whole value of the estate. There are sufficient indications to justify the conclusion that to no part of the document can the plaintiff have given her free consent except indeed to the concession to her of the jewels which are now claimed as her own. So far I have no hesitation in accepting the conclusions of the learned Subordinate Judge. My only doubt has been whether all these circumstances are not equally compatible with the theory, not that the document was intended by the parties to be inoperative but that the plaintiff was compelled to execute it by the exertion of undue influence on the part of Somasundara. It seems clear that if the plaintiff wants to establish her version of the circumstances she must exclude this possible alternative, because it would have required her to get the deed set aside before she could make an independent claim to arrears of maintenance, and since the period of three years allowed under Art. 91, Lim. Act, has long since expired this form of relief would have been closed to her. It has in fact been suggested on behalf of the appellants that the plaintiff has been forced to make out that the deed was nominal in order to get over the difficulty created by limitation.

It is necessary therefore to decide specifically that the document was really intended by the parties to it to be nominal and that the theory that the plaintiff was so influenced by her brother-in-law as to execute it as an acceptance of his terms is not a true explanation of the evidence. As to this I think in the first place that quite a plausible reason has been given for inserting the maintenance provisions in the document. The brothers had been living apart, and so far as external indications went it looks as if quite a good case for separation in status having occurred might have been made. The allegation that Somasundaram was uneasy upon this score is very probably true and is borne out by the express recital in the document that he and Ramalinga had been living as members of one and the same undivided family. He was therefore anxious to make the widow subscribe to a declaration of this character, without making it appear this was the sole purpose of the document obtained from her. As to the extreme inadequacy of the provision made, my learned brother is a better judge of this than I am and I am prepared to accept his view that it reveals the sham character of the document rather than that the plaintiff's consent was extorted. The evidence relating to the house provided for the widow is then said to betray the real truth, because in the first place it was so situated that she could not with any self respect live in it and in the second, Somasundara actually leased it for a period of three years after the maintenance deed had been executed.

It is clear that he must at least have known that she would never want to occupy it. Lastly, there is the circumstance that Somasundara kept the document in his own possession, which is easily understood if he looked upon it merely as a declaration that he and his brother had been undivided in status. We have to read the oral evidence in the light of these considerations. It is true, as is pointed out for the appellants, that not much of it can be said to come from an independent source. It is to be regretted I think that the plaintiff herself should have been examined on commission. Such a course, especially in a claim of this magnitude, ought very rarely to be allowed and I can see no good reason why this lady should not at least have given her evidence direct to the Court even if it had to be taken in chambers. As matters stand, the trial Court was deprived of the opportunity of seeing the witness depose and of recording its impressions of her demeanour. (The judgment then discusses the evidence and proceeds.) On the whole I think that there are sufficient grounds for holding that the finding of fact reached by the learned trial Judge is correct.

On the question of application of S. 92, Evidence Act, it is to be observed that Ex. 1 compromises, or purports to comprise, three matters, a declaration of status, a release by Somasundara of any rights he may possess in the jewels, etc. and a provision for maintenance. The declaration of status is a mere recital and is not in the form at any rate of a contract or of a term in a contract, and I do not think that for the purpose of applying S. 92 it has to be so regarded. As regards the jewels, etc., it is not denied that the plaintiff was allowed to retain these articles. It is argued that they were in fact her own property and that the provision was only inserted in order to lend an appearance of completeness to the document as a settlement of all her claims. It would have been better if the title of the plaintiff to these articles had been more explicitly examined at the trial, but I think there can be little doubt that, possibly, with some trivial exceptions, they formed her own stridhanam property. It is significant that in the ante-adoption agreement subsequently entered into between defendant 2 and defendant 3's natural father (Ex. C) there is a clause stating that "as Janaki Ammal's (defendant 2's) jewels, gold vessels, etc., silver vessels, etc., and stridhana properties belong to her exclusively and as Somasundara Mudaliar Avargal's estate has no right whatsoever thereto, the adopted boy has no right or concern whatsoever therein," and this was probably how matters stood in the case of the plaintiff also. I agree therefore that this term of the document may be treated as nominal equally with the provision for maintenance. If so, I think it is clear that the case reduces itself to one of a wholly nominal contract, and the learned Advocate-General has confessed himself unable to contend that S. 92 can be applied to such a document; and as my learned brother has shown, there is no legal obstacle in the way of proving it to be a sham. Such proof having been adduced, the way lies open to the plaintiff to claim arrears of maintenance irrespective of the terms of the deed. I agree that the rate of maintenance fixed by the lower Court should be accepted and that the appeal and the memorandum of objections should be dismissed with costs. We certify for two sets of fees in the appeal.

P.R.S./M.N.

*Appeal dismissed.A. I. R. 1933 Madras 54VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.
Rajagopala Ayyar—Appellant.

v.

S. Adinarayana Chettiar and another —Respondents.Appeal No. 305 of 1931, Decided on 27th July 1932, against order of Sub-
Judge, Madura, in E. A. No. 909 of 1930.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 89—Mortgage decree against A and B directing sale of A's interest first and B's interest in case of deficiency—A's interest sold and he applied under O. 21, R. 90—B's interest sold for deficiency—B applied under O. 21, R. 89—A's application rejected—B's application was competent and was not barred by A's making his application.

A mortgagee decree was passed against a father and son ordering that the father's interest in the property should be first sold and then if any balance remained due the son's interest was to be sold. The father's interest was sold and for the balance the son's interest was also sold which more than satisfied the decree. The father had applied for setting aside the sale under O. 21, R. 90 and the application was pending when the son's interest was sold. The son deposited the balance due after sale of the father's interest and the solatium applied for setting aside the sale of his interest under O. 21, R. 89. The father's application was subsequently rejected.

Held: that the father's application was no bar to the maintainability and granting of the son's application and the liability of the son's interest was sufficiently defined in the decree to enable him to apply under proviso to O. 21, R. 89. [P 55 C 2]

K.P. Mahadeva Ayyar—for Appellant.K. V. Sesha Ayyangar and S. Ranga Raja Ayyangar—for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The mortgage decree was passed against the father and the son. It was provided both by the preliminary and the final decrees, that the father's interest in the properties mortgaged should be proceeded against first and only in the event of the decree still remaining unsatisfied, the son's interest should be sold. It is no use contending that a joint decree was passed; for the decree makes defendant 2's share in the property liable only when defendant 1's share is found insufficient. Thus, the decree fixes the measure of defendant 2's liability although as Mr. Mahadeva Ayyar, for the appellant (the auction-purchaser) contends, neither is the proportion fixed nor is the actual sum specified. But the decree, all the same, makes it clear that the son's liability is only for the portion remaining due after the father's share is sold. I fail to see how the facts relied upon by Mr. Mahadeva Ayyar militate against the view that the extent of the son's liability is defined by the decree. The rights of the parties must be taken to be governed by the decrees which have now become final. Why the decrees came to be passed in that way, it would be idle to inquire.

Now let us look at the facts that gave rise to the application. The father's share in the family property was sold in execution and fetched a certain sum. The balance, which after that amount was credited, was still due under the decree was Rs. 2,000 odd. To realize that sum, the son's share was sold and fetched Rs. 7,510. Thereupon, he paid into Court Rs. 2,000 odd referred to above along with the additional sum specified in O. 21, R. 89 and applied under that rule to have the sale of his share set aside. The auction-purchaser's contention is that the application made by the son, without his depositing the full amount of the decree, was bad. The son is protected by the proviso to R. 89 which was added by way of amendment and which reads thus:

"Provided that where the immovable property sold is liable to discharge a portion of the decree debt the payment under Cl. (b) of this sub-rule need not exceed such amount as under the decree the owner of the property is liable to pay."

The argument is, that at the very passing of the decree, the extent of the liability must be specified either in the terms of the sum payable or as a fixed fraction of the whole amount. There is nothing in the rule countenancing the contention, and I therefore reject it. Next it is contended that the father's act in applying under R. 90 to set aside the sale of his interest, should be held to be a bar preventing the son from applying under R. 89. The father's application was rejected by the lower Court and the appeal filed by him has also been withdrawn and we have just made an order dismissing that appeal. Was the son bound to wait till the father's application was disposed of? In that case the son would be met with the plea that his application was out of time. Mr. Mahadeva Ayyar when pressed, has had to concede that if his view be correct the son would be without a remedy. The son could not apply, if the appellant's contention be right, when his father's application was pending, as at that time it was not definitely known whether the sale of the father's interest would be upheld or not; if, on the other hand, the son waited till his father's application was disposed of, he would be too late and his application should be rejected on that ground. Thus, according to the appellant, because the father chose to apply under R. 90, the son should be deprived of his right. That is the position taken up, but the son's rights cannot be made to depend upon the conduct of his co-judgment-debtor. It would no doubt be quite a different matter, if in the event the sale of the father's interest had been set aside. In that case, under the very terms of the decree the son would be liable to pay a larger amount than he has chosen to deposit under R. 89; but that is not what has happened and I must therefore uphold the lower Court's order and dismiss the appeal with costs of the son (defendant 2).

The appellant (the auction-purchaser) will be at liberty to draw out the price he paid, namely, Rs. 7,510 along with the 5 per cent deposited by the son and interest, if any, on these sums standing to the credit of the proceeding.

Reilly, J.—I agree that defendant 2 made his deposit within the meaning of the new proviso to R. 89, O. 21, Civil P. C. His undivided share of the property was liable at the time it was put for sale in execution to a determined part of the decree-debt, and it was put up for sale to realize that part of the decree-debt. He deposited that part of the decree-debt with the addition of poundage and the 5 per cent due to the auction-purchaser. In consequence of the curious way in which the decree was framed he has fortunately for himself been able to come within the meaning of the proviso. I agree that this appeal must be dismissed with costs as proposed.

P.R.S./M.N. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 55

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Tadepalli Sriramulu and others—
Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

*The Firm of Kollipara Sriramulu, Kollipara Venkata Ramachandrayya and another—*Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1148 of 1928, Decided on 11th August 1932.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 5 (3)—Dismissal of applications for making final decree does not bar subsequent application—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 9, R. 4.

The previous dismissals of the applications for making a preliminary mortgage decree final for non-payment of process fees does not make the Court functus officio to pass a final decree on a subsequent application. What was dismissed was merely the application for final decree and not the suit itself and the applications which are not one in execution can be made again under O. 9, R. 4: A I R 1921 Mad 795 and A I R 1924 P C 198. Rel. on: A I R 1922 Mad 65; 35 All 331 and A I R 1925 All 622. Inf.

[P 56 C 1, 2]

B. Somayya—for Appellants.

P. Venkataramana Rao and P. V. Rajamannar—for Respondents.

Jackson, J.—This is a class of a case which has given Courts considerable trouble. The present defendant 1 obtained a preliminary decree upon a mortgage against the father of the present plaintiffs. There then followed these applications for a final decree:

Ex. A. Steps not taken . . . Dismissed.

" B. Dismissed for failure to pay batta.

" C. Dismissed.

" D. 29th September 1919. Order on 14th November 1919.

The plaintiffs have brought a suit to set aside the consequent sale on the plea that when the Court passed orders upon Ex. D, it had already dismissed the suit and was functus officio. The lower appellate Court has held that the Court's final decree was not made without jurisdiction and plaintiffs appeal. In this case it is a pure assumption that the suit was dismissed, and there is no reason to suppose that the Court really intended anything of the sort. In Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Balmakund Marwari (1), where the Judge actually used the phrase "the suit is dismissed for want of further prosecution," he explained that the object of dismissal "had not been to discharge or vacate the appellate decree." And as pointed out by the Judicial Committee in that case he would have no jurisdiction to dismiss the suit:

"The parties have on the making of the (preliminary) decree acquired rights which are fixed unless the decree is varied."

All that the Munsif did in the present case was to dismiss the applications for a final decree because batta had not been paid. Before its amendment in 1st September 1931, there was no provision in O. 34, R. 5 (3) for serving notice on parties; and a Court dismissing an application for a final decree on the ground of nonpayment of batta for serving notice was acting under its inherent and not under any statutory power. It arrogates to itself the right to dismiss an application filed under O. 34, R. 5 (3). It is difficult to see how this peculiar action can be construed to be the dismissal of the suit itself, which as pointed out by the Judicial Committee is not within the power of the Court. A Court will not ordinarily be presumed to do an illegality. It seems better to follow the face of the record and to hold that the Court successively dismissed applications for a final decree. Such applications as observed by Cargenven, J., in Venkatarama v. Marudachala, A. I. R. 1931 Mad. 795, are not applications in execution, and by force of S. 141, Civil P. C., are governed by O. 9 and O. 17 as though they are suits. Under O. 9, R. 2 the Court dismisses the "suit," here, the applications, for non-service. Then under O. 9, R. 4 the plaintiff may bring a fresh "suit," here, put in a fresh application. There is then no need for the plaintiff to get the previous order of dismissal set aside: M. Venkatiah v. Venkata Subbiah (2), upon which the appellant strongly relies lays down that the previous order is not ultra vires, though it may be erroneous.

To this we entirely defer, and think it is a dangerous doctrine that the judicial acts of Courts can be treated as mere nullities, and of no effect whatsoever. It was for this reason that this Court declined to interfere in revision in Sreeramulu v. Nagabhushanam (3). We also think it dangerous to carry the principle that a Court may rectify mistakes inadvertently made beyond the ambit of the facts in Debi Baksh Singh v. Habib Shah (4), and should hesitate to say, as in Jodha Singh v. Gokaran Das Pande (5), that a Court can revoke its own order of dismissal. But the line of reasoning in Venkatarama v. Marudachala, A. I. R. 1931 Mad. 795, makes revocation unnecessary. The orders of dismissal, Exs. A, B and C, stand as good orders, but plaintiff has in O. 9, R. 4, a locus penitentiae which gives room for a fresh application. It may be added that this is no artificial way of avoiding a hard case, but runs with the real facts of the situation. The Court when it dismissed the applications had no real intention of dismissing the suit and was only acting in terrorem as said in

2. A I R 1922 Mad 65=69 I C 366.

3. A I R 1928 Mad 963=112 I C 19.

4. (1913) 35 All 331=40 I A 150=16 O C 194=19 I C 526 (P C).

5. A I R 1925 All 622=57 I C 225=47 All 546.

1. A I R 1924 P C 198=81 I C 747=51 I A 321=4 Pat 61 P C.

Lachmi Narain v. Balmakund (1), to induce plaintiff to pay process fees; and when plaintiff put in a fresh application it was precisely what the Court expected. Artificially is imported by the assumption that the Court deliberately dismissed the whole suit, and rendered itself functus officio. Accordingly the appeal is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 57

PANDALAI, J.

M. Chengayya Pantulu—Petitioner.

v.

Medarametla Kottayya and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. Nos. 1734 to 1736 of 1928, Decided on 18th August 1932.

(a) Hindu Religious Endowments Act, (1 of 1925), S. 53 (4)—Scheme before Act—Application under S. 53 (4) lies—Hindu Religious Endowments Act (1925), S. 71.

Applications under S. 53 (4) do lie in respect of schemes settled by Courts before the Act as well as in respect of schemes settled subsequently: A I R 1929 Mad 322 held obiter and not Foll. [P 57 C 2]

(b) Madras Religious Endowments Act (1925), S. 53 (4)—Applications can be continued even after passing of Act (11 of 1927) without payment of further court-fee—Madras Religious Endowments Act (1927), Ss. 7 (1) and 57 (4).

Applications under S. 53 (4), Act 1 of 1925, are not rendered incompetent of continuance on the passing of Act 11 of 1927 inasmuch as there is nothing inconsistent in the provisions of the later Act with continuing the applications already filed. No further court-fee also is necessary for such continuance. [P 58 C 2]

(c) Interpretation of Statutes—Repealing Act does not affect proceedings instituted under previous Act unless expressly provided—Madras General Clauses Act (1891), S. 8 (f).

A repealing Act shall not affect any legal proceeding in respect of any rights etc., acquired beforehand and such legal proceeding may be continued as if the repealing Act had not been passed subject to there being nothing in the repealing Act to express a contrary intention.

[P 58 C 2]

P. Venkataramana Rao—for Petitioner.

U. S. Narasimhachariar—for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—These petitions by the Hindu Religious Endowments Board arise from applications under S. 53, Cl. 4, Act 1 of 1925, the first Hindu Religious Endowments Act which was afterwards repealed by Act 2 of 1927. The applications were severally for the modification of schemes which had been settled in respect of three temples by the civil Courts and were made on 3rd January 1927 when the first Act was still in force. They were opposed by the counter-petitioners concerned and were dismissed by the learned District Judge on a preliminary point. That point is that applications under S. 53 (4) will not lie in respect of schemes settled by Courts before the Act and will lie only in respect of schemes settled subsequently. For this opinion the learned Judge relied on a decision of Sreenivasa Ayyangar, J., in Chinnan v. Sundaresa, A. I. R. 1929 Mad. 322. That was not a decision on this point, although there is an observation to the effect that the scheme under consideration in that case was of an earlier date than the Act of 1927 and therefore S. 75 of that Act corresponding to S. 71 of the Act of 1925 does not apply to the scheme. The matter before the learned Judge arose out of an application before the Subordinate Judge of Cuddalore made under "the liberty to apply" clause in a scheme which had been framed and the Subordinate Judge in that application removed the petitioner, trustee. The trustee brought up the matter to this Court and submitted that the "liberty to apply" clause in pursuance of which proceedings had originated against him was itself ultra vires and his dismissal was therefore illegal. With this argument the learned Judge concurred. It was then argued for the other side that under the Religious Endowments Act, which had been enacted while the proceedings against the petitioner were pending, whatever may have been the inherent fault of schemes passed before the Act they had all been cured and validated by S. 71 of the Act of 1925, corresponding to S. 75 of the Act of 1927. The true answer to this, I venture to think, was that the Religious Endowments Act did not purport to do anything of the kind. All that the above section meant was that schemes passed by the civil Courts before the Act must be deemed to have been passed under the Act. Mark why. In order that they may be dealt with under the Act inter alia under S. 53 of the Act of 1925 (S. 57 of the Act of 1927). There was no question of validation or invalidation of any clause or provision in any scheme which was ultra vires of the Court. But the answer given by the learned Judge was that S. 75 of the Act of 1927 applied only to schemes settled after that Act. I cannot convince myself that the above observation was the result of a deliberate opinion. In any case I am not able to agree with it. Ss. 53, Cls. 4 and 71 of the Act of 1925, are clear and explicit. S. 53, Cl. 4 refers inter alia to any scheme of administration which under S. 71 is deemed to be a scheme settled under the Act; and it says that all such schemes may be modified or cancelled by the Court on the application of the Board. S. 71 says that "where the administration of a religious endowment is governed by any scheme settled under S. 92, Civil P. C., such scheme shall be deemed to be a scheme settled under this Act, and such scheme may be modified or cancelled in the manner provided by this Act," in other words, may be modified or cancelled by the procedure laid down in S. 53. The reference in S. 71 to schemes settled under S. 92, can apply only to schemes settled before the Act for the reason that under S. 69 (2) of the Act future suits under S. 92, Civil P. C., are prohibited and that section is to have no application to any suit claiming any relief in respect of the administration or management of a religious endowment and no such suits can be brought except under the Act. Therefore the schemes settled by Courts under S. 92 referred to in the section must be only those which had been already settled. To construe the section otherwise would be to stultify the beneficent effect of the scheme of the Act, by making it possible for the very thing to be done which the Act was intended to prevent, viz., unending litigation about the management of religious endowments. I have no hesitation in thinking that the objection by which the learned District Judge thought himself bound does not exist.

Another point raised in this Court for the respondents is that although these applications may have been competent at the time when they were presented, i.e., on 3rd January 1927, yet as soon as Act 2 of 1927 was passed, i.e., on 19th January 1927, their continuance became incompetent because in the corresponding section in the new Act, viz., S. 57 (4), it is provided that schemes of administration which under S. 75 are deemed to be schemes settled under the Act, i.e. schemes settled by a Court under S. 92 must be modified or cancelled only by suit and not otherwise, instead of by application as was provided in S. 53 (4) of the earlier Act. The learned Judge himself was not inclined to accede to this objection, because he thought that there was nothing under the Act of 1927 to prevent the old applications being continued, if necessary, by payment of additional court-fees.

The respondent's learned advocate canvassed this opinion of the learned Judge and says that after the new Act it would be illegal to continue the old applications. The argument is as follows: No doubt S. 8 (f), Madras General Clauses Act, says that a repealing Act shall not affect any legal proceeding in respect of any rights, etc., acquired beforehand and that such legal proceeding may be continued as if the repealing Act had not been passed. But this is subject according to S. 4 to there being nothing in the repealing Act to express a contrary intention. There is a contrary intention expressed in the Religious Endowments Act of 1927 to the effect that modifications and cancellation of schemes of administration can only take place by suit and not otherwise. Therefore to allow the old applications to continue is contrary to S. 75 (4). The whole of this argument is based upon a misapprehension because S. 75 of the Act of 1927 was certainly not intended to be retrospective and can apply only to proceedings taken after it came into force. It is one thing to say that under the Act of 1927 the modification of a scheme can be obtained only by a suit. It is another thing to say that by reason of that section it is illegal to continue applications which had already been legally filed. The only provision in the Act of 1927 about continuation of proceedings begun under the Act of 1925 is S. 7 (2). It says that all proceedings taken under the earlier Act may be continued after that Act in so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act. There is nothing in S. 75 (4) which is inconsistent with continuing the application presented already because as already said all that S. 75 says is that after the new Act the proceedings for modification must be begun by way of suit. There being nothing in the Act which expresses any contrary intention, the ordinary rule of interpreting repealing legislation holds especially in view of S. 7 (2). The learned Judge's view on this point was right. But it is necessary to point out that it is not necessary to convert these applications into suits; nor as far as I can see is there any question of court-fees. The applications must be heard and decided on the footing that they were validly presented and and that they have been improperly dismissed.

The respondent's advocate wanted to raise a question that one of the reliefs claimed in the petition was not available in these proceedings. That does not now arise and may be raised before the lower Court. The order of the lower Court is set aside and the petitions sent back to the District Court for disposal according to law. The petitioner will have his costs in the three petitions.

P.R.S./M.N. Petitions allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 59

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

Chairman, Chingleput Municipality—
Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

M. Murugesu Mudaliar and others—
Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 1088 to 1092 of 1930, Decided on 28th July 1932.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11—Decision against Municipal Council is binding against its chairman—Madras District Municipalities Act (1924), S. 22.

A decision in a former suit obtained against the Municipal Council is binding on its chairman who is the chief functionary of the Council. For the purpose of applying the principle of res judicata the Municipal Council and its chairman cannot be viewed as two independent entities.

[P 61 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11—Erroneous decision on point of law is not res judicata—But subsequent decision cannot affect rights under former decision.

An erroneous decision on a question of law in a previous suit would not be a bar in a subsequent suit between the same parties, and a different decision may be given on that question but the decision so given should not in any way affect the operation of the former decree or take away any rights acquired by the parties thereunder: 30 Mad 461 and A I R 1923 Cal 777, Foll.

[P 61 C 1]

*V. Ramaswami Ayyar—*for Appellant.

*T. V. Muthukrishna Ayyar—*for Respondents.

Judgment.—These five appeals have been preferred by the Chairman of the Chingleput Municipality and arise out of five suits filed by him for a declaration that the defendants are liable to take annual licences in respect of their rice mills and for payment of licence fees under S. 249, Madras District Municipalities Act of 1920. The main plea of the defendants is that the suits are barred by res judicata by reason of the decision in a batch of former suits filed by them against the Municipal Council, Chingleput, represented by its Chairman, for a declaration that in respect of all these rice mills no annual license was necessary under S. 249 of the Act and for a permanent injunction restraining the Municipal Council from compelling the plaintiffs to take out licenses either by threat of prosecution or otherwise. Ex. 1 is a certified copy of the judgment in the former suits. It is clear that the declaration and injunction asked for in those suits have been granted against the Municipal Council, Chingleput. The identical question raised in the present suits was decided in the former suits, and both the Courts below have held that according to the rule and principle of res judicata the relief asked for by the Municipal Chairman in the present suits cannot be granted. The correctness of that view is challenged in these second appeals.

The question for consideration is whether a decision of a civil Court which has become final as against the Municipal Council of Chingleput in respect of the subject-matter of the present suits will operate as res judicata in these suits and the main contention urged by the learned advocate for the appellant, is that the former suits having been laid against the Municipal Council and not against the Municipal Chairman, the decision in those suits would not operate as res judicata in the present suits. The point for consideration is whether there is legal identity of parties in the two suits having due regard to the whole scheme of the District Municipalities Act and the relevant provisions thereof. The exact relationship between the Municipal Council and its Chairman is not defined in the Act, but it must be a matter of inference. According to S. 4 of the Act, the Local Government has the power to constitute any town, village, or other station as a Municipality. The Municipal Council should be a body corporate and be vested with the capacity of suing or being sued in its corporate name, according to sub-S. 2, S. 6 of the Act. S. 19 says that the Municipal administration shall vest in the Council and according to S. 22 the Chairman shall be bound to give effect to every resolution of the Council, unless such resolution is modified, suspended or cancelled by a controlling authority. There seems to be no doubt that the chairman who is necessarily a member of the Council is its executive head. Certain special functions are assigned to the chairman under the Act, just as some other functions are assigned to the Municipal Council. The Municipal authorities charged with the carrying out of the provisions of this Act are stated to be a Council and its Chairman (S. 6, Cl. 1).

The functions of the chairman are specified in S. 13. As regards the filing of suits, the whole scheme of the Act clearly indicates that generally the Council as a corporate body has to sue and to be sued. But the chairman may institute and also prosecute any suit, only with the approval of the Council (vide S. 351, Cl. (g)). In spite of the fact that the chairman is invested with certain specific powers under the Act, there is nothing to show that he is an altogether independent functionary, and any powers which for the sake of convenience are vested in him have to be exercised on behalf of the Municipal Council which is a body corporate. The chairman as such can have no independent existence apart from the Council. That is clear from the provisions of S. 41 of the Act. If the Local Government should choose to dissolve or supersede a Council, the chairman who is a member of the Council could not have any independent locus standi as chairman. It is true that in the matter of demanding annual licenses to be taken in respect of the rice mills in question, the chairman has got the power under S. 249 of the Act to grant or refuse to grant such licences; but the foundation for the exercise of that power by the chairman is the resolution of the Council for the publication of a notification in the District Gazette and by beat of drum, that certain localities should not be used for any of the purposes specified in Sch. 5 without the chairman's licence. If a particular rice mill does not come within the place specified in the notification issued by the Council, the chairman has no power to grant or refuse to grant such licences in respect of it. Looking at the question in issue in the light of the aforesaid sections, it seems to me that if by a decision of the civil Court the Municipal Council is precluded from declaring that the rice mills of the present defendants are liable for the payment of the annual licence fees, the chairman as the executive head of the Council cannot demand the taking of a license in respect of such a mill and levy the annual licence fee. If the distinction in the functions assigned to the Council and its chairman should be an indication for the absence of legal identity between the two for the purposes of the rule of res judicata, I am constrained to observe that the result would be startling and anomalous.

Any decision obtained in a suit to which the Municipal Council is a party, which affects the rights of strangers may be ignored by the chairman or any other officer of the municipality, for the simple reason that the Council and not that particular officer was a party to that suit. It would never be the intention of the legislature, if regard be had to the whole scheme of the District Municipalities Act, to constitute the chairman, as an independent entity who would not be bound by any decision affecting the Municipal Council itself. There is a further circumstance adverted to by the learned District Judge which may also throw some light on this question. Any order of the chairman granting or refusing a licence under S. 249 is subject to appeal to the Municipal Council. It is the order of the Municipal Council passed in appeal that must be deemed to have been substituted for the order of the chairman. Having this in view, if the contention of Mr. Ramaswamy Ayyar is to be upheld, the result will be that the Municipal Council of Chingleput is precluded from ordering that these defendants should obtain annual licence in respect of the rice mills, but the chairman of this Council is free to enforce the taking of such licences. If the chairman passes such an order the aggrieved party has to appeal to this very Municipal Council and urge the decision in the former suits as a ground for setting aside the order of the chairman. This anomalous situation will arise by holding that the previous decision passed against the Municipal Council does not operate as res judicata. It cannot be said that for any act done by the chairman in pursuance of a power vested in him under the Act, a suit could not lie against the Municipal Council. The chairman carries out the provisions of the Act as a representative of the Municipal Council.

That being so, it does not stand to reason that if there is a binding decision as against the Municipal Council in respect of a matter affecting the rights of third parties, the chairman can do anything in order to abrogate the benefit which was obtained under such a decision. I have no hesitation in agreeing with the finding of both the Courts below, that the decision in the former suits obtained against the Municipal Council is binding on its chairman who is the chief functionary of the Council. For the purpose of applying the principle of res judicata, I do not think that the Municipal Council and its chairman can be viewed as two independent entities. I hold that there is the legal identity of parties and therefore the bar of res judicata exists. Mr. Ramaswamy Ayyar, the learned advocate for the appellant, contends that the decision in the former suits was based upon an erroneous view of law and therefore such a decision cannot operate as res judicata in the present suits. A number of authorities have been cited, but it is enough to refer to the decision in Mangalathammal v. Narayanaswami Ayyar (1), where the important qualification with which the proposition contended for by the appellant should be adopted has been laid down. An erroneous decision on a question of law in a previous suit would not be a bar in a subsequent suit between the same parties, and a different decision may be given on that question, but the decision so given should not in any way affect the operation of the former decree or take away any rights acquired by the parties thereunder.

The same view has been upheld in a decision relied upon by Mr. Muthukrishna Ayyar for the respondents, viz., Tairi Charan v. Kedar Nath (2). The effect of these pronouncements is that though the former decision may be deemed to have been based on a wrong view of law, the decision arrived at, i. e., the decree given, can in no way be affected by giving a different finding in a subsequent suit on the same question. That being so, the circumstance that the previous decision was based on an erroneous view of the law does not help the plaintiff in these suits. By reason of the declaration and perpetual injunction given in the former suits, it cannot be said that the relief asked for in the present suits is something not covered by the former decision. If the present suits should be decreed, the result would be the abrogation of the former decision which has been allowed to become final. The decision of the Courts below is correct and these second appeals are dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N. Appeals dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 61

PANDALAI, J.

Sattamuthu Chettiar—Petitioner.

v.

Abdul Kareem Maracayar—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 596 of 1929, Decided on 3rd August 1932.

(a) Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 35—Liability of indorser is subject to contract to contrary either express or implied—Father and major son partitioning—Father indorsing pro-note in son's favour as its result—Implied contract to contrary can be inferred.

The rule whereby the indorser of a negotiable instrument who indorses without restricting his liability in the endorsement by express words makes himself liable to the indorsee as surety for the amount of the instrument in case of dishonour is subject to there having been no contract to the contrary, i. e., that although the indorsement is ex facie unrestricted, the indorser as between himself and the indorsee, by agreement either express or to be inferred from the nature of the transaction, excluded personal liability to the latter. [P 62 C 1, 2]

Where a father as a result of a partition with his major son indorses a promissory note to the son and the maker defaults in payment, the father is not liable as a surety or otherwise by reason merely of the indorsement along with the maker: 5 Q B 475, Rel. on. [P 62 C 2]

(b) Partition—In partition of family property there cannot be guarantee of title.

Where at a partition family properties are divided and the parties being majors and able to look after themselves accept the properties allotted for their share of the assets, it is too much to say that there is as between them a covenant for title or guarantee of payment by strangers to the family. [P 63 C 1, 2]

S. Panchapagesa Sastri and K. R. Krishnaswami Ayyar—for Petitioner.

A. V. Viswanatha Sastri—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—The petitioner is the plaintiff. His suit was brought on a promissory note executed by defendant 1 in favour of the father of the plaintiff and defendants 2 to 4 and endorsed by the father to the plaintiff as one of the family assets allotted to the plaintiff on the latter's releasing his rights in the family properties. The only point now arising for consideration is whether the lower Court was right in dismissing the suit as against defendants 2 to 4, or whether it should have given a decree against them also on the ground alleged by the plaintiff that the father having indorsed the note to the plaintiff and the maker having defaulted payment, the father was himself personally responsible as the indorser and defendants 2 to 4 are liable as his legal representatives to the extent of his assets in their hands. The ground on which, while giving a decree against the maker of the note, defendant 1, the learned Judge in the Court below refused to give a decree against the assets of the father in the hands of defendants 2 to 4 is that the note was endorsed to the plaintiff as part of a partition, and it is to be presumed that the learned Judge thought that in those circumstances the personal liability of the indorser was negatived by the nature of the transaction.

1. (1907) 30 Mad 461=17 M L J 250.

2. A I R 1928 Cal 777 =56 Cal 723 (F B).

In this Court the petitioner's learned advocate has urged first, that under S. 35, Negotiable Instruments Act, the only way in which the father could have excluded personal liability as indorser of the note was by expressly endorsing it "without recourse" and that not having been done, it is not open to the Court to infer any other ground of exemption from liability. It was also urged that there was nothing in the nature of the transaction that the endorsement was part of a family partition wherefrom it may be inferred that the indorser intended to exclude personal liability.

On the first question the words of S. 35, Negotiable Instruments Act, are clear enough. It says that "in the absence of a contract to the contrary, whoever indorses and delivers a negotiable instrument before maturity, without in such indorsement expressly excluding or making conditional his own liability, is bound thereby to every subsequent holder in case of dishonour by the drawee, acceptor or maker to compensate such holder for any loss or damage by such dishonour, etc."

The words make it clear that the rule whereby the indorser of a negotiable instrument who indorses without restricting his liability in the endorsement by express words makes himself liable to the indorsee as surety for the amount of the instrument in case of dishonour is subject to there having been no contract to the contrary, i. e., that although the indorsement is ex facie unrestricted, the indorser as between himself and the indorsee, by agreement either express or to be inferred from the nature of the transaction, excluded personal liability to the latter. No Indian authority was cited on this point; but English authorities are ample. In Denton v. Peters (1), a partner indorsed to his co-partner a bill accepted by a person who was indebted to them for goods sold. On the debtor defaulting payment the indorsee brought a suit against the indorser and pleaded that the indorsement being on its face absolute and unrestricted he was entitled to a decree. But when it appeared that the parties had been partners and the indorsement was made to enable the plaintiff to collect the money from the debtor for their joint benefit, the Court held that the form of the indorsement notwithstanding, the defendant was not liable to the plaintiff. That decision was in 1870 before the Bills of Exchange Act. In Macdonald v. Whitefield (2), a case from Canada where the law on this point is the same as that of England, the directors of a company in order to make themselves personally liable to a bank from which the company was borrowing money made successive indorsements of the bill on which the money was borrowed. And the indorsements by one director to another and by him to a third and by him to a fourth and so on were on their face unconditional and unrestricted. But it was proved that the purpose of the indorsements and the arrangement in pursuance of which they were made was not that they might stand surety to each other but that they might all as between themselves and the bank be surety for the debt advanced to the company. On those facts it was held that far from the indorser being liable for the whole amount to his indorsee and that indorsee in his turn as indorser to his indorsee and so on, they were all liable equally to contribute to the debt if one of them had paid it. Lord Watson stated:

1. (1871) 5 Q B 475=23 L T 281.

2. (1884) 8 A C 733=52 L J P C 70=49 L T 466.

"It is a well-established rule of law that the whole facts and circumstances attendant upon the making, issue and transference of a bill or note may be legitimately referred to for the purpose of ascertaining the true relation to each other of the parties who put their signatures upon it either as makers or as indorsers, and that reasonable inferences derived from the facts and circumstances, are admitted to the effect of qualifying, altering or even inverting the relative liabilities which the law-merchant would otherwise assign to them."

This decision was in 1883 soon after the English Bills of Exchange Act. Nothing has been cited to show that these decisions which are of the highest authority are not good law according to S. 35, Negotiable Instruments Act. It follows that the lower Court was right in looking at the nature of the transaction to ascertain whether there was in fact any undertaking by the father of the plaintiff to stand guarantee for the payment of the note indorsed to the plaintiff.

It appears to me that the only answer possible upon the facts which are admitted is in the negative. The family was a trading family, the plaintiff was a son by the first wife of the father; and defendants 2 to 4, who are minors, are the children of the second wife. It was found necessary to effect a partition and the plaintiff was given a share. Thereupon he withdrew from the family by Ex. 1 which recites quite explicitly that he had no longer any rights in the family properties and took for his share the assets therein stated altogether amounting to Rs. 35,500. One of these assets was the suit note for Rs. 550 executed by a stranger, defendant 1, to the head of the family, the father. Besides this, there were four other notes, which were similarly indorsed, of the total value of Rs. 5,000, and the rest of the amount was made up of Rs. 18,950 paid in cash, Rs. 5000 by credit opened in the plaintiff's name in the firm at Negapatam and Rs. 11,000 secured by a promissory note given by the father. Having regard to the nature of this transaction it is impossible to understand how the father, who was handing over family assets, should have made himself personally liable—and he could only do so out of his own share of the family property—to the plaintiff in case any of the outstandings were not duly paid. Where at a partition family properties are divided and the parties, being majors and able to look after themselves accept the properties allotted for their share of the assets, it is too much to say that there is as between them a covenant for title or a guarantee of payment by strangers to the family. In my opinion the learned Judge drew the correct inference from the facts that there was no such undertaking between the plaintiff's father and himself.

It was urged that this question was res judicata by a decision given in respect of another promissory note on which the plaintiff succeeded in getting a decree against defendants 2 to 4. If the plaintiff was fortunate enough to get such a decree, I cannot deprive him of it, but certainly it is not res judicata in this case. The civil revision petition must be dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 63

RAMESAM AND WALSH, JJ.

Venkata Reddi—Appellant.

v.

T. V. Dorasami Pillai—Respondent.

Appeal No. 353 of 1928, Decided on 5th August 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Vellore, D/- 26th September 1928.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 20—Mortgage-decree for sale imposing personal liability in case of deficiency—Set off can be given even before sale—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 34, R. 6.

A mortgage decree for sale ordering that the mortgagor is liable for all the deficiency that may remain after the sale imposes a personal liability. If the sale realises nothing, he is liable for the whole amount. In such a case the mortgagee decree-holder need not necessarily wait till the sale is held to claim a set off in satisfaction of a money decree against him held by the mortgagor: 33 All 240, Rel on; 38 All 669 and A I R 1930 Rang 68, Dist. [P 64 C 2]

B. Somayya—for Appellant.

C. S. Venkatachariar—for Respondent.

Ramesam, J.—In this case the appellant before us is defendant 4 in O. S. No. 1 of 1926. The plaintiff obtained a decree in that suit for Rs. 4,214-0-4 towards peishcush and road cess. In O. S. No. 25-A of 1918 which was a suit for redemption of a mortgage the defendant obtained a final decree for Rs. 6,908-14-4. This final decree is a decree directing the sale of the mortgaged property and if there is any deficiency it should be paid by the plaintiff. In the connected appeal, No. 35 of 1931, we have held that that final decree should not have been amended by the Subordinate Judge of Chittoor and should remain as it was originally passed. The result is the mortgage decree is a decree for an amount which in the last resort may have to be paid personally by the plaintiff. In the petition against which this C. M. A. arises, E. A. 512 of 1928, defendant 4 seeks to set off the money decree against him in O. S. No. 1 of 1926 against the mortgage decree obtained by him and to stop all further proceedings for his arrest in E. P. No. 86 of 1928 in execution of O. S. No. 1 of 1926. The question of law that arises before us is whether the two decrees can be so set off against each other. O. 21, R. 20, now enacts:

"the provisions contained in Rr. 18 and 19 shall apply to decrees for sale in enforcement of a mortgage or charge."

This shows that the mere fact that the decrees in which the set off is sought are mortgage decrees or one of the two decrees is a mortgage decree, does not by itself amount to an objection to the set off claimed. I do not mean to say that there may not be some other objection. Without any other objection the mere fact that one of the decrees is a mortgage decree is not enough to refuse the set off. This is the view of the Allahabad High Court in Nagar Mal v. Ram Chand (1) and this was always the view of the Madras High Court prior to the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. But the decision in Nagar Mal v. Ram Chand (1) had to be considered and was distinguished in Sheo Shankar v. Chuni Lal (2). In that case the decree is a foreclosure decree which is of a nature giving simply an option to the mortgagor to redeem and if he does not, his right to redeem is simply foreclosed. It is not a decree to which ordinarily O. 21, R. 20 applies. Therefore that case is distinguishable. But I will observe that even in a decree for sale it may be that the property is worth much less than the amount of the decree and the mortgagor may find it convenient to allow the property to be sold and in such a case if he is not liable for the deficiency it cannot be said there is any decree for money against him and it may be proper to describe the decree as one giving an option like the decree for foreclosure. In Sheo

Shankar v. Chuni Lal (2) the person against whom the decree was sought to be set off was the purchaser of a portion only of the mortgaged property and he was under no personal liability. In such a case it may be said that he was filling a different character in the mortgage suit from the one in the decree sought to be set off. In the present case there is a personal decree against the plaintiff. By saying he is liable for all the deficiency that remain after the sale, the true character of his liability is known. If the sale realises nothing, he is liable for the whole amount. In such a case to say that the sale must first be held and only for the balance the judgment-debtor in the mortgage decree is personally liable is to look at the matter too technically and to cause unnecessary expense to the parties.

In such a case it may be very equitable and just to deduct the amount of the money decree from the mortgage decree and to permit execution for the balance only. The case in The Burma Oil Co. Ltd. v. Ma Tin (3) is also a case of a mortgage decree in which it is not clear that the mortgagor will be liable personally for the deficiency. In that case the decree at the time the question arose was only against the property and the decree provides for liberty to apply for a personal decree for the amount of the balance and one does not know how the application may end. On the actual facts I think that the decisions in The Burma Oil Co. Ltd. v. Ma Tin (3) and Sheo Shankar v. Chuni Lal (2) are correct; but they do not apply to the facts of the case before us. Therefore in this case there is no objection to the set off claimed. The set off is a satisfaction of the decree to that extent and if the balance after set off is paid, the whole decree must be regarded as satisfied. We now direct the Subordinate Judge of Vellore to proceed with the execution of the mortgage decree after setting off the money decree towards it and to proceed with the execution for the balance. The appellant will be entitled to his costs in appeal. In the Court below each party will bear its own costs.

Walsh, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

3. A I R 1930 Rang 68=120 I O 699=7 Rang 505.

1. (1911) 33 All 240=8 I C 835.

2. (1916) 33 All 669=36 I C 948.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 65 (1)

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

(Kovuru) Subbayya and others — Accused—Petitioners.

v.

Peta Veerayya—Complainant — Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 214 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 199 of 1932, Decided on 25th July 1932, against order of Second Class Magistrate, Pon-nuru, D/- 21st January 1932.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 162 — Statement to police during investigation of offence different from one under trial can be used by accused for cross-examination.

On behalf of the accused in an assault case the complainant can be cross-examined by confronting him with a statement which the complainant made to the police when they were investigating a theft case, a case different from the case of assault and when the case of assault was not under investigation by the police. When the statement has not been made in the course of investigating the offence in respect of which the trial is held, neither the main part of S. 162 nor the proviso has any application. [P 65 C 1, 2]

P. Satyanarayana Rao — for Petitioners.

K. Kottayya—for Opposite Party.

K. N. Ganapathi for Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Jackson, J.—The point raised in this revision case is whether on behalf of the accused in an assault case the complainant can be cross-examined by confronting him with a statement which the complainant made to the police when they were investigating a theft case, a case different from the case of assault. (The case of assault was not under investigation by the police.) A statement made to the police is as good evidence as a statement made to any other person save for certain exceptions to be found in the Evidence Act and in the Criminal Procedure Code. In S. 162, Criminal P. C., it is laid down that a statement made to the police in the course of an investigation of an offence cannot be used as evidence at any trial in respect of that offence, with the proviso that such a statement may be used by the accused to contradict a prosecution witness. But when the statement has not been made in the course of investigating the offence in respect of which the trial is held, neither the main part of S. 162 nor the proviso has any application.

If in an investigation of theft A says to the police that B and C beat him, that statement can be proved when D and E are being tried for assault, the trial in no way being in respect of the investigated theft. Though of course if in any way the assault had been under investigation by the police the statutory bar would apply. The Magistrate did wrong therefore to shut out this evidence. His mistake is apparently reading S. 162 as "disallowing all statements to police officers," as though there were a full stop after "for any purpose." But those words are clearly qualified by (for any purpose) "at any trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made." If it is sought to use the statement at a trial in respect of some offence which was not being investigated when the statement was made, there is no statutory bar whatsoever to its use. And of course the proviso only applies to such trials in which there is a statutory bar. The petition must be allowed and the Magistrate is ordered to proceed as directed herein.

P.R.S./M.N.

*Petition allowed.A. I. R. 1933 Madras 65 (2)

BARDSWELL, J.

Pulikonda Venkatasubbayya — Accused—Petitioner.

v.

Maddi Venkata Lakshmayya — Complainant—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 67 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 63 of 1932, Decided on 2nd August 1932, against order of Sub-Divl. Magistrate, Ongole, D/- 23rd December 1931.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 253—Complaint under certain sections—Charge under different section amounts to discharge under sections complained against—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 254.

The complaint in a case was one of offences punishable under Ss. 406, 409 and 477, I. P. C. The Magistrate framed a charge of an offence punishable under S. 204, I. P. C. But he did not formally discharge the accused in respect of the other offences.

Held: that his procedure amounted to a discharge of the accused in regard to the other offences. [P 66 C 1]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 254—Complaint under certain sections—Charge and acquittal under another—Retrial of charge ordered—Trying Magistrate cannot frame charge under sections complained against—Criminal trial.

In a complaint under certain sections the Magistrate framed a charge under a different section and acquitted the accused. In revision the case was remanded for retrial on the charge framed.

Held: that the retrying Magistrate was incompetent to frame a charge under one of the sections mentioned in the complaint: 31 Mad 543, Dist. [P 66 C 2]

V. L. Ethiraj and A. S. Sivakamianathan—for Petitioner.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

K. S. Jayarama Ayyar and G. Krishna Arya—for Opposite Party.

Order.—This is an application by the accused in C. C. No. 50 of 1931, on the file of the Subdivisional Magistrate, Ongole, for quashing the first head of the charge that has been framed against him, of an offence punishable under S. 409, I. P. C. The complaint in this case was one of offences punishable under Ss. 406, 409 and 477, I. P. C. The Magistrate who first heard the case framed a charge of an offence punishable S. 204, I. P. C. He did not formally discharge the accused in respect of the other offences, but it is well established that his procedure in framing a charge only as to an offence under S. 204, I. P. C. amounted to a discharge of the accused in regard to them. In the end the Magistrate acquitted the accused, but on revision this Court set aside the acquittal and ordered a retrial.

It is contended for the accused-petitioner that the Magistrate who is now hearing the case could not legally frame a charge under S. 409, I. P. C. On the other side it is contended that the law enables him so to do. In support of this latter contention Emperor v. Chinna-kaliappa Goundan (1) and In re. Pon-nuswami Goundan (2) are quoted, but neither of these cases is directly in point as they both deal with complaints which have been dismissed under S. 203, Criminal P. C. The ruling that is most favourable to the contention that the head of charge now under consideration was passed with jurisdiction is that in Emperor v. Maheswara Kondaya (3), in which it was held that it is competent for a Magistrate who has discharged an accused under S. 253, Criminal P. C., to take fresh proceedings and issue processes against the person discharged in respect of the same offence without such order being set aside by a higher Court.

But the facts of that case can be distinguished from those of the case now under notice on two grounds. One is that the case had never reached the final stage of a judgment being written, and the other, which is the more important one, is that there had been no order from a revisional authority as to what should be the nature of the further proceedings. Now in his order in Cr. R. C. No. 116 of 1931, setting aside the acquittal of the petitioner accused, Lakshmana Rao, J., has given as his grounds for setting aside the acquittal that it has been found that the accused might be lawfully compelled to produce the document as evidence in Court and that, on the further finding that he had secreted it the order of acquittal was unsustainable. I must agree with the learned Public Prosecutor that his language shows that he intended no more than that the case should be retried in respect of the charge under S. 204, and that he did not mean that the case was to be reopened with respect to any other offence that was indicated by the complaint. I would hold then that the action of the Magistrate in framing the head of charge now under consideration cannot be justified by the ruling in Emperor v. Maheswara Kondaya (3), but that it was an action which he was not competent to take.

Two other decisions have been called to my attention, namely, those in Krishna Reddi v. Subbamma (4) and Gandi Appa Razu v. Emperor (5). Neither of these is directly in point. They decide that when a Magistrate has acquitted a person of a charge of an offence which the Magistrate was competent to try, and has at the same time by implication discharged him in respect of an offence triable only by a Court of Session, a Sessions Judge has power to order his committal in respect of the offence of which he has been so discharged. As I find that by the order of this Court on revision the Magistrate was limited to retrying the petitioner accused only for an offence punishable under S. 204, I. P. C., I quash the head of charge now framed against him under S. 409, I. P. C., and direct that his trial

1. (1906) 29 Mad 126=16 M L J 79=3 Cr L J 274 (F B).

2. A I R 1932 Mad 369=(1932) Cr C 353=137 I C 317=55 Mad 622 (F B).

3. (1908) 31 Mad 543=9 Cr L J 80.

4. (1901) 24 Mad 136=2 Weir 544.

5. A I R 1920 Mad 94=54 I C 491=21 Cr L J 91=43 Mad 330.

proceed only with reference to the other head of charge.

P.R.S./M.N.

Charge quashed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 67 (1)

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

(Chilukuri) Ramayya — Accused — Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 480 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 446 of 1932, Decided on 26th July 1932, against order of Dist. Magistrate, Kistna, D/- 28th April 1932, in Cr. Misc. Petn. No. 13 of 1932.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 476—Finding that inquiry into offence is expedient in interest of justice is necessary.

Under S. 476 the Court should record a finding that it is expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry should be made and therefore Courts will be well advised always to make a specific record to that effect if that is their opinion: A I R 1928 Mad 783; A I R 1929 Mad 74 and A I R 1930 Cal 352, Rel. on.; A I R 1931 Mad 16, Dist. [P 67 C 2]

K. Kameswara Rao and C. Krishna-chandra Mouleswar—for Petitioner.

K. N. Ganpathi for the Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Gudivada passed an order purporting to be under Ss. 195-B and 476, Criminal P. C., that the present petitioner should be prosecuted for perjury under S. 195, I. P. C. He accordingly forwarded the records to the District Magistrate, Kistna, for taking action against the petitioner under the above section. It is hardly the procedure contemplated in the Code as revised in 1928 and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate ought to have complained under S. 476, a point which was taken up on appeal to the District Magistrate who found that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate's proceedings were practically a complaint and that the petitioner had not been in any way prejudiced. The point which is now taken in revision against the District Magistrate's order is not quite the same. It is now complained that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate erred in not recording a precise finding that it was expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry should be made into the offence. It might be possible to argue when the Sub-Divisional Magistrate records in these terms “further I find that he perjured himself on an important fact touching the issue in question regarding possession. I therefore consider, etc.” that he was in effect giving his opinion that a prosecution was expedient in the interests of justice. But considering the clear language of the Code we are not disposed to admit any argument of that sort. The Code lays down so as to leave no room for any doubt that the Court should record a finding that it is expedient in the interests of justice that an inquiry should be made and therefore Courts will be well advised always to make a record to that effect if that is their opinion, because most regrettable delays and waste of time sometimes arise by putting the superior Courts to the task of discovering whether they mean something which they have not written. We therefore allow the petition and remit these proceedings to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Gudivada for such action as he deems necessary in the light of the above remarks. If he wishes to regularise the complaint at this stage there is no legal objection to his doing so.

In regard to the case law on the subject it may be noted that our opinion is affirmed by two Judges of this Court in Munuswami Naidu v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 783, Y. Satyanarayana, In re (1) and also in Surendra Nath Jana v. Kumedacharan Misra (2). The ruling in Namberumal Chetti v. Nainiappa Mudali (3) was based on the special wording of the order then in question. The learned Judges there observed that the order was very detailed and comprehensive.

P.R.S./M.N.

Application allowed.

1. A I R 1929 Mad 74=114 I C 834=30 Cr L J 370.
2. A I R 1930 Cal 352=126 I C 416.
3. A I R 1931 Mad 16=128 I C 719=32 Cr L J 200=54 Mad 331.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 67 (2)

BARDSWELL, J.

P. S. S. Meyappa Chettiar—Petitioner.

v.

Nagammai Achi—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 658 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 613 of 1932, Decided on 9th September 1932, against order of Joint Magistrate, Devakottai, D/- 22nd August 1932.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 146—Party to dispute obtaining lease for indefinite period from receiver by practising fraud on Court—Lease can be summarily set aside without filing suit after notice under Transfer of Property Act (1882). S. 111—Civil P. C. (1908). O. 40, R. 1.

Where after property is attached and placed in the possession of the receiver till the decision of the civil suit which was ordered to be filed one of the parties with the connivance of the receiver, has been guilty of a very impudent fraud upon the Court and has by these means obtained a lease of the property which he would not have otherwise got, by the terms of which he was to have possession of the property in dispute so long as the dispute remained undecided the Court has every jurisdiction in setting aside the lease and to order its cancellation. The party can be summarily ejected without filing a suit after due notice as required by S. 111, T. P. Act: 33 Cal 52 Dist, A I R 1929 Cal 828, Rel on; A I R 1927 Pat 393, Ref.

[P 69 C 2]

K. S. Jayarama Ayyar and G. Gopala-swami—for Petitioner.

V. Ramaswami Ayyar—for Opposite Party.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The petitioner was a party to the proceedings under S. 145, Criminal P. C., the dispute being one as to the possession of a house. The Subdivisional Magistrate found that possession was not established by either party and on 27th February 1930, passed an order attaching the house until the right to possession of it by one party or the other was determined by a civil Court. This order was confirmed by the High Court in revision on 12th December 1930. The applicant for revision was the present petitioner. On 30th June 1932 the receiver who had been appointed in accordance with Cl. 2, S. 146, Criminal P. C., asked for permission to lease the house and on the following day he leased it to the petitioner. On its becoming known to the Joint Magistrate that the lease had been given to one of the disputing parties he removed the receiver from his appointment and set aside the lease. Against the order cancelling the lease the petitioner has come up on revision.

The point taken for the petitioner is that when the lease had once been granted, it could not be cancelled summarily as it has been, by the Joint Magistrate, but that the only procedure was to bring a suit against the petitioner after giving him notice under S. 111, T. P. Act. Cl. 2, S. 146, provides that a receiver who is appointed under it is to have, subject to the control of the Court, all powers of the receiver appointed under the Civil P. C. By O. 40, R. 1, Civil P. C., the Court may confer on a receiver all powers of management, etc., or such powers as the owner himself has as the Court thinks fit. In the present instance there seems to have been no limitation imposed upon the powers of the receiver and so it is to be taken that he had all the general powers of management, and these powers of management include the granting of leases. It is stated in Woodroffe and Ameer Ali's commentary on the Civil P. C., that, under the general permission of the Court, a receiver may in his discretion let out the property for any period not exceeding three years, but that he may not do so for a longer period without obtaining special permission. I should note that in this case a lease has been granted to the petitioner until such time as the civil Courts have decided the matter. It is possible that the lease may endure for less than three years, but it is equally possible that it may last for a considerably further period. Such an indeterminate lease was certainly not a proper one for the receiver to grant. That however a lease can be granted by the receiver within the limitations above stated seems beyond question and is not indeed disputed. The Magistrate has stated in his order that it has been clearly held by various High Courts that a receiver must take specific instructions from Courts and act strictly in accordance with the same, but he has not stated what his authorities are, neither have they been mentioned in this Court in the course of the arguments on this petition. The receiver has in fact, in this case, asked permission beforehand of the Magistrate to grant the lease, but once he has got that permission, it does not seem that he needed to ask the permission of the Court as to whom the lease should be granted, so long, at least, as he did not practise a fraud upon the Court.

The Joint Magistrate has based his decision on the ruling in Mt. Lachmi Kuer v. Gajadhar Prasad (1). But this decision does not bear on the point raised by Mr. K. S. Jayarama Ayyar for the petitioner. It has nothing whatever to do with the granting of any lease. What it does is to declare the principle that, when an attachment has been made under S. 146 pending the decision of the civil Courts, possession should not be made over to either party to the dispute so long as the attachment continues. For such a principle authority is hardly required. Though the order under S. 146 does not prohibit the entrance of any party upon the property in dispute pending the decision of the civil Court, it is clearly implied by the fact of attachment that neither party is meant to enter upon the property in any circumstance till the civil Courts have decided the matter. The decision on which Mr. Jayarama Ayyar lays stress is in Krista Chandra Ghose v. Krista Sakha Ghose (2), a decision of Woodroffe, J., who is an eminent authority on the law of receivers. In that case it was held that, when a lease had been already granted by a receiver, the matter had passed beyond the Court's control and that, even though the lease had been granted to one of the parties, that party was not subject to the jurisdiction of the Court as lessee. It was also made to appear in that case that, even in the case of collusion between the receiver and his lessee, the proper course was to proceed by a suit. Nothing however is said in this decision as to what will be the position if a fraud has been practised upon the Court. As to that there is another decision of the same High Court, which is found in Sirish Chandra v. Debendra Nath, A. I. R. 1929 Cal. 828. In that case it was held by a Divisional Bench that misrepresentation or concealment by a receiver of material facts are sufficient to justify the Court in setting aside a lease summarily when that lease has been granted in consequence of such misrepresentation or concealment of facts. It has been pointed out by Mr. Jayarama Ayyar that in that particular instance it would appear that the receiver had no authority to grant leases, but this does not matter from the point of view of Mr. Jayarama Ayyar's contention, which is that in no circumstances can a lease once granted by a receiver be set aside except by means of a suit. In the circumstances of that case the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court did not set aside the lease as they found that there had been no fraud, but they made it clear that if there had been a fraud they would have set it aside. I take this as an authority that, if it is found that there has been a fraud upon the Court in granting and obtaining a lease, a Magistrate is entitled to set the lease aside in a summary manner as the Magistrate has done in the case under review.

1. A I R 1927 Pat 393=104 I C 104=28 Cr L J 776=7 Pat 1.

2. (1909) 36 Cal 52=1 I C 470.

The receiver in this case applied on 30th June 1932, for permission to grant a lease without stating to whom it was intended that the lease should be granted. On the very next day, after the permission was given, the lease was granted to the present petitioner. Mr. Jayarama Ayyar urges that it was an indication of the good faith of the receiver, that he reported the matter to the Court on the very day of the lease, i.e., on 1st July 1932, but I find that this does not help the petitioner at all, as in that report there was concealment of facts which has to be regarded as deliberately intended to mislead the Court. The name of the person to whom the lease was given was indeed mentioned, the name being Meyappa Chetty, but this name is not a very unusual one and the Court cannot be expected to bear in its mind the names of all parties to proceedings before it. There is no reference in the report to the lessee being one of the parties to the proceedings under S. 145. There is indeed a reference to the lessee having in his possession 71 keys, but it is not mentioned in what capacity he had those keys, and it was not to be expected from this casual reference, which came at the end of the report, as to the 71 keys, that the Magistrate should gather that the lessee was one of the parties to the inquiry under S. 145. Had the Magistrate known that the party to whom the lease was being given was one of the parties to the inquiry, he would not have allowed the lease to be given to that party.

I am satisfied that the petitioner, with the connivance of the receiver, has been guilty of a very impudent fraud upon the Court and has by these means obtained a lease which he would not have otherwise got, by the terms of which he was to have possession of the property in dispute so long as the dispute remained undecided. The Magistrate, therefore had every justification in setting aside the lease and I am further satisfied that he had authority to order its cancellation. The petition is dismissed.

P.R.S. M.N.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 70

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

Ramannuja Krishna Ayyangar and another—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Ramannuja Alwarappa Ayyangar — Plaintiff—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 720 of 1930, Decided on 23rd August 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Tuticorin, in A. S. No. 118 of 1928.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 92—Tests of applicability—If direction of Court is necessary or breach of trust exists and relief is one specified, S. 92 applies.

In order to see whether Sub-S. (1), S. 92, applies to any case, there are two tests. One is, whether the case relates to any breach of an express or constructive trust mentioned therein or whether the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust. The second test is whether the relief asked for is one of the reliefs specified in that section. If both these tests are satisfied the suit is one covered by S. 92, which must be instituted after satisfying the requisites laid down in that section: A I R 1928 P C 16, Rel. on; A I R 1922 Mad 17 (F B), Ref.; A I R 1927 Mad 948, Dist. [P 71 C 1]

B. Sitarama Rao and K. Venkateswaram—for Appellants.

K. Desikachari—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The only point for consideration in this second appeal is, whether the plaintiff's suit, so far as it asks for the settlement of a scheme for the management of the trust properties in rotation by the plaintiff and defendants 1 and 2, is maintainable in this form, or, in other words, whether S. 92, Civil P. C., is a bar to the maintainability of this suit so far as the above-mentioned prayer is concerned. The trial Court was of opinion that such relief could be granted only in a suit under S. 92, Civil P. C., whereas the lower appellate Court came to a different conclusion and held that that relief could be granted to the plaintiff even in this form of action. The question is not altogether free from difficulty. There is, no doubt, that the trust mentioned in the plaint was created for public purposes of a charitable nature. The plaintiff's status as a co-trustee along with defendants 1 and 2 and his right to be in joint possession of the trust properties have been declared. The further relief asked for in the plaint is the subject-matter of dispute in the present second appeal.

The observation in the order of reference to a Full Bench in the case reported in Appanna Poricha v. Narasinga Poricha (1), at p. 116 (of 45 Mad.), is to the effect, that even in a suit brought by a plaintiff for the establishment of his personal right as a trustee, if he asks the Court to settle a scheme for the management of the trust properties, he cannot obtain such relief except in a suit instituted under S. 92, Civil P. C. But the observations in the judgments of two of the learned Judges who comprised the Full Bench indicate that the test is not merely the relief asked for being one of the reliefs mentioned in S. 92, but it must be also considered whether the suit is brought by the plaintiff in order to vindicate his own individual or personal right as against other persons interested in denying his rights or whether the suit is one brought by him on behalf of the public as a representative suit in the interests of the institution. It would appear that if the suit be one for the vindication of the right of management by a trustee and the dispute is between the trustees inter se, then the relief asked for in such a suit, though one specified in S. 92, could be granted, without the sanction of the Advocate-General or the Collector as required by the aforesaid section. But for the pronouncement by the Privy Council in the decision reported in Abdur Rahim v. Mahomed Barkat Ali (2), I should follow the view expressed in the aforesaid Full Bench decision. On a perusal of the observations of their Lordships of the Privy Council at p. 529 of 55 Cal. it seems to me that they wanted to set at rest the conflict of judicial opinion by a clear pronouncement as to the real scope of S. 92, Civil P. C. After stating that in some decisions it was held that private persons who had individual rights under such trusts could bring suits to enforce such individual rights by ordinary suits without being obliged to bring a suit of a representative nature, it is stated that great divergence of opinion had arisen in

1. A I R 1922 Mad 17=69 I C 304=45 Mad 113 (F B).

2. A I R 1928 P C 16=108 I C 361=55 I A 96=55 Cal 519 (P C).

India in this connexion not merely as between different High Courts but also different Benches of the same Court.

Their Lordships construe sub-S. (2), S. 92, Civil P. C., adopting the view taken by the Bombay High Court as opposed to the view taken by the other High Courts generally, and state that a suit which prayed for any of the reliefs mentioned in S. 92 could only be instituted in accordance with the provisions of that section. They further observe that the words used in sub-S. (2) are appropriate and sufficient if that was the purpose. I take it, that this pronouncement has been made to set at rest the controversy on this point, and as I understand the judgment of their Lordships it must be taken that the real test for applying S. 92 is to see whether the plaintiff has prayed for any of the reliefs mentioned in that section. In order to see whether sub-S. (1), S. 92 applies to any case, there seem to be two tests. One is, whether the case relates to any breach of an express or constructive trust mentioned therein or whether the direction of the Court is deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust. The second test is whether the relief asked for is one of the reliefs specified in that section. If both these tests are satisfied we must hold that the suit is one covered by that section, which must be instituted after satisfying the requisites laid down in that section.

It is unnecessary to consider the argument by Mr. Sitarama Rao on behalf of the appellants that a relief of this kind, namely, settlement of a scheme for the management of a public charitable property, is one that was not within the competence of the mofussil Courts to grant, apart from S. 539 of the old Code or S. 92 of the present Code. It is unnecessary to canvass that point in the present case, in the view I have taken that the present suit, in so far as it asks for the settlement of a scheme for the management by way of invoking the directions of the Court for the administration of the trust, is covered by S. 92. If any relief of this kind is based upon an agreement arrived at between co-trustees or on the terms of a will executed by the founder of the trust or any other descendant of his when he was the sole trustee, the matter would be different. A suit brought on the basis of such an agreement or arrangement or the will would be merely to enforce the terms of the contract or the terms of the will. It cannot be considered to be a suit where the directions of the Court for the administration of the trust are asked as being necessary for the proper management of the trust. In the present case, there is no such contract or arrangement; nor is there any evidence as to any usage regarding the mode of management of the trust property. I take it that the plaintiff by virtue of his being the holder of the office of trustee along with his co-trustees asks for directions of the Court regarding the administration of the trust by settling a scheme for its management by rotation. It seems to me that the decision in Durai v. Duraiswami Pillai, A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 948, relied on by the lower appellate Court, does not govern the present case for the reasons already mentioned by me. In that case the direction for the management of the trust by rotation was based on the terms of the will and those directions were not given by the Court in the exercise of its discretion in the absence of any previous arrangement come to between the parties. If any scheme for the management of this trust is required, the proper course is to adopt the procedure prescribed in S. 92, Civil P. C. I therefore allow this appeal and set aside the decree of the lower appellate Court, and restore the decree of the first Court. The order of the first Court passed as to costs will stand. In view of the partial success and failure of either party, I think fit to direct the parties to bear their respective costs here and in the lower appellate Court.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 71

PANDALAI, J.

Chendrasekaran Pillai and another—Plaintiffs—Petitioners.

v.

*Srinivasa Pillai—*Defendant—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1413 of 1928, Decided on 15th August 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Tiruvarur, D/- 11th February 1928.

Evidence Act (1872), S. 91—Pro-note with contemporaneous consideration inadmissible—Suit fails—Promissory note.

A suit is not maintainable on the consideration for an inadmissible promissory note when that consideration is contemporaneous with the note : A. I. R. 1914 Mad. 657, Poll. and held not requiring reconsideration : 34 I. C. 417, Expl.; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 1148 ; 40 Mad. 727; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 351 and A. I. R. 1932 Mad. 693, Ref. [P 72 C 1, 2]

S. Nagaraja Ayyar—for Petitioners.

K. Balasubramania Ayyar and K. Chandrasekara Ayyar — for Opposite Party.

Judgment. — The plaintiff's suit brought for the return of Rs. 300 borrowed on a promissory note which not being properly stamped was inadmissible in evidence was dismissed on the ground that the suit cannot be maintained in view of the decision of this Court in Muthu Sastrigal v. Viswanatha Pandara Sannadhi (1). The only question is whether that decision must be treated as settled law or in view of the opinions that have been expressed in later cases, whether the matter requires further consideration. The remarks which are supposed to cast doubt upon Muthu Sastrigal v. Viswanatha Pandara Sannadhi (1) are those of Srinivasa Ayyangar, J. in Chockalingam Chetty v. Annamalai Chetty (2), of Wallace, J. in Gopala Padayachi v. Rajagopala Naidu (3) and of Abdur Rahim, J., in Shanmuganatha Chettiar v. Srinivasa Ayyar (4). The remarks of the two former learned Judges are to the effect that a note or bill given for consideration, either contemporaneous or antecedent, is only a conditional discharge and that, when the note or bill fails, a suit may be brought on the consideration. The remarks of the third learned Judge are to the effect that there is no reason why a suit should not be maintainable on the consideration for an inadmissible note even when that consideration is contemporaneous with the note.

But there are other cases in which the validity of the decision in Muthu Sastrigal v. Viswanatha Pandara Sannadhi (1), was considered by other learned Judges of this Court, namely, by Madhavan Nair, J. in P. Somaraju v. Venkata Subbarayudu (5), by Curgeaven, J. in C. R. P. No. 1486 of 1928 and the latest by Anantakrishna Ayyar, J., in Alimune Sahiba v. K. Subbarayudu (6). In the first of these cases, Madhavan Nair, J., refused to treat the decision as weakened by the remarks first above referred to and declined to send the matter before a Bench. Both the learned Judges also treated the matter as beyond dispute and, in that view, I am not prepared to say that the decision requires further consideration.

It seems to me that the question is not whether a note or a bill is merely a conditional payment or discharge of the consideration for which it is given whether the consideration be contemporaneous or antecedent. It might be that, and the suit is therefore maintainable on the consideration when a payment is not made on the note or bill. In the case of a note or bill given for contemporaneous consideration which is not paid by the party liable on it, a suit on the consideration would certainly lie against the party liable for the consideration, who may or may not be the party to the note or bill. That is all the remarks referred to in the first of the three above cases, in my opinion, mean. But the point of the decision in Muthu Sastrigal v. Viswanatha Pandara Sannadhi (1), is not dependent on the conditional or other of the payment or discharge which a note or bill amounts to, but it depends upon S. 91, Evidence Act, which enacts that where the terms of a contract, grant or disposition of property have been reduced to the form of a document, no other evidence can be given about such terms than the document itself or secondary evidence of it. In the case under discussion, the assumption is that where the consideration for the note is contemporaneous with it, the note is the complete expression of a contract between the parties. In circumstances where that can be correctly stated, where the note becomes inadmissible in evidence, no other evidence about the terms of the contract can be given because the writing is the contract. But where the consideration is not contemporaneous but antecedent, as where a valid note is renewed by another which is improperly stamped or where a note or bill is given for moneys previously advanced or for any other kind of consideration which in fact and in substance is anterior in time to the date of the note, then the note is

6. A I R 1932 Mad 693=199 I C 486.

1. A I R 1914 Mad 657=21 I C 864=38 Mad 660.

2. (1916) 34 I C 417.

3. A I R 1926 Mad 1148=98 I C 75.

4. (1917) 40 Mad 727=35 I C 219.

5. A I R 1925 Mad 351=85 I C 389.

not deemed to be a complete expression of the terms of the contract between the parties which are deemed to include not merely the note but the transaction which gave rise to the consideration. When these are the facts, although the note is excluded, the consideration is allowed to be proved because S. 91, Evidence Act, does not stand in the way of that proof being given.

The decision of the lower Court was right and this petition must be dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N. Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 73

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Shankaranaraina—Appellant.

v.

Official Receiver of South Kanara—Respondent.

Appeal No. 129 of 1930, Decided on 2nd August 1932, against appellate order of Dist. Judge, South Kanara.

Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 28—Insolvency of manager of Hindu family—Receiver can lease out whole property—Lease does not amount to dispossession of other members so as to make him liable for mesne profits.

The Official Assignee on the insolvency of the managing member of a joint Hindu family succeeds to two things: (1) the undivided interest of the insolvent in a joint family property, and (2) his rights as managing member so far as they can be exercised for his own benefit. He is not entitled to have vested in him the shares of the other members although he can deal with them if the insolvent could lawfully have done so if there had been no insolvency. Hence the granting of leases of the entire joint family property by the Official Assignee is within his powers if the insolvent could have done so, and such leasing does not amount to dispossession of the other members so as to entitle them to claim mesne profits: A I R 1923 Mad 55, Rel. on.; A I R 1926 Mad 994; A I R 1928 Mad 735 and A I R 1932 All 353, Ref. [P 74 C 1]

B. Sitarama Rao and T. Krishna Rao—for Appellant.

M. A. T. Coelho—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This civil miscellaneous second appeal arises out of a petition filed by five minor sons of an insolvent to direct the Official Receiver of South Kanara to deliver possession of the immovable property mentioned in the schedule attached to the petition together with mesne profits from 26th April 1928 until redelivery of possession to the petitioners. In this second appeal the question as to the delivery of possession of the property does not arise inasmuch as subsequent to the commencement of the proceedings it is admitted that the Official Receiver sold the property to pay off the insolvent's debts and that the Official Receiver was legally justified in so selling the property. The property in question was the share of the family property belonging to the minors. It is the minor's father that became insolvent. The law is well settled that when the father of a joint Hindu family becomes an insolvent the Official Receiver can discharge the father's debt to the creditors, if necessary by selling the son's share in the joint family property provided the debts are not illegal or immoral. In this case, as I have already said, the right to sell the sons' share in the family property is not disputed; but what is now argued is that the Official Receiver has no right to remain in possession of the sons' shares, and since he remained in possession from 28th April 1928, till the date of sale, 28th August 1930, the minors are entitled to recover from him the mesne profits for that period. Whether they are so entitled or not is the question that arises now in this second appeal.

The facts are all admitted. Subraya, the father of the minor petitioners, was adjudged insolvent in I. P. No. 73 of 1927, and his property, both moveable and immovable was vested in the Official Receiver under the provisions of the Insolvency Act. The Official Receiver, before he sold the minor's shares in the family property to pay off the debts, granted leases of their shares in the property to tenants and later on sold them. It is argued that since the property in question does not vest in the Official Receiver he has no right to lease them and exercise acts of management over them. It is well-settled law that on the insolvency of the father of a joint Hindu family the shares of the sons of the family do not vest in the Official Receiver. But so long as the father's debts are neither immoral nor illegal he has got the right to sell them. In fact he is entitled to be in joint possession with the sons of all the family properties. This position was established by the decision in Official Assignee of Madras v. Ramachandra Ayyar (1). The following propositions of law are stated in that judgment:

1. A I R 1923 Mad 55=68 I C 898=46 Mad 54.

"It can be taken as established law that the Official Assignee on the insolvency of the managing member of a joint Hindu family succeeds to two things: (1) the undivided interest of the insolvent in the joint family property, and (2) his rights as managing member so far as they can be exercised for his own benefit. It is also established that he is not entitled to have vested in him the shares of the other members although he can deal with them if the insolvent could lawfully have done so if there had been no insolvency."

Though the shares of the minor sons do not vest in the Official Receiver his right to deal with these shares lawfully in the same way as the insolvent could have done is established by this judgment. If the Official Receiver has the right to sell the minor's shares in the joint family properties, I take it that he has also the right to collect the rent due from them in order to pay off the insolvent's creditors. The decision in Official Assignee of Madras v. Ramachandra Ayyar (1) has been accepted as laying down correct law in the subsequent decisions such as Seetharama Chettiar v. Official Receiver, Tanjore (2), In the matter of Baluswamy Ayyar (Insolvent) (3) and Venkatram v. Chokkier (4). No doubt there has been no direct decision on the question under consideration in our High Court, but I think the trend of the decisions which I have referred to is in support of the contention urged by the respondents. It must be understood that by giving leases of the property belonging to the minors the Official Receiver is not dispossessing them. He may have no right to dispossess them as was decided in Sitaram v. Jado Rai, A. I. R. 1932 All. 353, but he is entitled to be in joint possession of all the properties. And in exercise of the rights of the manager which accrued to him on account of the insolvency of the father I think the Official Receiver has a right to collect the rents from the shares belonging to the minor sons for the purpose of paying off their father's creditors. In my view the decisions of the lower Courts are right and this second appeal is dismissed with costs.

P. R. S. / M. N.

Appeal dismissed.

2. A. I. R. 1926 Mad 994=97 I C 825=49 Mad 519 (F B).

3. A. I. R. 1928 Mad 735=112 I C 541=51 Mad 417 (F B).

4. A. I. R. 1928 Mad 531=109 I C 516=51 Mad 557.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 74

BEASLEY, C. J. AND CORNISH, J.

Valliammal and another—Appellants.

v.

Official Assignee, Madras—Respondent.

Appeals Nos. 23 and 24 of 1932, Decided on 11th May 1932, against decision of Stone, J., D/- 29th February 1932.

(a) Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 7—Administration under S. 108—S. 7 does not apply—Official Assignee cannot examine deceased's representatives and if he does he cannot take proceedings under S. 7—Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), Ss. 108 and 36.

It was not intended by the use of the words "in any case of insolvency" in S. 7 to include the exercise of the powers of the Insolvency Court in cases of administration in insolvency of a deceased debtor's estate. S. 7 is only intended to apply to cases where there had been an adjudication of the debtor in insolvency. The Official Assignee has no power to examine the representatives of a deceased debtor who had not been adjudged an insolvent under S. 26 of the Act and no power to take proceedings under S. 7. Even if he possessed the latter power, he cannot without their consent proceed with the application under S. 7 after having examined them under S. 36 and the possession of the documents etc., having been denied by them: A I R 1929 Mad 705; A I R 1914 Mad 101; In re Hewitt (1885) 15 Q B D 159; A I R 1926 Rang 157, Rel. on; A I R 1927 Rang 284, Ref. [P 78 C 1]

(b) Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 58—Official Assignee believing property of deceased debtor to be in possession of third persons but unable to take possession—Assignee can apply to Court for its production.

Where the Official Assignee has a well founded belief that property of an insolvent or a deceased debtor lies in the house of a third person and is unable to discover that property because such person denies possession, the Official Assignee is not necessarily driven to file a suit against him instead of applying to the Court for directions or for an order for its production in Court. In re Crowther, ex parte Ellis, 20 Q B D 38, Dist. [P 79 C 1]

(c) Administration—Suit for—Proper parties.

The next kin and intermeddler with the estate are proper parties to an administration suit.

[P-79 C 2]

(d) Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 58—Administration of deceased debtor's estate—Application for production of property—Official Assignee has to prove that property is in non-applicant's possession—Report is no evidence—Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), R. 117.

Before an order for the production of account books, etc., can be made against a deceased debtor's representatives the Official Assignee has to make out a prima facie case that the non-applicants have in their possession the property he seeks to get delivery of. Mere report of the Official Assignee is no evidence at all. R. 117 does not make such report prima facie evidence.

[P 80 C 1]

(e) Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 109—Administration of deceased debtor's estate—Only Part 3 applies—But S. 8 applies by necessary implication—Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 8.

Unless there are strong reasons to the contrary, the words of S. 109 mean that all the other parts of the Act except Part 3 shall not be applicable to an administration of the estate of a deceased debtor. But S. 8 though not contained in Part 3 is applicable to such proceedings by necessary implication: A I R 1926 Rang 157, Rel. on. [P 80 C 1]

*K. Narasimha Ayyar and S. Doraiswami Ayyar for P. Viswanatha Ayyar—*for Appellants.

*V. C. Gopalratnam—*for Respondent.

Beasley, C. J.—This is an appeal from an order of Stone, J., made in the insolvency Court on the application of the Official Assignee that the appellants should be ordered to produce certain account books or be committed for contempt of Court. On 29th February 1932 Stone, J., passed the following order: "Books to be delivered within two weeks." Against that order this appeal has been presented. It raises some interesting and important questions. The proceeding in which the order under appeal was made was the administration by the insolvency Court of the estate of one Gurunatha Mudaliar who died on 5th June 1930. His estate was insolvent but he had not before his death been adjudicated an insolvent. One of the creditors presented a petition to the Insolvency Court for the administration of the deceased debtor's estate under S. 108, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and an order for the administration of that estate in insolvency was made after notice of the petition had been served upon the deceased's widow, appellant 1, who appeared by Mr. Varadaraja Mudaliar on the hearing of the petition but did not oppose it.

The deceased debtor during his lifetime carried on a timber business but he did not live at his place of business but lived at No. 52, Vellala Street, Purasawalkam, Madras, with his wife. He had a brother Ranganatha Mudaliar who is appellant 2. Immediately after the order for the administration of the estate in insolvency the Official Assignee took possession of a superstructure belonging to the deceased and some timber and some old pieces of furniture, and although the house and the business premises of the deceased were searched and an inventory was taken of all articles and documents, no account books and other documents or papers relating to the timber business were discovered, except some bill books for timber sold, and certain title deeds which the Official Assignee alleges to have been in the possession either of appellant 1 or appellant 2 were not found. At this time there was in Madras Murugesu Mudaliar, appellant 3, alleged to be a relation of the deceased debtor, or appellant 1, who was assisting appellant 1 in the administration of the estate and took some action with regard to the leasing of some properties. The Official Assignee's case is that the appellants have taken possession of the account books and other documents relating to the timber business carried on by the deceased and also the title deeds to some of the properties. The Official Assignee made a number of efforts to get the appellants before him for the purpose of examining them under S. 36, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, in order to ascertain whether they had the property in the shape of account books, documents and title deeds, etc. of the deceased debtor in their possession and eventually all the appellants were examined and all of them denied having in their possession those documents. Faced with these denials and being unable to get the documents the Official Assignee presented the application to the Court upon which the order appealed from was made. Affidavits in answer to the Official Assignee's application were filed by all the three appellants contradicting the Official Assignee's case. No evidence was taken by the learned trial Judge although we are informed by Mr. V. C. Gopalratnam appearing on behalf of the Official Assignee that he had his witnesses in Court.

The learned trial Judge upon the report of the Official Assignee on the one side and the affidavits of the respondents on the other side passed the order that the books were to be delivered within two weeks. As learned counsel before us were unable to agree as to what happened in the trial Court we have consulted Stone, J., who states that he made his order very quickly without considering any evidence other than the documentary evidence before him, intending on the next occasion, namely, at the end of the period prescribed in his order, to inquire into the question of the possession of the account books. We also ascertained from him that Mr. Narasimha Ayyar who was then appearing for appellant I did not state that he wished to argue any question as to the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the application although we accept Mr. Narasimha Ayyar's statement that he intended to take the point and had the necessary authorities to support his argument ready in Court and it was only the rapidity with which the order was made by our learned brother that prevented him taking this legal objection. It is conceded however that he informed our learned brother that the order made by him amounted really to a finding that either his client or the other appellants, or all of them acting together, were in possession of this property. Notwithstanding that, the order was passed.

The points taken here in appeal are: (1) that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain a claim under S. 7 of the Act; (2) that even if it had as the appellants had been examined under S. 36 and had denied possession of the books etc., the Official Assignee's remedy was by suit and not under S. 7; (3) that if the application was not one under S. 7 there is no other section in the Insolvency Act which entitles the Official Assignee to present it and (4) that there was no evidence before Stone, J., upon which he could make the order that he did as the report of the Official Assignee cannot be evidence upon such an application and that therefore the denials of possession of the books by the appellants stood uncontradicted whereas the allegations made by the Official Assignee in his report remained unproved.

With regard to the first point the contention is that as this is an administration of the estate of a person dying insolvent under S. 108 the only provisions of the Act, except of course Part 10 in which S. 108 is, that apply are those contained in Part 3. It is necessary to refer to S. 109. S. 109 (1) reads as follows: "Upon an order being made for the administration of a deceased debtor's estate under S. 108, the property of the debtor shall vest in the Official Assignee of the Court, and he shall forthwith proceed to realize and distribute the same in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and (2) with the modifications hereinafter mentioned, all the provisions of Part 3, relating to the administration of the property of an insolvent, shall, so far as the same are applicable, apply to the case of such administration order in like manner as to an order of adjudication under this Act." It is argued that as S. 7 is in Part 1 of the Act its provisions do not apply to these administrations. In support of this argument reference was made to Soranammal v. Official Assignee, Madras (1). It was there held that S. 7 is not applicable to proceedings to administer a deceased debtor's estate initiated under S. 108. Sir Arnold White, C. J., held that the decision in In re Hewitt (2) governed the question. The facts in In re Hewitt (2) were that the deceased debtor's estate was being administered by the bankruptcy Court under S. 125, Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the section corresponding to S. 108, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. The Official Receiver applied to the county Court having jurisdiction in the matter of the administration for an order for the examination on oath before the Court of the widow and executrix of the deceased, and the deceased's son upon the ground that they were capable of giving information respecting the deceased's property. It was ordered by the county Court that these persons should attend before the Court for examination on oath under S. 27, Bankruptcy Act, the section corresponding to S. 36, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. This order they did not obey and an order for their committal for contempt was obtained. They appealed. Under the Bankruptcy Act of 1883 there is a provision similar to S. 109 (2), Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, applying the provisions of Part 3, Bankruptcy Act, to such administration. That is S. 125 (5) to (8). S. 27 is not in Part 3, Bankruptcy Act of 1883, and it was held on appeal there was no power in cases of such administrations to apply the provisions of S. 27. Wills, J., who together with Cave, J., decided this matter at p. 167, states thus:

"Now by sub-S. 6, S. 125, the legislature has specifically pointed out certain sections of the Bankruptcy Act which are to be applied to the administration of the estates of persons dying

1. A I R 1914 Mad 101=24 I C 239.

2. (1885) 15 Q B D 159=54 L J Q B 402=53 L T 156=2 Morrell 184.

insolvent. According to the ordinary rule of interpretation, unless there are strong reasons to the contrary, when they provide that the provisions of Part 3 shall be applicable, they must be considered to mean that other parts of the Act shall not be applicable."

This case has been referred to repeatedly in English decisions and in the course of the arguments in reported English cases and as an authority upon this point has never been questioned. Indeed it is probable that it was in consequence of this decision that in the Bankruptcy Act of 1914 an alteration was made in the law and the power to examine persons in such administrations was given to the bankruptcy Court. No such alteration has been made to the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. In re Hewitt (2) therefore strongly supports the appellants' contention that no sections of the Act which are not included in Part 3 have any application to administrations of estates under S. 108 unless there are very strong reasons for applying other sections. In re Hewitt (2) was considered by a Full Bench of the Rangoon High Court in D. J. Kolapore v. The Port Commissioners, Rangoon (3). There the question to be considered was whether the provisions of S. 7 of the Act could be applied in the case of an administration under S. 108 and it was held by Rutledge, C. J. and Maung Ba, J., Heald, J., dissenting, that S. 7 is not a provision of the Act which, either expressly or by necessary implication, can be applied in such cases. Heald, J., took the view that the words "case of insolvency" in S. 7 of the Act are sufficiently wide to cover a case of administration in insolvency. Great reliance was placed by the majority of the Full Bench upon Hewitt's case (2) and it is very difficult to understand why Heald, J., did not consider that Hewitt's case (2) strongly supported the view expressed by the other two learned Judges. At p. 167 he says:

"The position is therefore that there is one English ruling, namely, Hewitt's case (2), which suggests that the fact that a section which is sought to be applied to cases of administration in bankruptcy or insolvency falls outside Part 3 of the Act, precludes its application to such cases and with the greatest respect I find myself unable to apply that suggestion to the Indian Act."

I am quite unable to follow Heald J.'s inability to apply Hewitt's case (2) to the Indian Act which is almost word for word the English Bankruptcy Act. As I have already stated, Hewitt's case (2) has, since its decision, been treated with the greatest respect both in the argument at the Bar and in the judgments found in many English reported cases. In In the matter of P. A. Mohamad Ganny (4) Chari, J., held that Ss. 36, 55 and 56, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, are not applicable to administrations under S. 108 of the Act, S. 36 because of the authority of Hewitt's case (2) and the other two sections because of Ex parte Official Receiver In re Gould (5). In the latter case it was held that S. 47, Bankruptcy Act, 1883, corresponding to S. 55 of our Act, which avoids certain voluntary settlements executed by a bankrupt, does not apply to the administration of the estate of a deceased insolvent by the Court of bankruptcy under S. 125 of the Act. The ratio decidendi of this case was that S. 125, Bankruptcy Act, 1883, corresponding to S. 108 of the Indian Act, is confined to the administration of the estate of a deceased debtor and does not include the administration of the property of other persons. The property having been voluntarily transferred by settlement ceased to be the property of the deceased debtor and hence it was not the property, the subject-matter of S. 125. Hewitt's case (2) therefore confines the provisions of the English Bankruptcy Act applying to administrations under S. 125 of that Act to those in Part 3 of the Act. In re Gould (5) goes further and decides that even some sections included in Part 3 of the Act have no application to such administrations because the Court has power to deal only with the property of the deceased debtor and not that of other persons. In my view the decision in D. J. Kolapore v. The Port Commissioners (3) is correct. It appears to me that it was not intended by the use of the words "in any case of insolvency" in S. 7, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, to include the exercise of the powers of the insolvency Court in cases of administration in insolvency such as this. The deceased debtor was not an adjudicated insolvent and, in my view, S. 7 was only intended to apply to

4. A I R 1927 Rang 284=104 I C 89=5 Rang 375.

5. (1887) 19 Q B D 92=56 L J Q B 333=56 L T 806=35 W R 569=4 Morrell 202.

3. A I R 1926 Rang 157=97 I C 224=4 Ran 157 (F B).

cases where there had been an adjudication in insolvency. In my view, the Official Assignee had no power to examine the appellants under S. 36 of the Act and no power to take proceedings under S. 7. Even if he had possessed the latter power, he could not without the consent of the appellants have proceeded with the application having examined them under S. 36 and the possession of the documents, etc., having been denied by them. This right is clearly negatived by a Full Bench of this Court of which I was a member, in The Official Assignee of Madras v. Narasimha Mudaliar (6), where it is pointed out that in such cases the Official Assignee's only remedy is to proceed by way of suit. This disposes of points 1 and 2.

I shall now proceed to deal with the third point taken by the appellants, namely, that if S. 7 is inapplicable, there is no other section in the Insolvency Act which entitles the Official Assignee to proceed with this application. It is argued that S. 58 of the Act does not give the Official Assignee this power because S. 58 (2) says:

"The Official Assignee shall, in relation to and for the purpose of acquiring or retaining possession of the property of the insolvent be in the same position as if he were a receiver of the property appointed under the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, and the Court may on his application enforce such acquisition or retention accordingly."

This, it is argued by the appellants, limits the power of the Official Assignee to that possessed by a Receiver appointed under the Civil Procedure Code and that a Receiver thus appointed has no power to deal with persons who are not parties to the suit in which he has been appointed Receiver. Hence it is argued that, as a Receiver can only get the property of the estate which is in the hands of strangers to the suit by filing a suit against them, the Official Assignee is in no better position and his remedy is by way of a suit and not by such an application as this. In support of this argument the notes to O. 50, R. 16 of the Rules of the Supreme Court were referred to, (p. 899 of the Annual Practice, 1932). There it is stated:

"As against a stranger to the action who is in actual possession the appointment of the Receiver is of no effect."

In re Crowther Ex parte Ellis (7) was also referred to. There it was held that a County Court Judge, sitting in bankruptcy, has no jurisdiction unless by consent, to order payment to the Official Receiver of money received under a garnishee order attaching a debt due to the estate of a deceased debtor which is being administered under S. 122, Bankruptcy Act of 1883. The County Court Judge made the order and the persons who had attached the debt appealed and Cave, J., in allowing the appeal said:

"Section 125, Bankruptcy Act, 1883, has given power to the Court of Bankruptcy to administer the estate of a debtor who has died insolvent. Unless there is some provision to the contrary the Court in acting under this section must follow the practice of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice with regard to the administration of the estates of deceased persons. In the High Court an application for an order such as that now appealed against would not be entertained without the consent of the person against whom the order was asked for."

I do not however think that this case goes as far as Mr. Doraiswamy Ayyar for the appellants argues it does. When the facts of the case are examined it will be seen that what was decided that the Bankruptcy Court had no power to do was to entertain an application for the delivery up to the Official Receiver of money which the appellant not only claimed a right to possess but had got an order from the Court showing that he had made out a prima facie case for such a claim. That this is so will be seen from the argument of Mr. Herbert Reed, who appeared for the appellant in that case. His first point was that the section under which the County Court Judge acted was not contained in part 3 of the Act and therefore following In re Hewitt (2) the Court had no jurisdiction to act under that section. His second point was that the order affected not only the estate of the deceased debtor but also the property of another person, namely, the appellant, and in support of that argument he relied upon In re Gould (5). This case, in my view, does not say that where a third person is in possession or is alleged to be in possession of property admittedly belonging to a deceased debtor such an application as this cannot be made although it must be conceded that the notes to O. 50, R. 16 of the Rules of the Supreme Court certainly do support

6. A I R 1929 Mad 705=118 I C 506=52 Mad 717 (F B).

7. (1888) 20 Q B D 88=57 L J Q B 57=58 L T 115=86 W R 189=4 Morrell 305.

Mr. Doraiswami Ayyar's argument. Although the Official Assignee is to have the same powers as a Receiver appointed under the Civil Procedure Code, S. 58 (1) says:

"The Official Assignee, shall as soon as may be take possession of the deeds, books and documents of the insolvent, and all other parts of his property capable of manual delivery;"

and sub-S. (2) provides that on his application the Court will enforce his acquisition of that property or its retention. In my opinion, the words of the section are sufficiently wide to cover an application made to the Court for delivery up of possession of the documents of a deceased debtor, admittedly his property, the only question being whether or not the respondent to the application is possessed of them. S. 59 entitles the Court to issue a search warrant and under it houses belonging to a person not the insolvent may be searched and the property of the insolvent discovered there seized. I cannot accede to the appellants' contention that where the Official Assignee has a well-founded belief that property of an insolvent or a deceased debtor lies in the house of a third person, obtains a search warrant from the Court, searches the house and is unable to discover that property because it is cleverly concealed by the occupier of the house, the Official Assignee is driven to file a suit against him instead of applying to the Court for directions or for such an order as was made in this case.

Mr. Narasimha Ayyar for appellant 1 argues that the Official Assignee's remedy must be by way of suit because noncompliance with the order such as was made in this case exposes his client to the risk of being committed for contempt where if a suit is filed against her and a decree is obtained she runs no such risk. The answer to that contention is that under O. 21, R. 31, Civil P. C., such a decree could be executed by the detention in a civil prison of his client, the judgment-debtor, and/or by the attachment of her property. Holding the view that the Official Assignee was entitled to make this application under S. 58 of the Act because the appellants are persons alleged to be in possession of property admittedly belonging to the deceased debtor, it is not necessary for me to consider the question as to whether or not he was entitled to do so because the appellants are to be regarded as parties to the suit. It was argued alternatively by Mr. Gopalratnam for the Official Assignee that the appellants would be proper parties to an administration suit and therefore the receiver would be entitled to make this application. Appellant 1 is the next of kin of the deceased and a next of kin is certainly a proper party to an administration suit. As regards the other appellants and indeed as regards appellant 1, the allegations are that they have intermeddled in the estate and if those allegations are true—it is not for us to inquire into them—that is a matter for the learned trial Judge—then obviously they would be proper parties to the suit; but in my view it is unnecessary to go into this question.

There remains the fourth point argued by the appellants, namely, that there was no evidence before the learned Judge upon which he could make his order. With this contention I entirely agree. Before such an order as this could be made, the Official Assignee had to make out a prima facie case that the appellants had in their possession the property he sought to get delivery of. What was the sworn evidence put forward by the Official Assignee in support of his claim? Sworn evidence there was none, either oral or by affidavit. The whole case of the Official Assignee was set out in his report. Most of what is contained therein is derived from persons who did not give evidence. On the side of the appellants were the affidavits contradicting the Official Assignee's allegations. The question which arises here is, is the report of the Official Assignee in such a proceeding as this, prima facie evidence in support of his application? It was argued on behalf the Official Assignee that R. 117, Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, makes the Official Assignee's report prima facie evidence of the matter reported upon. That rule is as follows:

"Except where otherwise provided by the Act or these rules, evidence to be given by the Official Assignee may be given by his report to the Court and need not be upon affidavit; and such report shall be prima facie evidence of the matter reported upon."

The Act does not provide anywhere that the evidence on such an application as this to be given by the Official Assignee is not to be by his report nor must be upon affidavit. That rule is sufficiently wide even to enable the Official Assignee who has a money claim against strangers in an insolvency and against debtors to an insolvent's estate and in many other cases to rest his case upon his report only. This rule offends against two of the most important rules of evidence, namely, that testimony shall be on oath or by affirmation and that hearsay evidence shall be excluded. Under the English Bankruptcy Act the report of the Official Assignee is only receivable in evidence in the cases provided for in the Act and the rules, such as cases of composition or applications for discharge or where the conduct of the insolvent is in question, i. e., failure to attend for examination, file his schedule or assist the Official Assignee and R. 190 of the Bombay Rules under the Act provides for the cases in which the Official Assignee's report is receivable by itself as evidence. If R. 117 is intended to allow the Official Assignee's report to be prima facie evidence in such a case as this, then I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the rule is ultra vires. In my opinion, the Official Assignee's report was not evidence at all. The learned trial Judge therefore had no evidence before him upon which he could make the order. With all respect to the learned trial Judge, I think he should have decided the question of possession first before making the order and after taking evidence. Indeed the only inference arising from his order, is that he had decided that question and not left it for decision, as he intended to do on the next occasion.

There is one other matter to be dealt with and that is the respondent's argument that if, the appellants' contention is right, namely that the only sections of the Act applicable to such an administration are those contained in Part 3, the appellants have no right of appeal because S. 8 is the section giving the right of appeal and that is not contained in Part 3. Adopting the view of Wills, J., in In re Hewitt (2), unless there are strong reasons to the contrary, the words of S. 109 of our Act must mean that all the other parts of the Act except Part 3 shall not be applicable. But there are the strongest reasons to the contrary. No right of appeal is given by any of the other sections of the Act and it seems to me to be an amazing contention that, whereas in the case of an insolvent there is a right of appeal and the Court may review, rescind or vary any order made under its insolvency jurisdiction, where you have a deceased debtor no such right exists. Amongst other things, Part 3 deals with the proof of debts, and when in an insolvency a creditor whose proof of debts has been rejected is entitled to appeal, why should the creditor whose proof is rejected merely because his debtor is dead be deprived of such a right? I am supported in the view I take about this matter by Rutledge, C. J., in D. J. Kolapore v. Port Commissioners, Rangoon (3), who says that he would be prepared to hold that by necessary implication S. 8 (1) of the Act applies to orders of the insolvency Judge arising in administration of the estate of deceased debtors. In my view that contention fails.

In the result the appeal must be allowed and the case remanded to the insolvency Court where this application will be reheard in the light of the opinion expressed by this Court with regard to the evidence. With regard to costs, as a great deal of the appellants' argument was directed to the third point raised and it has been decided in favour of the respondent, I think the proper order will be to direct the costs of the appeal to abide the rehearing of the Official Assignee's application.

Cornish, J.—I am of the same opinion and for the same reasons.

P.R.S./M.N.

Case remanded.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 80

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

Govindaraja Pillai and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Mangalam Pillai and another—Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 712 of 1930, Decided on 2nd August 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Cuddalore, in A. S. No. 65 of 1928.

Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 11—Intention to grant absolute estate—Conditions repugnant are void—Absolute estate subject to defeasance clause not contrary to any law is valid—In latter case disposition by prior transferee does not prevent operation of defeasance clause—Nor can events subsequent to vesting divest persons in whose favour gift over is made—Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 28.

The distinction between a repugnant provision and a defeasance provision is sometimes subtle, but the general principle of law is that where the intention of the transferor is to maintain the absolute estate conferred on the transferee, but he simply adds some restrictions in derogation of the incidents of such absolute ownership, such restrictive clauses would be repugnant to the absolute transfer and therefore void; but where the grant of an absolute estate is expressly or impliedly made subject to defeasance on the happening of a contingency and where the effect of such defeasance would not be a violation of any rule of law, the original estate is curtailed and the gift over must be taken to be valid and operative. Hence an absolute gift to a wife by the husband subject to the condition that if she dies without issue the property would pass to other persons living at the date of gift is valid in favour of third person on the fulfilment of the condition. The gift over being valid any disposition by the wife during her life or the adoption by the husband after her death would not prevent the vesting of the property in or divest the third persons: 9 M I A 123 (P C), Rel. on.; A I R 1931 P C 179; 34 Mad 250; 4 Cal 23 and 16 Cal 383, Ref.; 31 I C 405 and A I R 1929 P C 283, Dist. [P 81 C 2; P 83 C 2]

B. Sitarama Rao and J. R. Gundappa Rao—for Appellants.

S. Panchapagesa Sastri and K. R. Krishnaswami Ayyar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This second appeal arises out a suit brought by plaintiffs 1 and 2 to recover possession of the plaintiff-mentioned properties, alleging that they became entitled to the same on the death of their sister Madurambal in 1924 without any issue. Defendant 1 is the husband of Madurambal. When he married her, he was a man of advanced age, and at the instance of the parents of the girl he executed a registered settlement deed, Ex. A, on 2nd June 1916 in favour of the girl. The material portion of Ex. A runs thus:

"I have accordingly given you the under-mentioned properties valued at Rs. 1,000 and you shall yourself from this day hold and enjoy the same with all rights. Should any issue be born to us, that issue shall get the properties after our death. If there is no issue, after your death, your brothers (plaintiffs 1 and 2) should take the properties."

The plaintiffs' case is that their sister Madurambal having died without any issue the properties covered by Ex. A devolved on them and therefore they are entitled to recover possession of the same. The first Court was of opinion that the intention of the donor (defendant 1) was to confer only a life estate on Madurambal and the gift over in favour of plaintiffs 1 and 2 became operative on the happening of the specified contingency, namely, the death of Madurambal without any issue. But the lower appellate Court came to a different conclusion as regards the construction of Ex. A. In its view Madurambal was given an absolute estate in the properties, and the gift over in favour of plaintiffs 1 and 2 on the happening of a contingency is void as a repugnant provision and such a clause could not be deemed to be a defeasance provision. The plaintiffs' suit was therefore dismissed.

In this second appeal, it is contended on behalf of the appellants (plaintiffs 2 to 4, plaintiff 1 having died during the pendency of the suit and plaintiffs 3 and 4 having been added as his legal representatives) that on a proper construction of Ex. A it should be held that either a life estate in favour of Madurambal with a remainder over in favour of plaintiffs 1 and 2 or an absolute estate in her favour subject to defeasance in the event of her failing to have any issue at the time of her death was really conferred on her. Having regard to the terms of the earlier portion of the deed which are to the effect, that the donee should enjoy the properties absolutely or with all rights, it cannot be reasonably contended that what was conferred upon her was primarily a life estate alone. The tamil word "sarva suthantharamai" clearly indicates an absolute estate. The more difficult question is whether the subsequent clause should be deemed to be a mere repugnant condition imposed on the estate so created or makes the absolute estate primarily granted subject to defeasance in the event of the contemplated contingency. The distinction between a repugnant provision and a defeasance provision is sometimes, subtle but the general principle of law seems to be, that where the intention of the donor is to maintain the absolute estate conferred on the donee but he simply adds some restrictions in derogation of the incidents of such absolute ownership, such restrictive clauses would be repugnant to the absolute grant and therefore void; but where the grant of an absolute estate is expressly or impliedly made subject to defeasance on the happening of a contingency and where the effect of such defeasance would not be a violation of any rule of law, the original estate is curtailed and the gift over must be taken to be valid and operative.

The disposition under a will which was the subject of consideration by the Privy Council in two cases reported as Sreemutty Sooreemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (1) and Sreemutty Soornamoneyee Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (2) is almost similar to the one under Ex. A. In the aforesaid cases, a Hindu testator devised under his will his entire estate to his five sons. On a construction of the will it was found that the testator conferred an absolute estate on the sons. There was a further clause in the will that if any of the five sons should die without leaving any son or son's son, his estate should devolve upon such of the surviving sons or their son's sons who shall then be alive. Their Lordships of the Privy Council have held that it was competent to a Hindu testator to give property by way of an executory bequest upon an event which is to happen, if at all immediately on the close of a life in being. I should observe that in the present case the defeasance clause is exactly similar to the one found in the will above referred to. The provision in Ex. A is that in the event of the donee (Madurambal) dying without any issue the properties should go to her brothers (plaintiffs 1 and 2). The principle of the decision in Sreemutty Sooreemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (2) is recognized and also explained in a recent decision of the Privy Council reported; Sarajubala Debi v. Jyotiramayee Debi (3) at p. 149 (of 59 Cal.). Their Lordships have observed thus:

"A Hindu no doubt may give property by way of an executory gift upon an event which is to happen, if at all, immediately on the close of a life in being and in favour of a person born at the date of the gift, and such a gift over might be sufficient indication that only a life estate to the first taker was intended."

The disposition under Ex. A, being exactly of such a nature, the defeasance clause in it must be held to be valid on the authority of the view expressed by the Privy Council. This is a not case where the executory gift is made to depend upon an event such as an indefinite failure of the male issue of the donee which would not necessarily happen on the close of the donee's life and such a defeasance clause has been held to be void. There is also the decision of this High Court in Lakshminarayana Nainar v. Valliammal (4), which is almost on all fours with the present case. In that case the decision depended on the construction of a razinama by which A and B became entitled to hold and enjoy in common certain properties absolutely. There was a defeasance clause to the effect, that in the event of A dying issueless, his share of the properties should go to B and then B should become entitled to the entire properties. The question was whether the alienation of the properties by A during his lifetime could have any legal validity after his death and prevent his share of the properties from devolving on B. On the footing that A had an absolute estate in a moiety of the properties covered by the razinama, it was held that there was a clear gift over of that moiety on his dying without issue to B. Following the Privy Council decision in Sreemutty Sooreemoney Dossee v. Denobundoo Mullick (2), the learned Judges have held such a defeasance followed by a gift over in favour of a person in being to be perfectly valid under the Hindu law.

Reference was also made to the observations in the Privy Council decisions reported in Bhoobun Mohini Debia v. Hurrish Chunder Chowdhry (5) and Kristoromoni Dasi v. Narendro Krishna Bahadur (6). Holding that the effect of such defeasance was to cut down the original absolute estate of A to a life estate, the alienation made by him was held to be invalid beyond his life time and not affecting the gift over in favour of B. These authorities in my opinion bear directly on the present case, and I am clearly of opinion that the absolute estate conferred upon Madurambal under Ex. A was subject to defeasance in the event of her dying without any issue and such a defeasance clause is not opposed to any rule of law and has been recognized by the Privy Council to be

1. (1854-57) 6 M I A 526-4 W R 114=1 Suth 291=1 Sar 583 (P C).

2. (1861-63) 9 M I A 123 (P C).

3. A I R 1931 P C 179=124 I C 618=58 I A 270=59 Cal 142 (P C).

4. (1911) 34 Mad 270=11 I C 767.

5. (1879) 1 Cal 23=5 I A 138=2 C L R 359=3 Sar 15 (P C).

6. (1889) 16 Cal 353=16 I A 29=5 Sar 235 (P C).

valid. As observed in Lakshminarayana v. Valliammal (4), by reason of the operation of the defeasance clause on the happening of the contingency, the original estate was cut down to a life estate and the gift over to plaintiffs 1 and 2 became valid and operative.

On the respondent's side reliance was placed on the decision of the Calcutta High Court reported as Seres Chandra Palait v. Lalit Mohun Dutta (7). There is an elaborate review of the case-law on a question of this kind in that decision. The principle of the Privy Council decisions in Sreemutty Sooreemoney v. Denobundoo (1) and Sreemutty Sooreemoney v. Denobundoo (2) has been held to have no application to the facts of that case. The distinguishing feature in the will, which was the subject of consideration in that case, was that though the testator gave an absolute interest in the estate to his widow, the gift over was of what might remain undisposed of by her. The confinement of the gift over to such portion of the estate, if any, which may remain undisposed of by the donee, was held to be an indication that the testator intended to maintain an absolute estate in the donee throughout and the gift over was void for uncertainty. Such is not the nature of the defeasance or gift over in the present case. Even the decision of the Privy Council in Raghunatha Prasad Singh v. Deputy Commissioner, Partabgarh (8) has no application to the present case. After conferring an absolute estate on the legatee, the testator added clauses which were clearly restrictive of the incidents of ownership. One of the conditions imposed is that the legatee shall be bound to adhere strictly to the Hindu religion. Another condition is that he shall have no power to alienate the properties. A further clause is that the entire property shall gradually descend to the successors of the legatee subject to the restrictions laid down as binding upon the legatee. That was a glaring case of a grant of an absolute estate with all sorts of restrictions upon the legatee and his heirs which are certainly repugnant to the grant.

It is next argued that by reason of the compromise in a suit between Maduram-bal and defendant 1 some of the properties were allotted to defendant 1 absolutely, the rest being taken by Madurambal. The question is whether such a compromise can bind plaintiffs 1 and 2 who were not parties to it. As I have already observed the gift over in favour of plaintiffs 1 and 2 being valid and as the defect of the defeasance clause was to curtail the absolute estate of Madurambal to a life estate in the event of the contingency happening as was held in Lakshminarayana v. Valliammal (4), any arrangement or disposition in respect of the properties covered by Ex. A by Madurambal can have no legal force or validity after her death and cannot affect the rights of plaintiffs 1 and 2.

The fact that defendant 1 adopted defendant 3 subsequent to the death of Madurambal is not of much avail to the respondents. It cannot be denied that Madurambal died without any issue either natural or adopted. The moment that contingency happened, the properties devolved on plaintiffs 1 and 2 by reason of the defeasance clause and the gift over to them. The properties having thus vested in plaintiffs 1 and 2 on the death of Madurambal, they could not be divested of those properties by reason of the subsequent adoption made by defendant 1. There is hardly any doubt on this point. For all these reasons I am unable to agree with the decision of the lower appellate Court. The decision of the first Court should be restored, except as regards items 12 and 21 which are not comprised in Ex. A, on which alone the claim of plaintiffs 1 and 2 was based. In the result the decree of the lower appellate Court is set aside and a decree is passed in favour of plaintiffs 2 to 4 in respect of the suit properties except items 12 and 21 with costs against the defendants in all the Courts.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 83

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Raja Rajeswara Sethupathi and another—Appellants.

v.

Kuppusami Pillai—Respondent.

Appeal No. 164 of 1927, Decided on 5th August 1932, against order of Temporary Sub-Judge, Devakottah, D/- 5th February 1927, in A. S. No. 34 of 1926.

7. (1915) 31 I C 405.

8. A. I. R. 1929 P C 283=120 I C 641=56
I A 372=4 Luck 483 (P C).

Limitation Act (1908), Art. 182 (5)—Subsequent remittances to jail authorities by money order is application to Court and is step-in-aid — Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 39 (4).

Under a previous execution the judgment-debtor was sent to the Civil Jail. The decree-holder made monthly remittances by money order to the Superintendent of the Jail. Within three years from the last remittance the decree-holder again applied for execution.

Held : that the application was within time. The last remittance by money order even without any formal application was sufficient application and it was to the Court and it was a step-in-aid : A I R 1921 Mad 532, Expl and Dist. [P 85 C 1]

S. Soundararaja Ayyangar—for Appellants.

V. Ramaswamy Ayyar—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The question in this appeal is whether the application for execution is barred by limitation. The decree is dated 1st December 1917. The application for execution was presented on 28th June 1926, the date on which the first Court reopened after the summer recess of 1926. The prior execution application was presented on 1st February 1923. It is clear that the present application would be barred by limitation unless the facts relied upon by the decree-holder are sufficient to save limitation. The judgment-debtor was committed to jail on 28th February 1923. This decree-holder has remitted by postal money orders to the Jail Superintendent subsistence allowances, necessary for the detention of the judgment-debtor in prison. Those remittances had been made on 24th March 1923, 23rd April 1923, 23rd May 1923 and 25th June 1923. It is argued that the remittance made on 25th June 1923 is sufficient to save limitation as being a step-in-aid of execution. If this payment could be considered to be a step-in-aid of execution, it is clear that the present application is not barred by limitation. The lower Courts held that as the payment was made to the Superintendent of Jail, it cannot be considered that the application was made to the "proper Court" within the meaning of Art. 182, Lim. Act, to save limitation and therefore the present petition is barred by limitation. The respondent relies on a decision of this Court, Ramudu Chetti v. Varadaraja Chariar (1), by Krishnan, J. The facts of that case are not very clear. Apparently the learned Judge's view is that if payment was made within three years of the prior application, then such payment would be a step-in-aid of execution provided there was an application. And with regard to the application the learned Judge says :

"We cannot presume that an application would have been made, when the decree-holder paid such charges."

Whether the application should be one to the Court or whether it would be enough if that was made to the Superintendent of Jail is not made clear in that judgment. But both the Courts in that case seem to have been of the opinion that a payment of maintenance charges would be a step in aid of execution. The first appellate Court did not consider the question whether there was an application at all because the payment in that case was made admittedly three years after the previous application. Therefore I find that that decision does not render much help for deciding this case. It is argued that the payment of maintenance charges should be to the Court and since it was not made into the Court, it cannot be said that there was any request made to the Court to take a step in aid of execution. Under O. 21, R. 39, Cl. (4), Civil P. C., the first payment in connexion with the arrest of the judgment-debtor is to be made to the Court and the subsequent payments should be made to the officer in charge of the civil prison. So if an application was made to the Court on a subsequent occasion to receive the subsistence charges, that application would not be application in accordance with the provisions of O. 21, R. 39 (4); the application should be made according to the provisions of the Code to the Superintendent of Jail who is constituted by the Code as the proper officer, to receive the application. In my opinion an application made to him should in the circumstances be considered to be an application made to the Court under Art. 182 (5), Lim. Act. The next question is whether it can be said that there was an application in this case. It is argued that there was no such application. The facts show that the amounts were sent by money order. In the circumstances of the case I am inclined to accept the despatch by money order of the Jail Superintendent as amounting to an application. For the above reasons I am of opinion that the remittance made by the decree-holder on 25th June 1923 in the present case is a step in aid of execution and therefore the present application is not barred by limitation. In the result the orders of the lower Courts are set aside, and the petition will be taken on file and disposed of according to the merits by the District Munsif. The appellant will get his costs throughout.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 85

ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, J.

Nagalingam Pillai—Petitioner.

v.

Sivachidambara Sabapathy Deekshitar—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 132 of 1929, Decided on 11th May 1932, against order of Dist. Munsif, Chidambaram, D/- 15th August 1928.

Limitation Act (1908), (as amended by Act 9 of 1927), Art. 182—Right of execution not barred when amending Act came into force—Subsequent application will be governed by amended Act.

If the right of a decree-holder to execute the decree had not become barred and extinguished by limitation on the date on which the new Act 9 of 1927 came into force, then any application for execution which he might make after that date would be governed by the provisions of the new amended Act.

An application for execution was made on 9th January 1925. Final order was passed on it on 23rd March 1925. The new Act came into force on 1st January 1928. The subsequent application was filed on 23rd March 1928.

Held: that the latter application was within time: 34 C W N 733 and A I R 1930 Pat. 207, Foll. [P 85 C 2]

S. Jagadisa Iyer—for Petitioner.

Judgment.—The learned District Munsif of Chidambaram dismissed the execution petition filed by the assignee decree-holder in Small Cause Suit No. 682 of 1923 on the ground that the same was barred by limitation under Art. 182, Lim. Act. The assignee decree-holder has preferred this revision petition. The facts are these. The decree in Small Cause Suit No. 682 of 1923 was passed on 20th June 1923. On 9th January 1925 an application for execution was filed, which however was dismissed on 23rd March 1925. On 1st January 1928 the Limitation Act—amendment Act 9 of 1927 amending Art. 182, Lim. Act—came into force. On 23rd March 1928 the assignee-decree-holder filed another application for execution which also was subsequently dismissed for default of prosecution. The present execution petition was filed on 25th April 1928 and it is with reference to that petition that the learned District Munsif observed that it was barred by limitation.

Judged by the provisions of the old Art. 182 before it was amended in 1927 it is clear that the learned District Munsif's decision was right. But as the amended Act came into force on 1st January 1928, we have to consider whether the right of the decree-holder to execute the decree had become barred by limitation on that date, i.e. on the date on which the new Act came into force. If his right had not become barred and extinguished on that date, then any application for execution which he might make after that date would be governed by the provisions of the new amended Act. Now the decree having been passed on 20th June 1923, the application made on 9th January 1925 for execution was clearly within time. The decree-holder will have time till 9th January 1928 for filing a petition for executing his decree, and some eight days prior to that, i.e., on 1st January 1928, the new Act came into force. It being therefore clear that when the new Act came into force, the right of the decree-holder to execute this decree was not barred by limitation any subsequent application made by him to execute the decree would be governed by the provisions of the amended Act. The application made on 23rd March 1928 was therefore in my opinion in time, the same having been made within three years from 23rd March 1925, the date of order passed on the prior execution petition. Applying therefore the general principles that should govern a case when a new Limitation Act is passed, I think I must allow this revision petition.

I find that both the Calcutta High Court as well as the Patna High Court had to consider this very question. In Kanai Lal v. Purna Chandra (1) Mullick, J., of the Calcutta High Court had to consider substantially a similar point. The learned Judge observed that the law of limitation applicable to a suit or proceeding is the law in force at the date of the institution of the suit or proceeding unless there be a distinct provision to the contrary in the Act. On facts similar to the facts of the present case the learned Judge held that if execution of the decree be not barred when the new Act of 1927 came into force, any subsequent execution application would be in time if it should fulfil the conditions prescribed by the new Act. To the same effect is the decision by a Bench of the Patna High Court in the case reported in Sapani Patra v. Damodar Kar, A. I. R. 1930 Pat. 207. As observed in that case, an amending Act will not disturb the vested rights. If at the time an amending Act came into force the decree-holder's right to execute the decree had not become barred by limitation, the learned Judges held that the subsequent application for execution would be in time if filed within three years from the date of the orders passed on the prior execution petition.

For the above reasons I am clear that the learned District Munsif was in error in his view regarding limitation in the present case. I reverse the order of the learned District Munsif and remand the execution petition for fresh disposal in accordance with law. The petitioner will be entitled to his costs of this revision petition.

P.R.S./M.N.

*Petition allowed.A. I. R. 1933 Madras 86

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Abdul Razak Saheb—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Zainab Bi—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 756 of 1930, decided on 3rd August 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Vellore, in A. S. No. 200 of 1929.

Mahomedan Law—Gift — Immovable property — Transfer of possession necessary—Mother gifting property to son and continuing to live with him — Proof of delivery of possession necessary—Intention as constituting delivery—Subsequent conduct of donee is material — Mere registered deed is not enough.

A gift of immovable property under Mahomedan law is invalid in the absence of delivery of possession by the donor, but where the donor and the donee who are mother and son respectively live together at the time of the gift in the gifted property and continue to live so after the gift, there must be some evidence, to show that possession was transferred by the donor. A mere registered deed evidencing the gift will not be evidence of such transfer, but if the deed shows that possession was intended to be transferred and that the donee has been put in possession also, then effect should be given to this intention as constituting delivery of possession in law unless there is evidence to the contrary. In such a case it is not necessary for the donor to do any overt act to complete the gift: 9 Bom 146; A I R 1930 Bom 135; A I R 1925 Lah 501; 29 All 147; A I R 1923 Pat 481; 30 Mad 305; A I R 1927 Mad 572 and A I R 1930 Mad 593, Rel. on.; 19 Mad 343; A I R 1915 Mad 1; A I R 1928 P C 108 and A I R 1919 Cal 741, Dist.

[P 91 C 2]

Where the taxes of the property gifted are paid by the donee after the gift, it may constitute a sufficient intention to transfer possession even if the donee was paying them before the gift if the deed itself expresses such intention. No overt act or formal departure or entry is necessary in such case. [P 92 C 1]

A. Viswanatha Ayyar and A. Ramaswami Ayyar—for Appellant.

B. Somayya and P. Krishnamachari—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The defendant is the appellant. This second appeal arises out of a suit instituted by the plaintiff, his mother, for the possession of a house on the ground that she was driven out of it by him and that the gift deed executed by her in respect of it in his favour is not valid and binding. The subject-matter of the gift is a dwelling house which the plaintiff, the donor, got from her second husband. The appellant, the donee, is her son by her first husband. Some time after the death of the appellant's father, the respondent was married by her second husband. He also died. The appellant lived with his mother in the suit house before the date of the gift. At the time of the gift and subsequently also they lived in the same house. On account of differences between her and her daughter-in-law the plaintiff was forced to leave the house. In the pleadings and as shown by the issues, her case was that the suit document was brought about by fraud and undue influence, but it was also urged during the course of the trial, as may be seen from para. 15 of the Munsif's judgment:

"that it had not been proved that possession had been duly given to the defendant at the time of the gift and that therefore the transaction has become incomplete and is void."

On both the points the learned District Munsif found against the plaintiff and dismissed her suit. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge first dealt with the question: "Is the gift invalid for non-delivery of possession"? and as on this point he found in favour of the plaintiff he did not consider the other question arising in the suit and consequently allowed the appeal and gave her a decree. The learned Judge based his decision on Sher Ahmad v. Ibrahim (1), in which Newbould, J., of the Calcutta High Court stated that:

"in cases where the donor and the donee reside on the property a gift of the property under the Mahomedan law may be completed by some overt act by the donor indicating a clear intention on his part to transfer possession and to divest himself of all control over the subject-matter of the gift."

In this case the learned Judge pointed out that there was no overt act to indicate that the plaintiff has transferred possession of the property to the donee. The facts relating to the transfer of possession which are borne out by the evidence are these: In the gift deed there is a recital to the effect that the property has been delivered to the donee. At the time the deed of gift was executed the plaintiff is said to have stated that the donee was already in possession. The learned Judge stated that these facts do not show that there was a change of possession as the donee and the donor lived together in the house at the time of the gift. Subsequent to the gift the house-tax was being paid by the appellant. The learned Judge held that this fact also was of no importance as even before the gift he used to pay the tax and as nothing was produced by the appellant to show there was mutation of names in the house tax register subsequent to the date of the gift to indicate that possession has been delivered over to the donee.

On behalf of the appellant it is argued that, having regard to the relationship of the parties, the mere residence of the donor with the donee does not show that there was no transfer of possession, considering the fact that the gift had been made by means of a registered deed which recited that possession had been given to the donee and that all that could be done under the circumstances that was possible to show transfer of control of the house had been done in the case, and that therefore no overt act such as actual delivery of possession or mutation of names in the Municipal register, etc., was necessary to make the gift a valid one. On behalf of the respondent it is contended that the joint residence shows that there has been no complete abandonment of possession by the donor and that, even if no actual delivery need be proved, there must be evidence to show that complete relinquishment of possession was made by the donor; and that the circumstances of the case do not show that there has been such complete relinquishment. A large number of cases was cited on either side in support of the respective contentions. I shall discuss these cases as it is clear that the question involved in this case cannot be dealt with as a pure question of fact; indeed it has not been so dealt with in any of the cases brought to my notice and the counsel for the respondent has also not asked me to deal with it in that way.

It is well settled that under the Mahomedan law delivery of possession is necessary to make a gift of immovable property valid but this does not mean—and this is not disputed by the learned counsel for the respondent—that physical departure or formal entry is necessary in the case of a gift of immovable property in which the donor and the donee are both residing at the time of the gift. Ordinarily cases of this kind do not present much difficulty as clear evidence will be forthcoming to show that there has been a transfer, such as, mutation of names in favour of the donee in the revenue or other registers, or management and enjoyment of the property by the donee. Similarly there may be evidence of management of the property by the donor despite the gift to show that there has been no transfer. The difficulty arises only in cases where such evidence, one way or the other, is absent and these have to be scrutinised carefully especially so, when the point is not taken either in the pleadings or in the issues. The gift deed, Ex. A, which is a registered document runs as follows:

"Gift executed in favour of Abdul Razak Saheb by Zinubi Ammal The house described hereunder I have to-day given by way of gift and to-day I have put you in possession of the said house. Therefore you can happily enjoy the said house worth Rs. 500 from generation to generation with powers of gift, sale, etc., and all right to water, etc. Hereafter to the said house myself or my heirs shall have no manner of right or claimed."

In the document the donor states clearly that on the date of the gift "I have put you (donee) in possession of the said house" and that the donor has no right or claim to it thereafter and that the donee may enjoy it for ever with all the rights of an owner. This is a solemn declaration made by the donor. There can be no doubt, so far as can be gathered from the document, that the donor's intention to transfer possession of the house to the donee is clear and that she has also stated in the document expressly that she has put the donee in possession thus effectuating her intention. In such a case, even though the donor and the donee lived together on the property at the time of the gift, can it be deduced from the decisions of Courts that there is sufficient delivery of possession in law and that actual transfer of physical possession is not necessary to complete the gift? This is the question I have to decide in this case. I shall now examine the cases and first, deal with the decisions of our Court. In Bava Saib v. Mahomed (2):

1. A I R 1919 Cal 741=52 I C 314.

"where a Muhammadan woman made an oral gift of a house to her nephew on the occasion of his marriage, but subsequent to the gift continued to live with him in the house, it was held that the gift was null and void, as there was no entire relinquishment of the house by the donor and the case did not fall within the exception allowed by Muhammadan law, these exceptions being, where the house gifted is given by a husband to a wife or by a father or guardian to his minor child or ward."

This decision is very much relied on by the respondent but two things must be noticed, namely, that the gift being an oral one, nothing could be inferred regarding the delivery of possession from the mere fact that there was a gift, and that in a subsequent decision in Kandath Veetil v. Veetil Pakankutti (3), "the language of the Court" was stated to be "somewhat wide" and it was also stated that

"the learned Judges only intended to suggest that the donor's possession after the alleged gift would be evidence that the gift was incomplete."

No doubt in the latter case, the Court upheld the gift only because there was sufficient evidence to show there was transfer of possession, but it must be remarked that no inference regarding the transfer of possession could be made in this case also as the records show (see District Munsif's judgment) that there was no document to evidence the streedhanam grant. The decision in Bava Saib v. Mahomed (2) was not followed in Allapichai Tharaganar v. Mahomed Moiddeen (4) also. As already observed both in Bava Saib v. Mahomed (2) and in Kandath Veetil v. Veetil Pakankutti (3), though there the gifts were proved, obviously nothing could be inferred regarding the intention of the donor or of the transfer of possession; but the same cannot be said about the case before us, the gift having been made by a registered document which shows the intention of the donor and says pointedly that the donee was put in possession. That in such a case actual transfer of physical possession is not necessary to complete the gift when the donor and the donee are living together on the property forming the subject-matter of the gift follows from the decision in Hamera Bibi v. Najumunnissa Bibi (5) which is accepted as laying down the correct law by this Court in Kandath Veetil v. Veetil Pakankutti (3) which I have referred to.

In that decision the learned Judges, after referring to Hamera Bibi v. Najumunnissa Bibi (5) stated that "we agree with the view therein adopted." The decision in Hamera Bibi v. Najumunnissa Bibi (5) has been strongly relied on by the appellant. In that case a gift was made of some property by an aunt to her nephew. Both lived together in the house included in the gift deed at the time of the gift. In the document it was stated that the donor not merely made a gift of the property to the donee but also put him in proprietary possession of it. It also contained a further statement that the donee had accepted the gift and taken possession of the property. In addition to these statements in the document there was evidence to show that mutation of names was effected in favour of the donee. The validity of the gift was questioned 13 or 14 years after the gift, and there were other circumstances and evidence regarding plaintiff's conduct. No doubt there are strong circumstances which distinguish that case from the present one but, so far as the gift deeds are concerned both the cases are alike except in this, that the gift deed in that case contained a statement that the donee had taken pos-

2. (1896) 19 Mad 343.

3. (1907) 30 Mad 307.

4. A I R 1914 Mad 688=23 I O 520.

5. (1906) 28 All 147=2 A L J 778=(1906) A W N 222.

session of the property also. In these circumstances it was argued that, there being no transfer of possession of the house in which the parties resided as is necessary to satisfy the requirements of the Mahomedan law, the gift was invalid. It is true that the decision is based on all the facts of the case but there is sufficient indication in the judgment to show that, apart from the special distinguishing features, the statements in the document, formed the main basis of the learned Judges' decision. For they state as follows:

"We are not prepared to hold that, in a case such as the present, actual physical departure of the donor from a house which is the subject of a gift evidenced by a written instrument is necessary in order to complete the gift by delivery and possession. On the contrary, we think, that, if the parties are present on the premises, it is sufficient that an intention on the part of the donor to transfer the possession has been unequivocally manifested. There can be no doubt in this case that such an intension was unequivocally manifested. In the document itself it is expressly stated that the plaintiff not merely made a gift of the property to Minnat-ullah, but also put him into proprietary possession of it, and a further statement that Minnat-ullah had accepted the gift and taken possession of the property."

After stating thus, they pointed out that in addition to this there was mutation of names, etc. Then they referred to the decision in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6) in which the necessity for actual delivery in the case of a gift of a house in which the donor and donee lived at the time of the gift was considered. In that case the subject of the deed of gift was a dwelling house in which the donor was residing at the time of the gift and continued to reside up to the time of his death along with the donee. The District Judge held that no relinquishment on the part of the donor has taken place and that the gift was therefore inoperative. The decision was set aside and the learned Judges observed as follows:

"As to the delivery of the house, the principle is to be borne in mind, that when a person is present on the premises proposed to be delivered to him, a declaration of the person previously possessed puts him into possession An appropriate intention where two are present on the same premises may put the one out as well as the other into possession without any actual physical departure or formal entry, and effect is to be given, as far as possible, to the purpose of an owner whose intention to transfer has been unequivocally manifested."

After referring to these observations
6. (1885) 9 Bom 146.

in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6), the learned Judges in Hamera Bibi v. Najum Unnissa Bibi (5) referred to Ameer Ali's book on Mahomedan Law and pointed out that the learned author did not disapprove of that decision. I think the decision in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6) strongly supports the appellant. This decision may be said to be impliedly accepted in this Court as it has expressly accepted Hamera Bibi v. Najamunnissa Bibi (5) which relies on this decision. Both these cases and Bava Saib v. Mahomed (2), have been referred to in Vahazullah v. Boyapati (7), but they have not been discussed as a finding was called for "as regards the transmutation of possession." The decision in Rahaman Bi v. Mahomed Fatima Bibi (8), is not much helpful as it discusses the question of law only generally as it dealt with the gift of a house by a father to his minor son which involves the application of certain special presumptions under the Mahomedan law. Coming to the recent decisions of this Court in Ajagar Hazar Saheb v. Annamma, A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 572, with regard to the argument that, inasmuch as the donor lived with the donee, it must be held that he did not deliver possession to her, Devadoss, J., observed as follows: and those observations in my opinion may well be applied to the present case:

"We have to see what the intention of the donor is. From Ex. B it is quite clear that he divested himself of all his property and that he wanted to be maintained by the plaintiff. That being so can it be reasonably contended that his mere living in the house meant that she had no possession of the house? When a man makes a gift of property to a near relation who is living with him, the mere fact that he happens to live with him after the gift is made is not a sufficient circumstance to hold that possession did not pass. (The italics are mine.) Each case would depend upon its circumstances. If the intention of the donor is clear that the donee should have possession of the property, the mere fact that the donor happens to live after the date of the gift with the donee in the house which is the subject of the gift would not by itself entitle the Court to hold that possession had not passed and that possession remained with the donor," and then the learned Judge proceeded to consider the evidence which also showed that there must have been effective transfer of possession. The decision in Muhammad v. Ummanaikani Ammal, A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 593, strongly supports the appellant. In that case the gifts were of portions of the family dwelling house in which the parties have all along been living. The learned Judge Wallace, J., held that actual divesting by the donor and delivery to the donee was not necessary in this case, such possession as is suitable and possible in the circumstances having been given. In the case of one of the deeds the donee was a minor and this fact was referred to as an additional reason for holding that the intention to give, declared in the deed, was sufficient to hold that there was delivery. This consideration does not affect the present case. This was only an additional reason given in one of the cases. I do not think that the Madras decision compels me to hold that in the case of a gift of a dwelling house in which the donor and the donee who are close relations lived together at the time of gift, it will be necessary for the donee to prove an overt act on the part of the donor to show that there has been a transfer of possession to validate the gift under the Mahomedan law, when the document shows an intention on the part of the donor to divest himself of possession and contains an explicit statement that the donee has been put in possession and nothing to the contrary has been proved by the donor. Each case must be decided with reference to its own circumstances. None of the decisions I have examined is opposed to the appellant's contention, on the other hand one of them: A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 572, contains observations directly applicable, to the present case.

7. (1907) 30 Mad 519=17 M L J 562.

8. A I R 1915 Mad 1=23 I C 651.

Now coming to the decision of the other High Courts, I have already referred to a decision of the Allahabad High Court and to one decision of the Bombay High Court. Two other decisions of the Bombay High Court may also be referred to: Abdul Majid Khan v. Hussein Bu (9) and Musa Miya v. Kadar Bux (10). The first is relied on by the appellant and the other, which is a Privy Council, decision by the respondent. In Abdul Majid Khan v. Hussein Bee (9), the decision in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6) was followed; but it was observed that it does not follow in every case necessarily that where two are present, possession must be deemed to have been transferred. The question as to whether the donor intended to transfer the possession at the time of the gift must be answered with reference to the facts of each particular case and in that case it was pointed out that the evidence at the trial definitely showed that there was no transfer of possession. In the case before us there being no such evidence, the decision in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6) may well be applied. The decision in Musa Miya v. Kadar Bux (10), is not helpful as it related to an oral gift and the absence of the delivery of possession was sought to be explained by relying on an exception to the general rule. The donor in that case was the grandfather and the donee, the grandson. It was observed by their Lordships that the general rule of Mahomedan law that a gift is invalid in the absence of delivery of possession is subject to an exception in the case of a gift to a minor by his father, or guardian. But this exception should be strictly construed. It does not extend to a gift by a grandfather to his minor grandsons if their father is alive and has not been deprived of his right and powers as guardian, even though the minors have always lived with the grandfather and have been brought up and maintained by him.

In Dalpheroo Mian v. Bengali Mali (11), the Patna High Court while affirming the general rule that in order to complete the gift under Mahomedan law the donor must even if only for a time abandon possession of the property gifted favour of the donee, referred with approval to the decision in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6), but in the case before them the learned Judges held that the transfer of possession was not proved because "beyond the written deed of gift there is no such unequivocal intention; on the contrary the donor soon after the deed or gift joined in mortgaging the house," which was the subject-matter of the gift. The contents of the document are not mentioned in the judgment but it is clear that they did not give effect to the intention if any was expressed in it because the evidence showed that the donor had acted contrary to such intention. Probably beyond the bare deed there was nothing to support delivery of possession in that case. In the case before us as I have already said, the document states that the donee was put in possession and there is no evidence on the part of the donor that she acted in a way which will show that she did not part with possession as in the Patna case. The appellant next relied on Rahmat v. Baulat Bibi, A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 501, a decision of the Lahore High Court. This decision is very much like the present case. After discussing the case law on the subject it was held that actual transfer of physical possession is not necessary to complete a gift in cases where the donor and the donee live in the gifted house. The fact that "the donor continued to live in the same house for about a month after the date of the gift which he had made by means of a registered deed, does not show that possession was not given to the donee where it is so expressly stated in the deed. (The italics are mine): see the head-note."

9. A I R 1920 Bom 185=55 I C 952.

10. A I R 1928 P C 108=109 I C 81=55 I A 171=52 Bom 916 (P C).

11. A I R 1928 Pat 481=71 I C 897.

Mr. Somayya for the respondent besides relying on those of the above mentioned cases which seem to support him relied also on para 127 of Mulla's Mahomedan Law, para 3, of which dealing with delivery of possession of immovable property where the donor and the donee both reside in the property states as follows:

"No physical departure or formal entry is necessary in the case of a gift of immovable property in which the donor and the donee are both residing at the time of the gift. In such a case the gift may be completed by some overt act by the donor indicating a clear intention on his part to transfer possession and to divest himself of all control over the subject of the gift."

The cases given in support of this proposition are Ibrahim v. Suleman (6) and Abdul Majid Khan v. Hussein Bu (9). I have examined above, both these cases and have shown that the law stated in one of them regarding the delivery of the house in that case distinctly supports the appellant; in the other case the learned Judges held that it was distinguishable from the decision in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6) and that the question as to whether the donor intended to transfer the possession at the time of the gift must be answered with reference to the facts of each particular case. These cases affirming the general principle that in order to complete a gift some overt act on the part of the donor is necessary, show how in special cases, circumstances may render the general principle inapplicable. The appellant does not contend against the general propositions of law stated in the book, but what he says is that the law being what is stated therein, in a case like the present, effect should be given to the intention of the donor clearly indicated in the gift deed and to the express statement contained in it that the donee has been put into possession. This contention is supported by abundant authority.

Having regard to the decisions which I have discussed, my conclusions so far as they relate to this case are these: (a) that a gift of immovable property under Mahomedan law is invalid in the absence of delivery of possession by the donor; (b) where the donor and the donee live together at the time of the gift in the gifted property, there must be some evidence, to show that possession was transferred by the donor: (1) a mere registered deed evidencing the gift will not be evidence of such transfer; but (2) if the deed shows that possession was intended to be transferred and that the donee has been put in possession also, then effect should be given to this intention as constituting delivery of possession in law unless there is evidence to the contrary. In such a case it is not necessary for the donor to do any overt act to complete the gift.

These conclusions are supported by the decision in Ibrahim v. Suleman (6), Abdul Majid v. Hussein Bu (9), A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 501, Hamera Bibi v. Najum-unnessa Bibi (5) and Dalpheroo Mian v. Bengali Mali (11). I do not think the Madras decisions brought to my notice are opposed to these conclusions; on the other hand two of them clearly support them. I have already referred to the general features of this case, but to one fact I wish specially to draw attention. In my opinion, the learned Judge has not attached sufficient importance to it. The defendant has been paying the Municipal tax for the house after the gift. It is true that he used to pay it even before the gift but it was not right on this ground to ignore the significance of the subsequent payment in the face of the express statement in the document that the defendant has been put in possession of the house. That being so, the right way to construe the subsequent conduct of the defendant is, in the light of that statement. In this case, I think in the light of Ex. A, payment of Municipal taxes by the defendant subsequent to the gift may be taken as a sufficiently clear indication that transfer of possession has been made by the donor. If so, there is no difficulty in the case at all. Even without relying on this item of evidence, I have already shown that there has been such transfer of possession in this case as would validate the gift under the Mahomedan law. Having regard to the relationship of the parties, the mere residence of the donor with the donee does not show that there was no transfer of possession. In my opinion all that could be done under the circumstances to show there was transfer of possession has been done in this case; and that in a case like the present, an overt act on the part of the donor is not necessary to complete the gift.

The decision relied on by the learned Judge, Sher Ahmad v. Ibrahim (1), is distinguishable as we know nothing about the contents of the "Lebanama" in that case; probably it mentioned the bare fact of gift and contained nothing about the intention of the donor, possession by the donee, etc. For the above reasons, I would hold that the learned Judge's decision is wrong on the first point. (The judgment then called for a finding on the point of fraud and having received it in the negative concluded.) I accept the finding of the lower Court. The learned Judge distinctly finds that the executant of the document had independent advice. The result is this second appeal is allowed and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs here and in the Court below.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 92

WALLER AND PANDALAI, JJ.
(Pena Rina Yena) Manickavasagam Chettiar—Petitioner.

v.

Union Board of Devakottah—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petns. Nos. 382 and 383 of 1932, Decided on 3rd March 1932, to revise decrees of Temporary Sub-Judge, Devakottah, in A. S. Nos. 15 and 22 of 1927.

Madras Local Boards Act (1920), S. 93—Residence of person within area of Board—Money lending outside—He can be taxed for income coming within the Board area, whether taxed elsewhere or not.

Where a person resides within the area of the Union Board and receives at that place income from the money lending business carried on outside the Board area, he can yet be taxed for this income whether he has been taxed elsewhere or not: A I R 1932 Mad 509, Foll. [P 92 C 2]

M. Subbaraya Ayyar and K. Ramanathan Chettiar—for Petitioner.

K. Bhashyam Ayyangar—for Opposite Party.

Waller, J.—In this case two second appeals were originally filed. It is obvious that the matter involved was of a small cause nature and therefore the appeals do not lie. Two applications were filed to convert the appeals into civil revision petitions which were allowed. The question involved is as to the collection of profession-tax from the petitioner by the respondent, the Union Board of Devakottah. The petitioner lives within the area of the Union Board, but carries on a money lending business at Madras, Mannargudi and Nellore. His contention is that, as he has already paid the profession-tax on the income from his business in those places, he is not liable to pay again on it at his place of residence. He pleads, in fact, that income cannot be received as income twice over. That is a contention we have rejected in our judgment on Perianan Chetty v. Taluk Board, Devakottah (1). We reject it again for the reasons given in our judgment in that case. His next contention is that it is contrary to the policy of the Local Boards Act to tax a man twice over on his income from the same business. That contention we cannot accept. The relevant section of the Act of 1920 is S. 93. The petitioner is a person "who, within such area . . . is in receipt of an income from money-lending or any source other than houses and lands inside the local limits of the area."

As regards double taxation all that the Act indicates is that an income derived from a source otherwise taxable within the area must not be taxed there twice. If the assessee derives an income from houses and lands within that area, that is otherwise taxable within the area and must not be taxed again. But let his lands and houses be outside the area and it is obvious that his income from them, if it reaches Devakottah, will be taxable there under S. 93 whether it has been taxed elsewhere or not. The only cases in which double taxation is not allowed are specified in sub-S. (3) and the petitioner's is not one of those cases. Under the present Act—the Act of 1930—the exceptions are much wider and the petitioner would not be taxable at all at Devakottah. In the result, we must dismiss the civil revision petitions with costs, on the finding that the petitioner is taxable. No question as to the amount of the tax was argued before us.

1. A I R 1932 Mad 509=198 I. C. 600=Mad 848.

P.R.S./B.V.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 93

PANDALAI, J.

Koraga Gowda and another—Plaintiffs—Petitioners.

v.

Somappa Gowda and others—Defendants—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 340 of 1929, Decided on 18th August 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, South Kanara, D/- 10th September 1928.

Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (4) (c) (as amended in Madras)—Suit for partition, possession and declaration setting aside previous alienation—Plaintiff's share determines valuation—Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (4) (c) applies and not S. 7 (4) (a).

A suit for partition and possession of the plaintiff's share and an ancillary relief of declaration setting aside previous alienations has to be valued not on the value of the whole of the family properties involved in the partition or alienation but only on plaintiffs' own share of it. The case is governed by S. 7 (4) (c) as amended in Madras and not S. 7 (4) (a): A I R 1927 Mad 825, Foll; A I R 1932 Mad 491, Ref.

[P 94 C 1]

B. Sitarama Rao—for Petitioners.

K. Y. Adiga—for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—In this suit which was filed early in 1926, 14 issues were framed, but no question of jurisdiction was raised. On 29th March 1927 (two days before the end of the quarter) the case came on and then a new issue (issue 15) was raised: "Whether the suit is beyond the jurisdiction of this Court." It does not appear on whose initiative this question arose. The District Munsif decided it at once by an order dated the same day in which he held that for purposes of jurisdiction the prayers in the plaint which was one for re-partition of family property and (1) to declare the former partition Exs. 1 and (2) to declare certain alienations, including Exs. 25 and 34 made by other members of the family not binding on the plaintiffs so far as their shares are concerned, must be valued on some footing not mentioned by him. He held without referring to any provision of law on which he acted that the suit was beyond his jurisdiction and ordered the plaint to be returned to the plaintiffs to be presented in the proper Court. On the plaintiffs' appeal the learned Subordinate Judge upheld the order taking the view that the declarations sought about the prior partition and the alienations are not accompanied by any prayer for consequential relief and that the proper value of those declaratory reliefs is the market value of the properties involved in the partition and alienations. Of the alienations Ex. 25 is a simple mortgage for more than Rs. 5,000 and Ex. 34 is a sale-deed for Rs. 4,000. As these amounts which apparently the learned Judge took to be an indication of the market value were above the Munsif's jurisdiction, he upheld the order relying on Vasireddi Veeramma v. Butchiah (1).

It seems to me both the lower Courts have fallen into error. In the first place the suit was for possession of plaintiffs' one-eighth share of family property. That was the main prayer. In order to get it the plaintiffs had to get rid, so far as their share was concerned, of certain obstacles, i. e., the prior partition and the alienations. Firstly, in such a case the plaintiffs' suit has not to be valued on the value of the whole of the family properties involved in the partition or alienation but only on plaintiffs' own share of it: see Govindan Nair v. Madhavi, A. I. R., 1932 Mad. 491. Secondly, in this case the declarations sought were only ancillary to the prayer for possession and such a case is governed by S. 7 (4) (c), Court-fees Act, as to which the Madras Amendment applies, i. e., the valuation for purpose of court-fees is one half of the value of the immovable property affected by the declaration, valued as provided by S. 7 (5). The respondents' learned advocate argued that the declarations fell under S. 7 (4) (a), introduced by the Madras amendment and that in the case the value must be fixed on the market value of the properties. He relied on the case cited by the Subordinate Judge, Vasireddi Veeramma v. Butchiah (1), for the general principle that in cases where a statutory method of valuation is not provided, the proper mode of valuation for jurisdiction under S. 12, Civil Courts Act, is the market value. I do not think this is a case falling under S. 7 (4) (a). Even if it were the decision in Venkatanarasimha Raju v. Chandrayya (2) is a decision of a Bench directly in point which held that in such cases the valuation under S. 7 (5) must be adopted. I am not competent, even if I were otherwise prepared, to differ from this ruling. According to S. 8, Suits Valuation Act, the value for court-fees is the same in this case as that for jurisdiction.

1. A I R 1927 Mad 563=101 I C 379=50 Mad 646.

It follows that the proper mode of valuation of the declarations was to apply the Madras amendment to S. 7 (4) (c) and value plaintiffs' share of the properties covered by each instrument as ascertained under S. 7 (5). The plaintiffs' prayer for partition must also be properly valued. As there are no materials for ascertaining which Court has jurisdiction on the above footing the order of the lower Court must be set aside and the plaint returned to the District Munsif to carry out the direction above made. The petitioners must have their costs of this proceeding in this and in the lower Courts.

P.R.S./M.N. Petition allowed.

2. A I R 1927 Mad 825=105 I C 171.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 94

PANDALAI, J.

Kolipakam Penchelu Varadappa Rao —Defendant—Petitioner.

v.

Chitoor Mahadeviah and another—
Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 552 of 1929, Decided on 4th August 1932, against decision of Addl. Sub-Judge, Nellore,
D/- 21st September 1928.

(a) Contract Act (1872), S. 11—No decree on contract by minor—Representation of majority is no ground for passing decree.

There can be no decree against a person on a contract made during his minority. And this cannot be avoided either on the ground that the minor having represented himself to be a major is estopped from showing that he was a minor or on the ground that by such representation he was guilty of cheating or fraudulent conduct; (Case law referred.) [P 95 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115—Jurisdiction to decide rightly or wrongly does not mean refusal to follow binding precedents—Glar- ing error—High Court will interfere—Prece- dents.

The lower Court's jurisdiction to decide wrongly as well as rightly does not mean that after the superior Courts have decided a parti- cular question of law in one way, the subor- dinate Courts are at liberty to discuss the matter over again and having done so go wrong about it. In a glaring case of error the High Court will interfere in revision. [P 95 C 1]

Ch. Raghava Rao and S. Rajaraman — for Petitioner.

B. Somayya—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—In this case a decree for money has been passed against the peti- tioner on account of the deficiency left out of a sum borrowed by him on a pledge of jewels after a portion of the debt was paid out of the sale proceeds of the pledge. The defence was that the peti- tioner was at the time of the pledge a minor and that he is not liable on the contract of pledge. It has been found as a fact that the petitioner was a minor and also that he had entered into a number of other transactions with other persons who all like the respondent ap- parently believed either from the peti- tioner's words or conduct that he was a major. The lower appellate Court was so strongly impressed with this aspect of the case that it says that it agrees with the District Munsif's opinion that the petitioner learnt nothing else but to cheat the world at large as soon as he attained years of discretion. Although thus it may be taken that the petitioner made the respondents and others believe that he was a major, there is nothing to show that the petitioner was guilty of any specifically fraudulent conduct either as to his age or otherwise towards the respondents.

It appears from paras. 12 to 14 of the lower appellate Court's judgment that the learned Judge was of the opinion on the question whether there could be a decree against the petitioner on the above facts, that there are as many cases one way as the other; and in the end having said that he was convinced of the justice of the District Munsif's judgment con- firmed the decree. There can be no doubt that the decision of both the lower Courts is wrong on the facts found. The respondents' learned advocate has very properly not sought to support it. The decisions of our own Court Appasami Aiyangar v. Narayanasami Aiyar (1) and Raghavayya v. Subbaya (2), sup- ported as they are by those of the Privy

1. A I R 1930 Mad 945=129 I C 51=54
Mad 112.

2. (1918) 43 I C 908.

Council Sadiq Ali Khan v. Jai Kishori (3), in Mahomed Syedol Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark (4) and of the English Courts of Appeal in Leslie Limited v. Sheill (5), put it beyond dispute that there can be no decree against a person on a contract made during his minority. And this cannot be avoided either on the ground that the minor having represented himself to be a major is estopped from showing that he was a minor or on the ground that by such representation he was guilty of cheating or fraudulent conduct. The decree against the petitioner must therefore be set aside.

But the respondents' advocate has urged that though the lower Court have gone wrong in their decisions, this Court will not interfere as they had jurisdiction to decide wrongly as well as rightly. This assumes that after the superior Courts have decided a particular question of law in one way, the Subordinate Courts are at liberty to discuss the matter over again and having done so go wrong about it. I do not think they have the power to do so. In any case the decision is undoubtedly an illegal or irregular exercise of jurisdiction with which this Court will and should interfere in so glaring a case of error. The decree so far as it is against the petitioner is set aside and the suit dismissed. The parties will suffer their costs in the Courts below. The petitioner will have his costs here.

P.R.S./M.N.

Petition allowed.

3. A I R 1928 P C 152=109 I C 387 (P C).
4. A I R 1916 P C 246=39 I C 401=43 I A 256=2 A C 575.
5. (1914) 3 K B 607=83 L J K B 1145=30 T L R 460=14 L T 106=58 S J 453.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 95

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

S. Subramania Ayyar — Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Al. Ar. Rm. Arunachalam Chettiar—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 965 of 1930, Decided on 5th August 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Ramnad.

(a) Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), S. 3 (9)—Landholder.

The term landholder as defined in Local Boards Act includes the landholder as defined in the Estates Land Act and also other kinds of landholders not contemplated in that Act.

[P 95 C 2]

(b) Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), S. 88, Prov. 2 — Inamdar holding both warams — Lessee is tenant and not intermediate landholder and comes within Prov. 2 to S. 88.

Where the inamdar presumably held both the warams in the village at the time of the grant the lessee of such village must be deemed to be more a tenant than an intermediate landholder and as such the lessee will be liable to pay only half the cesses payable by the landholder under Prov. 2 to S. 88. [P 96 C 2].

M. Patanjali Sastri and A. Nagaswamy Ayyar—for Appellant.

V. Rajagopala Ayyar and T. V. Ramiah—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This second appeal has been preferred by defendant 2 and arises out of a suit brought by plaintiff-respondent 1 for the recovery of Rs. 1,167 from defendants 1 and 2 alleged to be the balance of rent and cesses payable by them for Faslis 1332 to 1336 under a registered lease deed dated 18th July 1922 (Ex. A). Plaintiff and defendants 3 to 6 are the owners of two Dharma-sanam villages called Anjamadai and Kachan. These villages were enfranchised by the Inam Commissioner and comprise 130 pangus. The inams consisted of both warams at the time of the enfranchisement and the present claim by the plaintiff is based upon the lease deed, Ex. A. The main dispute between the plaintiff and defendant 2 is as regards the liability to pay the cesses in respect of the aforesaid inams. On the plaintiff's side, the contention is that the lessee under Ex. A was bound to pay the entire amount of the cesses payable in respect of the villages whereas the contention on behalf of defendant 2 is that the lessee was only bound to pay such portion of the cesses as is recoverable from him under the provisions of S. 88, Madras Local Boards Act. There is no doubt that the plaintiff is a landholder in respect of these villages within the meaning of S. 3, Cl. 9 of the Act. The term landholder as defined in this Act includes the landholder as defined in the Estates Land Act and also other kinds of landholders not contemplated in the Madras Estates Land Act. The dispute in this case is whether the position of the lessee under Ex. A, namely, the father of defendants 1 and 2, was that of an intermediate landholder or a tenant. The term "intermediate landholder" has not been defined in the Madras Local Boards Act, whereas, the word "tenant" is said to include all persons who, whether personally or by an agent occupy a land under a landholder or an intermediate landholder. As the inamdar presumably held both the warams in these villages at the time of the grant, the lessee of such villages must be deemed to be more a tenant than an intermediate landholder.

Reference was made to Cl. 9 in Ex. A which refers to the existence of some tenants who are in occupation of some portions of these villages; and in view of the existence of such raiyats or tenants, it is argued that the position of the lessee under Ex. A would more appropriately be that of an intermediate landholder. It is not known whether the plots in occupation of such tenants form the bulk of the lands comprised in the villages or only a small fraction thereof. There is no doubt that the inamdars are owners of both the warams in these villages, although the actual extent of the lands in which they hold both the warams is not known: vide also Cl. 15 of Ex. A. Considering the real nature of these inams at the time of the grant, it seems to me that the position of the lessee of such villages under Ex. A would be more appropriately that of a tenant than that of an intermediate landholder. In this view the lessee's liability for the payment of cesses under S. 88, Madras Local Boards Act, would come under Prov. 2 and not under Prov. 1. Both the Courts below have also accepted the position of the lessee under Ex. A as that of a tenant within the meaning of Prov. 2 of the said section. I am in agreement with that view. That being so, the lessee under Ex. A would be legally bound to pay one-half of the cesses payable by the landholder in respect of these villages. (His Lordship then considered the document Ex. A and held). I consider that on a reasonable construction of Cl. 7 in Ex. A, the lessee must be deemed to have stipulated to pay what was legally payable by him to the landholder. (His Lordship then held that it was necessary for the lower appellate Court to decide whether the overpaid cesses could be adjusted and concluded). This appeal is accordingly remanded to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Ramnad for fresh hearing and disposal in the light of the observations made above. The costs of this appeal will abide the final result and should be provided for in the revised decree to be passed by the lower appellate Court. The court-fee paid by the appellant on the memorandum of appeal will be refunded to him.

P.R.S./M.N.

Case remanded.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 96

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

Naranappier—Appellant.

v.

Chidambaram Pillai and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 213 of 1931, Decided on 26th July 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Tiruvarur, D/- 27th April 1931.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 90—Transferee from judgment-debtor after attachment can apply under R. 90—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 64.

A person to whom the judgment-debtor transfers the property subsequent to its attachment is entitled under O. 21, R. 90 to apply to set aside the court sale as he is a person "whose interests are affected by the sale." [P 97 C 1]

T. M. Krishnaswami Ayyar, B. R. Chakravarthi and K. Balasubramania Ayyar—for Appellant.

K. V. Krishnaswami Ayyar, V. Rajagopala Ayyer and T. V. Ramiah—for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The lower Court has made an order setting aside the sale of certain items under O. 31, R. 90, and the appellant complains against that order. The point of law raised is, that the petitioner before the lower Court has no locus standi under the rule in question; in other words, that he is not a person "whose interests are affected by the sale." The property was sold in parcels and the decree-holder (the appellant before us) purchased lots 3 and 5; another, a stranger, purchased lots 1, 2, 4 and 6 and he has not appealed against the part of the order affecting him. The decree-holder alone has thus preferred this appeal and we are therefore concerned with the sale of only lots 3 and 5. The position of the applicant before the lower Court (whom I shall refer as the respondent) is this. Subsequent to the attachment which preceded the sale, he purchased certain items in lot 3 and certain other items in lot 2 with which we are not concerned. Thus, in regard to lot 3, he claims that he has a right to apply under R. 90, by reason of his purchase, which admittedly was made subsequent to the attachment. In regard to lot 5 the right he claims is a different one with which it is unnecessary to deal, in the view we have taken to which I shall refer presently.

The point of law argued is this. Is a person to whom the judgment-debtor transfers the property subsequent to its attachment, entitled under R. 90 to apply to set aside the Court sale? That is to say, is he or is he not a person "whose interests are affected by the sale?" The answer is obvious, that the Court sale affects his interests; he is interested in the property fetching as high a price as possible, being the person entitled to any surplus remaining over, after the decree is satisfied. As a matter of fact, the respondent has acquired the entire interest of the judgment-debtor in the property and he is the person that suffers, if there be irregularity or fraud in connexion with the Court sale. But Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Ayyar for the appellant contends, that the sale to the respondent being subsequent to the attachment confers on him no right at all and that he has therefore no locus standi under R. 90. This argument which is professed to be based upon S. 64, Civil P. C., overlooks its plain effect. In the first place, what the provision renders void, is not every transfer, but a transfer, contrary to the attachment. The words "contrary to such attachment" were substituted in the present Code for words of much wider import "during the continuance of the attachment" in the Code of 1882. The expression in the old Code was too wide comprising as it did, alienations that could not possibly prejudice the rights of an attaching creditor; but under the present section, the question to be considered is, is the transfer, contrary to the attachment? When its effect is not to defeat the attachment but is, on the other hand, subject to it, it cannot possibly be held to offend against the section. Secondly, the section does not provide that the transfer shall be void absolutely or without limitation but only "as against all claims enforceable under the attachment." That means that the purchaser is subject to the same liabilities as the judgment-debtor was and that by reason of the transfer he does not get any higher rights. The transfer is subject to the claims under the attachment, but surely to commit an irregularity or a fraud in the conduct of the sale, is not such a claim. I have not the slightest hesitation in holding that, so far as lot 3 is concerned, the respondent has made out his right.

Then arises the question of fact, namely was there material irregularity or fraud in regard to the sale of item 3 by reason of which the applicant has sustained substantial injury? (Here his Lordship discussed the evidence and came to the conclusion that there was fraud and irregularity resulting in substantial loss in respect of lot 3 but not in respect of lot 5.) In the result, the appeal is dismissed as to lot 3 and allowed in respect of lot 5. The appellant and respondent 1 here shall pay and receive proportionate costs throughout. In regard to plots 1, 2, 4 and 6, there is, as we have said, no appeal and the lower Court's decision consequently stands.

Reilly, J.—I agree. I do not think there can be any doubt that the petitioner before the Subordinate Judge, Chidambaram Pillai, was a person whose interests were affected by the sale within the meaning of R. 90, O. 21, Civil P. C. It is not now disputed that, after the attachment obtained by the appellant before us, Naranappier, in execution of his decree but before the sale with which this case is concerned, Chidambaram Pillai bought several items in lot 3. What he bought in that way he bought subject to Naranappier's attachment. But that does not mean that his purchase was illegal or illusory. He bought in effect the surplus over any value which might be obtained by Naranappier in execution under his attachment. Mr. T. M. Krishnaswami Ayyar suggested that, even if Chidambaram Pillai was a person whose interests were affected by the sale within the meaning of R. 90, O. 21, nevertheless S. 64 of the Code prevented him from attacking the sale in execution. But what S. 64 of the Code lays down as my learned brother has pointed out, is that such a purchase as that of Chidambaram Pillai is void as against any claim enforceable under the attachment. That I understand to mean that his purchase cannot defeat or affect Naranappier's right as attaching decree-holder to satisfy his decree out of the property attached. But I see no reason why that provision should shut out Chidambaram Pillai from any right as a person interested to show to the Court that by reason of some fraud or irregularity substantial loss had been caused to him by the property being sold in execution for less than its market value. (The Court then considered the finding as to fraud and irregularity and concurring with the other judgment concluded). I agree with my learned brother that in the circumstances the evidence does not appear to be of sufficient value to justify the finding that substantial loss was caused in regard to lot 5, and therefore I agree that the appeal should be allowed in respect of that lot. I agree also to the order proposed as to costs.

P.R.S./M.N. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 98

BARDSWELL, J.

Tolladagu Musalayya and others — Accused—Petitioners.

v.

Mateli Ranga Rao — Complainant—
Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 282 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 261 of 1932, Decided on 12th August 1932, against order of Sub-Magistrate, Polavaram, D/- 10th March 1932.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 403—Mistaken order of acquittal in previous case when discharge alone was possible is no bar to subsequent trial—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 494.

The accused were previously tried for offences triable as a warrant case on a complaint by the police. Before a charge was framed the case was withdrawn and an order of acquittal was passed. It was obvious that an order of discharge was meant to be passed and would alone be passed, but the order as passed was through an oversight.

Held: that a subsequent trial for the same offences on the same facts on a complaint by a private person was not barred : A I R 1929 Bom 408 ; A I R 1921 Pat 311, Dist. and A I R 1915 Mad 23, Appl. [P 99 C 1]

*Appa Rao—*for Petitioners.

K. Bhimasankaran — for Opposite Party.

*Public Prosecutor—*for the Crown.

Order.—The six petitioners are the accused in C. C. No. 206 of 1931 on the file of the Sub-Magistrate of Polavaram. The complaint against them has been brought by a private party who is the respondent to this petition, as to offences punishable under Ss. 147, 323 and 341, I. P. C.

A charge sheet has previously been filed by the police against the petitioners on the same facts of offences punishable under Ss. 147 and 323, I. P. C. The Sub-Magistrate took the case on file but, before any evidence was taken, the Prosecuting Sub-Inspector withdrew from the prosecution under S. 494, Criminal P. C. The Magistrate then signed an order on a printed form by which the accused were declared to be acquitted. The form used was No. 80 which is intended for withdrawals and acquittals under S. 248, Criminal P. C., the 248 being altered to 494. The petitioners have taken the point before him that the respondent's complaint could not be inquired into under the principle of autrefois acquit. The Magistrate however held that the petitioners had in fact only been discharged in the earlier case. Against his decision as to that the petitioners have now come up on revision.

There is no doubt but that the petitioners should have been discharged and not acquitted in the earlier case. It was one that was triable as a warrant case and as no charge had been framed, Cl. (a), S. 494, was applicable and not Cl. (b). It is urged however for the petitioners that as the Magistrate, however mistakenly or unintentionally, had recorded an order of acquittal, they must be deemed to have been acquitted. Attention is called to Shankar Dattatraya v. Dattatraya Sadashiv (1). Therein there is cited with approval a Patna case Ram Mahato v. Emperor (2), in which it was held that S. 403, Criminal P. C., makes no distinction between acquittals after trial and acquittals under Ss. 247, 345 and 494 of the Code and that, as long as an order of acquittal under S. 247 stands, S. 403 bars a second trial on the same charge, no matter whether the order of acquittal is good or bad, legal or illegal. What however was actually decided in that case was that an acquittal under S. 247 was a bar to a second trial. The only order that could have been passed under that section was one of acquittal and the point taken was that it should not have been applied before the accused had even been served with summons. That the Magistrate intended to acquit is beyond doubt. Here however the case is very different. The only legal order that the Magistrate could pass on allowing the withdrawal was one of discharge;

1. A I R 1929 Bom 408=(1929) Cr O 436=126 I C 321=53 Bom 693.

2. A I R 1921 Pat 311=61 I C 59=22 Cr L J 331.

and that he meant to pass such an order is shown by the note of the docket in his own writing and over his initials, that the accused were discharged. It has been held in Sriramulu v. Veerasalingam (3), that an order of discharge has to be taken as an order of acquittal when, in the circumstances, an order of acquittal was the only one that could legally be passed. Conversely I am of opinion that an order that purports to be one of acquittal has to be regarded as one of discharge when, under the provision of law that was applied, only a discharge order could be passed, and especially when the Magistrate had expressly shown that it was his intention to pass such an order by the note which he made on the docket and when the word "acquitted" was printed in a printed form, which he no doubt signed inadvertently thinking that it was in accordance with his note on the docket.

It has been argued, that, as the case has now been found to fall under S. 341, I. P. C., it was only a summons case and so Cl. (b), S. 494, was applicable and the order of acquittal was correct. What however has to be looked to is not what view can be taken of the case now but how it was treated at the time of the withdrawal. Further I gather that the Magistrate does not propose to deal with the case only under S. 341, I. P. C., but rather intends to add that section to S. 147 and S. 323.

I think that there might be a printed form for withdrawals under S. 494, Criminal P. C., containing both the words "acquitted" and "discharged," the one written over the other, so as to allow of the scoring out of whichever of the two words is, in the circumstances, unsuitable. The petition is dismissed.

P.R.S./M.N. Petition dismissed.

3. A I R 1915 Mad 23=25 I C 1001=15 Cr L J 673=38 Mad 585.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 99

BURN, J.

Narayana Iyer—Accused—Petitioner,
In re.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 355 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 327 of 1932, Decided on 13th September 1932, against order of 1st Class Bench Magistrate, Coimbatore, in Summary Trial No. 1706 of 1931.

(a) Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (1918), S. 5 (1) (b) and (d)—Cl. (d) not in force—Cl. (b) is not made ineffectual by Cl. (d).

It is reasonable to say that where a standard of purity for milk has been prescribed under S. 5 (1) (d), a person cannot be guilty both under S. 5 (1) (b) and under S. 5 (1) (d). S. 5 (1) (b) has however not been made of no effect as far as milk is concerned by the enactment of S. 5 (1) (d), when S. 5 (1) (d) is not in force in that locality.

[P 100 C 1]

(b) Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (1918), S. 5 (1) (b)—Selling mixture of water and milk is offence under Cl. (b).

To sell as milk a mixture of milk and water is to sell as food a substance which is partly food and partly not food and which is therefore not of the nature, substance or quality which it purports to be. To sell as milk a substance which is 40 per cent. water and only 60 per cent milk is without any doubt a breach of S. 5 (1) (b). [P 100 C 2]

(c) Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act (1918), S. 20—Rules framed before extension of Act do not apply to that area.

Where certain rules under S. 20 (d) and (e) were framed and published in 1926, but the Act itself was not extended to a particular Municipality till 1929, the rules cannot be deemed to be in force within that Municipality from 1929, notwithstanding the provisions of S. 6, Madras General Clauses Act: Cr Rev 73 of 1931, Foll.

[P 100 C 2]

K. S. Jayarama Ayyar and G. Gopala-swami—for Petitioner.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The petitioner has been convicted of an offence under S. 5, sub-S. 1 (b) and (d) and S. 20 (d), Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act 3 of 1918 and fined Rs. 50. There is no dispute about the facts. The petitioner is the proprietor of a Coffee Club in Coimbatore. On 23rd October 1931, the Sanitary Inspector, P. W. 1, bought from him one measure of milk. On analysis the milk was found to contain 40 per cent. of added water. The Bench held that this was a sale of food not of the nature, substance or quality which it purported to be [S. 5 (1) (b) 7]. By rules framed under S. 20 (e) of the Act the Local Government prescribed a standard of purity for milk. The milk sold by the petitioner was certainly not up to the standard of purity fixed by the Government and hence the Bench held that the petitioner had committed an offence under S. 5 (1) (d) of the Act. By rules framed under S. 20 (d) of the Act the Local Government prescribed the manner in which the notice of addition, admixture or deficiency should be given to the purchaser of any article of food. It was alleged for the petitioner that he had put a notice to the effect that there was an admixture of water with the milk. But it was not contended that he had given such a notice as is prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf and hence the Bench held that the petitioner was guilty also of a breach of S. 20 (d) of the Act. Mr. Jayarama Iyer for the petitioner contends that since "milk" is provided for in S. 5 (1) (d) the petitioner cannot be held to be guilty under S. 5 (1) (b) which deals with food in general. Milk no doubt falls within the definition, or rather the interpretation, of the term food which is given in S. 2 of the Act as follows:

"Food includes every article (other than drugs or water) used by man for food or drink, and all materials used or admixed in the composition or preparation of such article, and shall also include flavouring matter and condiments."

From this it would follow that any person who sells milk which is not of the nature, substance or quality which it purports to be, would be guilty of a violation of S. 5 (1) (b). But in S. 5 (1) (d) special provision is made for the offence of selling milk which is not up to the standard of purity prescribed by the Local Government. Hence it is argued that the offence of selling adulterated milk cannot fall under S. 5 (1) (b). Mr. Jayarama Iyer relies on Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, p. 527. I cannot however agree that this principle is applicable to this case. As will be seen in a moment, Mr. Jayarama Iyer is contending that the rules prescribing a standard of purity for milk have never been applied to the Coimbatore Municipality. If that is so, nobody in Coimbatore can commit any offence under S. 5 (1) (d). There is no doubt that the Act is in force in Coimbatore since 1929, and therefore S. 5 is in force. But if Mr. Jayarama Iyer's contention is correct S. 5 (1) (b) is a mere dead letter as far as milk is concerned, and anyone may sell in Coimbatore anything whatever instead of milk. This is quite impossible. It might be reasonable to say that where a standard of purity for milk has been prescribed under S. 5 (1) (d), a person could not be guilty both under S. 5 (1) (b) and under S. 5 (1) (d). It is in my opinion quite unreasonable to argue that S. 5 (1) (b) has been made of no effect as far as milk is concerned by the enactment of S. 5 (1) (d), when it is at the same time contended that S. 5 (1) (d) is not in force.

Milk is food, water is not food. To sell as milk a substance which is 40 per cent. water and only 60 per cent. milk is without any doubt a breach of S. 5 (1) (b). Mr. Jayaram Iyer says that the petitioner never pretended to be selling pure milk, and he was in fact selling milk though with water added. This is to neglect the words of the Act. Milk as defined in the Act does not permit the addition of any water. To sell as milk a mixture of milk and water is to sell as food a substance which is partly food and partly not food, and which is therefore not of the nature, substance or quality which it purports to be. The Bench was therefore right in convicting the petitioner of an offence under S. 5 (1) (b). The propriety of the conviction under S. (1) (d) and S. 20 (d) depends on the answer to the question whether the rules framed by the Local Government under S. 20 (d) and (e) are or are not in force in the Coimbatore Municipality. These rules were published in the Fort St. George Gazette on 24th August 1926, Part 1-A, p. 319. But the Act itself was not applied to the Coimbatore Municipality till 1st July 1929: vide Fort St. George Gazette dated 11th June 1929, Part 1-A, p. 330. S. 20 of the Act which gives power to make rules begins as follows:

"The Local Government may, after previous publication, make rules consistent with this Act for the whole or any part of the area to which this Act may have been extended."

Mr. Jayarama Iyer contends, and as I think with considerable force, that the rules framed in the exercise of this power can only be applied to any particular area after the Act has been brought into force in that area. That is in my opinion the natural meaning of the words. The learned Public Prosecutor refers to S. 6, Madras General Clauses Act. But that only provides that rules may in certain cases be framed before the Act comes into force, but shall not take effect until the Act itself is put into force. I respectfully agree with the opinion of Jackson, J., in Criminal Revision Case No. 73 of 1931 that S. 6, General Clauses Act, does not provide for the application to one area of rules framed for another area. In the Prevention of Adulteration Act, there is no provision, as in some other Acts, for example, the Factories Act and Motor Vehicles Act, that rules when framed shall take effect "as if enacted in the Act itself." S. 20 appears to contemplate the possibility of different rules for different areas. As Jackson, J., observed in the case already referred to: "rules applicable to one part of this Presidency are not necessarily applicable to another part."

This principle is expressly recognized in S. 1 of the Act itself. For these reasons I hold that the petitioner is not guilty of any offence under S. 5 (1)(d) or S. 20 (d) of the Act. The convictions under those sections are set aside. One fine was imposed for all the three offences of which the petitioner was convicted. I reduce it to a fine of Rs. 40. The balance if paid must be refunded.

P.R.S./R.K.

Fine reduced.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 101

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

R. Shanmuga Rajeswara Sethupathy
—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Perumal Moopan and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 37 to 44, 46 to 57 and 59 to 69 of 1929, Decided on 15th August 1932, against decrees of Dist. Judge, Ramnad.

Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 to 103—Landlord entitled to rent—Exemption on special plea must be proved by person raising it—Facts of plea within tenant's knowledge—Onus is on tenant—Evidence Act (1872), S. 106—Madras Estates Lands Act (1908), S. 4.

The person who sets up a special plea with a view to claim exemption from statutory liability has to prove the existence of special circumstances which bring his case under the exception. [P 101 C 2]

In a suit for rent of waste lands the landlord being prima facie entitled to rent for all raiyoti lands it is incumbent on the tenant to establish any custom on which he relies to excuse him and the facts which make that custom a shield. [P 101 C 1]

Where the tenant pleads a custom of non-liability, if lands remain waste not on account of his wilful default or personal liability, he has to prove the custom and the facts being peculiarly within his knowledge, the onus is on the tenant: 44 I C 663, Rel on. and 50 I C 892, Dist.

[P 101 C 1]

Advocate-General—for Appellant.

Mockett, J.—These appeals arise out of decrees in a number of suits brought by the Rajah of Ramnad (the appellant) and the tenants (the respondents) against each other under S. 77, Madras Estates Land Act. The Advocate-General for the appellant has argued that the findings of the District Court are erroneous broadly speaking under two headings: (1) that the rates awarded in respect of various crops are inadequate; and (2) that the learned District Judge has put the burden of proving that waste lands were uncultivated through no fault of the tenant on the landlord whereas it was for the tenant to adduce this evidence. We have after hearing the Advocate-General on point 1 indicated that in our view questions of the adequacy or inadequacy of rates (matters which have been most thoroughly investigated on evidence in the Courts below) do not call for an interference in second appeal being largely questions of fact and so far as this topic is concerned we dismiss the relevant appeals. The second point however is a question of law and is clearly a matter of importance between landlord and tenant. The matter arose out of a claim for rent for certain waste lands by the appellant. In reply to this claim the respondents in para. 6 of their written statement put in an involved plea the effect of which is agreed to be that the tenants are by custom not liable for rent for lands left waste "not on account of wilful default or personal liability." It is at least clear that the parties went to trial on this basis for issue 4 reads as follows:

"Are the lands left waste in the several suits due to causes beyond the control of the ryots and is plaintiff not entitled to rent?"

This issue imposes the onus upon the defendants. It is not quite clear whether there was a dispute as to onus in the first Court but the Special Deputy Collector ruled that it was on the raiyats and in the absence of any evidence by them to sustain it allowed the appellant's claim in respect of waste lands, at the same time stating the law as follows:

"The person who sets up a special plea with a view to claim exemption from statutory liability has to prove the existence of special circumstances which bring his case under the exception."

This is a succinct and accurate statement of the rule of evidence applicable, which is to be found in Ss. 101 to 103, Evidence Act, which state the English Common law rules as built up by numerous cases. There is a direct authority in Madras in Ramaswami Servai-garan v. Athivarah Chariar (1) on this exact question of onus as between landlord and tenant though there does not appear to have been much or any discussion on that point, the judgment being directed mostly to the question of whether the landlord can claim rent for waste lands at all. As to this, the Court held that as under S. 4, Estates Land Act, the landlord is prima facie entitled to rent for all raiyati lands it is incumbent on the tenant to establish any custom on which he relies to excuse him and the facts which make that custom a shield. We consider that this decision exactly applies to the present case. The case in Rajah of Ramnad v. Meerasa Marakkayar (2), which it has been suggested is contrary to Ramaswamy Servaigaran v. Athivarahachariar (1), is not in fact so, as the former case was decided on a special finding in favour of the raiyats and it is to be observed that the Court (Phillips and Kumaraswami Sastri, JJ.), did not express dissent from Ramaswami Servaigaran v. Athivarahachariar (1) although it was cited. The learned District Judge has however reversed the decision of the first Court on the question of onus. He says

1. (1918) 44 I C 663.

"the Deputy Collector wrongly threw the onus on the raiyats to show that it was not due to their default the land lay waste, the onus really being on the landholder."

He gives no reasons for this decision and refers to no authorities and allows the raiyats' appeals because there was "absolutely no evidence that the waste was due to the raiyats' default."

Since the onus had been put upon the raiyats in the first Court this was naturally so. This decision is sought to be supported before us by the somewhat curious argument that the reason why the waste lands could not be cultivated was "peculiarly within the knowledge of the landlord" though why the actual occupant of the land should be unable to say why he cannot cultivate it has never been explained. The tenant whose business and presumably desire it is to cultivate his holding must surely, of all men, be in possession of the facts to which he can ascribe his inability to carry out the object for which he holds the lands. The present case cannot possibly be brought within S. 106, Evidence Act, as the respondents' advocate presumably seeks to do. For the above reasons we think the Deputy Collector was right and the District Judge wrong on the issue as to onus. In the result S. A. Nos. 37 to 44 and 46 to 57/29 which refer to the question of rates are dismissed and S. A. Nos. 59 to 69 of 29 which refer to the question of onus are allowed. No costs.

Jackson, J.—I agree. The question agitated in these appeals, what is the proper rate for plantains grown upon dry lands, is a new one, for which, on this estate, there is no guidance to be obtained from precedent. Fixing the fair rate therefore becomes a matter of judicial discretion, and there is no reason for holding that the learned Judge in the exercise of his discretion has in any way erred.

P.R.S./M.N. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 102 Full Bench

COUTTS-TROTTER, C. J., BEASLEY AND WALSH, JJ.

Rammammal—Petitioner.

v.

Vijayaraghavalu Naidu and another
—Opposite Parties.

Criminal Misc. Petn. No. 471 of 1928,
Decided on 23rd August 1928.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 491—Costs.

High Court has no jurisdiction to award costs in an application for issuing a writ of habeas corpus. [P 102 C 2]

K. S. Desikan—for Petitioner.

V. V. Srinivasa Ayyangar and C. Sarangaraja Ayyangar—for Opposite Parties.

Order. — This petition [petition praying that in the circumstances stated in the affidavit filed therewith the High Court will be pleased to issue a writ of habeas corpus to the respondents herein to produce the body of the petitioner's unmarried minor son, Thiruvengadaswami, in Court and also to issue an injunction restraining the said respondents from celebrating the marriage of the said minor on 24th June 1928 or any other day pending this petition] is withdrawn. We very much regret to come to the conclusion that we have no power to grant costs proprio motu. In some ways perhaps it is to be regretted that we have not because a lot of these applications are so thoroughly frivolous—I do not say anything about this one—that I think the losers ought to be penalised for vexatious proceedings. However, costs are a creature of Statute or statutory rules and in the absence of either in this case we must hold that we have no jurisdiction to award costs.

P.R.S./R.K. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 103

REILLY, J.

T. Balaji Rao Naidu Garu — Petitioner, In re.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 4043 of 1932,
Decided on 30th August 1932.

Elections — Injunction to restrain should not be ordinarily granted—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 39, R. 1.

Though a candidate for election to a Local Board like anyone else has a right to pursue his legal remedies, whatever they may be, save in exceptional circumstances, it is an abuse for a candidate who for some reason is shut out, to make his pursuit of his remedies in the civil Courts a weapon for dislocating the electoral machinery and stopping an election. In the absence of any special reasons an order for injunction for that purpose should not be granted: A I R 1923 Mad 475, Dist. [P 103 C 2]

Y. Suryanarayana—for Petitioner.

Order.—This is an application that the production of printed judgments may be excused in order that a second appeal may be admitted out of its turn with the further purpose that an injunction may then be obtained preventing a District Board election from being held on 3rd September 1932, in which election the appellant, whose nomination has been rejected, wishes to be a candidate. The appellant after the rejection of his nomination filed a suit in the District Munsif's Court and obtained a declaration that he had been validly nominated for election and an injunction restraining the Election Officer from holding the election without the appellant as a candidate. On appeal the District Judge dismissed the suit, and the second appeal is against that dismissal.

I do not think it proper that I should help the appellant by making any special order in his favour. If this second appeal is eventually admitted, it may be considerable time before it is heard, and at any rate it could not be heard until after the day fixed for polling. The appellant, anxious to pursue his own remedies, as he is quite entitled to do, wants to get an injunction staying the election, regardless of the fact that he would be putting the other candidates and the electors to great inconvenience and that, if for any reason his appeal was not heard with extraordinary promptness, the injunction would in effect temporarily disfranchise the constituency. The appellant perhaps exaggerates his importance to the public. At any rate it is on his own right to be a candidate that he insists. But his right will be vindicated if he succeeds in his appeal and gets the declaration for which he has prayed; and if in due course he takes proper steps to object to the election of any other candidate, he will have another chance of being elected for the constituency without throwing the electoral machinery out of gear at this very late date and temporarily disfranchising the constituency. I have been referred to Sarvothama Rao v. Chairman, Municipal Council, Saidapat (1), as an instance where an injunction was made stopping an election. That is an interesting case, but of less value as a precedent than it would otherwise be, because it is a very extreme case—so extreme indeed that Schwabe, C. J., in spite of the fact that a suit was pending before a District Munsif, felt justified in expressing an opinion that the suit could only have one result. And he cited, it may be remarked, two English cases, not election cases of this kind, Aslatt v. Southampton Corporation (2) and Richardson v. Methley School Board (3), in which the learned Judges felt equally sure of their ground, though in those cases they did not have to go to the extremely unusual length of prejudging a suit pending in another Court. This is a very different case, and it certainly cannot be said that the result of the second appeal, if it is admitted, is a foregone conclusion.

In my opinion, though a candidate for election to a Local Board like anyone else has a right to pursue his legal remedies, whatever they may be, save in exceptional circumstances it is an abuse for a candidate, who for some reason is shut out, to make his pursuit of his remedies in the civil Courts, a weapon for dislocating the electoral machinery and stopping an election. This is an abuse which appears to be on the increase in this presidency and is in my opinion very much against the public interest, and I am not prepared to assist the appellant in any attempt to apply it in this case. The petition is dismissed.

P.R.S./M.N. Petition dismissed.

1. A I R 1923 Mad 475=47 Mad 585=73 I C 619.
2. (1881) 16 Ch D 143=50 L J Ch 31=29 W R 117=43 L T 464.
3. (1893) 3 Ch 510=62 L J Ch 943=42 W R 27=69 L T 303=3 R 701.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 104

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

T. K. Peramanayagam Pillai—Judgment-debtor—Appellant.

v.

Raman Chettiar — Decree-holder — Respondent.

Appeal No. 234 of 1927, Decided on 19th September 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Tinnevely, D/- 24th February 1927, in A. S. No. 5 of 1927.

(a) Limitation Act (1908), S. 19 (2)—Document containing acknowledgment — Date scored out — Document can be treated as undated.

Where the date of the document containing the acknowledgment has been scored out, then for the purposes of Cl. 2, S. 19, it may be held that the writing containing the acknowledgment is undated, and then evidence may be given as to the correct date of the acknowledgment. Though a document with a date stroked out by the party may be said to bear a date strictly speaking, and therefore not to be undated, having regard to the obvious fact that the parties by striking it out have shown that it is not to be the date of the document, it can hardly be correct to calculate the time of acknowledgment from that date as the true date: 26 Bom 128, not Foll. [P 105 C 1]

(b) Limitation Act (1908), S. 19 (2) — Undated acknowledgment contained in document filed in Court—Date of filing is date of making acknowledgment.

In the absence of the proof of the date of an undated acknowledgment contained in the schedule of creditors filed before the receiver it is justifiable to presume that the acknowledgment was made when the document was filed.

[P 105 C 2]

K. V. Venkata Subramaniam Ayyar—for Appellant.

E. Vinayaka Rao—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The judgment-debtor is the appellant. This Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeal arises out of an application filed by the decree-holder under O. 21, R. 38, Civil P. C., to execute the decree in O. S. No. 175 of 1916 (District Munsif's Court, Tinnevely) by arrest of the appellant. The question for decision is whether the decree sought to be executed is barred by limitation. The date of the decree is 11th December 1917. The application for execution previous to the present application (Ex. E) was made on 12th April 1922. That was in time when it was filed. The present application, E. P. No. 257 of 1926, was made on 21st April 1926. Prima facie it is barred by limitation as having been made more than three years from the date of the last application. But the respondent decree-holder contended that it was saved from the bar of limitation under S. 19, Lim. Act, by an acknowledgment made by the judgment-debtor within three years from the date of the last execution application and that the present execution application has been filed within three years from the date of the acknowledgment; and that it is therefore within time. This plea was accepted by both the lower Courts.

The facts relating to the acknowledgment are these: The judgment-debtor became an insolvent. He filed a schedule of assets and liabilities before the Official Receiver. This schedule is Ex. 3. It is not disputed that this contains an acknowledgment of liability. The question is when was this acknowledgment made. The date, 30th March 1923, appears on Ex. 3, but this has been stroked out. If this is the date of the acknowledgment then the present application, dated 21st April 1926, as having been made more than three years from that date, is clearly barred by limitation. We are not able to say why the date appearing on Ex. 3 was stroked out. The document does not show when it was actually filed before the Official Receiver as it does not bear the stamp of his office. It must have been filed before him either on 31st July 1923 or some time after that date. This is inferred from Ex. 5, a petition made by the insolvent to the Official Receiver promising to file the list in a week. Ex. 5 is dated 31st July 1923. The District Munsif held that the respondent has admitted the present decree debt either on 31st July 1923 or on some day after that date and that the present application is not barred as it has been made within three years from that date. This decision was upheld by the learned District Judge.

In this second appeal Mr. Venkata-subramaniam for the appellant argues that the acknowledgment should be considered to have been made on 30th March 1923 though that date has been stroked out, that when once the document bears a date it is not open to the parties to show by oral evidence that it was not written on that date having regard to the prohibition contained in Cl. 2, S. 19, Lim. Act, and that in any event the lower Courts are wrong in calculating the period for the present application from the date of "filing" of the acknowledgment petition, as under law the time from which they should calculate it is the time when it was made and not the time when the petition containing it was filed; or in other words, that the filing of the petition has nothing to do with the time when the acknowledgment was made. The first two arguments are supported by a decision in Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabhai (1), which is to this effect:

"Where a written acknowledgment bears a date which has been altered, oral evidence to prove the date is inadmissible under S. 19, para. 2, Lim. Act, 1877."

Logically it must follow from this decision that if by mistake a wrong date is inserted in a document, oral evidence is inadmissible to prove the mistake. An interpretation of Cl. 2, S. 19, leading to this position seems to me hardly justifiable. Having regard to the fact that the date of the document containing the acknowledgment has been scored out, I think that for the purposes of Cl. 2, S. 19 we may hold that the writing containing the acknowledgment is undated, and then evidence may be given as to the correct date of the acknowledgment. Though a document with a date stroked out by the party may be said to bear a date strictly speaking, and therefore not be undated, having regard to the obvious fact that the parties by striking it out have shown that it is not to be the date of the document, I think it can hardly be correct to calculate the time of acknowledgment from that date as the true date. In this case, as pointed out by Mr. Vinayaka Rao for the respondent, it is not quite clear whether the lower Court's conclusion regarding the time of acknowledgment is based so much on the oral evidence as on an inference from Ex. 5. Though oral evidence was adduced in the case, the conclusion that Ex. 3 must be considered to have been filed on or after 31st July 1923 is solely based on the inference from Ex. 5. If this view can be held to be correct as I think it may well be, then the occasion for the application of Sayad Gulamali v. Miyabhai (1) does not arise as the true date can be proved by other than oral evidence. However it is not necessary to discuss this aspect of the question any further.

The last argument of Mr. Venkatsubramaniam will be found to be without any substance if the finding of the lower Courts is properly understood. It is true that the learned Judges have calculated the period of limitation for the present application from the date of the filing of Ex. 3. But they have done so not because that the date of the filing has anything to do with the question under S. 19, Lim. Act, but because they consider that acknowledgment in the absence of other evidence must be held to have been made when the document was filed; that is all. This is clear from the words used by the District Munsif. He says:

"It is clear from Ex. 3 that the respondent has admitted the present decree debt either on 31st July 1923 or on some day after that date." (The italics are mine):

and the learned District Judge has confirmed this opinion of the learned District Munsif. There is therefore no reason for calling for a fresh finding as to the time when the decree debt was acknowledged by the judgment-debtor. For the above reasons, this Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeal is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 105

PANDALAI, J.

K. Ramaswami Naicker and another — Defendants—Petitioners.

v.

Secy. of State — Plaintiff — Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 508 of 1931, Decided on 1st September 1932, against decision of Dist. Munsif, Madura, D/- 28th February 1931.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 2 (17)—Receiver to manage property and collect rent on commission is public officer—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 80.

Receiver appointed to collect rents, to manage the property, to make certain disbursements and pay the remaining amount to the Court and remunerated by fees or commission is public officer: 136 I C 777 and A I R 1931 Cal 503, Rel. on. [P 106 C 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 80—Document, if valid notice, must be determined with common sense, and after understanding it in sense intended by writer and understood by receiver.

In determining whether a particular document satisfies the requisites of a valid notice under S. 80, the Court is bound to use common sense and must look at the document and understand it in a fair and reasonable sense in the way in which the writer meant and the addressee understood it. [P 107 C 1]

Where a Collector gave a notice to a public officer requiring him to do certain acts within a specified time and notified his intention to file a suit otherwise and signed it as a Collector but not on behalf of the Secretary of State.

1. (1902) 26 Bom 128=3 om L R 574.

Held: that there was sufficient compliance with S. 80: A I R 1927 P C 176, Expl.; 24 Mad 279 and A I R 1926 Mad 408, Ref.

[P 108 C 1]

K. Rajah Ayyar and N. R. Govindachariar—for Petitioners.

P. V. Rajamannar for Govt. Pleader—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This is a petition by the defendants in a suit brought by the Secretary of State in the Court of the District Munsif of Madura in which the petitioners took the preliminary objection that they were public officers within the meaning of S. 80, Civil P. C., and were entitled to notice under that section of the suit but that they had received no such notice and so the suit was incompetent. The District Munsif rejected this contention holding that though the defendants are public officers, the notices marked Exs. A and B were sufficient compliance with the section and also, though rather hesitatingly, that the suit did not embrace official acts and therefore might be maintained even though no notice was sent. It is not necessary to deal with the second half of the above opinion if the Munsif's order can be supported on the first. The defendants are respectively the zamindar of Ammayanaickanur (defendant 1) who was himself appointed a receiver to collect the rents and other incomes of the zamindari, and a wakil of the Court (defendant 2) who was afterwards appointed additional receiver for the same purpose apparently because defendant 1's sole receivership was not functioning satisfactorily. These two receivers were receiving rents and profits of the zamindari for the purpose of satisfying certain creditors who had taken out execution of decrees obtained against the zamindar. The order of appointment of defendant 2 empowered him to be in entire charge of the management of the zamindari and to be responsible for the due collection of all other incomes of the zamindari, to keep proper accounts, to pay out of the income Rs. 1,000 to the zamindari-receiver as his monthly allowance and to pay the balance into Court for payment of the decree-holders.

The first point is whether these two defendants are public officers and on this there can be no serious dispute in view of the language of S. 2, Cl. 17, sub-Cls. (d) and (h), Civil P. C. In the words of sub-Cl. (d) they are persons especially authorised by a Court of justice to perform the duty of taking charge and disposing of property. In the words of sub-Cl. (h) they are (at least defendant 2 is) officers remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of the public duty of execution of the Court's decree, in this case by taking charge of the debtor's property and disposing of it according to the orders of the Court. In Krishnaswami Sastri v. Syed Ahmed (1), the question whether receivers appointed under O. 40, R. 1 were public officers was not disputed and in my opinion rightly so. To the same effect is Jagadischandra Deo v. Debendraprasad (2). I therefore think that the District Munsif was right on this point.

The only remaining point is whether the notices, Exs. A and B, sufficiently comply with the requirements of S. 80. The language of the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Bagchand Dagadusa v. Secy. of State (3), was prayed in aid in the lower Court and has been to a certain extent relied upon in this for the proposition that the section is express, explicit, and mandatory, and admits of no implications or exceptions and that therefore the examination whether it has been complied with must be strictly carried out. The passage in which the words referred to occur is where their Lordships are summarising the view of other High Courts than Bombay. It is a summary of the reasoning on which those High Courts held that S. 80 applies to all kinds of suits including those for injunction. No doubt their Lordships later on say that the reasoning which they had summarised in the previous passage is right; but to use the words mentioned as containing a clue to the method of determining whether the elements necessary to constitute good notice under S. 80 exist in a particular document would be doing violence not only to the language but to the intention of their Lordships. I consider myself at liberty notwithstanding the words imputed to their Lordships to determine the question in the light of decisions germane to the subject. There are several of them, but it is sufficient to refer to decisions of our own Court such as Secy. of State v. Perumal Pillai (4) and Venkata Ramakrishna Ayyar v. Secy. of State (5). The substance of it all is that in determining whether a particular document satisfies the requisites of S. 80 we are not bound to abandon all common sense, but on the contrary we must look at the document and understand it in a fair and reasonable sense in the way in which the writer meant and the addressee understood it. The correspondence on the subject of this case has been referred to by the Munsif and it is not necessary for me to refer to it again. For many years the Mattapparai tank in the Ammayanaickanur zamindari was in the opinion of the Local Government authorities a source of danger to the Periyar main canal owing to its being kept in a breached condition causing, I suppose, floods and inundations into the canal. The Collector had been pressing the zamindar to put the tank in good order and the suit was brought after years of correspondence when the zamindari happened to be in charge of the zamindar and a lawyer as receivers because the necessary steps were not taken. Of the two documents Exs. A and B, which are put forward as constituting sufficient notices, Ex. A is dated 2nd February 1926, which says :

1. (1931) 136 I C 777.

2. A I R 1931 Cal 503=132 I C 634=58 Cal 850.

3. A I R 1927 P C 176=104 I C 257=54 I A 338=51 Bom 725 (P C).

"Please take notice that you are requested to execute the repairs mentioned in the estimate within a period of six months as repairs are necessary to prevent all reasonable risk of danger to the Periyar main canal failing which legal proceedings will be taken against you,"

Then follows the list of repairs to be executed to the Mattapparai tank to prevent danger to the Periyar main canal and four items of works are mentioned. The document is addressed to the zamindar, defendant 1 when he was sole receiver and is signed on behalf of the Collector of Madura. The original which must be with defendant 1, was not produced by him, Ex. A, being the office copy. Ex. B is addressed to both defendants 1 and 2 described respectively as zamindar and Receiver and Additional Receiver. The document is headed :

"Tanks, Private—Nilakottai Taluk Zamin Mattapparai village—Mattapparai Taluk—Conservancy—suit filing of."

This part of official correspondence, as is familiar to those conversant with it, is a precis of the subject-matter of the communication which follows. The body of the letter reads :

"A copy of the plan and estimate showing the nature of repairs to be carried out to the Mattapparai tank of Zamin Mattapparai village attached to Ammayanaickanur zamindari is herewith sent."

"2. Please take notice that you are requested to execute the repairs mentioned in the estimate within a period of six months as repairs are necessary to prevent all reasonable risk of danger to the Periyar main canal failing which legal proceedings will be taken against you. It is signed "E. B. Cobbald, 28th July 1929, Collector."

It is objected that this notice does not comply with S. 80 because it does not mention the three matters to be mentioned in it, viz. (1) cause of action, (2) name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff, and (3) relief. As to the cause of action, in both the documents it is in my opinion sufficiently stated as the necessity for repairs to the Mattapparai tank to prevent reasonable risk of danger to the Periyar main canal. As to the name, description and residence of the plaintiff the objection that the plaintiff is the Secretary of State and that that official is not mentioned at all not to speak of his residence being omitted, is, though literally plausible, not of substantial weight. It must not be forgotten that S. 80 is drawn as it had necessarily to be drawn so as to suit the vast majority of cases that arise under it, viz., suits by non-officials aggrieved by the action of Government or by officers against the latter for redress and it is reasonable in such cases where the plaintiff is a private party that his name, his description and place of residence should be known and stated. It is not that there is an exception in favour of the Secretary of State as to the contents of the statutory notice where he is suing as plaintiff. But the point is only how we are to understand whether a particular document said to be sent in the name of or on behalf of the Secretary of State was really so sent and says so with sufficient clearness to give notice to the defendants. It was in a case about the address of the plaintiff that Chief Baron Pollock said in Jones v. Nicholla (6) that "we must import a little common sense into notices of this kind," and that was with reference to a private individual.

6. (1822) 1 New Sess Cas 524=13 M & W 361.

4. (1901) 24 Mad 279=11 M L J 117,

5. A I R 1926 Mad 408=91 I C 368.

I think we might import a little common sense in determining whether Exs. A and B do really convey the name, description and place of residence of this plaintiff. In my opinion they do and it is noteworthy that this particular objection was not pointedly taken before the Munsif and as this is a question in revision I have no hesitation in taking the view which the lower Court did.

Then as regards the relief, there seemed at first sight a little more ground for the complaint that Ex. B does not mention the relief at all. But when Ex. B is read as a whole it becomes clear that the legal proceedings mentioned as intended was a suit, and also reading paras. 1 and 2 together that the relief for which the suit was intended to be brought was to get the repairs carried out as mentioned in the plan and the estimates which were enclosed with Ex. B. As a matter of fact para. 7 of the plaint contains as relief the enumeration of the very repairs which the defendants were called upon to execute in Ex. B. That being so I am unable to say that the District Munsif erred in saying that Exs. A and B are, and B especially is, sufficient notice of suit. The petition therefore fails and must be dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N. Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 108

ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, J.

Palaniappan Chettiar and others — Defendants—Petitioners.

v.

Settichi and others—Plaintiffs—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 518 of 1931, Decided on 29th March 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Madura, D/- 14th October 1930.

Court-fees Act (1870), Sch. 2, Art. 17 (a)—Reversioner's suit for declaring alienation by widow not binding on them decreed — Transferee held entitled to certain sum from ultimate reversioners — Receiver ordered to be appointed on happening of contingent event— Transferee appealing against whole decree and claiming larger sum— Court-fees payable are under Art. 17 (a) for all reliefs.

A suit by a reversioner for a declaration that a release deed executed by the widow was not binding on him was decreed with a condition that the ultimate reversioner will have to pay a certain sum to the transferees under the release deed for their improvements. The transferees appealed impugning the whole of the declaratory decree and claiming in the alternative a larger amount than was awarded to them. The decree had also directed the appointment of receiver on the happening of a contingent event. This was also challenged.

Held : that the proper court-fee payable was under Art. 17 (A) and not on the amount claimed in appeal and a separate court-fee for relief against the appointment of receiver was also payable under Art. 17 (A) : 3 I C 459 ; A I R 1928 Mad 929, Appl ; A I R 1926 Mad 678, Rel on. [P 110 C 1]

A. Nagaswami Ayyar and P. N. Appuswami Ayyar—for Petitioners.

V. Ramaswami Ayyar for K. Rajah Ayyar—for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—In O. S. No. 436 of 1927 on the file of the District Munsif's Court of Melur the plaintiff sued for a declaration that a release deed executed by the widow, defendant 5, in favour of the reversioners, defendants 1 to 4, was not valid, for the appointment of a receiver of the estate of the last male holder inherited by his widow, defendant 5, and subsequently said to be in the possession of defendants 1 to 4, and also for directions to defendants 1 to 4 to rebuild a house belonging to the estate, alleged to have been damaged or pulled down by defendants 1 to 4. The plaintiff is the daughter of defendant 5 and is the sister of defendant 6. Defendants 1 to 4 are said to be the gnatis of the husband of defendant 5. The learned District Munsif passed a decree declaring that the ultimate reversioners would not be bound by the release deed executed by defendant 5 in favour of defendants 1 to 4 but that they would be bound to pay the defendants 1 to 4 the sum of Rs. 1,188-4-0 which defendants 1 to 4 were found to have spent to the benefit of the last male holder's estate. The decree also stated that the plaintiff would be entitled to apply for the appointment of a receiver in the event of the dismissal by the Court of Suit No. 627 of 1929 instituted by defendant 5 against defendants 1 to 4 for certain reliefs concerning the release deed executed by her. Defendants 1 to 4 appealed to the District Court against the decree passed by the District Munsif. The question arose in the appellate Court as to the proper court-fee payable on the Memorandum of Appeal. The learned District Judge, as I understand his order, found that in respect of the relief granted by the District Munsif concerning the appointment of a receiver, a court-fee of Rs. 15 has to be paid under Art. 17 (a), Sch. 2, Court-fees Act. As regards another prayer in the appeal Memo, which the learned District Judge calls "the counter claim of the appellants," he directed as follows :

"Appellants will pay court-fee on the amount awarded in the lower Court (Rs. 1,188-4-0) and on the amount in excess claimed (Rs. 909-12-0)."

Defendants 1 to 3, appellants in the lower appellate Court, have filed the present revision petition against the order passed by the District Judge. It was argued by the learned advocate for the petitioners that the learned District Judge was in error in directing the appellants to pay court-fee on the amount awarded to them by the trial Court (Rs. 1,188-4-0), and on the amount in excess claimed by them in appeal Rupees 909-12-0. As the learned District Judge has not fully discussed that aspect of the question, I am inclined to think that what he probably intended to order was that the appellants should pay court-fee only on the difference between the amount claimed by them in the first Court and the amount awarded to them by the decree of the District Munsif; but I must admit that on the face of the order of the learned District Judge, it would seem as if he directed the petitioners to pay the court-fee both on Rs. 1,188-4-0 and Rs. 909-12-0. In my opinion the learned District Judge was clearly in error in directing the court-fee to be paid on both the amounts. I fail to see how defendants 1 to 4 could be directed to pay court-fee in respect of Rs. 1,188-4-0 for which they had already got a decree in the first Court. However having regard to the view I take about that main declaration claimed by the plaintiff, I think that defendants 1 to 4 need not pay court-fee on either of the two amounts mentioned in the order of the learned District Judge.

As already mentioned the suit was one for a declaration that a release deed executed by defendant 5 in favour of defendants 1 to 4 would not be binding on the ultimate reversioners. On such a plaint the court-fee payable is Rs. 15 under Art. 17, Court-fees Act, seeing that the suit was filed in the District Munsif's Court. No doubt the decree granted by the District Munsif gave a declaration (though a qualified one) in favour of the plaintiff. As I understand the appeal memorandum filed by defendants 1 to 4 they impugn the whole of the declaratory decree granted by the trial Court.

That being so, the court-fee payable in respect of this portion of the claim could be only that payable in respect of a declaratory relief, under Art. 17, Cl. (a), Sch. 2, Court-fees Act. It is no doubt true that the defendants raised an alternative ground of appeal, namely, that even in case the Court should hold that the plaintiff would be entitled to a declaration, the declaration should not be entirely unconditional but should be one subject to a condition that the ultimate reversioners should pay the defendants a certain sum of money. In such a case I think, the principle applicable is one similar to the rule laid down in Sekharan v. Eacharan (1) and Pathumma Umma v. A. Mohideen, A. I. R. 1928 Mad. 929. Cases from Malabar have come before this Court where the plaintiffs seek relief in ejectment, and the defendants in possession not only raise pleas against the right of the plaintiff to eject but also claim compensation for improvements in case the Court should direct the ejectment. In such cases it has been held that when the defendant prefers an appeal against the decree in ejectment passed by the trial Court, which also directs the plaintiff to pay a certain amount of money as compensation for improvements or otherwise due to the defendants, the court-fee payable on the appeal should be calculated on the basis of the plaint in an ejectment suit as the defendant in appeal has raised objection to the decree in ejectment altogether.

The circumstance that he also raised a ground claiming a larger amount for compensation due to him, has been held not to alter the real nature of the suit or the appeal. In fact in Sekharan v. Eacharan (1) the defendant preferred an appeal and contended that the whole suit should be dismissed, though he also claimed a very large amount as due to him for value of improvements in case the decree in ejectment was ultimately confirmed. This Court has held that notwithstanding the subsidiary prayer which will arise only in the alternative when his contention as regards the ejectment is overruled, the proper amount of court-fee payable is that leviable in a suit in ejectment and that the defendant-appellant need not pay any court-fee calculated on the value of the improvements relating to which he has taken a ground of appeal. When however the plaintiff who has obtained a decree in ejectment prefers an appeal questioning only the amount that has been directed to be paid by him to the defendant, then there are some cases which were cited to me which hold that in such cases the plaintiff-appellant should value the appeal according to the amount to which he has raised a dispute. But the present case is one where defendants 1 to 4 oppose the grant of any declaratory decree at all; and that being so, I think the principle of the cases I have mentioned applies to the present case; and I am of opinion that appellants 1 to 4 were bound to pay court-fee of Rs. 15 only under Art. 17 (a), Sch. 2, Court-fees Act, and that they need not pay any additional court-fee in respect of any portion of what the learned Judge calls "the counter claim of the defendants." This disposes of the main question that was argued before me. The learned advocate for the petitioner raised another question as to the amount of court-fee payable in respect of the relief by way of the appointment of a receiver mentioned in the decree of the District Munsif.

It was argued that the appointment of a receiver is a consequential relief, and that the same need not be separately valued, and that the learned District Judge was in error in directing the appellants to pay the court-fee of Rs. 15 in respect of that relief claimed by the defendants. On reading the decree of the trial Court in this case, I find that the Court has not in fact directed the appointment of a receiver. As I read the decree, the Court would seem to have in substance declared that a receiver will be appointed in case another Suit No. 627 of 1929, which is pending between the defendants to this litigation, was decided in a particular way. I think that, having regard to the decree passed in this particular case and the allegations in the plaint, the learned District Judge was right in directing the appellant to pay court-fee of Rs. 15 in respect of this relief. The decision of Venkatasubba Rao, J., in Karappana Tevar v. Angammal (2), also, in my view, supports the decision of the learned District Judge on this point. No doubt it is possible, as the learned Judge observed in Karappana Tevar v. Angammal (2), that in particular cases the appointment of a receiver may be a consequential relief; but for disposing of the case before me I need not go into that question in detail, because, reading the decree passed by the District Munsif in the present case, there is, in substance, only a declaratory decree granted by him, so far as the prayer relating to the appointment of a receiver is concerned. It therefore seems to me that the second contention raised by the learned advocate for the petitioners before me should fail and the court-fee of Rs. 15 fixed by the lower appellate Court with reference to that relief will stand.

The result then is that in respect of the first point argued before me, I modify the order passed by the learned District Judge, and I hold that the petitioners need not pay any court-fee in respect of any portion of the claim covered by what is called "counter claim" by the defendants, and that the court-fee of Rs. 15 paid under Art. 17 (a), Sch. 2, Court-fees Act, is enough for that purpose. With regard to the court-fee in respect of the relief claimed for the appointment of a receiver, the lower appellate Court's order is hereby confirmed. In the circumstances I pass no order as to costs in the High Court.

It is mentioned to me that the appellants in the lower appellate Court have, in obedience to that Court's order, paid the court-fee as ordered by the learned District Judge. If they have already paid any excess court-fee, then they will be entitled to apply to that Court for a refund of the excess court-fee.

P.R.S./M.N. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 110

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

(Thadapalli) Pedda Subba Rao—Appellant.

v.

Lavu Ankamma and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 173 of 1930, Decided on 2nd September 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Negapatam, D/- 18th November 1929.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 16—Decree assigned after transfer to another Court—Application under R. 16 can be entertained by original Court before certificate or record is received—Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 39 and 41.

Where a decree is transferred for execution to another Court and is subsequently assigned and the assignee applies to the original Court for recognition of his assignment, there is no necessity that the original Court should after entertaining the assignee decree-holder's application, as must be done, stay its hand until certificates have been received from the transferee Courts or the records have been returned: A I R 1922 Bom. 359; A I R 1914 Mad 435 and A I R 1926 Mad 431, Dist. [P 112 C 1, 2]

C. S. Venkatachariar and H. Suryanarayana—for Appellant.

N. Rama Rao and Watrap S. Subramania Ayyar—for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—Mr. Venkatachari for the appellant contends that the execution petition should not have been treated by the lower Court, as one that satisfied the requirements of the law. The petition was filed by the assignee decree-holder. It was in the form prescribed by the Code and prayed first, that the petitioner should be recognised as the assignee decree-holder; secondly, that the fact of his being so recognised should be communicated to the Kistna District Court and the Bapatla Sub-Court where the execution of the decree was being carried on; and thirdly, that concurrent execution, which had already been ordered, should be allowed to be proceeded with. Mr. Venkatachari's contention is that, when once a decree is transmitted under S. 39 of the Code to another Court for execution, no execution application can be made to the Court which passed the decree, until the certificate prescribed by S. 41 has been received by that Court. I am unable to follow this argument, for in principle I find it difficult to understand why the original Court is incompetent to entertain an application in the absence of the certificate under S. 41. Mr. Venkatachari says that without the certificate the Court will not be in a position to find out what the amount due to the petitioner is. He forgets that the execution application gives the necessary information and the Courts usually act on such material as is placed before them. Apart from the reason of the thing, the learned counsel has not been able to point to any provision, which forbids the Court to entertain such an application. The cases relied upon by him do not support him in the least. I am not concerned with the correctness or otherwise of the decision in Rangaswami v. Seshappa (1).

1. A I R 1922 Bom 359=47 Bom 56=68 I C 506.

The petitioner before us is not the decree-holder as in that case but the decree-holder's assignee, and under O. 21, R. 16, the only Court to which he is entitled to apply for execution, is the original Court: in other words, the Court which passed the decree. In Maharaja of Bobbili v. Narasaraju Pedda (2), after the decree had been transmitted to the Parvatipur District Munsif's Court, and certain properties had been attached by that Court, the decree-holder applied to the District Court, without asking for concurrent execution, for the sale of the properties already attached by the other Court. That course was held to be irregular, and I fail to see how the decision has any bearing upon the point we have to decide. From Maharaja of Bobbili v. Narasaraju Pedda (2) an appeal was taken to the Privy Council and its judgment is reported in Maharaja of Bobbili v. Narasaraju Bahadur (3). All that their Lordships held was that, as the property concerned was within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Munsif's Court and as that property had already been attached by that Court, the District Court was not the proper Court to execute the decree by sale of that property and that the proper Court to which the application should have been made was the Munsif's Court. This case again has nothing to do with the point now raised. The judgment of Devadoss, J., in Ayyavu Pillai v. Varadaraja Pillai (4) has also no bearing on the question to be decided. That case held that an application to the transferee Court by the assignee decree-holder, to send back the decree to the original Court, is a step in aid of execution. I fail to see how that case is in the least relevant to the point we have to decide. We have here nothing to do with the powers of the transferee Court, the only question being:

“is the execution application made to the original Court competent or not?”

I am satisfied that Mr. Venkatachari's contention is not only opposed to principle but does not receive the slightest support from the provisions of the Code. The appeal is dismissed with costs of the assignee decree-holder.

2. A I R 1914 Mad 435=37 Mad 231=15 I C 738.

3. A I R 1916 P C 16=43 I A 238=39 Mad. 640=36 I C 682 (P C).

4. A I R 1926 Mad 431=92 I C 770.

Reilly, J.—I agree. Mr. Venkatachariar for the judgment-debtor set out in this appeal to satisfy us that the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam, that is, the Judge of the Court which made the decree, had no jurisdiction to entertain this application of the assignee decree-holder. The learned Subordinate Judge has disposed of that contention very neatly and effectively in para. 19 of his judgment, in which he says :

" In this application the petitioner is not praying for any relief which the Court cannot grant. He is asking for a relief which only this Court can grant."

In the end Mr. Venkatachariar, as I understand him, does not deny that the only Court to which the assignee decree-holder could go for the recognition of his assignment was the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam. But, being unable eventually to dispute that, he has tried to persuade us that, although the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam could properly entertain the assignee decree-holder's application, he could not grant the assignee decree-holder's prayers in that application until the transferee Courts, the District Court of Kistna and the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bapatla, to which the decree had been previously transferred for execution, had reported either that no satisfaction had been obtained in their Courts or that complete satisfaction had not been obtained. His eventual contention appears to be that the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam should have stayed his hand until the records had come back from those Courts—or at any rate until certificates had been received from those Courts that satisfaction had not been completely obtained.

There is no provision in the Code to that effect, and, so far as I can see, no reported decision which goes to that length. Even the decision of Devadoss, J., in 50 M. L. J. 116 (4), to which we have been referred, does not go so far as that ; nor was that the point which the learned Judge immediately had to decide. And there appears to be no necessity nor reason why the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam should stay his hand until he got such certificates from the transferee Courts. Notice of the assignee decree-holder's application for recognition of his assignment had to be given to the judgment-debtors, and it was open to them to represent to the Subordinate Judge of Negapatam that the decree had been completely satisfied or partly satisfied, if that was so. They were quite sufficiently protected by the procedure required by the Code that notice should be given to them. In my opinion Mr. Venkatachariar has not been successful in making out either that the law requires or that there is any necessity that the original Court in such a case should after entertaining the assignee decree-holder's application, as it is now admitted must be done, stay its hand until certificates have been received from the transferee Courts or the records have been returned. In my opinion the learned Subordinate Judge's order was right and I agree that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 112

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

K. N. Guruswami and others — Appellants.

v.

Muhammad Khan Sahib — Respondent.

Appeal No. 536 of 1928, Decided on 9th August 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Coimbatore, D/- 28th June 1928.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 13—Ex parte foreign decree in personam against British subject not residing there at date of action will not be executed by British Courts—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 44.

The British Courts will not recognize the judgments of the Courts of a foreign country passed in an action in personam against a British subject, not resident in that country at the date of the action, who has neither appeared in the suit nor submitted to the jurisdiction of the foreign Court. [P 113 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 13—Entering into partnership in foreign country is not submission to its jurisdiction in matters connected with partnership.

By the fact of entering into a partnership in a foreign country a person does not bind himself to submit to the jurisdiction of the Courts of that country, in regard to matters arising in connexion with that partnership : Emanuel v. Symon (1908), 1 K B 302, Foll; 22 Cal 222 (P C) and 20 Mad 112, Rel on. [P 113 C 2]

*B. Somayya—*for Appellants.

*B. Sitarama Rao—*for Respondent.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—This appeal raises a question as to the effect of an ex parte judgment passed by a foreign Court against an absent foreigner. The facts may be briefly stated. The appellants are subjects of the Mysore State and they filed a suit in the District Court of Bangalore against three defendants the last of whom is the respondent before us. The suit was based upon a promissory note alleged to have been executed by them and also upon a contract, which they were stated to have entered into. Defendant 3 (the respondent) was a British subject and was residing at the time of the suit in the District of Coimbatore, where (the appellants allege, though this fact is denied) he was served with the summons in the suit. He however did not appear, but a judgment was passed by the Bangalore Court against him also. This foreign decree the appellants sought to execute in the lower Court, but the learned Judge refused their application under S. 13, Civil P. C., holding that it was passed without jurisdiction. The appellants question in this appeal the correctness of the order made. It is settled law, that the British Courts will not recognize the judgments of the Courts of a foreign country passed in action in personam against a British subject, not resident in that country at the date of the action, who has neither appeared in the suit nor submitted to the jurisdiction of the foreign Court.

But Mr. Somayya, the appellants' learned counsel, asks us to assume certain facts and for the purpose of this judgment, those facts may be assumed. Mr. Somayya's complaint is that the lower Court has not given him an opportunity of proving those facts; but in the view we take, even assuming that the facts alleged are true, the learned counsel's contention cannot prevail. The facts alleged by him are these: the three defendants were a firm of partners carrying on business within the State of Mysore, that the partnership was subsisting on the date of the action and that the suit related to certain dealings with that firm. On these facts, it is contended that defendant 3 must be deemed to have submitted to the jurisdiction of the Bangalore Court.

The question to decide is: can the inference be drawn from the facts alleged, that defendant 3 agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign Court? In Nallakaruppa Chettiar v. Muhammad Iburam Saheb (1) a somewhat similar contention was raised. The argument there was twofold: that the defendant, by carrying on business through his partners at Kandy, should first be regarded as constructively resident there; and secondly, as having impliedly bound himself to submit to the jurisdiction of the Court under the protection of which his business was being carried on. The second contention shows that the dealings to which the suit related were not with the defendant individually, but with the partnership of which he was a member. But a later case, to which I shall presently refer, puts it beyond doubt that this makes no difference. The contentions were overruled and it was held that the Court at Kandy had no jurisdiction over the defendant. The point now raised has been more fully considered by the Court of appeal in England in Emanuel v. Symon (2). There it was argued that by the fact of entering into a partnership in a foreign country, the defendant bound himself to submit to the jurisdiction of the Courts of that country, in regard to matters arising in connexion with that partnership. The Court negatived that argument and explained the case of Copin v. Adamson (3), Lord Alverston, C. J., thus observes:

"The judgment in that case went in favour of the plaintiff because the defendant had expressly agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign Court. And in the Court of appeal the judgment of Lord Cairns proceeded on that footing and he refrained from deciding the question whether the mere fact of becoming a shareholder in a French Company conferred jurisdiction upon the Courts of France."

Kennedy, L. J., points out that the effect of the decision of the Judicial Committee in Gurudayal Singh v. The Rajah of Faridkote (4) is that the mere fact that a person enters into a contract in a foreign country, does not lead to the inference that he agrees to be bound by the decisions of the Courts of that country. Having said so, he goes on to say that in this respect, there is no distinction between entering into an ordinary contract and contract of partnership.

"It is contended," says Kennedy, L. J., "that there may be some difference between a contract to be fulfilled for the immediate benefit of the promisee, e. g., a contract for the sale of goods, and the contract contained in articles of partnership; but I can see no true line of distinction between the two cases."

2. (1908) 1 K B 302=77 L J K B 180=98 L T 304=24 T L R 85.

3. (1874) 9 Ex 345=43 L J Ex 161=31 L T 242=22 W R 658.

4. (1894) 22 Cal 222=21 I A 171=6 Sar 503=(1894) A C 670 (P C).

1. (1897) 20 Mad 112=7 M L J 76.

In the opinion of Kennedy, L. J., also Copin v. Adamson (3) is not an authority for the proposition that a person, by the mere fact of becoming a shareholder in a foreign company, agrees to be bound by the decision of the foreign Court. These authorities very clearly show that the appellants' contention cannot prevail and this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

Reilly, J.—I agree. In my opinion the matter is concluded by Gurudayal Singh v. Rajah of Faridkote (4) and Nalla Karuppan Chettiar v. Muhammad Ibrahim Sahib (1).

P.R.S. M.N.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 114

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

P. Rama Naidu and others—Plaintiffs —Appellants.

v.

Rangayya Naidu and others — Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 294 of 1928, Decided on 19th August 1932.

(a) Succession Act (1925), S. 222—Application for probate by executor—Any beneficiary can intervene—Proceedings are in representative character—Death of executor—Beneficiaries can continue proceedings—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 8 and O. 22, R. 3.

An executor who prays for probate prays in form for something which can be granted to no one else. But the essence of the proceedings is that he seeks to establish a will, not for himself, but as the representative of those who take benefits under it. If he fails in his duty, any of those whom he represents may intervene to carry on the proceedings, having in effect by representation through the executor been a party to the proceedings from the outset. Hence, if in the course of the proceedings in original Court or in appeal the executor drops out through death, it follows that any of those he has represented may similarly carry on the proceedings with the unessential modification that the prayer must then be for letters of administration with the will annexed: 36 Cal. 799; 45 Cal. 862, Not Foll.; A. I. R. 1915 P. C. 124, Appl. Case law referred. [P 117 C 2]

(b) Evidence Act (1872), S. 41—Queare.

Queare.—Whether a judgment refusing probate of a will is a judgment in rem [P 116 C 2]

Advocate-General and M. Venkata Subbiah—for Appellants.

S. Varadachariar and R. Rajagopala Ayyangar—for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J. — One Rama Naidu applied in the lower Court for probate of the will of the deceased. Certain persons entered a caveat and the proceeding became a contentious one. The lower Court, holding that the will has not been proved to be genuine, refused probate and Rama Naidu filed the present appeal and died before the hearing. His sons have been brought on the record and an objection has been taken as to their legal competence to prosecute the appeal, and that is the first question we have to decide.

Rama Naidu besides being the executor is also the residuary legatee. We cannot as a Court of probate decide questions of construction; but it is not disputed that, in any view, Rama Naidu's sons would be beneficiaries. If the estate taken by the deceased was an absolute one, his sons, on his death, became entitled to the legacy as his heirs; if, on the other hand, the bequest is to be construed as conferring on him only a life estate, the sons, by reason of the words "his male descendants," would take the legacy in their own right. In either case, the sons of Rama Naidu are persons entitled to a benefit under the will. The decision on the point raised depends upon the view the Court takes of the true nature of the sons' application. Is that to be regarded as an application under O. 22, Civil P. C.? It is necessary for the sons to make out that the right to sue in such a proceeding survives and that they are their father's legal representatives? An applicant under O. 22, R. 3, must establish these two positions: first, that the right to sue survives; secondly, that he is the plaintiff's legal representative. If the original plaintiff in filing the petition in his character as executor represented the estate of the deceased testator, then, on his death, his right may fairly be said to have devolved upon his sons. This follows from the construction which the Judicial Committee was disposed to place in Venkatanarayana Pillai v. Subbammal (1), upon the expression "legal representative," when a contingent reversioner applied to be substituted in appeal in the place of the deceased presumptive reversioner. But, in my opinion, this is an inquiry which need not be pursued, for the applicant's right stands independent of O. 22, and this position, if realized, will clear the way of much irrelevant discussion.

The question is not—have the applicants a right to be substituted?; but is much more fundamental: have they a right to intervene at any stage of the proceedings? If they can come in at any time, the fact that the original petitioner has died can be of no consequence. Nor does it in principle make any difference whether they seek to intervene before or after the judgment was rendered by the first Court. The question then resolves itself into this: Is a proceeding for the grant of probate (or letters of administration with a copy of the will annexed) a representative one; in other words, is the person who has commenced it to be regarded as having done so in his representative or merely individual character? In considering this question there are two distinct matters which must not be confused. The right which a petitioner in such a proceeding asserts is in one sense an individual or a personal right. But because he asserts a personal right, the proceeding does not become one for his personal benefit. An executor applies for probate, for instance, on the strength of his special right, which he derives from his appointment under the will. But is the proceeding on that account to be regarded as having been initiated by him in his individual character? He may often possess no beneficial interest and his right may rest on no more than a bare legal title.

1. A I R 1915 P C 124=29 I C 298=42 I A 125=38 Mad 406 (P. C.).

The proper view to take is that his object in commencing the proceeding is to get an adjudication in the interests not only of himself but of others, that the will propounded is genuine and valid. In inviting the Court to pronounce in favour of the will, the executor is acting in a representative capacity, that is to say, for the benefit of the whole class of persons, including himself, interested in having it established. The position of a petitioner for probate is not dissimilar to that of a plaintiff under O. 1, R. 8, Civil P. C. What that rule contemplates is a common interest and in the case of a petition for probate there is an identity of interest on the part of the whole body of persons claiming under the will. One of the necessary incidents of a representative suit is that any person for whose benefit it is instituted may intervene and ask to be made a party: O. 1, R. 8, Cl. 2. If a petition for probate stands on a footing similar to that of a representative suit, it is right in principle to extend the analogy and hold that any legatee or beneficiary may, on a proper case being made out, intervene at any stage and claim to come on the record. True, an executor when applying for probate does not purport to act under O. 1, R. 8. This remark applies equally to a presumptive reversioner who brings a suit in the lifetime of a Hindu widow for getting rid of an adoption or an alienation made by her. Nevertheless, the Judicial Committee has held in the case relied upon by the learned Advocate-General, Venkatanarayana Pillai v. Subbammal (1), that on the death of the presumptive reversioner, the person next entitled to the reversion can be substituted in his place, on the ground that the presumptive reversioner's suit must be deemed to be a representative one. In that case, the Judicial Committee refrained from deciding whether or not the adjudication in such a suit would operate as res judicata against the contingent reversioners not parties 'eo nomine' to the action. But in a later case, Kesho Prasad Singh v. Sheo Prakash (2), they point out that from the view taken by them in the earlier case, Venkatanarayana Pillai v. Subbammal (1), the conclusion necessarily follows that the judgment in the presumptive reversioner's suit is binding even as between the persons not directly parties to the previous suit.

The two questions, the right to intervene and the binding character of the judgment as res judicata, are, as Mr. Varadachari rightly points out, interdependent. Are the legatees entitled to intervene? If they are, the judgment given in their absence, would be binding upon them as res judicata. Does the adjudication operate as res judicata? If it does, surely, they would have a right to intervene, for it would be unjust to hold that they would be bound by the judgment and yet deny to them the right of intervention. Expl. 6, S. 11, Civil P. C., recognizes this principle and provides that judgments in representative actions bind also persons who are constructively parties.

Mr. Varadachari, for the respondent, relies principally upon two cases of the Calcutta High Court. In Sarat Chendra v. Mani Mohan (3), the application for the grant was made by the residuary legatee who died pending the suit. On his death, his widow applied for being substituted. In refusing her request, Harrington, J., observes that the right to represent the estate has not devolved upon her. This case was followed by Greaves, J., in Haribhushan v. Manmathanath (4). It was the son of the original applicant, the residuary legatee, that applied to be made a party, and his application was similarly rejected. In these two cases, the question was not presented to the learned Judges in the form in which we are now considering it. The only contention put forward was, that the applicants were entitled to be substituted under O. 22, R. 3. It was not argued that they had a larger right flowing from the nature of the proceeding, namely, a right to intervene at any stage. Mt. Phakni v. Mt. Menki (5), on which the applicants rely, supports their contention. The facts in that case were similar to those in the present, and it was held that the heir could be substituted. The conclusion, although based on a ground different from what we are adopting, seems, in my opinion, sound. This remark applies to another case relied on by the applicants, Chandramani v. Bipin Behari (6), where also, on the death of the legatee who applied for probate, her representatives were substituted. Apart from authority, I am satisfied on principle that the sons of Rama Naidu have been properly brought on the record. In the course of the argument, my learned brother drew attention to a passage in Williams on Executors, which most clearly and unequivocally supports my view. I shall extract that passage:

2. A I R 1924 P C 247=82 I C 962=51 I A 381=46 All 831 (P C).

3. (1909) 36 Cal 799=3 I C 995.

"A legatee cannot set up a will after it has been litigated between the executor and next of kin, or between the executor and the executor of another will, and pronounced against, unless he can show the parties agreed to set aside the will by fraud or collusion. But if he is afraid the executor will not do justice, he may intervene for his interest pending the suit, but apparently not after the hearing; Williams on Executors Edn. 12, Vol. 1, p. 213."

A further question was raised and argued, whether a judgment of a probate Court, if against a will, amounts or not to a judgment in rem under S. 41, Evidence Act. On this point, several cases such as Chinnasami v. Harihar Chandra (7), Kalyan Chand Lal Chand v. Sitabai (8), Saroda Kanto Das v. Gohindo Mohan Das (9), and Ramani Debi v. Kumud Bandhu Mukerji (10), have been cited at the Bar, but in the view I have taken, it becomes unnecessary to deal with that question and I therefore refrain from dealing with it. In the result, I have come to the conclusion that Rama Naidu's sons have been rightly brought on the record and are entitled to prosecute the appeal. I shall now deal with the appeal on the merits. (Here his Lordship considered the evidence and came to the conclusion that the will was genuine). In the result, the appeal is allowed with costs throughout. The District Judge is accordingly directed to issue under the provisions of the Succession Act letters of administration with a copy of the will annexed to the appellants (the sons of Rama Naidu) or any of them as the District Judge may in his discretion think fit.

Reilly, J.—I agree with my learned brother that it is unnecessary on this occasion to express an opinion on the question whether a judgment refusing probate of a will is a judgment in rem, though that question was argued before us at some length. On that question there is a conflict between the view expressed in this Court and the Calcutta High Court on the one hand and that of the Bombay High Court on the other. If Rama Naidu, the plaintiff, when he sought to prove the will in his suit for probate, was not only asserting his claim to be recognized as executor but can be regarded as seeking to establish the will as representing all the beneficiaries under it, then on his death any other beneficiary represented by him or any person succeeding to a benefit under it through his death could continue the proceedings either in the original Court or on appeal, though the prayer for probate would in those circumstances necessarily be changed to one for letters of administration with the will annexed. Representative suits in this country, in which those who are by name on the record fight the

4. (1918) 45 Cal 862=51 I C 76.

5. A I R 1930 Pat 618=128 I C 128=9 Pat 693.

6. A I R 1932 Cal 206=136 I C 543.

7. (1893) 16 Mad 380=3 M L J 121.

8. A I R 1914 Bom 8=23 I C 325=38 Bom 309 (F B).

9. (1910) 6 I C 912.

10. (1910) 7 I C 126.

battles and represent the interests, not only of themselves, but also of others, who are in effect, though not in name, parties to the suits from the beginning, are not confined to suits in which permission to represent other persons has been obtained under R.8, O.1, Civil P.C. That was recognized by their Lordships of the Privy Council in regard to Hindu reversioners in Venkatanarayana Pillai v. Subbammal (1), Janakiammal v. Narayanasami Iyer (11) and Kesho Prasad Singh v. Sheo Prakash Ojha (2); in regard to members of the public interested in a public trust of a religious and charitable nature in Raja Ananda Rao v. Ram Das Daduram (12), and in regard to worshippers in a temple in Sankaralinga Nadan v. Rajeswara Dorai (13). In England that principle was long ago applied to probate proceedings. In Bittleston v. Clark (14) Sir George Lee said:

"A legatee cannot set up a will after it has been litigated between the executor and the next of kin and pronounced against, unless he can show the parties agreed to set aside the will by fraud or collusion, and so the delegates held in Lewis v. Bulkeley (15), but a legatee, if he is afraid the executor will not do justice, may intervene in his own interest," which is in effect quoted in the passage taken by my learned brother from Williams on Executors. In Hayle v. Hastad (16), Sir Herbert Jenner described executors who prayed for probate of a will and codicil as "in effect representing and protecting the interests of all the parties benefited under those instruments."

Mr. Varadachariar contended that, when an executor prays for probate, he prays for something which is personal to himself, as no one but an executor can get probate. That is to look at the mere form of the proceedings and to ignore their real effect. As Sir Herbert Jenner said in the same case,

"the executors in the former will represent and are the protectors of the legatees under it, being specially entrusted by the deceased with the care and management of her property and to see her intentions carried into effect;"

and again :

"the executors were bound to the best of their ability to defend the interests of the legatees under the first will, of which they stood before the Court praying probate and which they must be taken to have considered as containing the last will of their testator and which as much it was their duty to see carried into effect ; for it is not the interest of the executors but the intention of the testator which is to be attended to."

It cannot be denied that the passage I have quoted represents the law in England today. An executor who prays for probate prays in form for something which can be granted to no one else. But the essence of the proceedings is that he seeks to establish a will, not for himself, but as the representative of those who take benefits under it. If he fails in his duty, any of those whom he represents may intervene to carry on the proceedings, having in effect by representation through the executor been a party to the proceedings from the outset. And, if in the course of the proceedings the executor drops out through death, it follows that any of those he has represented may similarly carry on the proceedings with the unessential modification that the prayer must then be for letters of administration with the will annexed. There is no reason to doubt that the position is the same in this country. This aspect of the matter, I think it is clear, was overlooked in Sarat Chandra v. Nani Mohan Banerjee (3) and Haribhushan v. Manmathanath (4), on which Mr. Varadachariar relies, where the petitions before the Court were dealt with as if the only question arising was how O. 22 of the Code applied to them. I agree that Rama Naidu's sons are entitled to prosecute his appeal against the dismissal of his suit to establish the will. On the facts I agree with my learned brother.

P.R.S./M.N.

Appeal allowed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 117

PANDALAI, J.

Alapati Achutaramana — Plaintiff—
Petitioner.

v.

Vasireddi Jagannadham and another — Defendants—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1098 of 1929, Decided on 16th September 1932, against decree of Dist. Judge, West Godavari, in A. S. No. 180 of 1928.

11. A I R 1916 P C 117 = 37 I C 161 = 48 I A 207=39 Mad 634 (P C).

12. A I R 1921 P C 123 = 62 I C 737 = 48 I C 12=48 Cal 493 (P C).

13. (1908) 31 Mad 236=35 I A 176 (P C).

14. (1755) 2 Lee 248.

15. (1732) 1 Lee 513 n.

16. (1836) 1 Curt. 236.

* Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 58 and 91—Pro-note insufficiently stamped—Execution and loan admitted in written statement—Decree on note cannot be passed—Loan if independent of pro-note decree can be given on admission but otherwise mere admission does not give plaintiff cause of action—In latter case S. 58 does not cure defect—Stamp Act (1899), S. 35—Contract Act (1872), S. 62—Promissory note.

In spite of waiver of proof by an admission under S. 58, Evidence Act, a note or other instrument insufficiently stamped cannot be acted upon or decree given upon it; A I R 1914 Mad 657, Diss. from.; A I R 1932 Mad 693, Rel. on. [P 118 C 2]

But where there is a cause of action complete in itself before the giving of the promissory note and independently of it, the plaintiff would be able to prove it and in such a case the admission of the loan in the written statement is under S. 58, Evidence Act, sufficient to waive the requirements of further proof and to enable the plaintiff to succeed thereon. But if there is no such cause of action, the mere admission of the fact by the defendant cannot give him a cause of action, and that is not a matter cured by S. 58 or any other section of the Evidence Act: 23 Cal 851, Rel. on. and 7 Cal. 256, Ref. [P 119 C 2]

K. Venkatarama Raju — for Petitioner.

V. Govindarajachari — for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—The petitioner's suit for Rs. 400 and interest thereon was dismissed by the learned District Judge of West Godavari on the ground that the promissory note sued on was inadmissible in evidence as it bore only one anna stamp instead of two annas stamp and that the plaintiff's case which he attempted to make by amendment of the plaint, that the loan was given some eight days before the note, was not in fact true. Consequently, according to the learned Judge, the loan and the note being contemporaneous, the suit for the loan was not maintainable because the note was inadmissible: vide Muthu Sas-trigal v. Viswanatha Pandara Sannadhi (1).

In this Court it is contended for the petitioner that the learned Judge failed to see that both the note and the loan were admitted by the respondent-defendant in his written statement and that consequently by S. 58, Evidence Act, it was not necessary for the plaintiff-petitioner to prove either the note or the loan. The written statement of the defendant does contain an express admission of the execution of the promissory note as well as an implied admission of the receipt of the loan. The petitioner's contention is that in such cases no question of admissibility of evidence arises because evidence is dispensed with of facts admitted in the pleadings. For the application of that doctrine to this class of cases reliance is placed upon the decision of Anantakrishna Ayyar, J., in Ali-mane Sahiba v. K. Subbarayudu (2) at p. 308 (of 63 M. L. J.). In that case in a suit on a promissory note the defendant in his pleadings admitted execution of the note but pleaded discharge of the note. The note was produced in evidence and marked apparently without question, but later on the defendant discovered that the stamp on the note had not been cancelled and he then raised the question that the note was invalid by S. 12, Stamp Act. The learned Judge on those facts held that S. 58, Evidence Act, applied, and therefore no question of admissibility of the note arose at all.

In that sense the note sued on in this case was admitted and no question of admissibility therefore arose. But it is answered that the learned Judge in Ali-mane Sahiba v. K. Subbarayudu (2) did not consider the effect of the language of S. 35, Stamp Act, which says not merely that unstamped instruments must not be received in evidence but that they must not be acted upon. It was urged that on the latter part of this language it has been held in Chenbasappa v. Lakshman Ramachandra (3), following the decisions of the Calcutta High Court, that in spite of waiver of proof by an admission under S. 58, Evidence Act, a note or other instrument insufficiently stamped cannot be acted upon or decree given upon it. I have not been referred to anything to contradict this and I must therefore hold that so far as admission of the inadmissible note is concerned, S. 58, Evidence Act, does not avail the petitioner, for, in respect of it no decree can be given on the note as to do so would be acting upon the note.

But the petitioner has still another string to his bow, and that is, the admission of the loan. It is said that by reason of that admission, to which no prohibition under the Stamp Act can apply, proof by the plaintiff of the fact of the loan being waived, he is entitled to a decree because the decision in Muthu Sastrigal v. Viswanatha Pandara Sannadhi (1) relied upon by the lower Court for refusing to give a decree for the loan is based upon the inadmissibility of the proof of a loan which is contemporaneous with an inadmissible note by S. 91, Evidence Act. Where therefore there is no question of proof, S. 91 does not come into play at all. To this the respondent's answer is that the prohibition of a decree on a loan which is contemporaneous with an inadmissible note is not due merely to the difficulty of proof created by S. 91, Evidence Act, but something more fundamental namely, absence of any cause of action independent of the note. In brief, the respondent's answer is that where there is a loan and a contemporaneous promissory note which is inadmissible for want of proper stamp there is no cause of action for the loan independently of the note. I am not able to say, though there are stray expressions in the judgment of Sadasiva Ayyar, J., in Muthu Sastrigal v. Viswanadha Pandara Sannadhi (1) capable of that meaning, that this was the real ground of his decision. On the contrary, he does expressly refer at p. 663 (of 38 Mad.) to the ground of his decision in these words :

1. A I R 1914 Mad 657=21 1 C 861=38 Mad 660.

2. A I R 1932 Mad 693=139 1 C 486=63 M L J 808.

3. (1894) 18 Bom 369.

"To import the doctrines laid down in English cases about vague obligations, to pay arising out of equity and not out of contract, or about obligations which can be enforced if the plaintiff skilfully draws up his plaint as one on account for money had and received concealing the real contract of loan which had been reduced to the form of a document is, it seems to me, merely trying to nullify S. 91, Evidence Act."

And Spencer, J., says practically the same thing. In the decision which was relied upon in that case, Pothi Reddi v. Velayuda Sivan (4) the matter is put in similar language at p. 97. There money had been paid in the morning and in the evening a document which was held to be a promissory note and not properly stamped was exchanged. It being held that the instrument was a promissory note, the question arose whether the plaintiff might be permitted to prove and succeed on the loan. The learned Judges say:

"We cannot assent to such a doctrine and to do so would entirely nullify the provisions of S. 91, Evidence Act."

And later:

"It is a necessary condition to every written contract that the terms should be orally settled before they are reduced to writing and to hold when such a contract has been reduced to writing that a plaintiff can take advantage of the absence of a stamp on the promissory note to sue at once for the return of money which he may have contracted to lend for a fixed period, would entirely defeat the provisions of S. 91, Evidence Act."

In this case also, the Court founded its decision on S. 91, Evidence Act, and did not purport to lay down that where there is a cause of action complete in itself before the giving of the promissory note and independently of it, the plaintiff would not be able to prove it. The question then is, whether this is a case where substantively the petitioner has an independent cause of action apart from the note. If he has, the admission of the loan in the written statement is under S. 58, Evidence Act, sufficient to waive the requirements of further proof and to enable the petitioner to succeed thereon. But if there is no such cause of action, the mere admission of the fact by the defendant could not give him a cause of action and that is not a matter cured by S. 58 or any other section of the Evidence Act. On this point, two decisions of the Calcutta High Court have been cited, one in Sheikh Akbar v. Sheik Khan (5) and the other in Pramatha Nath Sandal v. Dwarka Nath Dey (6). In the earlier case, Garth, C. J., described the two classes of cases, the first in which the plaintiff has a cause of action independently of the inadmissible instrument and the second where there is no such cause of action. In the case before him he held that there was no such independent cause of action. In Pramatha Nath Sandal v. Dwarka Nath Dey (6) Sir Comer Petheram, C. J., and another learned Judge had a case very like the present. The plaintiff had lent Rs. 200 to the defendant and taken a hatchitta which was held to be a promissory note which should have been stamped with a two anna stamp, but only bore one anna receipt stamp. The Judge of the Small Cause Court came to the conclusion that the plaintiff had no cause of action independently of the document and the document itself being inadmissible dismissed

5. (1881) 7 Cal 256=8 C L R 528.

6. (1896) 23 Cal 351.

4. (1887) 10 Mad 94.

the suit. It was held that this dismissal was wrong. The learned Chief Justice said:

"The defendant by his written statement admitted that he borrowed Rs. 200 from the plaintiff, and there can be no doubt that an implied contract to repay money lent always arises from the fact that the money is lent, even though no express promise, either written or verbal, is made to repay it."

Referring to Sheik Akbar v. Sheik Khan (5) which was cited for the defendant and after setting out a passage from p. 260 thereof, the learned Chief Justice proceeded:

"These words, taken alone, may seem to indicate that when a bill or note is taken for a debt the action must be brought upon the bill or note; and that if for any reason the document is excluded, the action must fail; but a reference to the earlier portion of the judgment shows that such was not the meaning of the Chief Justice, and that when he spoke of a deposit he did not mean a loan, as he then says where money is lent and a bill or note given for the loan which is not paid on maturity, the creditor may disregard the note and sue on the original consideration."

I very respectfully adopt these words and think that there is nothing to show that that case is not applicable to the present or similar cases. This view is as far as I know not against any decision of this Court to which my attention has been drawn and it is in keeping with the English decisions upon the point and is certainly in consonance with the requirements of substantial justice. For though the defendant contested the suit on the ground that the note was inadmissible in evidence, he not only admitted the loan in his pleading, but had a month before the suit provided for its payment by executing a mortgage and leaving money with the mortgagee to pay the plaintiff. Holding therefore that the loan sued for was admitted by the defendant in his pleadings and that therefore no further proof was required, the plaintiff-petitioner was entitled to a decree. The decree of the learned District Judge is set aside and that of the District Munsif restored. The petitioner will have his costs here and in the District Court.

P.R.S./R.K.

Decree set aside.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 120

PANDALAI, J.

Katamreddi Ramireddi—Petitioner.

v.

(Paderala) Sreeramulu Reddi and others—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1371 of 1928, Decided on 9th September 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Nellore, D/- 26th January 1928.

(a) Madras Religious Endowments Act (1927). Ss. 51 (4) and 78—Persons in office prior to Act—Suit by them under S. 78 is maintainable—Non-appointment by committee is irrelevant.

Persons who were holding office when the Act came into force must under S. 51 (4) of the Act be deemed to have been appointed under it on the date the Act came into force, and such persons are competent to maintain the petition. The fact that they were not again appointed by an order of the Committee is irrelevant, the statute having given them the authority of persons who are so appointed. [P 121 C 1]

(b) Interpretation of Statutes—Objects and reasons—Court cannot refer to them to determine proper construction of particular sections.

A Court is not entitled to refer to objects and reasons to determine the proper construction of the section. It must be determined on the words as they stand, having regard to the general scope and object of the legislation as determined by the provisions contained in it. [P 121 C 2]

(c) Interpretation of Statutes—Preamble—Words clear—Section should be given effect to irrespective of preamble.

The words of operative sections of an Act must be given effect to irrespective of inferences to be drawn from a preamble if the words themselves are clear and capable of only one meaning. [P 122 C 1]

(d) Interpretation of Statutes—Words.

By mere construction words which limit the operation of the general language of the section should not be added. [P 122 C 2]

(e) Madras Religious Endowments Act (1927), S. 78—Court can inquire into claims against strangers—Interference is however discretionary—If difficult questions of title arise or prolonged investigation is involved Court will order separate suit.

There is nothing in S. 78 itself which debars the jurisdiction of the Court to which an application is made under it from trying any question which may be appropriate as between a religious endowment and strangers, provided the question be relevant to the possession of the mutt or temple or its endowments or title-deeds or documents, that is, the immediate right to possess the same. The section however only confers a discretion and the Court is not bound to make an order under S. 78 in circumstances in which a difficult question of title may arise and prolonged investigation be involved, the Court will order a separate suit where the dispute is between a temple and a third party who has a genuine and hostile claim. [P 122 C 2]

B. Somayya and P. Chandra Reddi—for Petitioner.

P. Srikantam and P. Venkatarama Rao—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This petition arises out of an order passed under S. 78, Hindu Religious Endowments Act 2 of 1927 by the learned District Judge of Nellore. The petitioners before him were the non-hereditary trustees of the temple of Sri Kothandaramaswami at Kovur which is under the superintendence of the District Temple Committee, Nellore. They were holding office when the Act came into force, and are therefore persons who must under S. 51 (4) of the Act be deemed to have been appointed under it on the date the Act came into force. The petition was directed against persons holding certain lands of the temple under two leases executed by members of the archaka family for one-half of the lands each. One lease was for 15 years from 20th October 1919, and the other was for 11 years from 22nd March 1919, and the rent reserved was 10 tooms of grain per acre per year. The trustees stated that the archakas had no authority to lease the temple lands as the lands were given to them for enjoyment as remuneration for services rendered by them as archakas. They stated that other arrangements had been made to remunerate the archakas for their services, that the archakas had accepted those arrangements and consented to the temple taking possession of the lands and executed a karar or agreement to that effect on 14th July 1927; but that the counter-petitioners, the lessees, refused to give up the lands, and therefore they, the petitioners, were directed by the Temple Committee to take steps under S. 78 of the Act to get possession.

The learned Judge dismissed the petition on two grounds. The first ground is that the petitioners are incompetent to maintain the petition, as they are not trustees appointed by the Committee to whom alone S. 78 applies. In his opinion although the petitioners are declared by S. 51 (4) to be deemed to have been appointed under the Act on the date the Act came into force, still as they were not in fact appointed by the Committee they do not come within the section. In my opinion this was not a sound distinction. The effect of S. 51 (4) is to make the petitioners for the purposes of the Act in all respects the same as if they had been appointed by the Committee on the date when the Act came into force. In the face of this express provision, the fact that they were not again appointed by an order of the Committee is irrelevant, the statute having given them the authority of persons who are so appointed. The learned advocate for the counter-petitioners here drew attention to the fact that S. 78 requires production of the order of the Board or Committee appointing the petitioners and urged that as these petitioners cannot produce an order of appointment they are not competent to apply. The answer to this is that S. 51 (4) dispenses with a separate order of appointment. No other order need be produced when the statute has made a declaration which gives the petitioners the status and privileges of persons in fact appointed by the Committee. The other ground on which the learned Judge thought the petition incompetent was that S. 78 is not applicable to proceedings against third parties holding adversely to a temple or other religious endowment but only to proceedings against trustees, temple servants or others holding for and on behalf of the endowment. For this opinion the learned Judge refers to the objects and reasons of the original Bill of 1922, and to a note on Cl. 24 of that Bill corresponding to the present S. 78 to the effect that that clause is intended to operate against dismissed trustees and others who prove refractory.

The learned Judge was not entitled to refer to this document to determine the proper construction of the section. It must be determined on the words as they stand, having regard to the general scope and object of the legislation as determined by this and the other provisions contained in it. The advocate for the respondents referred to the preamble of the Act as to the scope and object of the legislation. It says that it is expedient to provide for the better administration and governance of certain Hindu religious endowments, and from this he argued that powers could not have been intended to be given to the Board, Committee and Trustees under the Act to proceed against those who were not concerned with the administration, or governance of the endowment but with third parties. There is some force in the argument. But the words of operative sections of an Act must be given effect to irrespective of inferences to be drawn from a preamble if the words themselves are clear and capable of only one meaning. Reference was also made to S. 73 of the Act which abolishes the use of S. 92, Civil P. C., and substitutes a new procedure for suits which fall within S. 92, and it was argued that as such suits relate only to internal matters, S. 78 also must be directed against persons concerned with the internal management of a temple. S. 73 of the Act of 1919 has, in my opinion, no connexion with the present point, as it is only concerned with suits for which S. 92, Civil P. C., had provided. The meaning of S. 78 must be determined without any analogy to be drawn from the class of suits to which S. 73 refers.

The principal point is the language of the section itself. It says that where a Committee has appointed persons as non-hereditary trustees of a temple or where the Board or a Committee has appointed a person to discharge the functions of a hereditary trustee and such person is resisted in or prevented from obtaining possession of the mutt or temple or of the endowment connected therewith or of any title-deeds or other documents relating thereto, the Court may on application by the person so appointed and on production of the order of the Board or Committee appointing him, order the delivery to such persons of the possession of such property as may be specified therein.

It will be noticed that nothing is said as to who are the persons against whom the application is to be directed. It is certainly the case that in the vast majority of cases the application will be directed against ex-trustees or temple servants or other refractory persons connected with the administration who refuse to give up the property of the temple into the hands of the newly appointed trustees. But there is nothing in the section itself which limits the application to such persons; and it is impossible by mere inference and as a matter of construction to read into the section some such words as 'from any person who is not holding the same under any title or claim adversely to the institution.' If that was intended, it was perfectly open to the legislature to say so. They have not done so; and it is impossible by mere construction to add words which limit the operation of the general language of the section. Reference was made to S. 41, English Charitable Trusts Act of 1853, which limits the power of a Judge when acting under S. 28, and prohibits him from trying or determining title to any property or interest therein as between any charity or trustee thereof, and any person holding or claiming such property or interest adversely to such charity. It was urged that S. 78 must be read as if that was expressed in it. But construction by analogy is totally inadmissible and I am bound to give effect to the words of the Indian enactment as they stand. I therefore come to the conclusion that there is nothing in the section itself which debars the jurisdiction of the Court to which an application is made under it from trying any question which may be appropriate as between a religious endowment and strangers provided the question be relevant to the possession of the mutt or temple or its endowments or title-deeds or documents, that is, the immediate right to possess the same.

But the section only confers a discretion, because the words are "the Court may" which show that the Court is not bound to make an order under the section in circumstances in which a difficult question of title may arise and prolonged investigation be involved. The scheme of the section would appear to be much like S. 4, Provincial Insolvency Act, which confers wide jurisdiction on the Court but makes it discretionary in cases which are not obvious. I myself am of opinion that the Court will order a separate suit where the dispute is between a temple and a third party who has a genuine and hostile claim.

That leads to the only other point, namely, that in this case, the learned Judge has in the exercise of his discretion stated that he would not, even if he had the power, make the order. This was an exercise of jurisdiction with which I do not see any ground to interfere. The respondents are persons who had been on the date of the petition lessees of property from the then apparent managers although they were only archakas for eight years. Whether the original lease was or was not prudent and binding on the temple was a question which the Court under S. 78 might justifiably leave for determination in a separate suit. The learned Judge having decided so to leave it, I am not prepared to question that discretion. The petition therefore must be dismissed and with costs.

P.R.S./R.K.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 123

BURN, J.

M. K. Panduranga Mudali—Accused—Petitioner, In re.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 403 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 372 of 1932, Decided on 26th September 1932, against decision of Fourth Presidency Magistrate, Egmore, Madras, in Calendar Case No. 9526 of 1932.

(a) Penal Code (1860), S. 114 — Abettor present — He can be charged for actual offence.

If the act of the principal offender committed in consequence of the abetment and in the presence of the abettor amounts to the offences charged, the abettor also must be deemed to have committed the same offences and there is no illegality in the charge against the abettor for actual offences. [P 123 C 2]

(b) Press (Emergency Powers) Act (23 of 1931), Ss. 2 (6) and 18 — Painting "Boycott British Goods" on road is not making news sheet—Painter is not guilty under S. 18.

Though painting the words "Boycott British Goods" on the road way does amount to making a document, it does not amount to making an unauthorized news sheet as defined in S. 2 (6) and the painter cannot be held to be guilty of an offence under S. 18 (1) of that Act. [P 124 C 1]

(c) Criminal Law Amendment Act (1908), S. 17 (1) — Congress is unlawful association and can be taken judicial notice of (Obiter).

Any Court may take judicial notice of the facts that the Congress is an unlawful association and that one of its operations consists in incitement to boycott British Goods. (Obiter). [P 124 C 2] (d) Criminal Law Amendment Act (1908), S. 17 (1)—"Assists" means intentionally assists.

Section 17 (1) is not designed to punish persons who, acting quite innocently, happen by accident to do something which furthers the operation of an unlawful association. "Assists" in that section must mean "intentionally assists," i. e., does something which assists with the intention of assisting. [P 124 C 2; P 125 C 1]

K. S. Jayarama Ayyar for T. S. Venkataraman—for Petitioner.

T. S. Anantaraman—for the Crown.

Order.—The petitioner was the first accused in the case tried by the learned Fourth Presidency Magistrate, Madras. The case against him was that at 4 a. m. on 5th April 1932, he instigated accused 2 to paint on the surface of the road the words "Boycott British Goods." In consequence of his abetment, and in his presence, accused 2 painted the word "Boycott" on the road, and then was arrested by a Head Constable of the C. I. D. He has been convicted of offences punishable under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act (14 of 1908), and under S. 18 (1), Press (Emergency Powers) Act (23 of 1931), and has been sentenced for each offence to six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100, the sentences to run concurrently.

It is contended in the first place that on the facts found, the petitioner could only have been found guilty of abetment of the offences if any committed by accused 2. He was not charged with abetment, but with the actual offences. Hence, it is contended the convictions cannot be maintained. This argument is unsound. S. 114, I. P. C., provides that whenever any person who is absent would be liable to be punished as an abettor, is present when the act or offence for which he would be punishable in consequence of the abetment is committed, he shall be deemed to have committed such act of offence. It follows that if the act of accused 2, committed in consequence of the abetment of the petitioner, amounts to the offences charged, the petitioner also must be deemed to have committed the same offences. There is therefore no illegality in the charge, and the convictions cannot be set aside on this ground. The next contention is that the facts found proved do not amount to an offence under S. 18 (1), Press (Emergency Powers) Act. That section reads as follows (omitting the words which are unimportant in this case) :

"Whoever makes any unauthorized news-sheet shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both."

The learned Presidency Magistrate has held that painting the words "Boycott British Goods" on the surface of a public road amounts to the making of an unauthorized news-sheet. News-sheet is defined in S. 2 (6) as meaning "any document other than a newspaper containing public news or comments on public news or any matter described in sub-S. (1), S. 4."

"Documents" in S. 2 (2) is said to include also "any painting, drawing or photograph or other visible representation." It follows quite clearly that painting words on the road is making a "document." The further question is whether the words "Boycott British Goods" are matter described in sub-S. (1), S. 4. The offensive matter against which S. 4 (1) is directed is "words . . . which (a) incite to or encourage, or tend to incite or to encourage, the commission of any offence of murder or any cognizable offence involving violence".

It cannot of course be said that the words "Boycott British Goods" incite to the commission of murder, but the learned Presidency Magistrate holds that they incite the public to commit the offence of molestation as defined in S. 3 (b), Ordinance 5 of 1932, as amended by Ordinance 7 of 1932. That section declares that a person is said to molest another person who,

"with a view to cause loss or knowing that loss is likely to be caused to such other person, loiters at or near the place where such person carries on business and dissuades or attempts to dissuade by words or gestures or otherwise any person from entering or approaching or dealing at such place."

This appears to me to be altogether too far fetched. Molestation can only be committed by somebody who loiters with a view to cause loss to a person carrying on business. I do not see how the words "Boycott British Goods" can be supposed to incite the public to entertain the "view to cause loss" which is the essence of the offence of molestation. The words can be held to inculcate a hatred of British goods, but I do not see that they necessarily inculcate a hatred of the people who deal in them, or a desire to do harm and cause loss to the people who deal in them. I am of opinion therefore that though painting the words "Boycott British Goods" on the roadway does amount to making a document, it does not amount to making an unauthorized news sheet as defined in S. 2 (6), Press (Emergency Powers) Act. It follows that the petitioner cannot be held to be guilty of an offence under S. 18 (1) of that Act. It is contended on his behalf that he is not guilty under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act, either. That section reads as follows:

"Whoever is a member of an unlawful association, or takes part in meetings of any such association, or contributes or receives or solicits any contribution for the purpose of any such association, or in any way assists the operations of any such association, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both".

The learned Presidency Magistrate has held that by painting the words "Boycott British Goods" on the roadway, the petitioner and the other who was convicted with him, assisted the operations of the Working Committee of the Indian National Congress, which is an unlawful association. Mr. Jayarama Ayyar for the petitioner argues that it has not been properly proved (i) that the Working Committee of the Congress is an unlawful association, (ii) that one of the operations of the Working Committee consists in inciting people to boycott British goods or (iii) that the petitioner has assisted such an operation. I cannot accept these contentions. If it were necessary I would be prepared to hold that any Court may take judicial notice of the facts that the Congress is an unlawful association and that one of its operations consists in incitement to boycott British goods. In this case it is not necessary. There is the evidence of the Sub-inspector (P.W. 5) that the Working Committee of the Indian National Congress has been declared an unlawful association, and that the boycott of all foreign cloth whether British or from other countries is enjoined by the Working Committee as one of the means of furthering the Civil Disobedience Movement. The Sub-Inspector produced Ex. D, but I do not read his evidence as meaning that he derived his knowledge of these matters from Ex. D. He has also said that this boycott programme is being carried on by writing on walls and roads appealing to people to boycott British and foreign goods. He has said that the items of the programme of the Working Committee are being carried on by the Madras District Congress Committee, that the petitioner was a member of the Madras District Congress Committee Tamil Nadu and that he was a Congress worker. This evidence if believed was in my opinion quite sufficient to justify the learned Magistrate's finding that the petitioner was "assisting the operations of an unlawful association" within the meaning of S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1908. I do not overlook the principle that in S. 17 (1) the word "assists" must be construed in a reasonable way. That section is obviously not designed to punish persons who, acting quite innocently, happen by accident to do something which furthers the operation of an unlawful association. "Assists" in that section must, I think, mean "intentionally assists," i.e., does something which assists with the intention of assisting. Construing the word in that liberal way I hold that there was before the learned Magistrate enough evidence to justify the finding that the petitioner assisted the operations of an unlawful association.

I decline to entertain the contention that as no more than the word "boycott" had been painted, the petitioner and accused 2 had not passed the stage of "preparation" to commit an offence. It is of course possible to argue that the accused, after completing the word boycott, might have changed their minds and gone on to add prostitution, gambling, drunkenness, or any other vice. But such an argument could not in this case be advanced seriously; by way of a joke it was quite amusing. The result is that the conviction and sentence for an offence under S. 18 (1), Press (Emergency Powers) Act, are set aside; the fine if collected must be refunded. I find no ground for interference with the conviction and sentence under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act.

P.R.S./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 125

BURN, J.

Maromma and others—Appellants, In re.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 246 of 1932, Decided on 8th August 1932, against order of Sess. Judge, Bellary, D/- 17th February 1932.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 164 — Statements recorded by Magistrate under S. 164 are evidence in judicial proceeding within Penal Code (1860), S. 193, Expl. (2).

Statements recorded by a Magistrate in the course of a police investigation under S. 164, Criminal P. C., are evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Expl. (2), S. 193, Penal Code : A I R 1921 Bom 3 (F B), not Foll. ; 16 Mad 421 and 29 Mad 89, Rel on. [P 125 C 2]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 476 and 164 — Statements under S. 164 — Offence triable exclusively by Sessions — Sessions Court can file complaint — Sanction asked by Public Prosecutor — Complaint can be filed even after six months.

Statements made during the course of an investigation under S. 164 into an offence of murder, which is triable only by a Sessions Court, must be held to be in relation to the trial in that Court and a complaint can be made even after six months where the sanction is applied for, by Public Prosecutor and not by a private person. [P 126 C 1]

(c) Penal Code (1860), S. 193 — False evidence given—Person should be tried — Age, relationship and other circumstances are to be considered by trying Magistrate—Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 476.

Prima facie persons who give false evidence which may result in the conviction of an innocent person for murder ought to be tried for the offence they have committed. Their relationship to the accused, their age, the circumstances under which they came to give false evidence are matters to be considered by the Magistrate before whom they will appear. [P 126 C 1]

(d) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 476 and 476-A—Several complaints by one order — Several accused must file separate appeals.

Where several complaints are made under S. 476 against different persons but by a single order the persons complained against must prefer separate appeal under S. 476-B : A I R 1928 Bom 64, Dist. [P 126 C 1]

T. M. Venugopal Mudaliar — for Appellants.

The Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Judgment.—It is contended by Mr. T. M. Venugopal Mudaliar, for the appellants that the statement made an oath by the appellants under S. 164, Criminal P. C., were not "in relation to a proceeding" in the Court of Session and that therefore the learned Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to prefer complaints against the appellants. It is also contended that statements recorded by a Magistrate in the course of a police investigation under S. 164, Criminal P. C., are not evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding within the meaning of Expl. (2), S. 193, I. P. C. In support of the latter contention Mr. T. M. Venugopal Mudaliar quotes the case of Emperor v. Purushottam Ishwar Amin (1). In citing this case I think Mr. T. M. Venugopal Mudaliar has either not perused the report of it himself, or else he has hoped that I should be satisfied with a perusal of the headnote. For I find that Pratt, J., (vide pp. 858 and 859 of 45 Bom.) has expressly stated that, in taking the view he did, he was differing from the view taken in two cases in this Court, Queen-

Empress v. Alagu Kone (2) and Suppa Tevan v. Emperor (3). Such citations as this are, at best, a sheer waste of the time of this Court.

On the other point no authorities are cited and I need not say more than that I agree with the learned Sessions Judge. Statements made during the course of an investigation under S. 164, Criminal P. C., into an offence of murder, which is triable only by a Sessions Court, must be held to be "in relation to" the trial in that Court. It is also contended that the learned Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to order the prosecution of the appellants because his order was passed nearly six months after the conclusion of the Sessions trial. The authorities cited for this proposition are all cases which were decided prior to the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code in 1923, and have no application to the present provisions of S. 476. This is not a case of private person applying for sanction; it is a case of the Public Prosecutor of Bellary moving the Sessions Court to prosecute. Mr. T. M. Venugopal Mudaliar for the appellants finally contends that the learned Sessions Judge ought not to have held it expedient in the interests of justice to prosecute the appellants because of their personal relationship to the accused in the Sessions case. This contention is unacceptable to me. Prima facie persons who give false evidence which may result in the conviction of an innocent person for murder ought to be tried for the offence they have committed. Their relationship to the accused, their age, the circumstances under which they came to give false evidence, are, as the learned Sessions Judge says, matters to be considered by the Magistrate before whom they will appear. This appeal is accordingly dismissed.

The learned Public Prosecutor has raised a question, whether each of these appellants ought not to have preferred a separate appeal. He points out that under S. 476-B an appeal may be preferred by "any person against whom a complaint has been made." It is not stated that an appeal lies from an order directing a complaint to be made. It seems to me that the learned Public Prosecutor's contention is correct. In these particular cases, four separate Criminal Miscellaneous Petitions were filed by the Public Prosecutor of Bellary against the four appellants; the learned Sessions Judge's order is one order disposing of the four petitions. None of the appellants had any right of appeal under S. 476-B until a complaint was actually preferred. The complaints against the four appellants are quite separate and distinct; the appellants will have to be tried separately and they may have each his or her separate defence to raise. Therefore it appears to me they ought each to have preferred a separate appeal. Mr. T. M. Venugopal Mudaliar relies on the case of Emperor v. Daga Devji Patel (4) for the proposition that the appeal is really against the order and not against the complaint. That case does not however touch the point raised by the learned Public Prosecutor because there was only one person concerned and not several. I need not discuss this question further since the appeal has been admitted and has been dealt with as one appeal, and virtually it has been argued as if it was one appeal.

P.R.S./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

4. A I R 1928 Bom 64=108 I C 26=29 Cr L J 315=52 Bom 164.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 126

PANDALAI, J.

Thillaikannu Achi—Plaintiff—Petitioner.

v.

Sheik Abdul Kadir Rowther—Defendant—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 826 of 1929, Decided on 14th September 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Tiruvarur, in S.C.S. No. 38 of 1928.

Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 116, 97 and 62.—Vendor delivering part of property—Suit as to rest against stranger and vendor dismissed—Subsequent suit for damages for breach of covenant of title is governed by Art. 116 and not by Arts. 97 or 62—Time runs from dismissal of suit for possession and not from date of sale.

Where a vendor out of possession sells his lands to another and delivers possession only of a part of the property and the vendee's suit for possession against the vendor and a third person is dismissed, a suit for damages by the vendee for breach of the implied covenant of title is governed by Art. 116 and not by Arts. 97 or 62 and the time begins to run from the date of the dismissal of the suit for possession and not from

2. (1893) 16 Mad 421=1 Weir 175.

3. (1906) 29 Mad 89=3 Cr L J 370.

the sale-deed: A I R 1915 Mad 227, Dist; A I R 1915 Mad 742, Appl; A I R 1926 Mad 255 and A I R 1918 P C 151, Rel on. [P 127 C 2; P 128 C 2]

S. Nagaraja Ayyar and G. Gopala-swami—for Petitioner.

N. Muthuswami Ayyar—for Opposite Party.

Order.—The plaintiff-petitioner's suit brought for damages for breach of the implied covenant of title contained in a sale to her by the defendant (Ex. A) dated 8th December 1916, has been dismissed by the learned Judge on the ground of limitation. There is no question that if this opinion is not correct the petitioner is entitled to a decree. By the sale (Ex. A) the defendant purported to sell to the petitioner (plaintiff) $4\frac{1}{2}$ cents of land of which from the previous litigation it appears that he gave possession of $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents. For the other 3 cents there were disputes between herself and her vendor on the one hand and one Subbia Pillai, the holder of an adjacent land, who claimed it under another title, on the other. In 1920 two suits were brought, one by Subbia Pillai against the petitioner's sons (since tried as O. S. No. 29 of 1921 in the Court of the District Munsif, Tiruvarur) in which Subbia Pillai sued to remove the petitioner's sons from their admitted occupation of a shed (saipu) and to recover one cent of land on which it stood on the ground that they were mere licenses; and the other brought by this petitioner against Subbia Pillai and her vendor (subsequently tried as O. S. No. 168 of 1921 in the same Court) in which the petitioner sought to recover the 3 cents of land of which she alleged she had been given possession by her vendor but on which Subbia Pillai had trespassed. The two plots were apparently near each other.

In the result both suits were dismissed on the finding in Subbia Pillai's suit that the petitioner and her sons had been occupying the shed and the land on which it stood in their own right for a long time; and in the petitioner's suit that Subbia Pillai had likewise been in occupation of the 3 cents of land along with some neighbouring land in his own right for a long time. This decision of the District Munsif against the petitioner was pronounced on 23rd December 1921 and the decision in appeal confirming it by the learned District Judge of Naga-patam on 29th January 1923. This suit was filed on 4th January 1918 when the Court re-opened after Christmas, that is, the last day on which the suit could be brought if the proper period of limitation is six years and the starting point is taken as 23rd December 1921. The learned Judge has held that the suit is barred by limitation on the ground that it falls within the first of the three classes of such suits mentioned by Seshagiri Ayyar, J., in Subbaroya v. Rajagopala (1). He has held that the Article properly applicable is 116. But he has held that the period of limitation begins to run in this case on the date of the sale-deed (Ex. A) and not as contended by the plaintiff on the date of the decision in O. S. No. 168 of 1921, namely, 23rd December 1921.

As a result of a series of decisions of this Court of which it is sufficient to refer to Arunachala Aiyar v. Ramasami Aiyar (2), Patrachariar v. Alamelu-mangai Ammal (3), and Singamani Pandithan v. Munibadra Nainar (4) it cannot be doubted that the provision of the Limitation Act applicable is Art. 116. It was contended that the proper Article is Art. 62 or 97, and the decision in Subbaroya v. Rajagopala (1) was relied upon. The facts of this case were different and the grounds of decision of Seshagiri Ayyar, J., who decided it in the first instance and of the Appeal Bench who confirmed his decision are also not identical. Whereas Seshagiri Ayyer, J., took the view that Art. 116 was applicable to the case, the Bench who heard the appeal confirmed his decision on the ground stated by Miller J., in Ramanatha Ayyar v. O. P. Ramanambudripad (5) that the proper Article to be applied was 97. That was perhaps appropriate to the facts there which were that the plaintiff got possession under a sale-deed and remained in possession until evicted in 1911 and the want of title was established by litigation which ended in 1918. In those circumstances it was held that the case can be properly described as one for money paid on an existing consideration which afterwards

1. A I R 1915 Mad 227 = 23 I C 570 = 38 Mad 887.
2. A I R 1915 Mad 742 = 25 I C 618 = 38 Mad 1171.
3. A I R 1927 Mad 273 = 100 I C 40.
4. A I R 1926 Mad 255 = 91 I C 514.
5. A I R 1915 Mad 766 = 21 I C 740.

failed when the litigation ended. In Arunachala Aiyar v. Ramasami Aiyar (2) the plaintiff who took a sale-deed in 1904 was unable to get possession at all and brought the suit in 1910, but was unable to get it. The question was whether the plaintiff could recover the money paid. It was held by a Bench after a full examination of the authorities that the proper article to be applied is 116. That decision applies to this case.

The next point is when does the period begin to run. According to the article it begins to run when the contract is broken. As to this in the facts of this case I find it impossible to agree with the learned Judge that this case falls within the first of the three classes mentioned by Seshagiri Ayyar, J., in Subbaroya v. Rajagopala (1). If it is necessary to adopt the classification mentioned by the learned Judge it appears to me that this is a case falling within his class (c).

"Where though the title is known to be imperfect the contract is in part carried out by giving possession of the properties."

The first class is where there was no title to convey and the vendee has not been put in possession either. In the present case out of four and a half cents of land the plaintiff did get possession of one and a half cents and had to sue only for the rest, and that appears to be what the learned Judge intended in his class (c). However that may be, there is authority for saying that even in cases where the purchaser is unable to get possession and has to litigate against third parties in order to get it, the contract is broken, not always, and in all cases necessarily, on the date of the sale deed, but at the earliest date when a Court decides that the vendor has no title. It is not uncommon for vendors out of possession to sell their lands and if the parties knowing that immediate possession cannot be given and may have to be obtained by a suit against a third party agreed to these terms, there is no reason to think that the contract is immediately broken if possession is not immediately given. In such a case the contract can reasonably be said to be broken only when it is found as a result of the suit against the stranger known to be in possession that the vendor has no title. Singamani Pandithar v. Munibodra Nainar (4) was a case of that character. The plaintiff to whom the whole of some property was sold, but was not given possession was able to get possession of only one-half of it after a suit and it was held by Devadoss, J., in that case that the article of limitation applicable is Art. 116, and also that the period of limitation begins to run on the date when the Court first held that the vendor had no title to the half of which the plaintiff was refused possession. For this the authority relied upon was the decision of the Privy Council in Juscurn Boid v. Pirthi Chand Lal (6). Applying this to the present case it seems to me that the breach should not be held to have occurred on the date of the sale deed as held by the learned Judge.

Apparently both the vendor and the purchaser were in the belief that the 3 cents for which the suit had to be brought were in the hands of Subbia Pillai and would be recovered from him and though the vendor and the purchaser did appear on the opposite side in the Court it cannot be denied that, at any rate as far as the title to the land was concerned, they were both supporting the same case; and it was only when the suit was dismissed that it can reasonably be said, in the facts of this case, that the contract was broken. I therefore think that the better view is that the starting point of limitation in this case must be taken as the date of the decision already mentioned, namely 23rd December 1921. If so, the suit was not barred. In that view the sum of Rs. 100 was clearly due, and there will be a decree for that amount with proportionate costs in both Courts.

P.R.S./R.K.

Claim decreed.

6. A I R 1918 P C 151=50 I C 444=46 I A 52=46 Cal 670 (P C).

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 129

STONE, J.

The Pioneer Mutual Benefit and Friend-in-Need Society, Ltd., Madras—Applicant.

v.

The Assistant Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, Madras—Opposite Party.

Civil Appln. No. 2608 of 1932, Decided on 1st November 1932.

(a) Companies Act (1913), Ss. 22 and 82—Registrar can refuse to register alteration of articles.

The Registrar has power to exercise a discretion to refuse to register with regard to the alteration of articles to same extent as he has with regard to articles: Bowman v. Secular Society Ltd., (1917) A C 406, Rel on. [P 129 C 2]

(b) Penal Code (1860), S. 294-A—Scheme held fell within S. 294-A.

A scheme by which a subscriber is entitled to a benefit (to a loan on personal security) which is obtained by this man or that according as this man or that is fortunate in a draw falls within S. 294-A: Wallingford v. Mutual Society, (1880) 5 A C 685 and A I R 1933 Mad 16, Cons and Rel on. [P 130 C 1]

B. Satyanarayana—for Applicant.

S. Parthasarathi and V. K. Thiruvengkatachari—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—In this matter I reserved judgment in order carefully to consider whether the new scheme fell within Wallingford v. Mutual Society (1). I had and have no doubt about the other points raised. The first question is whether the Assistant Registrar of Joint Stock Companies has power to decline registration of any part of: (a) a memorandum, or (b) articles of a public company. It is said that in S. 82 (relating to the registration of special and extraordinary resolutions) the words in sub-S. (1) "who shall record the same" are directory and leave the Registrar no option in the matter. But the same may be said of the duties of the Registrar under S. 22 with regard to the registration of the memorandum and articles, yet there can be no doubt that the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies has a discretion to refuse to register a memorandum. As Lord Parker observed in Bowman v. Secular Society, Ltd. (2), at p. 439:

"The Registrar fulfils a quasi-judicial function . . . Only by misconduct or great carelessness on the part of the Registrar could a company with objects wholly illegal obtain registration."

But it is said that although that ap-

1. (1880) 5 A C 685=50 L J Q B 49=43 L T 258=29 W R 81.

2. (1917) A C 406=86 L J Ch 565=117 L T 161=33 T L R 376=61 S J 478.

1933 M/17 & 18

plies to a memorandum it does not apply to a resolution altering articles. I entirely fail to see why S. 22 relates to a memorandum and articles and if the Registrar can in the exercise of his quasi-judicial function refuse to register a memorandum I should think it is almost an unarguable proposition that he yet must register articles. If he can exercise his discretion with regard to articles he must obviously be able to exercise a discretion with regard to the alteration of articles. In this case an effort has been made to alter the articles so as to enable this company to carry on, in effect, the business of Universal Mutual Aid and Poor Houses Association, Ltd., which company was compulsorily wound up as constituting a lottery. I will say nothing about that company.

This present company now desires to offer a somewhat different scheme to the public. Under the old scheme subscribers got the certainty of an interest-free loan in time, but the quantum of the loan and of course the time was determined by lot and cash certificates gave an equal chance. Under the present scheme the subscriber is entitled to one loan and the chance does not increase with the number of certificates held. I have carefully considered: Wallingford v. Mutual Society (1), at pp. 696-697 in the light of the judgments of the Chief Justice and Cornish, J., in Universal Mutual Aid and Poor Houses Association Ltd., Madras v. Thoppa Naidu (3) and in my opinion this scheme offends against S. 294-A, I. P. C., in exactly the same way as did the Universal Mutual Aid scheme. The only difference is that the present scheme offers a prize that is not very valuable, but which will probably be obtained within a reasonable time by most subscribers, whereas the other scheme offered prizes that were very valuable but which would not be drawn by majority within a reasonable time. It is said that there is no prize at all. In my opinion there is; but really the use of the word "prize" is unnecessary. What the Penal Code says is "publish a proposal to do anything for the benefit of any person." It seems to me to be clear that a loan of Rs. 1,000 on personal security is something which a person desiring to borrow would regard as a benefit. It is true that the rate of interest is left at large, but that simply means that a trap is or may be prepared for the unwary. The obvious intention is to offer to the public something that is attractive and the attraction is a loan on personal security, that is held up as a benefit and that benefit is obtained by this man or that according as this man or that is 'fortunate in a draw.

3. A I R 1933 Mad 16=1933 Cr C 64=33 Cr L J 792=139 I C 644.

If this were straight business whereby a money-lending association were offering to lend money to all of a class it would be quite unnecessary to invoke the machinery of the draw. It is because the lucky person gets something more than he could get under ordinary business conditions that it is necessary to select him by lot. Whether this sort of a scheme is one which should be encouraged or not, whether it is likely to mislead the ignorant anxious to raise money or not is not my concern. Whether this falls within S. 294-A, I. P. C., is the question I have to consider. If it does it is certainly better to stop it at the threshold rather than to allow the company to proceed along these lines and then wind it up as an illegal company after many thousands of people, may be, have entered the scheme. In my opinion it does offend against S. 294-A and the Assistant Registrar of Joint Stock Companies was right in refusing to register the articles as presented to him. The motion is accordingly dismissed with taxed costs.

P.R.S./R.K. Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 130

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

(Boggavarapu) Bullayya and others—Appellants.

v.

(Garlapati) Subbayya and another—Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 176 and 177 of 1930, Decided on 2nd August 1932, against appellate orders of Sub-Judge, Bapatla, D/- 26th September 1929.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11—Execution—Decision in, that land being not service inam was saleable—Collector subsequently deciding land to be service inam—Fresh execution against portion of same survey number—Previous order held operated as res judicata—Collector's decision though ordinarily binding did not affect question—Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (1895), S. 13.

After a portion of an undivided survey number subject to a mortgage was ordered to be sold in execution of the mortgage decrees, the judgment-debtors filed an application under O. 21, R. 90, to set aside the sale on the ground that the suit land formed part of service inam; the Court held that though the land was probably service inam once, it was subsequently enfranchised or resumed and therefore saleable. After this the judgment-debtors filed a suit before the Deputy Collector under S. 13, Act 3 of 1895. The Collector held that the land was service inam. In subsequent proceedings for sale of the remaining portion, the judgment-debtor again objected.

Held: that so long as the first decision remained in force it was not open to the Courts to recognize and give effect to the decision of the Collector even though the Collector's decision would be binding on the civil Courts ordinarily. Identity of the land was immaterial as both the items formed undivided portions of the same survey number and therefore the decision would equally apply to all portions of the same survey number: A I R 1926 Mad 12, Foll; 28 Mad 84; 30 Mad 126; 30 Mad 320 and A I R 1927 Mad 433 and 911, Dist. [P 132 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47—Nature of application is to be determined from substance and not from heading—Pleadings.

In considering whether an application is under S. 47 or not Court must examine the substance of the application to find out its true nature and should not be guided solely by the heading given to it by the applicant.

[P 132 C 2]

B. T. M. Raghavachari—for Appellants.

K. Kottayya—for Respondents.

Judgment.—In these Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeals the defendants in O. S. Nos. 620 and 621 of 1921 on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Bapatla are the appellants. The decree-holders, who are the same in both the suits, are the respondents. They obtained preliminary decrees against the respondents as the defendants in the two suits on a mortgage given by them in respect of a specific undivided share in a certain land alleged to be the service inam belonging to the defendants. A decree for the sale of the properties was passed. As it was found that the proceeds of the sale were insufficient to meet the decree, a personal decree was passed and in execution of that personal decree the remaining portion of the property which had not been mortgaged was attached. This attached portion of the property and the portion already sold form undivided parts of the same survey number.

When this property was attached the appellants judgment-debtors intervened with a petition under S. 47, Civil P. C., alleging that the land was service inam and was consequently not liable to attachment and that therefore it should be released from attachment. The respondents contended that the land was not unenfranchised service inam and that the application of the appellants was barred by res judicata by a certain prior order passed in execution of the decree in O. S. Nos. 620 and 621 at an earlier stage. The District Munsif held that the land was unenfranchised service inam and was therefore unattachable, and that the previous order did not operate as res judicata. In the result the attachment was ordered to be raised by the first Court. In appeal this order was set aside by the learned Subordinate Judge. He held on the merits that the land was service inam agreeing with the District Munsif on this point : but he held that the previous order referred to operated as res judicata and therefore it was not open to the judgment-debtors to raise the plea that the land was unattachable. He further held that even if the plea of res judicata cannot be maintained still, though the land was service inam, it was liable to attachment during the lifetime of the mortgagors, relying on a decision in Venkanna v. Chinna Appalaswami (1). This decision has been recently considered and dissented from in Kammara Chinna Nagiah v. Yerraguntla Pullayya (2), and having regard to this decision the respondents did not seriously argue that the lower appellate Court's decision on this point is correct. The concurrent finding of the lower Courts that the land is service inam, also cannot be questioned in these second appeals. So the position is this : if the previous order relied on as a bar to the present proceedings does not operate as res judicata, then the property is not liable to attachment and the lower Court's order will have to be set aside. Therefore the question for consideration is whether the previous order passed in execution would operate as res judicata in the present proceedings.

The order is Ex. 1 (a) and it was passed in the following circumstances. After the portion of the property subject to the mortgage was ordered to be sold in execution of the mortgage decrees, the judgment-debtors, that is the appellants, filed an application under O. 21,

R. 90 to set aside the sale on the ground of irregularity and fraud and they alleged in the petition that the suit land formed part of service inam. The sale was not attacked seriously on the ground of irregularity and fraud, but the judgment-debtors seem to have stressed the point that the land in question formed part of the service inam. The Munsif held that though the land was probably service inam once, it was subsequently enfranchised or resumed and therefore he dismissed the petitions. It is this order that is now sought to be relied on as constituting res judicata in the present proceedings. After this order of the District Munsif the judgment-debtors filed a suit before the Deputy Collector under S. 13, Act 3 of 1895, with respect to this land for the recovery of the emoluments, the land being a village carpenter's inam. The Deputy Collector held that the land is service inam land thereby differing from the District Munsif who passed the order under O. 21, R. 90. He also held that the melwaram constitutes the emoluments of the office and that the civil Courts should decide whether the kudivaram also constitutes the emoluments. As the suit was one for the recovery of possession of the land he dismissed it, and this decision was confirmed in appeal by the Collector. This decision of the revenue officer is also relied on by the appellants in support of their arguments. The present proceedings originated after this decision.

As I have already stated, the real question in the case is whether the order Ex. 1 (a) is res judicata in the present proceedings. The appellants' arguments are twofold : first that the learned District Munsif who passed the order under O. 21, R. 90 had no jurisdiction in such a proceeding to decide whether the land was service inam or not and that in holding that the land was service inam and therefore saleable, he acted without jurisdiction, and (2) that, whatever be the District Munsif's opinion, the matter being one relating to service inam, under the provisions of Act 3 of 1895, the decision of the Collector was final and is binding on the civil Courts and effect should now be given to it. In support of the latter proposition various decisions were cited by the learned counsel for the appellants, such as Rajah of Vizianagaram

1. A I R 1925 Mad 749=86 I C 755.

2. A I R 1931 Mad 610=133 I C 202.

v. D. Chelliah (3), Kesaram Narasimhalu v. Narasimhalu Patnaithu (4), B. Seshayya v. B. Subbayya (5), Kandappa Achari v. Singarachari (6) Rajah of Kalahasti v. Munni Venkatadri Rao Garu (7), etc., but in the view that I take of the case it is not necessary to consider these cases, for in my opinion the question of res judicata which is the main question involved in those appeals has to be decided apart from those considerations. For the purposes of discussion we may well assume that the arguments of the learned counsel under the second heading are valid. But the point is, can effect be given to those arguments having regard to the previous order Ex. I (a)? Rightly or wrongly the District Munsif passed an order that the land is service inam land and to this order the present judgment-debtors were parties. So long as this order remains in force and is not set aside, how can effect be given to subsequent decisions? It is true that the decision of the Collector under Act 3 of 1895 is final and is binding upon the civil Courts. That would be so, no doubt ordinarily, but if the parties had subjected themselves already to an order the purport of which is opposed to the decision of the Collector, how can they refuse to recognize that order so long as that order remains in force? This is the real question for decision in this case. It is true that the District Munsif has no jurisdiction under O. 21, R. 90 to go behind the decree and decide whether the land is service inam or not.

But as a matter of fact he did decide in this case that the land is service inam land. That decision is without jurisdiction; but that to my mind does not affect the question regarding the binding nature of that decision on those persons who were parties to it. So long as that decision remains in force it is not open to the Courts to recognize and give effect to the decision of the Collector even though the Collector's decision would be binding on the civil Courts ordinarily. The decision in Rajah of Vizianagaram v. Dentiwada Chelliah (3) strenuously stressed by the learned counsel for the appellants no doubt says that an executing Court, even if it has to go beyond the decree in doing so, should recognize the fact that the land is admittedly service inam land and give effect to it. But it must be remembered that in that case there was no question of res judicata and no room for the argument that the proceedings were barred by res judicata, on account of a previous order as in the present case. This, to my mind, is the distinction which distinguishes the present case from all the cases relied on by the learned counsel for the appellants. In this connexion attention may be drawn to the decision in Somasundaram v. Kondayya (8). In that case:

"P, the owner of an unenfranchised inam, mortgaged it to the defendant. The inam, which was then unenfranchised, was subsequently sold in execution of a money decree obtained against P, and was purchased by the plaintiff's vendor. The inam was subsequently enfranchised, and, after its enfranchisement was sold by P, to the defendant. In a suit by the plaintiff to redeem the mortgage in favour of the defendant, the latter pleaded that, as the property was inalienable on the date of the Court sale at which the plaintiff's vendor purchased, the plaintiff's vendor and the plaintiff acquired no valid title to the property which entitled the plaintiff to redeem the suit mortgage. P had notice of the execution proceedings which culminated in the Court sale, at which the plaintiff's vendor purchased. It was held that P and his representative, the defendant, were precluded from contending that the property was at the date of the Court sale inalienable, and that the plaintiff acquired no valid title to the property by means of such sale."

Shortly stated, the decision was that the order confirming the sale was an adjudication which operated as res judicata in the subsequent suit. I think the principle of that decision may well be applied to the present case. Though the petition which resulted in Ex. I (a) was under O. 21, R. 90, it is clear that it was created as an application under S. 47, Civil P. C. In considering whether an application is under S. 47, Civil P. C., or not we must examine the substance of the application to find out its true nature and should not be guided solely by the heading given to it by the applicant. It was not seriously contended that the application should not be considered as one falling under S. 47, but it was suggested that the decision of the District Munsif related to the land that formed the subject-matter of the mortgage suit and not to the land which is now sought to be sold in execution of the personal decree.

3. (1905) 28 Mad 84=14 M L J 468.

4. (1907) 30 Mad 126=16 M L J 514 (F B).

5. (1907) 30 Mad 320.

6. A I R 1927 Mad. 433=99 I C 972.

7. A I R 1927 Mad 911=105 I C 248=50 Mad 897.

8. A I R 1926 Mad 12=91 I C 443.

But it must be remembered that both the items formed undivided portions of the same survey number and therefore the decision in Ex. 1 (a) will equally apply to all portions of the same survey number. For the above reasons I am not inclined to accept the arguments of the learned counsel for the appellants. I am of opinion that the order Ex. 1 (a) would operate as res judicata in the present proceedings and therefore the lower Court's order is right. The civil miscellaneous second appeals are dismissed, but the respondents will get costs only in one of them.

P.R.S./S.N. Appeals dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 133 (1)

JACKSON AND PANDALAI, JJ.

C. R. Venkatarama Ayyar—Appellant.
v.

B. S. Krishnaswami Chettiar and others—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 335 of 1927, Decided on 9th March 1932, against decree of Dist. Judge, West Tanjore, in A. S. No. 24 of 1926.

Promissory note — Transfer of Property Act, Ss. 130 and 137.

A promissory note can be transferred otherwise than by an endorsement: A I R 1930 Mad 197, Foll. [P 133 C 1]

S. Panchapagesa Sastri and S. Venkataraman—for Appellant.

K. Rajah Ayyar—for Respondents.

Jackson, J.—The question for our determination is whether a promissory note can be transferred otherwise than by endorsement. There is considerable clash of judicial opinion, the older case-law inclining to the view that as provided by the Negotiable Instruments Act endorsement is necessary and the later case law to the view that a promissory note can be transferred like any other chose in action: c.f. A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 197. We see no reason to differ from the later course of decisions. It is strenuously argued that S. 137 T. P. Act, which exempts certain mercantile documents from the provisions of S. 130, T. P. Act, also denies to such documents the method of S. 130, T. P. Act. We see no reason to accept such an interpretation. S. 137 gives an extended privilege to mercantile documents, and in no way is restrictive. We agree with the lower appellate Court that the transfer in this case is effectively made by the deed. The suit must accordingly be decreed with costs throughout.

P.R.S./R.K.

Suit decreed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 133 (2)

BARDSWELL, J.

M. Shanmuga Mudaliar—Petitioner.
v.

S. Subboraya Mudaliar and another—Opposite Parties.

Civil Misc. Petitions Nos. 4040 and 4335 of 1932, Decided on 15th September 1932.

(a) Madras District Municipalities Act (1920), S. 49 (2) (f)—Disqualification under can be ground for election petition.

A disqualification under S. 49 can be made a ground for a petition before an election Court impugning an election and so the Election Commissioner has the jurisdiction to inquire into the objection of such a nature: A I R 1929 Mad 727 (FB), Foll. [P 134 C 1, 2]

(b) Certiorari, writ of—Erroneous decision on law point is no ground for issuing writ when exercised within jurisdiction—Jurisdiction.

When a Court or similar authority gives to itself a jurisdiction which it properly has not got by taking an erroneous view of the law, a writ will be issued, but there will be no writ if it makes a mistake in the law when acting in the exercise of a jurisdiction which it undoubtedly possesses. English law referred.

[P 135 C 1]

(c) Madras District Municipalities Act (1920), Election Rule 11 (2)—Election Commissioner has discretion to declare fresh election or declare another as elected.

Under R. 11 (2) the Election Commissioner has the option if he declares an election of a candidate void, either to declare that any other party to the petition who has under the rules claimed the seat has been elected, or to order a fresh election and there is nothing in the rule to suggest that he is in any way restricted in the exercise of the option: A I R 1925 Mad. 1119, Expl. [P 137 C 1]

(d) Madras District Municipalities Act (1920), S. 49—Scope.

Where the Election Commissioner declares an election void on a ground not taken in the petition and declares another candidate elected in his place, the action of the Election Commissioner is one in excess of jurisdiction: A I R 1923 Mad 192 and A I R 1926 Mad 947, Ref.

[P 136 C 1]

A. Krishnaswamy Ayyar, D. Krishnaswamy Ayyar, S. Srinivasa Ayyangar, S. Parthasarathy and V. K. Thiruvengkatachari—for Petitioners.

T. M. Krishnaswamy Ayyar and M. S. Venkatarama Ayyar—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—In each of these petitions the issue of a writ of certiorari is prayed for in order to quash an order of the Election Commissioner of Vellore, dated 19th

August 1932, in O. P. Nos. 34 and 35 of 1921. The Election Commissioner is in his ordinary official capacity the Subordinate Judge of Vellore. As Election Commissioner he is a persona designata. For the purposes of this order the petitioner and respondent 1 in C. M. P. No. 4010 will be styled respectively petitioner 1 and respondent 1. The petitioner and respondent 1 in the other petition will be styled respectively petitioner 2, and respondent 2. Respondent 2 in both the petitions is the Election Commissioner, who is only a party pro forma. On 8th October 1931 an election was held for Ward No. 14 of the Thiruvannamalai Municipal Council. The result declared next day was as follows:

Petitioner 1, 215 votes: Petitioner 2, 160 votes: Respondent 2, 64 votes: Respondent 1, 8 votes. There were two other candidates, who got 4 and 5 votes respectively. With these we are not concerned. The two respondents filed respectively O. P. No. 34 and O. P. No. 35 of 1931 before the Election Commissioner. In O. P. No. 34 it was prayed that the election of the two petitioners might be declared void and that respondent 1 might be declared duly elected. In O. P. No. 36 respondent 2 asked for a similar relief for himself on similar grounds. The Election Commissioner has passed one judgment on both the petitions before him and has declared the election of both the petitioners void and, at the same time, has declared the two respondents to be duly elected. Respondent 2, like petitioner 2, is a woman, and her election is for a reserved seat. The order of the Election Commissioner is based upon his interpretation of S. 49 (2) (f), Madras District Municipalities Act, by which a person shall be disqualified for election as a councillor if such person is, at the date of nomination or election, a servant or employer or an official subordinate or official superior to a councillor holding office on the said date. Now it has been established by a Full Bench decision of this Court in Selvaranga Raju v. Doraiswamy Mudaliar (1) that a disqualification under S. 49 can be made a ground for a petition before an election Court impugning an election and so the Election Commissioner certainly had the jurisdiction to inquire into the objections of the present respondents to the election of the petitioners with regard to that section. It has also been held by a Divisional Bench of this Court in Govindaswamy Pillai v. Ramalingaswamy (2), that an Election Officer is empowered by the rules to reject a nomination because a candidate is disqualified under S. 49 and that this involves a power and duty of deciding whether, in fact the candidate is so disqualified, and the same case points out that the decision of a tribunal does not become without jurisdiction because it is wrong.

In the present instance it has been urged that the Election Officer's interpretation of S. 49 is incorrect and it is sought, with reference to many English authorities, to show that this incorrect interpretation amounts to an error of jurisdiction. None of the decisions, however, that have been quoted to me justifies my acceptance of this argument. In the face of the decision of this Court, already quoted, in Govindaswamy Pillai v. Ramalingaswamy (2) it is unnecessary for me to go into an elaborate discussion of all these decisions. I shall merely mention them with a minimum of comment. They are: Walsall Overseers v. L. & N. W. Ry. (3), Rex v. Electricity Commissioners, London Electricity Joint Committee (4), Rex v. Board of Education (5), Rex v. Nat Bell Liquors Ltd (6), Colonial Bank of Australia v. William (7), Rex v. Lincolnshire Justices (8) and Rex v. London County Council (9). Not one of these decisions is an authority for the position that an erroneous decision on a point of law, by a Court acting within the limits of its jurisdiction, can be a ground for issuing a writ of certiorari. The decision in Colonial Bank of Australia v. William (7) is very clear as

2. A I R 1932 Mad 321=137 I C 868.

3. (1879) 4 A C 30=48 L J Q B 65=33 LT 453=27 W R 189.

4. (1924) 1 K B 171=93 L J K B 390=88 J P 13=130 L T 164.

5. (1910) 2 K B 165=79 L J K B 595=102 L T 578=74 J P 259=8 L G R 549=26 T L R 422.

6. (1922) A C 128=91 L J P C 146=127 L T 437.

7. (1874) 5 P C 417=43 L J P C 39=30 L T 237=22 W R 516.

8. (1926) 2 K B 192=59 L J K B 827=135 L T 141=90 J P 149=28 Cox C C 178.

9. (1931) 2 K B 215=100 L J K B 760=144 L T 464=95 J P 89=29 L G R 252=75 S J 138=47 T L R 227. •

1. A I R 1929 Mad 727=119 I C 597=52 Mad 732 (F B).

to this when it says that a Court will not quash, except on a ground either of manifest defect of jurisdiction in the tribunal which made it or of manifest fraud in the party procuring it: and again, in Rex v. Lincolnshire Justices (8) it has been ruled that if the Lincolnshire Justices were bound to come to some conclusion, right or wrong, then they had jurisdiction and a writ could not be issued because of the wrong conclusion.

The matter has been summed up in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 10, paras. 379 and 381. Para. 379 shows that where in the face of the proceedings themselves it appears that the determination of an inferior Court is wrong in law, certiorari will be granted, but this has to be read with what follows in para. 381 that, where proceedings are regular on their face, and a Court had jurisdiction, the superior Court will not grant the writ of certiorari on the ground that the Court below has misconceived the point of law. Indeed, that para. 379 is not intended to show that a writ can be granted because of an erroneous conclusion on a point of law arrived at in the proper exercise of the Court's jurisdiction, is shown by what that section goes on to say as to in what kind of circumstances such a writ can be granted. It comes to this: that when a Court or similar authority gives to itself a jurisdiction which it properly has not got, by taking an erroneous view of the law, a writ will be issued, but that there will be no writ if it makes a mistake in the law when acting in the exercise of a jurisdiction which it undoubtedly possesses. It is true that in Gould v. Gapper (10) a writ of prohibition was granted even when the error did not appear on the face of the proceedings but had to be collected from the whole of it; but even in this case the error was one of jurisdiction, it being one arising from the clash of procedure between the Ecclesiastical Courts and the ordinary Courts of Common law. It is unnecessary for me to discuss the matter further when the matter has already been decided by a Division Bench of this Court whose decision I am bound to follow. However much, then, I may think that the interpretation by the Election Commissioner of S. 49 is incorrect, I cannot, 10. 102 E R 1107.

in that he arrived at that interpretation in the exercise of a jurisdiction which he possessed, grant a writ of certiorari because of the decision being erroneous.

There is one more decision of this Court to which I may refer, Ramaswamy Goundan v. Muthu Velappa Gounden (11). In this case the point of a wrong interpretation of the law having been given by a Judge in the exercise of his jurisdiction was considered, on an application for revision under S. 115, Civil P. C., and Ss. 106 and 107, Government of India Act. But in that case there was not merely this wrong interpretation of the law, but it further led to acts which amounted to an excess of jurisdiction, one of these being the declaration of a party as having been elected as President when, as far as the record went, it appeared that that was a relief which had not been prayed for, and another being that a person was removed from the post of President on a ground that had not been taken in the petition on which the order as to that was passed. The ultimate order passed in that case, I may note, was that the petition under review was remanded for disposal on its merits according to law. The learned Advocate-General has referred to a finding in Rex v. Board of Education (5), that the Board of Education had by answering a question not referred to it and avoiding any answer to the real question, declined jurisdiction. He contends that in this case the Election Commissioner has not addressed himself to the only point that he was qualified to deal with, viz. whether the present petitioners were holding office at the time of their nomination. From the order under review however I cannot find that this position taken by the learned Advocate-General is justified. In the course of the order I find the following passages:

"(1) The words 'holding office on the said date' mean holding office on the date of nomination or election by virtue of which the relationship of being official subordinate or official superior came into existence; (2) the persons in question became councillors and both held office of trustee and dasi respectively on the dates of nomination and election; (3) I therefore hold that the only reasonable meaning of S. 49 (2) (f) is that official superiors or official subordinates holding such office on the date of nomination or election are disqualified from sitting as councillors; (4) 'As I have observed supra Vridhamba Ammal (i.e., respondent 2) is the official subordinate of the Councillor Shanmuga Mudaliar. She was such a subordinate on the date of nomination and election."

It is impossible to find in the light of these remarks that the Election Commissioner has failed to address himself to the point which he had to consider in coming to a conclusion upon the objections taken with reference to S. 49. It has also been argued with reference to Rex v. Wandsworth Licensing Justices, Whitbread & Co. (12), that there is a case for a writ here, in that the Election Commissioner has been influenced by extraneous considerations. The reference is to his view that the words "holding office" need not mean holding office as Municipal Councillor but may refer to the office in respect of which one person is superior or subordinate to another. But though his view as to this may be wrong, it is not one that is based on considerations that were foreign to the case with which he had to deal. Rather it is based on considerations that were very germane thereto. I should note that it is not admitted that the petitioners stand to each other in the relation of superior and subordinate, but the Election Commissioner has found on the evidence that they bear such a relation to each other and there has been no argument before me as to that finding. As far, then, as the objection is taken, that the Election Commissioner has taken a wrong view of S. 49, these petitions must fail.

There is however another point taken, which concerns only the case of petitioner 1. This is that the Election Commissioner has declared his election to be void on a ground not taken in the petition against him. If such is the case, then the action of the Election Commissioner in setting aside his election and declaring respondent 1 elected in his place will be one in excess of jurisdiction, as appears not only from Ramaswami Goundan v. Muthu Vellappa Gounder (11), to which I have already referred, but also from R. S. Naidu v. Ramier (13), a more recent decision by Jackson, J., sitting alone. As far as the issue as to this matter goes the contention thus put forward for petitioner 1 appears to be correct. This issue as framed in O. P. No. 34 is as follows: "Is the nomination of respondent 2 as a candidate invalid for the reasons stated in para. 4 (c) of the petition and is this Court entitled to go into the question?;" and there is the same issue in O. S. No. 35, except that there respondent 2 becomes respondent 1, this person being the same as the present petitioner 2, Vrithamba Ammal, and that Cl. 4 (e) becomes Cl. 4 (c). For the respondents it is contended that by some inadvertence this issue 4 has not been made applicable to petitioner 1 also, but a reference to the pleadings shows that this contention is not well founded. The election of the two petitioners was sought to be set aside on a number of grounds, and a number of issues, apart from issue 4, were framed as to them. Some of them applied only to petitioner 1 and some of them applied both to him and to petitioner 2, but none of them was pressed at the inquiry and the matter was argued only with reference to issue 4 which I have already quoted. Issue 4 is based on Cl. (e) in the one case and Cl. (c) in the other of para. 4 in the petitions to the Election Officer. That clause as it appears in O. P. No. 34 runs as follows:

"From the outset the election proceedings have been conducted and held contrary to the provisions of the Act and the rules framed thereunder, in so far as respondent 2, who is a dasi of Sri Arunachelaswarar temple, is the servant and subordinate of respondent 1 who, as stated above, is the executive trustee having full control over respondent 2, and therefore disqualified to stand as a candidate along with respondent 1. Consequently respondent 2's nomination paper which has been improperly received should have been rejected by respondent 6 who is therefore impleaded as a party."

Clause 4 (c) in O. P. No. 35 is to a like effect mutatis mutandis; clearly the objection taken in this clause is only as to the position of the present petitioner 2 and to her nomination paper which, on the grounds stated, is said to have been improperly received. It is true that there is a reference to petitioner 1, but this reference is only to show that petitioner 2 is disqualified to stand as a candidate along with him, in that he is an executive trustee having full control over her. The point taken is that she is disqualified because of him and not at all that he himself was disqualified to stand or should not have been nominated. This, then, is a case in which the Commissioner has not confined himself to an inquiry into the points raised in the petition. I may note that the Election Commissioner himself realized that under this issue he was dealing only with the case against petitioner 2, as his conclusion is thus expressed :

12. (1921) 3 K B 487=90 L J K B 1114=125
L T 540=85 J P 171=87 T L R 619.

13. A I R 1926 Mad. 947=97 I C 450.

"I therefore find that the lady Councillor should cease to be Councillor under S. 50 (1) (f) also."

From what has gone before, it is clear that what he meant by this was that he was deciding the matter with reference to S. 50 (1) (f) as well as to S. 49 (2) (f). A point has been taken that he should not have brought S. 50 (1) (f) into consideration, but I need not deal with this point as it is sufficient that he had jurisdiction to deal with the matter under S. 49 (2) (f) and has disposed of it thereunder. That is the section with reference to which O. P. Nos. 34 and 35 of 1931 were brought. As to the matter of inadvertence I would observe that, if there has been any, it has been in only pressing the one issue though, for aught I know, that may have been due to quite other causes. The actual reason for pressing only the one issue has not been shown to me. In any case petitioner 1 must have the benefit of the fact that the one issue that was pressed was one that did not tell against him. As I find that the Election Commissioner has acted in excess of his jurisdiction in declaring the election of petitioner 1, i. e., the petitioner in C. M. P. No. 4040, void and in declaring that respondent 1 of that petition had been elected, was passed without jurisdiction, I quash his order as to that, so that the election of the petitioner in C. M. P. No. 4040 will stand. That petition is therefore allowed with costs.

In the case of petitioner 2, i. e. the petitioner in C. M. P. No. 4335 of 1932, the result of the Election Commissioner's order is that a party who received 64 votes has been declared duly elected, thereby disfranchising the 160 voters who have voted for petitioner 2 in ignorance, it would appear, of his disqualification. Under R. 11 (2) the Election Commissioner had the option, if he declared the election of petitioner 2 void, either to declare that any other party to the petition who has under the rules claimed the seat has been elected, or to order a fresh election and there is nothing in the rule to suggest that he is in any way restricted in the exercise of the option. It might have been better in such a case as this to order a fresh election, but if the Election Officer could in his discretion declare that respondent 2 was duly elected, then he was passing an order which he had jurisdiction to pass and the order cannot be interfered with by means of a writ. A reference has been made in this connexion to Gopala Iyengar v. Mohamed Ibrahim Rowther (14). In that case the District Judge, on setting aside the election of a party as Municipal Councillor because of a disqualification, ordered a fresh election. Another party, who had applied for being himself declared duly elected, came up on revision, contending that he was entitled to be so declared. The Full Bench dismissed the revision petition, holding that a candidate who gets the next highest number of votes to the successful candidate who is disqualified is not entitled, as a matter of course, to be declared elected under the then R. 12 which is identical in its terms with the present R. 11. What was decided was that a candidate in such a position was not entitled, in such a case, to be declared elected and not that it was not permissible for the District Judge to pass either of the two orders which the rule allowed. I must find then that the Election Commissioner in declaring respondent 2 elected passed an order which was within his jurisdiction and that I cannot therefore interfere with it.

The result then is that C. M. P. No. 4335 of 1932 has to be and is dismissed with costs. Pleader's fee Rs. 200 on each petition.

P.R.S./K.S.

Order accordingly.

14. A I R 1925 Mad 1119=90 I C 759=48 Mad 509 (F B).

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 137

BEASLEY, C. J. AND CORNISH, J.

Ammathayarammal—Appellant.

v.

Official Assignee, High Court, Madras—Respondent.

Original Side Appeal No. 47 of 1930, Decided on 3rd March 1932, against decision of Waller, J., D/- 1st May 1930.

 (a) Evidence Act (1872), S. 154—Court can allow cross-examination of one's own witness without declaring him to be hostile.

Before the party calling the witness can cross-examine him, it is not necessary that the witness should first of all be declared to be hostile and questions to cross-examine can be allowed by the Court to be asked even though the witness does not show himself to be hostile: A I R 1922 P C 409 and A I R 1931 Cal 401, Rel. on. [P 139 C 1; P 140 C 2]

 (b) Evidence Act (1872), S. 154—Court's discretion in allowing cross-examination by party calling him should not be exercised unless necessity appears from examination-in-chief—Permission to cross-examine is necessary—It should not be tacit but should be expressed in some form—S. 142 does not apply to the case—Evidence Act (1872), S. 142.

Although S. 154 gives the Court an unfettered discretion to allow cross-examination of a witness by the party calling him it ought not to exercise its discretion unless during the examination-in-chief of the witness something happens which makes it necessary for the facts to be got from the witness by means of cross-examination. That section does not entitle any party for instance to say: "I propose to call my opponent and cross-examine him" and the Court to allow such cross-examination without anything more. Something more than the mere position in which the witness stands to the party calling him is required before the Court can exercise its discretion. Therefore, it is necessary before the procedure of S. 154 can be adopted either for the permission of the Court to be obtained or for it to be given by the Court without its being sought. Such permission should not be tacit but should be signified if not in words by some other action of the Court indicating permission. S. 142 does not apply to such a case: English cases referred [P 141 C 2]

(c) Evidence Act (1872), S. 154—Discretion should not be interfered with in appeal.

When the Court has exercised its discretion under S. 154 it ought not to be interfered with by the appellate Court. [P 143 C 2] (d) Evidence Act (1872), S. 154 — Party cross-examining his own witness—Whole evidence need not be rejected—Evidence.

It is not an implication that a party when he cross-examines a witness called by him thereby intends to discredit his evidence in toto; the cross-examination may be directed only to overthrowing certain parts of his evidence; and a Court or a jury is not bound to entirely disbelieve a witness because a portion of his testimony has been discredited in cross-examination: Paulkner v. Brine, 1 F & F 254, Expl.; A I R 1931 Cal 401, Rel. on: Case law referred [P 144 C 2]

(e) Benami—Burden of proof — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 and 114.

There is no presumption in favour of benami and the party alleging it must prove it. [P 145 C 1]

(f) Benami— Person purchasing property in wife's name—Wife is benamidar unless otherwise proved — Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101 and 114.

Where a conveyance is taken in the name of the wife of the person paying the consideration the presumption is that the wife is the benamidar and the onus is on her if she alleges so to show that the conveyance was paid for by her own money. [P 145 C 2]

T. R. Venkatarama Sastriar and K. Narasimha Ayyar—for Appellant.

Nugent Grant for V. Varadaraja Mudaliar and D. R. Venkatesa Ayyar—for Respondent.

Beasley, C. J.—Defendant 1 in the suit under appeal is an insolvent and defendant 2 is his wife. The Official Assignee claimed in the suit a declaration that three houses, the title-deeds of which stand in the name of the insolvent's wife, defendant 2, were in reality the property of the insolvent who paid for them. The defendants on the other hand contended that the insolvent's wife was the actual buyer and that all the money required came from her pocket with the exception of 1/6th of the price of one of the houses.

It is not necessary at this stage to go into any of the facts of the case because an objection has been taken, which we are dealing with as a preliminary objection to certain procedure adopted at the trial. The Official Assignee called the insolvent, defendant 1 in the suit, in support of his case. Whilst he was under examination-in-chief, Mr. Grant who appeared for the Official Assignee put a number of questions to the witness of a cross-examination nature. Objection is taken that Mr. Grant cross-examined his own witness. This, it is contended by the appellant, he was not entitled to do unless (1) the witness first showed himself to be hostile and (2) leave of the Court to put such questions to him had been obtained. It is objected, first, that the witness did not show himself by his demeanour to be hostile; and, secondly, if he did, the consent of the Court to cross-examine him was never obtained. There is nothing on the record of evidence to show that any submission was ever made to the trial Judge that the witness was hostile and that leave was sought to cross-examine him. Mr. Grant quite fairly says that he has no recollection of having made any such submission. It is equally clear that no objection to the procedure adopted by the learned counsel for the Official Assignee was taken by his opponent. From the concluding passage in the learned trial Judge's judgment it would appear that Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar who appeared for the defendants in the course of his argument condemned the procedure already referred to. The learned trial Judge deals with Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar's argument on this point and states as follows :

" I am aware that, as between two ordinary litigants, such a method of procedure has been strongly condemned by the Judicial Committee. The Official Assignee stands in a different and frequently a very embarrassing position. He represents the estate of the insolvent, who is usually colluding with transferees against his creditors. The insolvent, in such a case, has to be made a party. The Official Assignee must examine him as a witness, for there are certain things that only he can speak to, but it would be absurd to treat him as having been put forward as a witness of truth, by all of whose statements the Official Assignee is bound. In this case the insolvent had to be examined to admit the correctness of his banking account and the fact that all the money for the houses came out of it. Beyond that, everything he wanted to say was in favour of his wife and I can see nothing improper in allowing the Official Assignee to cross-examine him in order to show that his evidence, in other respects, was not to be accepted and to elicit admissions from him that were inconsistent with his support of his wife."

What in my view, is to be understood by these observations is (1) that no objection was taken to Mr. Grant cross-examining his own witness by Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar whilst the witness was in the witness box, and (2) that the trial Judge did not interfere but allowed the cross-examination to go on. What is quite clear is that, if Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar had objected to this procedure or Mr. Grant had asked for permission to adopt it, Waller, J., would have disallowed the objection and allowed Mr. Grant to cross-examine the witness for the reasons he has stated. Three questions arise here : (1) Before the party calling the witness can cross-examine him, is it necessary that the witness should first of all be declared to be hostile or can such questions be allowed by the Court to be asked even though the witness does not show himself to be hostile ? (2) Is it necessary that, before they are asked, the leave of the Court should be asked for and obtained. (3) What is the effect of such an examination of the witness on the testimony of that witness; should the whole of his evidence be discarded or is it open to the Court to accept some of it and discard the rest ? The meaning of S. 154, Evidence Act, has to be considered. That provides that :

" the Court may in its discretion permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party."

For the respondent, the Official Assignee, it is argued that that section gives the Court an unfettered discretion and that the exercise of that discretion is not therefore dependent upon the hostile demeanour of the witness; and furthermore it is argued that it is not necessary that the leave of the Court to put such questions to the witness should be obtained because the words used are "the Court may * * * * permit * * *."

It is argued that this permission need not be expressed in words and that, if no objection is raised by the opposite side and the Court does not interfere with the cross-examination, the permission of the Court is to be implied. It is further argued that the effect of a party cross-examining his own witness is not to cause general discredit to be cast upon the witness and that it is open to the Court to attach such weight to the evidence of the witness so dealt with as it thinks right. With regard to the first question raised, it must be observed that in practically all the cases cited the witness had been shown to be a hostile witness so that no question arose as to the limits of the Court's discretion. There are however two cases which actually do consider this question and one of them is a decision by which we are bound. That is the decision of the Privy Council in Baikuntha Nath Chatteraj v. Prasannamoyi Debya (1). The judgment of the Judicial Committee was delivered by Sir Lawrence Jenkins and on p. 701 he says :

" Nagendra Nath Ghouse does not support the proponent's case, for in his examination-in-chief he declared that he did not know whether Mandakini executed any will, and that it was to a blank paper that he put his signature at the request of Ramlal Gosain. An application was therefore made to the District Judge to declare the witness hostile and to allow the proponent to cross-examine him. This is a position for which provision is made by S. 154, Evidence Act, which says nothing as to declaring a witness hostile but provides that the Court may in its discretion permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. One of the appeal Court's adverse comments on the trial Judge's conduct of the case is that the cross-examination of the witness was improperly disallowed. No such objection was made in the grounds of appeal to the High Court, and it would seem as though this comment must have been made without the Court's attention being drawn to that portion of the order sheet in which the District Judge remarks, as the record of the deposition indicates, that the witness was virtually cross-examined, though the Judge in fact did not think he had turned hostile."

1. A I R 1922 P C 409=72 I C 236 (P C).

It is this case which supports the following view expressed on p. 974 of Edn. 8 of Woodroffe & Ameer Ali on Evidence :

"It can therefore be hardly said in this state of the authorities, especially in India where the words of Ss. 154 and 155 are alone to be considered, that it is a settled rule that it is only when a witness manifestly shows a hostile personal feeling by his conduct and demeanour that the Court ought to allow his cross-examination and impeachment. The testimony of a witness, if adverse, is only the more dangerous if he shows no hostile disposition; and if he be astute as well as treacherous, he will take care to conceal his true sentiments from the Court."

The other case is Praphullakumar Sarkar v. Emperor (2). This was a decision of a Full Bench of five Judges. The facts of the case are that one of the prosecution witnesses was declared hostile and permission was given to the Public Prosecutor to cross-examine him. In his charge to the jury the Judge said :

"Maniruddin has deposed in favour of the defence story. This witness has been declared 'hostile' and cross-examined by the prosecution. His evidence has therefore to be excluded from your consideration."

I shall refer to this case again when I come to deal with the question whether such testimony has to be excluded from the consideration of the Court. I have referred to this case however because of the observations of the Full Bench upon the meaning of S. 154, Evidence Act. On p. 1424 (of 58 Cal.) Rankin, C. J., says :

"Now it is true that in Coles v. Coles (3), and it may be in other cases, a hostile witness has been described as a witness who from the manner in which he gives his evidence shows that he is not desirous of telling the truth to the Court. This is not a very good definition of a hostile witness and the Evidence Act is most careful in S. 154 not to restrict the right of 'cross-examination' even by committing itself to the word 'hostile.'"

On p. 1433 Buckland, J., says :

"As a practical matter therefore S. 154 refers exclusively to cross-examination of a witness by the party calling him. We are not asked to state the circumstances in which the Court may exercise its discretion in favour of the party seeking to cross-examine, and indeed it would be impossible to formulate any comprehensive rule. One observation however is permissible. The object of calling a witness is to elicit the facts and if the facts to be elicited are such as ought to be elicited from a witness, and if this cannot be elicited without cross-examining him, it would be difficult to say that the discretion was wrongly exercised."

In this case the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Baikuntha Nath Chatteraj v. Prasannamoyi Debya (1) is not referred to, but the same view of the scope of S. 154, Evidence Act, is taken both by Rankin, C. J., and Buckland, J. In England the law is different upon the point. The Common Law Procedure Act of 1854 settled what had been the subject of varying decisions for many years by providing that :

"a party producing a witness shall not be allowed to impeach his credit by general evidence of bad character, but he may, in case the witness shall in the opinion of the Judge prove adverse, contradict him by other evidence or by the leave of the Judge, prove that he has made at other times a statement inconsistent with the present testimony; but before such lastmentioned proof can be given, the circumstances of the supposed statement sufficient to designate the particular occasion, must be mentioned to the witness, and he must be asked whether or not he has made such a statement."

In England therefore the exercise of the discretion of the Court is conditional on the adverse demeanour of the witness, whereas S. 154, Evidence Act, gives an unqualified discretion to the Judge apart from any question of the hostility or otherwise of the witness. In the opinion of the Referring Judges in Praphullakumar Sarkar v. Emperor (2) the reason why the Court in India is given a much wider discretion than in England is in all probability to avoid the conflict which had existed in England over the words "hostile" and "adverse." The first question raised must, in my view, be answered in the negative.

I now turn to the consideration of the question as to whether permission of the Court must be asked for. Upon this point there is an entire absence of authority which is not at all surprising. Instances where the procedure apparently adopted in this case, namely, the cross-examination of the party's own witness without the leave of the Court being obtained and without objection made by the opposite party and without the express approval of the Court, must indeed be rare. In every case to which reference has been made upon the questions under consideration, so far as I am able to see, the leave of the Court to cross-examine the witness had either been granted or refused. In the case under appeal it would seem that the learned trial Judge assumed from the very nature of the position in which the insolvent stood towards the Official Assignee that the witness was bound to be hostile, a perfectly reasonable assumption; but it is extremely doubtful whether the law in England allows a party to cross-examine a witness for that reason only and indeed there are decisions to the contrary such as Price v. Manning (4). In that case it was held that a party to an action who calls an opponent as a witness has no right to cross-examine him however hostile he may be, without the leave of the Judge and that whether the witness is a litigant or not, it is a matter of discretion in the Judge whether he shows himself so hostile as to justify his cross-examination by the party calling him. In this case, Cotton, Fry, and Lopes, L. JJ., in effect overruled the decision of Best, C. J., in Clarke v. Saffery (5), where Best, C. J., said :

2. A I R 1931 Cal 401 = 1931 Cr C 497 = 131 I C 575 = 32 Cr L J 768 = 58 Cal 1404 (F B).

3. (1866) 1 P 70 = 35 L J P 40 = 13 L T 608 = 14 W R 290.

"There is no fixed rule which binds the counsel for calling a witness to a particular mode of examining him. If a witness, by his conduct in the box, shows himself decidedly adverse, it is always in the discretion of the Judge to allow a cross-examination; but if a witness called, stands in a situation which of necessity makes him adverse to the party calling him, as is the case here, the counsel may, as a matter of right, cross-examine him."

Reported on p. 737 of the same report there is the case of Barton v. Carew (6), where a similar objection was taken, and a cross-examination of an adverse witness allowed. Abbot, C. J., said :

"I mean to decide this and no further, that in each particular case there must be some discretion in the presiding Judge as to the mode in which the examination shall be conducted, in order best to answer the purposes of justice."

Price v. Manning (4), at any rate states that the rule is that it is a matter of discretion of the presiding Judge whether the witness has shown himself so hostile as to justify his cross-examination by the party calling him. This decision and S. 22, Common Law Procedure Act of 1854, seem to me to show that, even where a party puts his opponent into the witness-box, the Court will only exercise its discretion and allow him to be cross-examined if he shows himself to be hostile. Although S. 154, Evidence

Act, gives the Court an unfettered discretion to allow cross-examination of a witness by the party calling him, in my opinion it ought not to exercise its discretion unless during the examination-in-chief of the witness something happens which makes it necessary for the facts to be got from the witness by means of cross-examination. That section does not, in my opinion, entitle any party for instance to say: "I propose to call my opponent and cross-examine him" and the Court to allow such cross-examination without anything more. It seems to me that the scheme of the section is that something more than the mere position in which the witness stands to the party calling him is required before the Court can exercise its discretion. In my opinion therefore it is necessary before the procedure of S. 154 can be adopted either for the permission of the Court to be obtained or for it to be given by the Court without its being sought. In this case, as already stated, it must be taken that no such permission was sought nor was it in words given. But Mr. Grant argues that all that the section requires is tacit permission and that, if the Court does not interfere, it must be taken to have assented to that procedure. He contrasts the word "permit" in S. 154 with the word "consent" in S. 155. His contention is that the two words are used in a different sense and that the consent of the Court required in the latter section must be given as a result of a request made to it whereas the use of the word "permit" in the former section shows that even a tacit consent is intended.

There is much force in this argument because the use of the word "permit" in one section and the word "consent" in the next section makes it probable that it was not intended that these words were to have the same meaning. "Consent" seems to me to imply that it is to be given in consequence of a request made, whereas "permission" need not necessarily follow a request. This however does not entirely solve the difficulty because we have still to consider whether it is necessary for the Court to express its permission in words. In my view, it is intended by S. 154 that such a permission should be signified, if not in words, by some other action of the Court indicating its permission during the cross-examination of the witness by the party calling him. But there is another section of the Evidence Act to be considered in this connexion and that is S. 142. It is contended by Mr. Grant that, quite apart from S. 154, S. 142 allows a cross-examination by a party of his own witness during that witness's examination-in-chief without the permission of the Court if no objection is taken to it by the adverse party. That section is as follows:

4. (1889) 42 Ch D 372=58 L J Ch 649=61 L T 537=37 W R 785.

5. 27 R R 736=R & M 126.

6. 27 R R 737=R & M 127.

"Leading questions must not, if objected to by the adverse party, be asked in an examination-in-chief, or in a re-examination, except with the permission of the Court. The Court shall permit leading questions as to matters which are introductory or undisputed, or which have, in its opinion, been already sufficiently proved."

In my view, this section is intended to provide for cases different to those contemplated by S. 154. S. 142 refers merely to leading questions; S. 154 refers to questions which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. A question put in a leading form is not necessarily tantamount to cross-examination, whereas most questions in cross-examination are leading questions. The distinction between the object of these two sections, to my mind, is that S. 154 provides for the cross-examination of the witness by the adverse party for the purpose of contradicting answers given by the witness or to test the witness's veracity or to drag the truth from him. S. 142 to my mind clearly does not deal with such a case. It merely deals with leading questions as defined by S. 141, viz. questions suggesting the answer which the person putting them wishes or expects to receive. It cannot be imagined that the legislature had in view any questions to which it is obvious objection must be taken by the adverse party. I do not think that S. 142 assists the respondent's argument. In my opinion the procedure adopted in this case was not warranted by S. 154, Evidence Act, because Waller, J., did not signify his permission at any time during the cross-examination because I do not think that S. 154 means tacit permission. But it is clear that, had permission been formally asked for, he would have granted it and, as no objection was taken to that procedure by the appellant's counsel, and was only taken after all the evidence had been given during the course of the argument. It is now too late to allow this objection which, had it been taken during the cross-examination, would have been overruled by the learned trial Judge. I have now to consider whether the whole of the evidence of the witness has to be rejected or not. Reliance is placed by the appellant on Faulkner v. Brine (7). The head-note of that case is as follows:

"The defendant's counsel stating, after calling and examining a witness, that he had given another and materially different account of the transaction to the defendant's attorney, the Judge allowed the witness to be asked if they were so, and to be dealt with as adverse, under the Common Law Procedure Act of 1854, S. 29, but only with a view to discredit him generally; and this it will not do, if it is not utterly inconsistent with his sworn evidence."

The case was tried by Lord Campbell, C. J., who allowed the question to be put stating:

"It must be understood that it must be done to discredit the witness altogether, and not merely to get rid of part of his testimony. If that which is suggested shall be elicited it will show that he is not trustworthy at all."

In Alexander v. Gibson (8), Lord Ellen-burg says:

"If a witness is called on the part of the plaintiff, who swears what is palpably false, it would be extremely hard if the plaintiff's case should for that reason be sacrificed. But I know of no rule of law by which the truth is on such an occasion to be shut out and justice is to be perverted. In Lowe v. Jolliff (9), which turned on the validity of a will, all the attesting witnesses swore to the insanity of the testator when the will was executed; but they were contradicted by other evidence and the will was established. The party is not to set up so much of a witness's testimony as makes for him, and to reject or disprove such part as is of a contrary tendency. But if a witness is called, and gives evidence against the party calling him, I think he may be contradicted by other witnesses on the same side, and that in this manner his evidence may be entirely repudiated."

Alexander v. Gibson (8) was referred to in Panchanan Gogai v. Emperor (10) to support the position that, where a witness turns hostile and is cross-examined by the party calling him, the evidence of such a witness cannot in part be relied upon and the rest of it discarded or rejected. It is there pointed out that Alexander v. Gibson (8) has been followed ever since 1811 and that in only one case, Bradley v. Richardo (11), it was not followed. In Bradley v. Richardo (11)

7. 1 F & F 254.

8. 2 Camp 556=11 R R 797.

9. 1 W Bl. 365.

10. A I R 1930 Cal 276=1930 Cr C 356=31 Cr L J 1207=127 I C 270=57 Cal 1266.

11. 131 E R 321.

however it was held that where a party being surprised by a statement of his own witness, calls other witnesses to contradict him as to a particular fact, the whole of the testimony of the contradicted witness is not therefore to be repudiated by the Judge, and Alexander v. Gibson (8) was referred to. The case was heard in the Common Pleas by Tindal, C. J., Gaselee, Bosanquet and Alderson, JJ., whose judgments are very fully set out by the referring Judges in their order of reference to the Full Bench in Praphullakumar Sarkar v. Emperor (2), Tindal, C. J., stated:

"The general rule is, that a party shall not be permitted to blast the character of a witness called in support of his case by adducing general evidence to his discredit; but I have never heard it said that when surprised by a statement contrary to the fact, he may not call another witness to show how the fact really is."

In the opinion of Gaselee, J., Alexander v. Gibson (8) went too far and he disagreed with Lord Ellenborough. Bosanquet, J., stated that the practice had always been contrary to that adopted in Alexander v. Gibson (8), and Alderson, J. dissented from Lord Ellenborough and also stated that the case of Lowe v. Jolliff (9) referred to by Lord Ellenborough in his judgment established the contrary of the proposition for which it was cited. I do not think that Alexander v. Gibson (8) or Faulkner v. Brine (7) can be relied upon by the appellants. With regard to the latter case, as Rankin, C. J., points out in Praphullakumar Sarkar v. Emperor (2) (at pp. 1427 and 1428 of 58 Cal.) Lord Campbell is not reported to have told the jury that, because he had allowed the questions to be put, the defendant could not rely at all upon the evidence of the witness nor that the cross-examination of a hostile witness by permission of the Court must always be cross-examination to destroy the general credit of the witness, but that his observation was a common sense observation for the benefit of the jury and as a warning to counsel of the risk he ran. In Praphullakumar Sarkar v. Emperor (2) this question has been very fully dealt with by a Full Bench of five Judges of that Court.

I have already referred to this case for another purpose. It was there held that the fact that a witness is dealt with under S. 154, Evidence Act, even when under that section he is cross-examined as to credit, in no way warrants a direction to the jury that they are bound in law to place no reliance on his evidence or that the party who called and cross-examined him or any other party can take no advantage from any part of his evidence and that there is no rule of law that, if a jury thinks that a witness has been discredited on one point, they may not give credit to him on another. I entirely agree with the decision in this case and with the reasoning in the judgments of Rankin, C. J., and Buckland, J. It is in all cases a question for the jury or for the Judge in a civil case to decide what weight is to be given to the testimony of a witness so dealt with and I cannot accede to the contention put forward by the appellant that a different principle is to be applied in such matters when the testimony is being considered by a Judge alone. In one case the jury are the Judges of fact and in the other the Judge alone is, and it is for the jury in the one case and the Judge in the other to attach such weight as is right to that evidence. In my opinion therefore Waller, J., was entitled to accept or reject such parts of the evidence of defendant 1 as he did, although I do not agree with the procedure allowed by Waller, J., in this case. Whatever may be the reasons for the exercise of its discretion by the Court under S. 154, first of all to obtain the sanction of the Court to cross-examine the witness, is in accordance with the general practice and that practice in my opinion ought always to be followed although S. 154 may not make such procedure imperative, but when the Court has exercised its discretion under S. 154 it ought not to be interfered with by the appellate Court.

Cornish, J.—I am of the same opinion. The learned trial Judge says at the close of his judgment that he allowed the witness to be cross-examined, and he gives as his reason that the witness was endeavouring by his evidence to help the case of his wife, the opposite party. In other words the learned Judge appears to have thought that the witness had shown himself to be adverse to the party who called him. But nowhere does it appear that permission to cross-examine the witness on that ground was actually given. There is no doubt that the correct procedure when a party is desirous of cross-examining his own witness it is for him to formally ask for and obtain the Court's permission. The expediency at least of this course is clear; for, unless the Court is given the opportunity of considering whether on the material before it the cross-examination should be permitted, how is it to exercise a discretion? And a cross-examination which has taken place without it appearing that the Court had considered whether it should be permitted would be altogether irregular. Mr. Grant has contrasted the word "permit" in S. 154 with the word "consent" in S. 155, and contended that permission means no more than sufferance, so that, it would be sufficient if the Court signified its permission by acquiescence. I do not think it could as a matter of course be assumed simply because it appeared from the record that a witness's examination-in-chief has developed into cross-examination without objection from the Court or opposite party that the Court had exercised its discretion in permitting the cross-examination. It must somehow be shown that the Court did in fact exercise its discretion in the matter. In the present case it appears from the judgment.

A considerable argument was addressed to us on the scope of S. 154. The section differs from the corresponding provision in the English Act, 28 and 29., Vic., C. 18, which makes it a condition for leave to cross-examine that "the witness in the opinion of the Judge prove adverse." As pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in Baikunta Nath Chatteraj v. Prasannamoyi Debya (1) S. 154 says nothing about a witness being hostile. It seems to me undesirable, as well as unnecessary, to attempt to define the limits within which the Court's discretion can be exercised under S. 154 when the section itself imposes none. But this much may be said with reference to the particular case before us; that a party who chooses to call his opponent as a witness, or who may by force of circumstances be compelled to take this course, as apparently the Official Assignee was here, in order to prove his case, does not on that account become entitled to treat his witness as hostile and to cross-examine him. The Court must in its discretion determine whether cross-examination of the witness shall be permitted. That was the rule laid down by the Court of appeal in Price v.

Manning (4), and it is equally applicable to S. 154: see Lachiram Motilal v. Radha Charan (12).

The cross-examination of defendant 1 having been permitted by the Court, there remains the question how far is his credit affected. Mr. Venkatarama Sastri's argument, that the cross-examination must be taken to discredit generally the evidence of the witness for the plaintiff, the Official Assignee, is founded upon the observations of Lord Campbell in Faulkner v. Brine (7), which have been interpreted in two cases in the Calcutta High Court, Khijiruddin Sowcar v. Emperor (13) and Panchanan Gogai v. Emperor (10), as authority for the proposition for which the learned advocate has contended. This is not the view accepted in Emperor v. Jehangir Ardeshircama (14), and in Sohrai Sao v. Emperor (15) (at p. 484 of 9 Pat.) and moreover, in Praphullakumar Sirkar v. Emperor (12), (at p. 1427 of 58 Cal.) Rankin, C. J., expressed the opinion that Lord Campbell's words should not be understood as meaning that the cross-examination of a witness as adverse must always destroy the general credit of the witness. This consequence, it is to be observed, does not flow from calling another witness to contradict what the witness has said; vide Bradley v. Ricards (16). In that case it was said by Bosanquet, J:

"A party is often compelled to call an adverse witness; and if he, on cross-examination or otherwise, makes statements inconsistent with fact, another witness may be called to contradict him, and there is no instance of a Judge having been called upon in such a case to strike out the rest of his evidence."

There seems to me no reason why different considerations should govern the case of a witness cross-examined by the party who has called him. It is not an implication that a party when he cross-examines a witness thereby intends to discredit his evidence in toto; the cross-examination may be directed only to overthrowing certain parts of his evidence; and a Court or a jury is not bound to entirely disbelieve a witness because

12. A I R 1922 Cal 267=66 I C 15=49 Cal 93.

13. A I R 1926 Cal 139=92 I C 442=27 Cr L J 266=53 Cal 372.

14. A I R 1927 Bom 501=106 I C 100=28 Cr L J 1012.

15. A I R 1930 Pat 247=124 I C 836=31 Cr L J 721=9 Pat 474.

16. S Bing 57.

a portion of his testimony has been discredited in cross-examination. In my opinion therefore the cross-examination of defendant 1 is not to be taken as a total repudiation of his evidence by the Official Assignee who called him as a witness.

Beasley, C. J.—With regard to the facts of this case, the first transaction impeached is that evidenced by a sale deed Ex. B dated 9th October 1911. That was a sale by one C. Ranganatham Naidu to defendant 2 of the site on which subsequently Baktha Lodge was built. Ranganatham Naidu was at that time a debtor to the insolvent to the extent of about Rs. 7,000 and in respect of that debt he had mortgaged the site to the insolvent by Ex. A dated 11th October 1910. The sale deed Ex. B sets out that the purchase money was paid by adjustment of the debt owing by the vendor to the insolvent. The Official Assignee's case is that no money passed, but that the property became the property of defendant 1 by adjustment of this debt. Of course, according to the terms of the deed, it was by way of adjustment only and not by payment of money that the transaction was put through. But the property stands in the name of defendant 2, the insolvent's wife. There is no presumption in favour of benami and it is therefore incumbent upon the Official Assignee to prove that this was a benami transaction. (His Lordship then discussed the evidence and after finding that the money came from the insolvent's banking account and that the defendants had failed to prove that it was defendant 2's money, proceeded.) Under these circumstances, I agree with the finding of the learned trial Judge that the Official Assignee has succeeded in showing that this was a benami transaction; and it must therefore be set aside. The other transactions impeached must also suffer a similar fate because the evidence with regard to them put forward for the defendants in the lower Court was even more vague. (His Lordship discussed the evidence and concluded.) In these circumstances I agree with the learned trial Judge that all the three must be set aside. This appeal must therefore be dismissed with costs. Certificate for two counsel.

Cornish, J.—I am of the same opinion. When once the Official Assignee has established that the consideration for the acquisition of the Baktha Lodge site was a release of the mortgage debt due by the vendor to the insolvent, the presumption arises that the conveyance of the property in favour of the insolvent's wife was benami for himself. The onus was on the wife therefore to show that she had in fact purchased the property from her husband with her own money. (His Lordship then considered the evidence and concluded.) I agree that defendant 2 has not discharged the burden upon her, and that the appeal fails.

P.R.S./M.N. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 145

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Palaniswami Goundar—Defendant—Appellant.

v,

English and Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Societies, Ltd.—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 2336 of 1927, Decided on 25th November 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Nilgiris, in A.S. No. 2 of 1927.

Contract Act (1872), S. 65—Benefit received under void contract must be restored.

Return of money advanced can be claimed either on the basis of quantum meruit or on the principle of the restoration of benefit under a void contract: 48 Cal 790; A I R 1927 Cal 465; A I R 1930 Mad 600 and A I R 1922 P C 403, Rel. on.; Young & Co. v. Mayor, etc. of Royal Leamington Spa, (1883) 8 A C 517, Dist. [P 146 C 1, 2; P 147 C 1]

C. S. Swaminathan—for Appellant.

B. Sitarama Rao—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The defendant is the appellant. This second appeal arises out of a suit instituted by the English and Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Societies for the recovery of Rs. 1,387-13-7. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendant executed two contracts under Act 1 of 1903, binding himself to work with a hundred coolies in the Mango Range Estate of the plaintiffs and received a consideration of Rs. 1,200 and further advances and way expenses of the coolies. The suit was for the recovery of the amount on the ground that the defendant failed to keep the required number of coolies in the estate. A schedule showing how the plaint amount was arrived at was also filed along with the plaint. The defendant contended amongst other things that the agreements were not supported by consideration, that the suit contracts were invalid and unenforceable and that the amount claimed in the plaint as due from him was not correct. The last point was covered by issue 8. As the District Munsif found that the contracts were invalid he held that nothing was due to the plaintiffs and therefore dismissed the suit. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge held that consideration was proved for both the contracts and that the plaintiffs could recover the amount advanced under these contracts. In the result he reversed the decree of the lower Court and allowed the appeal with costs.

In second appeal it was argued that the contracts are invalid inasmuch as they did not comply with the provisions embodied in the rules relating to the execution of contracts under Act 1 of 1903, and that therefore in estimating the amount due from the defendant, Rs. 1,200 advanced under the contracts should not be debited against him; and that in any event the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in having disposed of the appeal without considering issue 8. As Mr. Sitarama Rao on behalf of the respondents frankly admitted that the contracts were invalid as they were not executed in strict compliance with the rules under the Act, it is not necessary to discuss the rules referred to in this connexion and which are published in the Fort Saint George Gazette. The question is: the contracts being invalid, should not credit be given to the plaintiffs for the sum of Rs. 1,200 found to have been advanced by them to the defendant. In support of the contention that no such credit should be given the appellant strongly relied upon Young & Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Royal Leamington Spa (1).

In my opinion the present case is distinguishable from the decision in Young & Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Royal Leamington Spa (1), in as much as the claim made here is not for the enforcement of the invalid contracts but for the restoration of the benefit accrued under the contracts, the contracts having been found invalid. Further the case in Young & Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Royal Leamington Spa (1), concerned itself with a contract made by a Corporation to which special consideration may be said to be applicable. The claim for the return of the amount in cases like the present seems to be based on the principle of quantum meruit. In Mathura Mohan Saha v. Ram Kumar Saha (2) (at p. 827), it was pointed out that:

"where a Corporation receives money or property under an agreement which turns out to be ultra vires or illegal, it is not entitled to retain the money. The obligation to do justice rests upon all persons natural or artificial; if one obtains the money or property of others without authority, the law independently of express contract will compel restitution or compensation."

In Mohamed Ebrahim Molla v. Commissioners for the Port of Chittagong (3):

"an agreement the value of which exceeded Rs. 2,500, was executed by the Port Officer of Chittagong, by his proxy, the Port Officer of Moulmein, on behalf of the Commissioners for the Port of Chittagong by which a towing vessel was let out by the Port Commissioners on operations outside the Chittagong Port,"

it was held:

"that the agreement being in contravention of the mandatory provisions of S. 29, Chittagong Port Act, 1914, was not enforceable and that the Commissioners were entitled to recover quantum meruit for the services rendered by them."

Both these decisions refer to the decision in Young & Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Royal Leamington Spa (1), relied upon by the appellant. The decision in Mohamed Ebrahim Molla v. Commissioners for the Port of Chittagong (3), was followed by this Court in Municipal Council, Tiruvarur v. Kannuswami Pillai (4), in which it was held by Kumaraswami Sastri and Pakenham Walsh, JJ., that:

"in spite of the invalidity of the contract a decree for what will be due on the basis of quantum meruit can be given."

In this case also reference is made to Young & Co. v. Mayor, etc., of Royal Leamington Spa (1), and to the other relevant cases bearing on the question. On the authority of these decisions it is clear that though the contracts are invalid the plaintiffs in the present case are entitled to the return of Rs. 1,200 advanced under the contracts. Their claim for the return of the amount can also be rested on S. 65, Contract Act, which says that:

"when an agreement is discovered to be void, or when a contract becomes void, any person who has received any advantage under such agreement or contract is bound to restore it, or to make compensation for it, to the person from whom he received it."

2. (1916) 43 Cal 59=350 I C 305.

3. A I R 1927 Cal 465=103 I C 2=54 Cal 189.

4. A I R 1930 Mad 600=127 I C 120=59 Mad 352.

1. (1889) 8 A C 517.

In this connexion attention may be drawn to the decision of this Court in Thangammal Aiyar v. Krishnan (5), which, applying the decision of the Privy Council in Harnath Kunwar v. Indar Bahadur Singh (6), held that S. 65, Contract Act, requiring compensation to be paid, or restoration of advantage received, by a party under a contract, would apply to a contract void from its inception. The contention that the amount in question should be returned based on S. 65, Contract Act, seems to be unanswerable. The plaintiffs can thus claim recovery of Rs. 1,200 paid by them under the void contracts either on the basis of quantum meruit or on the principle of the restoration of benefit under a void contract; but this does not dispose of the entire claim made by the plaintiffs. In addition to the money advanced under the contracts they claim from the defendant various other items the correctness and liability to pay which are disputed by the defendant. The defendant also says amongst other things that he has not been allowed the proper amount of commission due to him. The liability to pay the amount claimed by the plaintiffs in the list filed by them along with the plaint has been questioned by the defendant on various grounds. This was the subject-matter of issue 8. In the view that was taken of the case by the District Munsif there was no need to give an express decision on this issue. The learned Subordinate Judge, setting aside the decree of the District Munsif has given a decree to the plaintiffs as prayed for without considering this issue. The Court then called for a finding on issue 8 and after its receipt modified the decree passed.

P.R.S./M.N. Decree modified.

5. A I R 1930 Mad 132=124 I C 502=53 Mad 309.

6. A I R 1929 P C 403=71 I C 629=50 I A 69=45 All 179=26 O C 223 (P C).

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 147

BURN, J.

Pendyala Narasanna and others—
Accused—Petitioners, In re.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 289 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 268 of 1932, Decided on 30th September 1932, against order of Sess. Judge, West Godavari Division, Ellore, in Criminal Appeals Nos. 3 and 4 of 1932.

Molestation Ordinance (5 of 1932), Ss. 3 (a) and (4)—Gist of offence of molestation laid down.

The gist of an offence of molestation as defined in S. 3 (a) is the doing of certain acts "with a view to cause a person to abstain from doing or to do any act which such other person has a right to do or to abstain from doing." These words govern the whole of S. 3 (a).

A conviction under S. 4 is therefore not maintainable when the acts complained of are not done with a view to prevent the complainant from doing anything which he had a right to do.

[P 147 C 2]

K. S. Jayarama Ayyar, B. T. M. Raghavachari and P. Satyanarayana Raju—for Petitioners.

K. S. Vasudevan for Public Prosecutor—
—for the Crown.

Order.—The conviction under S. 4, Molestation Ordinance (5 of 1932), is not maintainable. As Mr. K. S. Jayarama Ayyar for the petitioners contends, the gist of an offence of molestation, as defined in S. 3 (a) of the Ordinance is the doing of certain acts, "with a view to cause a person to abstain from doing or to do any act which such other person has a right to do or to abstain from doing . . ."

Those words govern the whole of S. 3 (a). In this case there is no evidence whatever, to show that the complainant had a right even to prepare the faces of the toddy trees for tapping. The trees did not belong to him and he has nowhere said that he had got the permission of the owners to tap them. On the other hand, there is positive evidence that the complainant was committing an offence under S. 55, Madras Abkari Act. He had not obtained a license to tap the trees; he had not even got the trees marked. Yet he was having the trees tapped, as is clear from the evidence of himself, of one of his tappers (P. W. 2), of the Village Munsif (P. W. 5) and of the Excise Sub-Inspector (P. W. 6). In these circumstances it is impossible to hold that the acts attributed to the petitioners were done with a view to prevent the complainant from doing anything which he had a right to do. I therefore set aside the convictions and sentences for offences under S. 4, Molestation Ordinance. (The rest of the judgment is not material for reporting).

P.R.S./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 148

BARDSWELL, J.

Uppu Satyanarayana — Complainant
—Petitioner.

v.

H. B. Yorke — Accused — Opposite
Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 112 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 107 of 1932, Decided on 24th August 1932, against order of Subdivl. Magistrate, Cocanada, in Criminal Case No. 49 of 1931.

(a) Madras Local Boards Act (1920), S. 193
—Licence fee is not tax.

A license-fee is not a tax. [P 149 C 2]

(b) Madras Local Boards Act (1920), S. 202
—Bye-laws under—Reasonableness can be considered by criminal Courts.

The reasonable and equitable nature of bye-laws framed by local bodies is a matter open to the criminal Courts to consider when offenders against the bye-laws are put up for prosecution before them : Steels v. Galinski, (1904) 1 K B D 615 and Kruse v. Johnson, (1898) 2 Q B 91, Ref.

[P 150 C 2]

(c) Madras Local Boards Act (1920), S. 193
—License-fee — Questions of legality and reasonableness are separate.

A bye-law, or any rule or order of the kind, as to the taking out of a license is not bad merely because the license fee is excessive. The questions of the legality of ordering that a license should be taken out and that of the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the fee charged for such license are separate and independent questions, and the legality of the order does not depend on the fees being reasonable : Criminal Revision No. 401 of 1931, Rel on. [P 150 C 2]

(d) Madras Local Boards Act (1920), Ss. 193 and 212 (9)—Excessive fees cannot be recovered summarily.

Where the license fee levied is excessive and cannot be justified Court will refuse its summary recovery under S. 212 (9) ; A I R 1931 P C 217, Ref. [P 151 C 2]

(e) Madras Local Boards Act (1920), Ss. 193 and 166—S. 193 is imperative.

Section 193 is mandatory in its terms like S. 166, and hence a license should be taken out for a place to be used for any of the purposes specified in Sch. 7. [P 151 C 1]

P. Somasundaram and G. Balaparameswari Rao—for Petitioner.

O. T. G. Nambiar for King and Partridge—for Opposite Party.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The petition is filed by the President of the Samalkota Panchayat Board, the respondent being the Manager of the Deccan Sugar and Abkari Co., Ltd., at Samalkota. The respondent was prosecuted by the petitioner for failure to take out licenses for (1) the manufacture of arrack with machinery; (2) the manufacture of CO₂ gas with machinery; (3) the manufacture of confectionery with machinery. The Cocanada Taluk Board had on 28th August 1930 passed a resolution to the effect that no place within its jurisdiction should be used for any of the three specified manufactures, without the license of the President of the Union Board concerned if the place was within Union limits, the fee for a licence in each case being Rs. 400 while the license was only to endure for a year. The manufacture or refining of sugar was also specified and the fee for this was fixed at Rs. 500. This resolution was notified in the District Gazette on 23rd September 1930. A resolution in similar terms, though of course restricted in its scope to the limits of the panchayat's jurisdiction, was passed by the Samalkot village panchayat on 12th November 1930, and this resolution was notified in the District Gazette on 22nd November 1930: (Ex. A-1). By Ex. A-1 the owner or occupier of every place used for the specified manufacture was to apply to the President of the panchayat for a licence for the use of such place for such a purpose within 30 days of its publication.

The order as to applying for the licence was with reference to Sch. 7, Madras Local Boards Act 14 of 1920 and the three manufactures noted above as (1), (2) and (3) can fall under either Cl. (p) or Cl. (q) of that schedule. The heading of Sch. 7 is "Purposes for which premises may not be used without a Licence" and Cl. (p) runs "using for any industrial purposes any fuel or machinery," while Cl. (q) runs :

"in general doing in the course of and industrial process anything which is likely to be offensive or dangerous to human life or health or property."

For the purposes of this case, if any clause applies, it must be Cl. (q). The respondent did not apply for any licence for the manufactures (1), (2) and (3), but instead a letter (Ex. B), dated 18th December 1930, was sent through the solicitors of his firm, the managing agents of which are Messrs. Parry & Co., Ltd., pointing out that the firm had been paying a license-fee of Rs. 300 for the use of their factory at Samalkota for the manufacture or refining of sugar and for manufactures (1), (2) and (3); that it was well-settled law that licence-fees are not analogous to taxation, but should be proportionate to the expenses incurred for supervision of the industry or purpose which is licensed ; that it was obvious that the fee of Rs. 1,700 in all now imposed could have no relation to the cost of supervision by the panchayat, and that the firm therefore did not propose to apply for licences and would resist any attempt on the part of the President of the Union Board to enforce the levy. The prosecution of the respondent then followed. Ex. B had stated that the respondent's company might address the Government in the matter, but I understand that it has not done so. The prosecution was brought under Ss. 193, 207 and 212 (9), Madras Local Boards Act. S. 193 provides that a panchayat may notify that no place shall be used for any one or more of the purposes specified in Sch. 7 without a licence issued by the President of the panchayat, which licence is to be applied for by the owner or occupier of such place within 30 days of the publication of such notification. Under S. 207 a person shall on conviction be punished as provided in Col. 4, Sch. 8 for contravention of any provision of any of the sections specified in Col. 1 of that schedule. In Col. 1, Sch. 8, is found S. 193, and the subject noted against it is

"using a place for an offensive or dangerous trade without a license."

The punishment provided for is one of a fine of Rs. 100. By S. 212 (9), when any person is convicted of an offence in respect of the failure to obtain a licence as required by the provisions of the Act, the Magistrate shall, in addition to any fine which may be imposed, recover summarily and pay over to the Local Board the amount of the fee chargeable for the licence. The case was heard by the Sub-divisional Magistrate of Cocanada, who found the respondent not guilty and acquitted him under S. 245, Civil P. C. The Magistrate's ratio decidendi has been stated by him thus :

"The proposed licence fees being contrary to the purposes of chapter (obviously a mistake for Part) 4 of the Act, I hold that the panchayat's action is not within the powers given to it under the Act. The notifications are therefore ultra vires. Disobedience of a legal notice only constitutes an offence, but not of a notice which is ultra vires. I accordingly hold that no offence is made out under Ss. 193 and 207, Local Boards Act."

Against this decision the President of the Panchayat Board has come up on revision. It is conceded for the petitioner, and well established, that a licence-fee is not a tax. Licences are imposed under Part 4 of the Act for purposes of public health, safety and convenience. The Magistrate's view that the notification was contrary to Part 4 was based on his finding that the object of the Panchayat Board was to make money from licence-fees and was not required to meet any expenses of supervision, as there was a technical Government staff to supervise the factories and no such staff was employed by the Panchayat Board, while the factory itself was outside the village and unconnected with it, so that it was really not a source of danger to the village. There can be no doubt as to the correctness of the findings. Obviously the Panchayat Board was out to make money by suddenly raising the licence-fees to be paid by these respondent company from Rs. 300 to Rs. 1,700 a year. The evidence of the President, as the one witness for the prosecution, shows that the Board's sanitary staff consisting of a Sanitary Inspector on Rs. 40 a month whose post had been vacant for a year, and of two maistries on Rs. 23 and Rs. 20 respectively per mensem, have to look after the sanitation of the whole panchayat area, and, in respect of the factory premises, have only to see whether they are kept in a sanitary condition or not, while the company itself looks after the sanitation of the factory compound.

He says indeed that the licence-fee for the sugar factory was raised to Rs. 500 with the object of appointing a special staff over the sugar factory, but he has to admit that there was no one in view to be appointed for the factory's supervision, and that no resolution had yet been passed for the appointing of an officer for such supervision. It has also to be observed that the manufacture of arrack had been carried on in the factory premises for over 30 years and those of CO2 and confectionery for nine and seven years respectively, before the panchayat decided to treat them as offensive or dangerous to human life, so as to necessitate the taking out of licences for them. Of course however if the manufactures are such that licences can be legally ordered to be taken for them, the panchayat had the right to direct at any time that licenses for them should be applied for. Further, I must note that the schedule to Ex. A, giving the rates of fees for licences for dangerous trades, shows no rate in any approaching those now fixed for the manufactures in question, nor does P.W. I attempt to explain why such heavy fees should be paid by the defendant's company. The Magistrate has stated in his judgment that he has refrained from adjudicating upon the reasonableness or otherwise of the notifications in question, as he was doubtful in the face of Chairman Municipal Council, Chidambaram v. Tirunarayana Iyengar (1) whether it was competent for him to do so.

In fact however the question of reasonableness or otherwise is largely involved in the discussion that leads to his conclusion. I have not looked into Chairman, Municipal Council, Chidambaram v. Tirunarayana Iyengar (1) as it has not been quoted before me, and I do not find it necessary for me to do so for the purpose of deciding this case, but I may note that Wallace, J., in Criminal Revision Case No. 404 of 1931 which was referred to him on a difference between two learned Judges, Waller, J., and Krishnan Pandalai, J., has, with reference to earlier decisions of this High Court as well as of the High Courts of Allahabad and Lahore, held that the reasonable and equitable nature of bye-laws framed by local bodies is a matter open to the criminal Courts to consider when offenders against the bye-laws are put up for prosecution before them. It is also the law of England that a bye-law may be bad for unreasonableness: Steels v. Galinski (2), though a Court ought to be allowed to hold that a bye-law is void for unreasonableness: Kruse v. Johnson (3). The matter of reasonableness can also be considered from another point of view, in case of prosecution for failure to take out a licence, namely that of whether, when there has been a legal and valid order for taking out a licence, the fee charged for the licence was reasonable so that its summary recovery could be ordered under S. 212 (9) or whether it was so unreasonable that the Court could refuse to order its recovery. That the matter of reasonableness could be gone into in such a case is what was actually decided by Wallace, J., in Criminal Revision Case No. 104 of 1931 in agreement with Waller, J., one of the referring Judges.

As I have already remarked, the Magistrate's finding is largely based on what he considers to be the unreasonableness of the notification; and, further what he holds to be illegal is not the order for the taking out of the licence but the proposed licence-fees which he finds to be contrary to the provisions and purposes of part 4 of the Act. Nowhere has he held that the manufactures in question are not of such a nature that the licences could be ordered to be taken out in respect of them. He has indeed remarked that the factory was not in itself a source of danger to the village, but he has not found that the manufactures carried on in it could not from any point of view be regarded as dangerous to human life. Had the Magistrate's decision really been that the entire notifications were illegal, and could that finding be taken as correct, then there are a number of decisions which show that there can be no criminal conviction for the disobedience of an invalid order. To these decisions I do not find it necessary to refer as the point with which they deal is not the one that I have now to consider. I have only to say that no case had been shown to me in which a bye-law, or any rule or order of the kind, as to the taking out of a licence has been held to be bad merely because the licence-fee was excessive. Clearly, I take it, the questions of the legality of ordering that a licence should be taken out and that of the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the fee charged for such licence are separate and independent questions and the legality of the order does not depend on the fees being reasonable. And there is authority for this view in the decision to which I have already referred in Criminal Revision Case No. 404 of 1931.

It has been argued for the respondent that, while S. 166 makes it imperative that a licence shall be taken out before a motor vehicle can be used by him on any public road, S. 193 does not require that a licence shall be taken out for a place to be used for any of the purposes specified in Sch. 7 before that place can be used for any such purposes. I can however see no force in this argument.

1. A I R 1928 Mad 847=29 Cr L J 710 = 51 Mad 876=110 I C 454.

2. (1904) 1 K B D 615.

3. (1898) 2 Q B 91 = 67 L J Q B 782 = 46 W R 630=78 L T 647.

Both S. 166 and S. 193 appear to me to be equally mandatory in their terms. By S. 166 no person shall use any motor vehicle for hire on any public road in a district except on a license obtained from the President of the District Board, while under S. 193 the panchayat may notify that no place shall be used for any one or more of the purposes specified in Sch. 7, without a licence issued by the President of the panchayat; and the owner or occupier of every such place shall apply to the President for the use of such place for such purpose. It is true that the defendant's company had been carrying on the manufactures in question for a considerable time without having to take out licences therefor, but that cannot exonerate the defendant from continuing the manufactures without licence after the expiry of the term fixed by the panchayat's notification provided that the circumstances warranted the panchayat in ordering the taking out of the licences. This point was not taken before the Magistrate and at the trial the matter seems to have been taken for granted. I do not however think it necessary to ask the Magistrate to give a decision on this point which was not brought to his notice, but has only been taken here by way of opposition to the revision application, especially when it can be decided by a reference to the plain words of the statute and when its decision here will simplify the issue on which he has to find.

The main point which I have now to consider is that of whether the licence-fees for the manufactures (1), (2) and (3) are so unreasonable that their summary recovery should not be ordered under S. 212 (9). Strictly speaking, the point will not arise unless it is first decided that the defendant can be convicted under S. 207. For reasons already stated I must hold that this matter has not been properly decided by the Magistrate in that he has found that the licence-fees are improper without finding that the panchayat had no right to insist on the taking out of licences; and I shall have to send the case back to him for a decision on proper grounds. Still, as the matter has already been dealt with by the Magistrate and as it has also been fully discussed before me, besides being one which admits of no doubt, I shall consider it. The fees imposed by the notifications are most certainly exorbitant and unreasonable. I have stated some of the grounds on which they must be held so to be above in para. 3; and to what is stated there I would add the citation made by Wallace, J., in the criminal revision case already referred to from the Privy Council decision in Pazundaung Bazar Co. Ltd. v. Municipal Corporation of the City of Rangoon (4) that the fee:

"need not be confined to the cost of the issue and inspection of licences and the office expenses of the controlling authority, but may reasonably cover the case of all special service necessitated by the duties and liabilities imposed on the Corporation."

In the case dealt with by him, which was one as to the reasonableness of the fee charged under S. 166 (2) of the Act for the plying of motor-buses on the public road, Wallace, J., mentioned certain service the cost of which might reasonably be covered by the licence-fee. But in the present case services such as those specified by the learned Judge cannot be supplied nor are any services supplied to it that are at all analogous to them. In fact the panchayat supplies no services that are at all special to the respondent's company, while its President's suggestion that it may do so at some future time are quite nebulous. The very excessive fees then that it has sought to impose cannot be justified, and so they could not in any event be recovered under S. 212 (9).

The panchayat will have acted within its powers in directing that licences be taken for manufactures (1), (2) and (3) if those manufactures are found to be manufactures separately carried on, that are offensive or dangerous to human life or health or property. I understand that a contention for the respondent is that these manufactures are only parts of the sugar manufacture for which his company had long been taking out a licence and that what they produced are only by-products of the main manufactures. This is a point that I need not now consider as it should be decided first of all by the trial Court.

The acquittal of the respondent is set aside and the case will be sent back to the Subdivisional Magistrate, Cocanada, for proper disposal in the light of these remarks. What he has to decide is whether the notifications of the Taluk Board and Union Panchayat were orders that the respondent was legally bound to obey and the disobedience of which constituted an offence punishable under S. 207 read with Sch. 8. No question of recovery under S. 212 (9) will arise.

4. A I R 1931 P C 217=133 I C 724=58 I A 313=9 Rang 440 (P C).

P.R.S./K.S.

Case remanded.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 152

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

K. G. Ethirajulu Chettiar—Appellant.
v.

Official Receiver, East Tanjore, Negapatam—Respondent.

Appeal No. 226 of 1932, Decided on 3rd October 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Mayavaram, D/- 24th March 1932.

* (a) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 52—Immovable property which is not attached is not in the possession of Court within the section.

Property which is not attached cannot be said to be in the possession of the Court within the meaning of S. 52. Therefore property, which a judgment-creditor is seeking to bring to sale, on the ground that the decree creates a charge upon it, is not property in the possession of the Court, and the interim receiver cannot have the sale stopped under the section: A. I. R. 1932 Mad. 95; A. I. R. 1928 Bom. 177 and A. I. R. 1929 Cal. 524, Ref. [P 153 C 1]

* (b) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 52—Decree creating a charge—Property brought to sale in execution—Order under S. 52 stopping sale is not appealable—Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 2 and 47.

Where a property over which a charge is created by a decree is brought to sale in execution of the decree and the sale is stopped under S. 52, Insolvency Act, on the application of the interim receiver, the order stopping the sale is neither a decree nor an order under S. 47, Civil P. C., and hence it is not appealable. [P 153 C 1, 2]

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115—Discretion to treat appeal as civil revision.

Where the lower Court passes a non-appealable order which it had no jurisdiction to pass and which infringes the plain provisions of law and an appeal is filed from such order, the Court can treat the appeal as a civil revision. [P 153 C 2]

T. R. Venkatarama Sastri and K. P. Mahadeva Ayyar—for Appellant.

C. A. Seshagiri Sastry and K. S. Desikan—for Respondent.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The lower Court has held that the decree is invalid for want of registration under S. 17, Registration Act, and Mr. Venkatarama Sastri contends this view is wrong. It is unnecessary to consider this point on account of the opinion we have formed on another question that has been raised. A few facts bearing on that question may be stated. The appellant filed a suit (C. S. No. 164 of 1931) in the High Court on its original side for the recovery of a certain sum of money. That suit was compromised by the defendant agreeing to pay a certain specified amount, which was declared to constitute a charge on some immovable property. It was also stipulated that in default of payment of the sum the property itself should be sold. In pursuance of this compromise a decree was passed, which after stating that the immovable property set forth in the schedule thereto should be security for the payment of the amount mentioned, went on to provide that in default of payment the plaintiff was to be at liberty to bring the property to sale in execution of the decree itself. This decree was passed in April 1931, and in June the plaintiff (appellant) got it transferred to the lower Court for execution as the property charged by the decree was situated within the jurisdiction of that Court. In July 1931 a petition was filed for adjudicating the defendant an insolvent, and the respondent was appointed interim receiver in the insolvency. In September 1931 the appellant filed an execution petition in the lower Court applying for the sale of the property, which was charged by the decree. He also applied that the interim receiver should be impleaded as defendant 2 in the suit. The latter did not oppose the application and was accordingly impleaded as a party. The proclamation of sale was in due course settled, and the sale was finally fixed for 21st March 1932. In the meantime, on 12th March the interim receiver applied to the executing Court under S. 52, Prov. Insol. Act, that the sale should be stopped and that other suitable relief should be granted.

Mr. Venkatarama Sastri on these facts contends that S. 52 is inapplicable. The gist of the interim receiver's application is that the decree of the High Court was ineffectual, not having been registered and that it did not therefore have the effect of making the plaintiff a secured creditor. The section provides as to what should be done, where a decree being under execution, the executing Court is informed that a petition to declare the judgment-debtor as insolvent has been admitted. The executing Court, the section says, shall direct the property of the debtor against which execution has issued, if in the possession of the Court, to be delivered to the receiver. Mr. Venkatarama Sastri's contention is that the property in question was not in the possession of the Court and that the section therefore is inapplicable. The words "if in the possession of the Court" have given rise to some difficulty. If what is attached is moveable property, there can be no doubt that it is the property in the possession of the Court. As immovable property under the procedure obtaining in India is not attached by seizure, some doubts were expressed whether such property can be said to be property in the possession of the Court. In Sivasami Odayar v. Subramania Aiyar (1), a Bench of this Court, after referring to Mahasukh Jhavadas v. Valibhai Fatubhai (2), and Haranchandra Chakravarti v. Joychand (3) reluctantly came to the conclusion that immovable property under attachment must be held to come within the terms of the section. But at any rate there is no warrant for holding that property, which is not even attached, is in the possession of the Court. By no fiction of law can it be held, that the property which a judgment-creditor is seeking to bring to sale, on the ground that the decree creates a charge upon it, is property in the possession of the Court. S. 52 does not therefore apply, and the lower Court should not have allowed the interim receiver's application.

A preliminary objection has been taken that the appeal is incompetent. The interim receiver, as I have pointed out, was impleaded as a party to the suit in execution. But his application cannot be treated as falling within S. 47, Civil P. C. In making the application he cannot be deemed to have represented the judgment-debtor; for the right he put forward was a paramount one, being that of the general body of creditors. Mr. Venkatarama Sastri in the circumstances did not seriously contend that this should be treated as an appeal filed from an order made under S. 47, Civil P. C. The interim receiver by reason of a statutory right conferred upon him by S. 52, Prov.

Insol. Act, made the application in question to the lower Court, and against an order made in such a proceeding, no appeal is provided. Such an order comes neither under S. 47 nor falls within the definition of "decree" in the Code. To give effect to Mr. Venkatarama Sastri's contention, we must be prepared to convert the appeal into a civil revision petition. The question then is, can we in the exercise of our discretion treat this appeal as a civil revision petition? We are prepared to so treat it, as the lower Court has infringed the plain provision of S. 52 and had no jurisdiction to make the order in question. The order of the lower Court is accordingly set aside, but in the circumstances we direct the appellant to pay the respondent's costs of this appeal.

Reilly, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./K.S.

Order set aside.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 153

CURGENVEN, J.

(Yerramilli) Satyanarainarao and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

(Guna) Venkataswami and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1347 of 1926, Decided on 30th April 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Narsapur, in A. S. No. 140 of 1924.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47—Execution sale—Decree-holder becoming auction-purchaser—Possession is taken as auction-purchaser.

When the auction purchaser and the decree-holder are combined in one person in an execution sale it is plainly qua auction-purchaser and not qua decree-holder that he gets possession of the property sold by auction. [P 155 C 1]

(b) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 116—Execution sale—Auction purchasers getting no lawful delivery but selling that property to plaintiff—Sale deed laying down that vendor to give plaintiff lawful delivery after getting sale certificate from Court—Failure to do so—Judgment-debtor setting up adverse possession—Plaintiff suing for return of consideration—Art. 116 applied—Time would run when vendor became incapable of fulfilling his undertaking.

The defendants were the auction-purchasers in an execution sale on a decree in a different suit but had not got the lawful delivery of the property sold. The plaintiff got a sale deed of the said property from the defendants. The judgment-debtor in decree on which execution sale was held pleaded adverse possession. The plaintiff then sued the defendants for the recovery of the property or return of the consideration paid by him to the defendants. There was a clause in the sale deed as under: "We shall

1. A I R 1932 Mad 95=136 I C 238=55 Mad 316.

2. A I R 1928 Bom 177=109 I C 152.

3. A I R 1929 Cal 524=123 I C 737=57 Cal 122.

put in an application for delivery and give delivery to you. Afterwards we shall bring from the Court the said receipt for delivery, and the certificate and give the same to you. You will have to bear the charges for the said delivery."

Held: that Art. 116 applied to such cases. That no time was fixed within which delivery was to be given, and although it was true that the plaintiff might at any time after the execution of the sale deed have sued to enforce delivery under it, so that time would have begun to run for such a suit from the date of contract, yet under the circumstances of the case the cause of action for refund of the purchase money would not have simultaneously arisen but would only have become available when the vendors became incapable of carrying out their undertaking. Before that occasion arose the vendees could not have sued, alleging a breach of the contract of title, for the return of the purchase money: A I R 1915 Mad 708 and 26 Bom 750, Dist.

[P 156 C 1]

(c) Limitation—Plaint amended—Question as to limitation—Civil P. C., O. 6, R. 17.

The amendment of a plaint relates back to the date of institution of the suit with regard to a question of limitation: 36 Mad 378; 19 Mad 425; A I R 1921 P C 50 and 33 Bom 641, Rel. on.

[P 156 C 2]

P. Somasundaram—for Appellants.

C. Rama Rao, M. Appa Rao and K. Ramamurthi—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This second appeal is preferred by plaintiffs 2 to 5 as the legal representatives of the deceased first plaintiff. Defendant 1, now also deceased, mortgaged the suit property to defendant 11 who obtained a decree upon it in O. S. No. 484 of 1903. The property was brought to sale and was purchased by defendant 12, who is said to be a clerk of defendant 11 benami for his employer. That sale was confirmed on 4th November 1908 but no attempt was made to secure delivery through the Court. On 21st July 1909 the first plaintiff took a sale deed of the suit property from defendants 11 and 12, and this was attested by defendant 1, the judgment-debtor. It is said that on the same occasion cowles were executed to defendant 4 who is a divided brother of defendant 1, and to defendants 9 and 10, sons of a brother of defendant 1's wife. There is a promissory note, Ex. E, filed in evidence said to have been executed by these lessees at the same time and place in respect of an advance of money for cultivation expenses. A few days later, on 4th August 1909, the plaintiff leased the property, under a registered lease-deed, Ex. B, to those same lessees for a term of five years. He brought the present suit because those lessees have repudiated his title and set up the adverse title of defendant 1 against it. The relief prayed for was either the recovery of the property or the return of the consideration paid by him to defendants 11 and 12.

The learned District Munsif who tried the case came to the conclusion that neither the first plaintiff nor his vendors ever had possession of the suit property, which had remained throughout with defendants 1 to 3. Accordingly he found that the suit to recover possession was barred by S. 47, Civil P. C. He further found that these latter defendants had had possession adversely for more than the statutory period, so that if a suit had lain it would be barred by limitation. The learned Subordinate Judge who first heard the appeal from that decision agreed with the District Munsif on the question of possession and of the applicability of S. 47. He gave the plaintiff a decree for the refund of the purchase money. The case then came up in second appeal to this Court and the learned Judge who heard it found it necessary to remand it to the lower appellate Court for a re-hearing of the first appeal. The grounds for adopting this course were twofold. In the first place it was found that the lower appellate Court, in dealing with the question of transfer of possession, had neglected to consider the documents Exs. B, C, D and E. In the second place exception was taken to the finding with regard to limitation. Upon a re-hearing by the lower appellate Court the latter question has been decided in favour of the plaintiff. The learned Subordinate Judge's observations upon the former question are contained in para. 7 and 10 of his judgment.

In para. 7 he mentions various considerations bearing upon the question of delivery but records no explicit finding upon that point. He then goes on to consider the applicability of S. 47 as though he had finally disposed of the question of fact whether or not delivery had taken place, because it cannot be contended that if delivery had taken place, S. 47 would have application. Later on, in para. 10 he deals with the specific point which arises from the attestation of the sale deed by defendant 1, declining to draw any inference from that circumstance that defendant 1 had agreed to deliver possession of the land. It appears to me that the parts of the judgment which deal with this question are open to the criticism firstly that no clear and definite finding is recorded whether at the time when Ex. A was executed there was in substance and in fact a delivery of the property, to the plaintiff and secondly—and this I think a more grave defect—that the direction issued by this Court, when the second appeal came on for hearing, that the four documents, Exs. B, C, D and E, should be taken into account in disposing of the question of delivery appears to have received no attention whatever. The most that can be said is that there is an inconclusive allusion to Ex. B in para. 10 of the judgment. I must hold accordingly that my learned brother Devadoss, J's direction has substantially not been complied with.

As a legal argument against the further investigation of the fact of delivery I am asked to hold that there can be no valid delivery of property after a Court auction unless there has been a certification to and recognition by the executing Court of the transfer of possession. In other words an endeavour is made to bring the circumstances within the terms of O. 21 R. 2, Civil P. C. I am unable to agree that this rule has any application to such circumstances. Even if it had, the only penalty would be that which is prescribed in sub-R. (3), namely, that the Court would not recognize the adjustment. The rule does not say that the delivery itself would be null and void. But I think that the application of the rule can only be sustained by means of an argument which confounds auction-purchaser with decree-holder. When the two are combined in one person, it is plainly qua auction-purchaser and not qua decree-holder that he gets possession, and that act does not therefore constitute satisfaction of the decree. Such an application of the rule would enable a decree-holder who had once bought the property and received possession out of Court to apply all over again in execution which seems absurd. I think there is no substance in this argument.

The plaintiff's precise case has perhaps not been very clearly stated in the plaint or elsewhere. It appears to be that on the occasion of the execution of the sale deed possession was transferred to him by defendant 1 either through his vendors, defendants 11 and 12, or directly ; it cannot much matter which if, as alleged, all parties were present. As I have said, I cannot find that that question has been satisfactorily dealt with in the lower appellate Court and I cannot accede to the request that I should myself in these circumstances weigh the documentary evidence which that Court has omitted to take into consideration. Reluctant though I am therefore to extend the pendency of this protracted litigation, the only course that occurs to me as fair to the plaintiff is to remand the case for a second time for the determination of this question of delivery. I accordingly remand the case to the Subordinate Judge of Narsapur for a finding upon the issue :

"Whether the plaintiff obtained possession of the suit property from defendant 1, either directly or indirectly through defendants 11 and 12."

Accordingly as that question is settled the further question, whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover the price of the land from his vendors, may or may not arise for consideration. That question can accordingly be dealt with, if necessary, when the finding is returned. Time six weeks for the finding and seven days for objections. [In pursuance of the order contained in the above judgment, the Subordinate Judge of Narsapur submitted the following]

Finding.—I therefore find that plaintiff did not obtain possession of the land through defendant 1 directly or indirectly through defendants 11 and 12. [This second appeal coming on for final hearing after receipt of the finding from the lower appellate Court upon the issue referred by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following]

Judgment. — The learned Subordinate Judge finds upon the issue referred to him that the plaintiff did not obtain possession of the land either directly or indirectly through defendants 11 and 12. I accept this finding. The further question therefore arises whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover the price of the land from his vendors. The learned Subordinate Judge in the judgment delivered before the remand has held that this claim is barred by limitation. It is well settled by decisions of this Court that Art. 116, Lim. Act, applies to such a suit. The lower Court has taken the starting point to be the point of time from which the vendors were precluded from obtaining delivery, i. e. three years after the sale became absolute. Reckoning from this date, 4th November 1911, it finds that more than six years elapsed before the amendment of the plaint asking for this remedy was allowed. The correctness of this position, both as regards the terminus a quo and the terminus ad quem has been disputed before me. It is said in the first place that time began to run from the date of the sale, namely, 21st July 1909, and not from the date from which the vendors became unable to pass a good title. A reference to the sale deed will show that while in the earlier portion of it there is a recital that the vendors have put the plaintiff in possession of the land, this is contradicted by a clause at the end which runs :

"We shall put in an application for delivery and give delivery to you. Afterwards we shall bring from the Court the said receipt for delivery and the certificate and give the same to you. You will have to bear the charges for the said delivery."

I think that it was this latter arrangement which the parties intended to be operative. No time was fixed within which delivery was to be given, and although it is true that the plaintiff might at any time after the execution of the sale-deed have sued to enforce delivery under it, so that time would begin to run for such a suit from the date of contract, I think that the learned Subordinate Judge is right in holding that the cause of action for refund of the purchase money would not simultaneously arise, but would only become available when the vendors became incapable of carrying out their undertaking. Before that occasion arose I do not think that the vendees could have sued, alleging a breach of the contract of title, for the return of the purchase money. The point does not seem to be covered by authority, none of the types of cases referred to in Subbaroya Reddiar v. Rajagopala Reddiar (1) being on all fours with this one. In Tulsiram v. Murlidhar (2) the facts constituted a partial failure of consideration and time began to run under Art. 97 from the time of that failure. In the present case there was neither failure nor anything analogous to failure, at any rate until the vendors lost the power to give delivery. I think accordingly that the lower Court is right in finding that time ran only from 4th November 1911.

I cannot however find any justification for its view that time should run up to the date of amendment of the plaint. Upon such an amendment of a plaint being allowed, whether or not it involves any question of limitation, it is well enough settled that the amendment relates back to the date of institution of the suit. This is the basis for such decision as Sevugan Chetty v. Krishna Ayyangar (3), Cursetji Pestonjee v. Dadhabai Eduljee (4), Charan Das v. Amir Khan (5) and Kisandas Rupchand v. Rachappa Vithoba (6). The respondents have attempted to meet this point by the plea that they were given no opportunity to contest the propriety of the amendment applied for. The only basis upon which this rests lies in the terms of the order which the District Munsif passed: "No objection. Allowed subject to objections." It is said that objections may pursuant to this order be at any time taken, but it appears to me that whatever opportunity may have existed after the date of that order has long since gone by. At the trial of the suit itself and notwithstanding this amendment no issue was framed regarding its subject-matter. There was an appeal by the plaintiff and No. 13 of his grounds of appeal complains that the lower Court had altogether ignored his alternative claim for the refund of the purchase money from defendants 11 and 12. Upon this appeal the Subordinate Judge's Court gave a decree for this refund. The judgment contains no allusion to any objections raised regarding the amendment of the plaint and it is to be inferred that no such objections were raised. The matter does not stop there because in the memorandum of second appeal filed by these respondents themselves, although they took exception to the decree for refund, no attempt was made to resist the claim on the specific ground now urged, that the plaint had

1. A I R 1915 Mad 708 = 23 I C 570 = 38 Mad 887.

2. (1902) 26 Bom 750 = 4 Bom L R 571.

3. (1913) 36 Mad 378 = 13 I C 268.

4. (1896) 19 Mad 425.

5. A I R 1921 P C 50 = 57 I C 606 = 47 I A 255 = 48 Cal 110 (P C).

6. (1903) 3 Bom 644 = 4 I C 726.

been amended without due notice being given to them. I can accordingly find no substance in this objection and must hold that time is to be reckoned up to the institution of the plaint. So reckoning it the claim is within time.

The appeal is accordingly allowed and the plaintiff will have a decree for the sum of Rs. 600, with interest at 6 per cent from the date of the District Munsif's decree (18th September 1919) with proportionate costs throughout. As against respondents 1 to 3 the second appeal is dismissed. The plaintiff will pay their costs of this appeal.

P.R.S./B.V. Appeal allowed.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 157

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Gurusamy Goundan—Appellant.

v.

Sivanmalai Goundan and others — Respondents.

Appeal No. 477 of 1929, Decided on 12th September 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Coimbatore, D/- 28th March 1929.

 (a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 2—Uncertified adjustment cannot be pleaded in execution even by assignee of decree-holder.

An uncertified adjustment cannot be pleaded in execution even when an assignee from the decree-holder applies for recognition of the assignment and execution; and it does not matter even if the judgment-debtor pleads not a direct payment but an indirect payment through another his vendee, in satisfaction of the decree: A I R 1932 Mad 372 (F.B.), Foll; A I R 1930 Mad 673 and 35 Mad 659, (Per Abdur Rahim, J.), Foll. [P 157 C 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, Rr. 15 and 2—Execution application by one of joint decree-holders — Objection by other decree-holders that application is a fraud—Court can disallow execution.

Where one of the joint decree-holders applies for execution of the decree fraudulently behind the back of the other decree-holders, the Court can, on the objection of the other decree-holders, disallow execution notwithstanding O. 21, R. 2. [P 158 C 1]

V. Balasundaram—for Appellant.

K. V. Ramachandra Ayyar and T. M. Krishnaswamy Ayyar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—Three persons Sivanmalai, Chidambara and Amarapathi Goundan, obtained a mortgage decree against one Ammani Ammal. She sold lands to Palayakottai Pattakarar, and part of the purchase price was paid by him in satisfaction of the decree. Sivanmalai and Chidambara were satisfied, and state in their affidavit that nothing more was due. The third decree-holder Amarapathi however assigned his right to one Gurusami Goundan and he applied to execute the decree by sale of the hypotheca after recognizing his assignment.

The Subordinate Judge has found these facts to be true, and we see no reason not to accept his finding. As he says, Amarapathi Goundan got a final decree fraudulently behind the back of the judgment-debtor and other decree-holders. Accordingly he dismissed the petition and Gurusami Goundan appeals.

The appellant contends that Ammani Ammal has no right to plead against his application an uncertified adjustment. We entirely agree. It makes no difference that Gurusami Goundan is not an original decree-holder but his assignee applying for recognition; because it has now been clearly held by a Full Bench that in such circumstances O. 21, R. 2 is still operative: N. Subramanyam v. D. Ramaswami (1). Nor in our opinion does it make any difference that Ammani Ammal is not pleading a direct payment by herself, but a payment through her vendee as satisfaction of the decree. The law in this matter has been left in an unfortunate state. In Rama Ayyan v. Srinivasa Pattar (2) a single Judge held that if the transaction subsequently pleaded by an adjustment was by some person other than the decree-holder, O. 21, R. 2 or as it then was S. 258, Civil P. C., would not apply. If A, the judgment-debtor, transfers property to B on condition of his paying C, the judgment-creditor, then if B as subsequent assignee of the decree from C attempts to execute it A is not debarred by O. 21, R. 2 from pleading the uncertified adjustment.

This was approved by one member of the Bench in Ponnusami Nadar v. Letchmanan Chettiar (3) and dissented from by the other member Abdur Rahim, J., who held that by the plain language of O. 21, R. 2 the judgment-debtor would be precluded from pleading any such adjustment. One of us had occasion to consider the passage in Rama Ayyan v. Srinivasa Pattar (2) and Gopala Krishna Iyer v. Sankara Iyer (4),

1. A I R 1932 Mad 372=137 I C 28=55 Mad 720 (F B).

2. (1896) 19 Mad 220=5 M L J 218.

3. (1912) 35 Mad 659=12 Cr L J 567=12 I C 657.

4. A I R 1930 Mad 673=125 I C 543.

and held that as soon as the agreement, no matter whether it be between judgment-debtor and decree-holder or someone else, is pleaded as an adjustment, the mischief of O. 21, R. 2 is attracted. To this opinion we adhere and unhesitatingly endorse the view of Abdur Rahim, J., in Ponnusami Nadari v. Letchmanan Chettiar (3). Therefore Ammani Ammal in this case cannot plead an adjustment which she has not troubled to certify under O. 21, R. 2.

But the present case is not entirely between the assignee decree-holder and the judgment-debtor. There are the other two persons in whose favour the decree has been jointly passed, and in such circumstances the Court is allowed a large discretion under O. 21, R. 15. For one decree-holder to be doing the execution on behalf of all is a curious business which may well put the Court upon its guard; and the Code very sensibly warns the Court to find sufficient cause for allowing the decree to be executed. Under this provision there is no objection to the Court hearing what the other decree-holders have to say, though no doubt the judgment-debtor even under this section could not plead an uncertified adjustment. If the other decree-holders say, as they say in their present affidavit (16th November 1928), that the application of their fellow decree-holder is a fraud, nothing in O. 21, R. 2 or any other provision of law prevents the Court from disallowing execution, and in this case the Court has acted quite properly in doing so.

The appeal is dismissed with costs to respondents 1 to 4.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

* * A. I. R. 1933 Madras 158

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Muthukumara Sthapathiar — Appellant.

v.

Sivanarayana Pillai and another—Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 29 of 1927, Decided on 20th September 1932, against judgment of Devadoss, J., reported in A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 1084.

* * Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation of coparcener's share—Alienee's right is a fluctuating one—Family property as at the time of suit and not as at the time of alienation should be taken.

Though alienation of a coparcener's share is inconsistent with Hindu law, on principles of equity, the alienee is given a right limited to compelling the partition which his debtor might have compelled had he been so minded before the alienation of his share took place: 3 Cal. 198 (P.C.), Foll.; 5 Cal. 148 (P.C.), Ref.

[P 159 C 1]

This right of the alienee is a fluctuating one, the only exception recognized being that it does not become extinct on the death of the alienor coparcener. And in a suit for partition, the family property as existing on the date of the suit and not as existing on the date of alienation should be taken: 14 Mad. 408 (F.B.), Foll.; 35 Mad. 47 (F.B.), not Foll.; Case law discussed.

[P 162 C 1, 2]

K. Rajah Ayyar and V. Ramaswami Ayyar—for Appellant.

T. M. Ramaswami Ayyar—for Respondents.

Jackson, J.—The facts are set forth in the judgment under appeal and need not be restated in detail. The defendant is alienee from a brother in a Hindu joint family and by virtue of the alienation defendant got into possession of a certain parcel of land. The rest of the joint family property was dissipated, and then plaintiff, the other brother, sued for partition of this parcel. The District Munsif dismissed his suit. The Subordinate Judge decreed him a moiety. A single Judge of this Court again dismissed the suit, and plaintiff appeals under the Letters Patent. The parties agree that at the time of the alienation the defendant purchased the right to compel partition of the brother's share as it then stood. The plaintiff reads this as meaning that one-half was purchased, and from the property existing at the time of the partition suit defendant can take that half. The defendant would read into it something more, that he purchased not only the right to the fractional share, but the right to divide the family property as it stood on the date of alienation. But mathematically it may be said that plaintiff concedes that defendant a half, and defendant claims X/2. It is a question which, as the authorities abundantly show, cannot be decided by pure law or logic.

That alienations of a coparcener's share are inconsistent with Hindu law is laid down by the Privy Council in Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Persad Singh (1), at p. 166, referred to by Arnold White, C.J., in Chinna Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetty (2), at pp. 52 and 56, and Sankaran Nair, J.,

1. (1880) 5 Cal. 148=6 I A 88=1 Sar 1 (P.C.).

2. (1912) 35 Mad 47=9 I C 596 (F.B.).

on p. 56. But it was held that in equity a person who had parted with his money should receive something in exchange, and therefore in Deendyal Lal v. Jugdeep Narain Singh (3), the alienee was given a right limited to compelling the partition which his debtor might have compelled had he been so minded before the alienation of his share took place. In Hardi Narain Sahu v. Ruder Perakash (4), the Privy Council interprets this in the sense that:

"only that passed which the father, the person against whom the decree was obtained, had."

A very natural proposition, if one may say so, that a man cannot sell more than he has got,

"not the share in the property, but the right which the father would have to a partition."

Of course this right to a partition terminates upon death; and a coparcener always holds the right subject to this contingency. So, if the decree-holder literally bought only what his vendor had, he bought the right of partition subject to this contingency, and when his vendor died he would have no right at all. That seems to be hard logic, and in Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Pershad Singh (1) the alienee was allowed the right even after the death of the alienor. "In Madras," the Privy Council observes on p. 173:

"the mortgage executed by the alienor in his 'lifetime' might operate after his death as a valid charge;"

and in the Bengal case under consideration it holds that the execution proceedings had gone so far as to constitute a valid charge which could not be defeated by death before the actual sale. If this is so, it is a clear departure from the dictum that an alienor could only sell what he had. He had a right subject to the contingency of death, and he sold a right not subject to the contingency of his death. This difficulty was pressed upon the referring Judges in Rangasami v. Krishnayyan (5), and they thought that in logic the alienee would be subject to all contingencies such as births diminishing his alienor's share, and his alienor's death obliterating that share. They referred to a Full Bench the question "to what share in the property is the plaintiff entitled." The Full Bench held that the purchaser takes an uncertain and fluctuating interest. It did not decide what would be the effect of death, but observed obiter that because the interests carved out at the sale vest in the purchaser at once, the subsequent death of the vendee cannot divest the interest which has once vested. On this line of reasoning the other subsequent contingencies such as births into the coparcenary might, it may be thought, have been treated as not affecting the vested interest; however the Full Bench held that the alienated share is affected by subsequent births, and is to be reckoned with reference to the joint family as it stands at the time of the suit for partition and not as it stood at the time of alienation. In Hardi Narain Sahu v. Ruder Perakash Misser (4) the family consisted of father, mother and minor son. The father alienated his share and then made over his interest to his son who sued the alienee for possession.

3. (1877) 3 Cal 198=4 I A 247=3 Sar 730=3 Suther 468 (P C).

4. (1884) 10 Cal 626=11 I A 26=4 Sar 510 (P C).

5. (1891) 14 Mad 408=1 M L J 603 (F B).

The Calcutta High Court treating it as a suit for partition decreed that the minor, the mother, and the father's alienee should each have one-third. The alienee appealed claiming a half. It is not quite clear upon what he based this plea, but apparently (p. 633) Mr. Doyne on his behalf, while conceding that the mother would in Bengal be entitled to one-third on partition, argued that before partition she only had a maintenance right, and probably claimed that the alienee had carved out interests at the sale which would vest in him at once, the language of the obiter upon death in the Madras Full Bench case. The Privy Council quoted (p. 635-6) the passage already cited from Deendyal Lal v. Jugdeep Narain Singh (3), "only that passed which the father had" and also quoted

"so long as Bhagwa lived the alienee had an interest in the property which entitled him to demand a partition," and it then proceeds:

"The interest which is purchased is not, as Mr. Doyne argued, the share at that time in the property, but it is the right which the father, the debtor, would have to a partition, and what would come to him upon the partition being made. That is the answer to Mr. Doyne's argument that the father was entitled to a half."

Then it seems to have been suggested that in any case the Calcutta High Court did wrong to decree partition, and the rights of a second son who had been born into the family should be considered. The Privy Council agreed that the decree was not proper, but the person appealing was the alienee, not the minor and as the decree for partition gave him a more favourable decree than he may have been entitled to, and as no one was urging that he should have less than what the decree gave him (there was no cross-appeal) there was no ground for altering it.

The question whether the alienee's suit was maintainable after the alienor's death came directly before our Court in Aiyagari v. Ramayya (6), Davies, J., was inclined to follow Rangasami v. Krishnayyan (5), to its logical conclusion, holding that death was a contingency operating on the purchaser's fluctuating interest. Benson, J., thought that the point was decided by authority. They referred the question whether the suit was maintainable to a Full Bench. Arnold White, C. J. and Moore, J., agreed with Benson, J., that there was authority for an affirmative answer, and preferred simply stare decisis. Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., took the opportunity to traverse the whole question, and expressed the opinion that Rangaswami v. Krishnayyan (5) was wrongly decided. He quotes (p. 705) the definition of the alienee's right in Deendyal Lal v. Jugdeep Narain Singh (3), which has also been quoted above, and puts into his own italics the words "before the alienation of his share takes place." There does not seem to be any warrant for this special emphasis. In this case there was no question of fluctuating interest, and the sentence might have stopped with "compelling the partition which his debtor might have compelled" without injury to its sense. Even if "before the alienation of his share" has special significance, which I doubt at most it is a mere obiter on a question not discussed in the case, and upon which it would be most dangerous to build. Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., next discusses Suraj Bunsu Koer v. Sheo Pershad Singh (1) and then Hardi Narain Sahu v. Ruder Parkash Misser (4), which he summarizes in this manner, p. 709 :

"During the pendency of the suit another son was born to the judgment-debtor and it was contended before the High Court that a share should be allotted to such son also The High Court overruled this contention. . . . The case was carried in appeal to the Privy Council by the purchaser the decision of the Privy Council proceeds on the footing that neither the birth of the second son nor the death of the mother affected the share to which the purchaser became entitled.

As I have shown above the Privy Council, so far from making this the footing or basis of its decision, absolutely declined to go into the matter. Lastly Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., notices Madho Pershad v. Mehrban Singh (7), where the Judicial Committee ruled in unequivocal terms that the death of the alienor Zalim renders it impossible to order partition and charge his divided share with the money paid him by the alienee. But this was distinguished by the Full Bench as referring only to the Mitakshara law obtaining in Oudh. Then on p. 713 Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., gives it as his opinion that the actual decision in Rangasami v. Krishnayyan (5) "is opposed to the principle on which the above decisions of the Privy Council proceed." But, as pointed out above, Deendyal Lal v. Jugdeep Narain Singh (3), is only applicable if emphasis is given to special words, and Hardi Narain Sahu v. Ruder Parkash Misser (4), is not applicable at all. If Suraj Bunsu Koer v. Sheo Pershad Singh (1) is authority for the proposition that death does not affect the alienee's right, that proposition is not founded there on any principle, but emphasis rather is laid on the peculiar circumstances of that case where execution had proceeded almost up to sale. However, when the question of fluctuation came directly before the referring Judges in Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetty (2), they declined to accept the authority of Rangaswami v. Krishnayyan (5), and, thinking that the doubts entertained by Bhashyam Ayyangar, J. were well founded, they referred to a Full Bench the question, whether the mortgagee of a Hindu is entitled to proceed against the share of a son subsequently born in family property mortgaged by him. A Bench of five Judges was constituted so that if necessary it might overrule the Bench of four which decided Rangaswami v. Krishnayyan (5). But unfortunately one of these five dropped out and the Bench as finally constituted only contained four.

Sir Arnold White, C. J., quotes (p. 52) with approval the view of the referring Judges in Rangaswami v. Krish-

6. (1902) 25 Mad 690 (F B).

7. (1894) 18 Cal 157=17 I A 194 (P O).

nayyan (5), but says that it is a position which the Full Bench declined to accept. But as he shows immediately afterwards the Full Bench did accept the position so far as to rule that the purchaser takes an uncertain and fluctuating interest. What they did was to modify this rule by suggesting obiter two exceptions where the fluctuation has worked out to the benefit of the alienee by his alienor's share increasing on the death of the other members of the coparcenary and where the share might seem to be obliterated by the alienor's death. The learned Chief Justice then points out, as I have observed above, that the argument for excepting death might serve to except any fluctuation. He next refers to Aiyyagari v. Ramayya (6) which settled, for this presidency, that death is an exception, and concludes :

"It seems to me that when once it is held that the death of the alienor does not create any right of survivorship to the other coparceners, it follows almost as a necessary corollary that the quantum of interest which vests in the alienee is not affected by subsequent changes in the number of coparceners."

This is good logic ; but it is equally good logic to say that if the alienor only sells what he has got and no more, it follows as a necessary corollary that the interest of the alienee fluctuates. We start with the principle "only that passed which the alienor had." We recognize an arbitrary exception that death does not diminish the alienee's right ; then we make the exception itself the principle, and turning round at that point, conclude that something passed which the alienor had not got. A vicious circle. Either view is rational, but it is impossible to pick out one of them as exclusively based either on law or on logic.

Benson, J., accepted and treated as the principal part of his judgment the description of Hardai Narayan Sahu v. Ruder Prakash Misser (4), given by Bhashyam Ayyangar, J., in Ayyagiri v. Ramayya (6).

Munro, J., confined himself to a simple affirmative. Sankaran Nair, J., pointed out that in sheer logic, if one fluctuation such as death could not affect the alienee's right, then no fluctuation would affect it. The question was not dependent on Hindu law. In equity Ayyagiri v. Ramayya (6) should be approved, and in equity the alienee should not be given more than he had at the time of the alienation. It is more consistent with the equitable principles to hold that the purchaser gets the share which his vendor was entitled to at the time of alienation rather than that he gets a fluctuating share and he reaches the same conclusion as I have reached, that there is no final decision on the point to be found in the Privy Council cases. So it is held by this Bench that the alienee's share, does not fluctuate, but is to be reckoned as from the date of the alienation. Four Judges therefore have held that the share does, and four have held that it does not fluctuate.

In this state of the law the respondent contends that Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetty (2) and Ramaswamy Ayyar v. Venkatarama Ayyar (8), authorize him to work out a partition as on the date of the alienation. Ramaswamy Ayyar v. Venkatarama Ayyar (8) merely makes what was condoned in Hardai Narain Sahu v. Ruder Perkes Misser (4), a rule of practice allowing Courts to decree partition in a suit for recovery of possession and has no bearing upon the theoretical problem. The appellant relies upon Manjaya Mudali v. Shanmuga (9), where the recognized law is clearly stated, and Bakewell, J., points out that the right of the alienee is in personam and not in rem. This judgment would have afforded useful material for answering Mr. Doyne in Suraj Bunsu Koer v. Sheo Pershad Singh (1), and meets the theory that the share is something more material than a mere fraction. In Subba Goundan v. Krishnamachari (10), at p. 460 (of 45 Mad.), it is held that a purchaser has only an equity as against the other members of the coparcenary to work out his interests by a suit for general partition. It is not suggested that his equity extends to working out a partition as from the date of the alienation; nor indeed do I find this suggested anywhere except in the judgment under appeal. Devadoss, J., thinks it well settled by Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetty (2), that the time at which the share of the alienating brother should be determined is the date of the alienation. I agree so far as the bare amount of the share, the fraction is concerned. But in that case it was never considered that the hotchpot should be taken as that which existed on the date of alienation. That question was never raised. Then his Lordship cites Ramasami Aiyar v. Venkatarama Ayyar (8) without showing it to have greater import than I have found it to have. So that in effect this judgment is simply based upon what the learned Judge thinks would be equitable, and considering the state of law, no other basis is possible.

8. A I R 1924 Mad 81=75 I C 403=46 Mad 815.

9. A I R 1914 Mad 440=22 I C 555=38 Mad 684.

10. A I R 1922 Mad 112=68 I C 869=45 Mad 449.

It remains for us to see if we agree with this view of equity. In my opinion the most equitable and logical view of this vexed question is that the alienor cannot part with more than he has got; that is a basic principle which I can understand, and I should have been quite prepared to hold that as the right of the alienor becomes extinct upon his death, the right of the alienee becomes extinct also. However the contrary opinion is founded upon a long series of cases and I agree with the Full Bench in Aiyyagiri v. Ramayya (6), that even at that date it was too late to think of upsetting it. So the contingency of death stands as an arbitrary exception to the rule that the right is fluctuating. But I see no reason to import other exceptions, and prefer the decision of the four Judges in Rangasami v. Krishnayyan (5) to the decision of the four Judges in Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetty (2). The former decision is logical, and quite equitable, for the alienee has only himself to thank if by delaying his right to compel partition he finds his security diminished.

Holding this view I find no basis for the proposition that when he does compel partition the alienee's right to the property must be worked out as from the date of the alienation. And even if I agree with Chinnu Pillai v. Kalimuthu Chetty (2), that the share ceases to fluctuate from the date of alienation, I should not be prepared to go further and say that there must be a hotchpot hooked to the same date. Such a theory would be very cumbersome to work out in practice, for the Court might have to take into account transactions which had long passed beyond the memory of the parties. It is troublesome enough dealing with the present day actualities of a partition suit. I therefore hold that the appellant is entitled to take the family property as existing on the date of his suit. This restores the decree of the Subordinate Judge and the appeal is allowed with costs of both appeals in this Court.

Mockett, J. — I entirely agree. I would only add that on a close examination of the cases cited there does not appear to be an exact authority covering the point which we have had to consider. I concur with the view of my learned brother that equity is best served by taking the property of the family as it stands at the date of the partition suit.

P R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 162

PANDALAI, J.

(Kilaru) Gangaiya and another—Defendants—Petitioners.

v.

(Kilaru) China Lingaiya—Plaintiff—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1863 of 1930, Decided on 27th April 1931, against order of Dist. Munsif, Narasaraopet, D/- 24th October 1930.

Stamp Act (1899), S. 2 (15)—Partition list which does not itself effect partition, but is agreement for effecting future partition on terms agreed is liable to stamp duty under Art. 4, Sch. 1 (a) and not S. 2 (15)—Stamp Act (Madras), Sch. 1 (a), Art. 4.

A partition list which does not itself effect any division, but is merely an agreement for effecting a future partition on terms agreed, is not an instrument of partition within the meaning of S. 2 (15) and is liable to stamp duty as an agreement under Art. 4, Sch. 1 (a). [P 162 C 2]

V. Pattabhirama Sastri — for Petitioners.

Judgment.—The partition list is not an instrument of partition within the meaning of S. 2 (15), Stamp Act, because it did not itself effect any division as the agreement for a subsequent stamped and registered instrument shows, but was an agreement for effecting a future partition on the terms agreed. The document is liable to stamp duty and penalty as an agreement under Art. 4, Sch. 1 (a), Madras Act 6 of 1922. The order of the District Munsif is varied accordingly. No costs.

P.R.S./V.B.

Order varied.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 163

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Ramasamy Padayachy—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Thiruvengada Padayachy and others—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 780 of 1928, Decided on 21st September 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Cuddalore, in A. S. No. 49 of 1926.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100—Finding of fact—Omission by lower Court to consider important evidence and application of erroneous presumptions of law—Finding of fact can be challenged in second appeal.

Although the High Court does not ordinarily interfere in findings of fact in second appeal, yet, if the lower Court has omitted to consider evidence which is important and in considering the evidence which it has examined, it has applied erroneous presumption of law, then the finding may be called into question in second appeal and the lower Court may be asked to submit a fresh finding. [P 163 C 2]

(b) Hindu Law—Debt—Widow—Widow is not bound to discharge husband's debt from income of property.

There is no rule of law that it is the duty of the widow to discharge the debt of her deceased husband from the income of her property: 18 I C 953, Rel. on. [P 164 C 1]

T. V. Muthukrishna Ayyar—for Appellant.

T. E. Ramabhadrachariar and S. Jagadisa Ayyar—for Respondents.

Order.—Defendant 1 is the appellant. One Subbaraya Padayachi died in 1872. His son Kuppusami died in 1879. After his death, his mother, Sengamalatham, inherited the properties, and she executed two documents: Ex. 1, dated 1890 and Ex. 2, dated 1917. In this second appeal we are concerned only with Ex. 1. This was executed in favour of defendant 1's father. Two items of consideration are mentioned in that document which are evidenced by Exs. 1-b and 1-a. The document also recites that a sum of Rs. 212 was borrowed by her from the mortgagee for the expenses of litigation in connexion with O. S. 48 of 1882 filed by her. The present suit out of which this second appeal arises has been filed by the plaintiffs, the reversioners, to set aside this alienation as not binding on them. The question is whether Ex. 1 is binding on the reversion. The District Munsif found against the plaintiffs on this question, but this finding was set aside by the Subordinate Judge.

Mr. Muthukrishna Ayyar has argued before me that the finding of the Subordinate Judge should not be accepted inasmuch as he does not notice some important circumstances in connexion with the evidence and has not attached sufficient importance to certain other aspects of the evidence. Ordinarily, this Court does not interfere on findings of fact in second appeal, but if the learned Judge has omitted to consider evidence which is important and in considering the evidence which he has examined he has applied erroneous presumptions of law, then, I think, the finding may be called into question and the lower Court may be asked to submit a fresh finding. The document in this case is 37 years old. Both the Courts have treated it as an ancient document though the appellate Court does not attach much importance to the ancient character of it having regard to the other circumstances in the case. It has been attested by plaintiff 3. In considering the question whether the document will be binding on the reversion, an attestation by one of the reversioners would certainly be a relevant piece of evidence for the Courts to consider. The learned District Munsif refers to this attestation and draws his own conclusion in support of the binding nature of the document, but there is no reference to this piece of evidence in the judgment of the Subordinate Judge. This is a grave omission. Of course, it is open to the learned Judge to say for sufficient reasons, that he is not prepared to attach any value to the evidence afforded by the attestation, but it is necessary that this Court should be satisfied that the Judge paid attention to this item of evidence. As I have said he does not refer to the attestation of Ex. 1 by plaintiff 3 anywhere in his judgment. Another circumstance of some importance is the fact that in the arrangement Ex. 4, entered into between these plaintiffs, provision has been made for the payment of the debts of the deceased Subbaraya Padayachi. It is argued on behalf of the appellant that this is a very cogent piece of evidence from which inference may be drawn to the effect that the debts referred to in Ex. 1 must be binding debts; as otherwise the reversioners will not make any arrangement for the payment of such debts.

The District Munsif put Ex. 4 in the forefront of the discussion. The Subordinate Judge no doubt has referred to Ex. 4, but the reference to it is after he has made up his mind and concluded that the document in question is not binding on the reversion. He stated his conclusion in para. 29 and it is in para. 30 that he refers to Ex. 4. I think in considering the question whether the document is binding or not, Ex. 4 should have been referred to by him before he arrived at his conclusion on that point. The omission to so deal with Ex. 4 is also, I think, another defect in the finding arrived at by him.

Then in para. 21 the learned Judge indicates that in his opinion it is the duty of a widow to discharge the debts of her deceased husband from out of the income of the property. His opinion seems to be that there was income enough from the properties of the deceased Subbaraya which she might have used for paying off his debts and therefore the document, Ex. 1, is not binding. There is no rule of law that it is the duty of the widow to discharge the debt of her deceased husband from the income of the property. If authority were needed, reference may be made to the decision in B. Jagayya v. G. Appala Raju (1). As the learned Judge seems to have been influenced by this legal principle which is erroneous his conclusion on the main question cannot be accepted as satisfactory. There are various other reasons alleged by the Subordinate Judge in support of his conclusion. How those reasons will affect the main question when they are taken in connexion with these two or three points which I have referred to will be a question for consideration by the lower appellate Court to which I propose to send this case for a fresh finding.

I do not desire to express any opinion on the question argued before me lest it should embarrass the lower appellate Court in arriving at its conclusion; but I would refer to the use which the learned Judge has made of Ex. A-7 in discrediting Ex. 1-B. Ex. A-7 has been found to be a forged document by him because Ex. 1-B was produced along with Ex. A-7, so to say in the company of Ex. A-7, it does not follow that Ex. 1-B should also be taken to be a forged document. One more fact may be referred to, and it is this. The learned Judge does not independently consider in any of the paragraphs in his judgment whether Ex. 1-A evidences a debt binding on the reversion.

1. (1913) 18 1 C 953.

For the above reasons I set aside the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge on this question and ask the lower Court to submit a fresh finding on the question after considering the evidence oral and documentary bearing upon the point. The finding is to be submitted within six weeks after the receipt of this order. Ten days for objections. All the other questions arising in the second appeal are reserved for argument after the receipt of the finding.

Finding.—In this case the High Court has called for a fresh finding upon the question “whether Ex. 1 is binding on the reversion * * *.” On the whole I am unhesitatingly of opinion that Ex. 1 is wholly binding on the reversion and I find accordingly—(After the return of the finding of the lower appellate Court upon the point referred by this Court for trial, the Court delivered the following.)

Judgment.—I accept the finding that Ex. 1 is binding on the reversioners. It is argued that the widow had no power to alienate the property which she had inherited through the son to pay her husband's debt. This question was not raised in the pleadings or in the issues and it was not argued in the first Court though the appellate Judge discusses the question. In these circumstances I cannot allow the question to be raised now. The result is that the second appeal is allowed and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with respect to the properties covered by Ex. 1. Each party will bear its own costs throughout.

P.R.S./R.M. Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 164

PANDALAI, J.

Srinivasa Ayyangar — Defendant — Petitioner.

v.

Pichumani Ayyangar — Plaintiff —
Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 431 of 1929, Decided on 18th March 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Tinnevely, in S. C.
S. No. 532 of 1928.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 19, R. 1—Fact that Court admitting affidavit of plaintiff's next friend to prove pro-note and not calling him as witness is not illegal if there is no contention as to facts.

There is nothing illegal in a Court admitting proof of the execution of a pro-note by the affidavit of plaintiff's next friend instead of calling him as a witness into the witness-box and taking his deposition in open Court, when there is no contention as to the facts. [P 165 C 1]

K. V. Sesha Ayyangar—for Petitioner.

N. D. Varadachari — for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—The decree in this small cause suit was passed by the Subordinate Judge on a promissory note and contemporaneous agreement called a yadast. The defendant though served did not appear. The only ground urged in this petition is that the learned Judge erred in admitting proof of the execution of the note and yadast by the affidavit of plaintiff's next friend instead of calling him as a witness into the witness-box and taking his deposition in open Court. No objection on the merits of the claim is raised. In my opinion the ground urged is without any substance. O. 19, R. 1 enables any Court to order that any fact may be proved by affidavit and the proviso enables the Court to compel the attendance of the deponent in case of need. In Woodroffe and Ameer Ali it is stated that it is common practice to admit affidavits at the hearing when there is no contention as to the facts. That is what happened in this case and I can see nothing illegal in it. The petition is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./S.N. Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 165

PANDALAI, J.

(Penubarti) Gurumurti—Appellant.

v.

Vemalapati Rangiah—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 146 of 1928, Decided on 17th March 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Nellore, in A. S. No. 4 of 1927.

Landlord and Tenant—Agricultural tenant—Reasonable notice by landlord is necessary to ask tenant to quit—Till notice, he is tenant and mesne profits cannot be demanded prior to that time—Mesne profits.

What is needed to terminate an agricultural lease is not the six months' notice prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act, but reasonable notice. But such notice is necessary. Until such notice to quit is given by the landlord to the tenant the lessee remains a tenant on the usual agricultural terms applicable to the property and he cannot be compelled to pay mesne profits on the footing of being wrongfully in possession. [P 166 C 1]

B. Somayya—for Appellant.

V. Viswanatha Sastri and P. R. Sundaresa Ayyar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—Defendant 2 appeals. The suit was brought by the plaintiff-respondent 1 as tenant under a jeroiyati patta for possession of the land in dispute from the appellant who was alleged to hold the land on a terminable lease from respondent 2, the zamindar. Two questions arose: (1) whether the appellant's holding was an ordinary terminable lease or gave him rights of occupancy; and (2) if the former, whether proper notice to quit had been given. But the Courts have found concurrently against the appellant on both those points. He now appeals and urges that the decision as to the nature of the holding cannot be supported. On that point nothing was said which induces me to think that the decision of the lower Courts was not right. The question really was whether the land was raiyat land or home-farm land. A number of documents were produced on behalf of the respondents to show that the property was what in this particular zamindari is known as Nageri Idwa which means "home farm." The appellant had really no evidence contra. but on the contrary, being himself the karnam under the zamindar, had taken official part in preparing the records which showed that the lands were Nageri Idwa and had also attorned to the zamindar, respondent 2, by mesne of undertakings in which the land was similarly described. On those materials the finding as to the tenure of the property was correct.

It is next urged that the lower Court was not right in awarding mesne profits for three years prior to the suit because notice to quit was given only on 21st December 1921 about 21 months before the suit. This contention must, I think, prevail. It is answered that the appellant was prior to the notice a tenant who had promised the zamindar to take a lease on certain terms and to quit when demanded. But the lease not being taken and the land being agricultural land what that means in the absence of a lease with definite terms as to notice is that the appellant was bound to surrender the property on a proper demand being made. According to the decisions what is needed to terminate an agricultural lease is not the six months' notice prescribed by the Transfer of Property Act but reasonable notice. But such notice is necessary. Therefore until notice was given the appellant was a tenant on the usual agricultural terms applicable to the property, i. e., that he could be called upon to quit at the end of the agricultural season on having been given reasonable notice before that time, but cannot be compelled to pay mesne profits on the footing of being wrongfully in possession. It is stated that the agricultural year in this part of the Presidency begins about Sankranti (January-February) and that must have been the reason why the notice, Ex. 24, was given in December 1921, so that the appellant may quit after harvesting the then standing crop. I am therefore of opinion that the award of three years' mesne profits was wrong. It must be reduced to the period after the notice and before suit. The figures are on that footing Rs. 165 for the year immediately prior to the suit and Rs. 149-12-0 for the nine months before that year.

The result is that the amount of mesne profits will be reduced to Rupees 314-12-0. The second appeal is otherwise dismissed. The appellant must pay three-fourths of the costs of this second appeal, one set to be divided between the respondents.

P.R.S./B.V.

Appeal dismissed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 166

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.
S. R. M. M. Seetharaman Chettiar—Appellant.

v.

A. R. N. Chidambaram Chettiar and others—Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 110 and 111 of 1929, Decided on 7th September 1932, against order of Temporary Sub-Judge, Devakotta, D/- 16th August 1928.

* (a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47—Previous suit filed and property attached before judgment—Subsequent suit, after such attachment—Property sold in subsequent suit under decree—Execution of decree in the prior suit resisted by purchaser under S. 47—Decree-holder in previous suit challenging other decree as collusive and fraudulent and alleging purchaser to be benamidar—Execution Court should decide the point and not refer decree-holder to a separate suit.

Subsequent to the attachment before judgment of certain property, it was sold in execution of a decree obtained in a suit filed subsequent to the attachment before judgment. The execution of the decree in the prior suit, was resisted by the purchaser under S. 47. The decree-holder contended that the decree in the subsequent suit was a collusive and fraudulent one and that the purchaser was only a benamidar of the judgment-debtor, but he was referred to a regular suit to have that decree and sale set aside.

Held: that the purchaser was a representative of the judgment-debtor and entitled to intervene under S. 47; that the execution Court had no option either to dispose of the objection or refer parties to regular suit but was bound to decide the question itself and could not refer the parties to a separate suit: A I R 1920 Mad 324 (F B), Rel on. [P 167 C 1, 2]

Held further: that as the decree which was challenged was not the one which the executing Court was executing, there was nothing to prevent it from deciding whether that decree was properly obtained or not as incidental to the main question: A I R 1920 Mad 626, Dist.

[P 167 C 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47—Both parts of section must be read together.

Both the parts of the section must be read together, and when once it is held that resort to S. 47 is the proper remedy the Court has no option but is bound to decide the question referred to there under that very section. [P 167 C 2]

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 35—Bad conduct disentitles party to costs even though successful.

When an appellant raises several objections in the lower Court which are untenable and repeats them in the appeal also, his conduct disentitles him to costs in the appeal even though he succeeds on the main point in the appeal.

[P 163 C 1]

S. Panchapagesa Sastri and K. R. Krishnaswamy Ayyar—for Appellant.

S. R. Muthuswamy Ayyar—for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—Before stating the point of law raised, it is necessary that I should set out briefly the facts which have given rise to these appeals. The decree that is under execution is the one passed in O. S. No. 39 of 1924. The plaintiff in that suit (the appellant) attached before judgment the immovable property in question. Having obtained a decree in his suit, he has filed E. P. No. 39 of 1927 for the purpose of bringing the attached property to sale. In the meantime, but subsequent to the attachment before judgment, one Moyappan Ambalam filed O. S. No. 498 of 1924 against the same judgment-debtor and in execution of the decree he obtained he brought the same property to sale, purchased it in Court auction and conveyed it to the respondent. As such purchaser he is interested in resisting E. P. No. 39 of 1927 filed by the appellant. He first sought to assert his right by filing a claim petition under O. 21, R. 58, Civil P. C. But that petition was summarily rejected on the ground that at the time of the attachment before judgment, the respondent had no right to the property, and his claim petition therefore was unsustainable.

Having failed in this he had recourse to another method for asserting the same right, that is, he intervened in E. P. No. 39 of 1927 under S. 47, Civil P. C., claiming that as the representative of the judgment-debtor, he could assert his right to the property and resist the execution of the decree in O. S. No. 39 of 1924. The application he filed for the purpose was E. A. No. 91 of 1928. The first point that has to be decided is whether the respondent is the representative of the judgment-debtor and whether he can intervene under S. 47. There can be no doubt that as the purchaser of the property belonging to the defendant he should be regarded as his representative and the question is undoubtedly one relating to the execution of the decree: see Veyindramuthu Pillai v. Maya Nadan (1). His application therefore under S. 47 was properly made and this is also the view taken by the lower Court. Mr. Panchapagesa Sastri, the appellant's learned counsel, does not question the correctness of this part of the learned Judge's order. The question then arises: what was the proper procedure the lower Court should have adopted, after it held that the respondent could rightly come in under S. 47? The appellant's contention was the decree obtained by Meyappan Ambalam was collusive and fraudulent, that the respondent was a benamidar for the judgment-debtor and that in point of fact the property in question continues to be in the possession of the latter.

The lower Court without deciding this question which is the subject of issues 1 and 3 framed by it, has referred the appellant to a regular suit for the purpose of getting rid of the decree obtained by Meyappa and the sale held in pursuance of it. It is this part of the order that Mr. Panchapagesa Sastri impugns. The learned Judge apparently seems to think that he has an option either to dispose of the application under S. 47 or refer the parties to a regular suit. In this he seems to be wrong. Is a question to be agitated under S. 47 or by a separate suit? Once it is held that resort to S. 47 is the proper remedy, the Court has no option, but is bound to decide the question in execution under that provision. Para. 1 of the section shows that it is incumbent on the Court to decide the questions referred to there under that very section. The words used are "shall be determined by the Court executing the decree and not by a separate suit." These words are imperative and vest no discretion in the Court. Para. 2 is no doubt not happily worded, but both the parts should be read together and the interpretation I have suggested is the only proper one. The order made by the lower Court reads thus:

"Under the above circumstances I would declare in E. A. No. 91 of 1928, that the property sought to be sold in E. P. No. 39 of 1927 is not liable to be sold until the decree-holder gets the Court sale in favour of the vendor of the petitioner in E. A. No. 91 of 1928 set aside by a decree of Court and also obtains a declaration that the sale in favour of the petitioner in E. A. No. 91 of 1928 is benami for the judgment-debtor and is not valid and binding on him (the said decree-holder) and I would dismiss E. P. 39 of 1927 with a direction to the decree-holder (petitioner in the said E. P. No. 39 of 27) to comply with the abovesaid direction before he seeks to bring the property to sale in execution of his decree."

This order cannot be sustained and the lower Court should itself decide under S. 47 the question of fact raised by the appellant. The respondent's counsel in supporting the lower Court's order contends that an executing Court cannot take upon itself the responsibility of setting aside a decree passed by a competent Court. This argument is based upon a fallacy. In this case the executing Court is not called on to pronounce upon the validity of the decree which it is executing. The respondent's title to the property depends upon some decree and the question is whether that decree is vitiated by fraud or collusion. That is not the decree which the lower Court is executing and there is nothing to prevent it from deciding whether that was properly obtained or not, as incidental to the main question, namely, is the appellant's objection that the respondent is a benamidar well founded? The case relied upon by the respondent's learned counsel, Venkataswami Naidu v. Guruswami Aiyar (2), does not help him. The point under discussion did not arise for decision there. A suit had already been instituted and it was taken for granted that the parties were to be governed by the result of that suit.

1. A I R 1920 Mad 324=54 I C 209=43 Mad 107 (F B).

(2) A I R 1920 Mad 626=55 I C 626.

The orders of the lower Court are set aside and E. P. No. 29 of 1927 and E. A. No. 91 of 1928 are remanded to it for disposal in the light of these observations. The appellant's conduct disentitles him to costs. He raised several objections in the lower Court which were untenable and repeated them in the memorandum of appeal filed by him here. For this reason I direct each party to bear his costs of the appeal.

Reilly, J.—I agree.

Mr. Muthuswami Ayyar for the respondent here, that is the petitioner in E. A. No. 91 of 1928, has maintained that his client rightly preferred that application to the Subordinate Judge's Court under S. 47 of the Code, and in that we agree with him. But he has gone on to contend that, although he came in rightly under that section, the Subordinate Judge has no jurisdiction to make any but one order on that application, viz., that he was bound to give effect to the applicant's objection without going into the answer of the decree-holder in O. S. No. 39 of 1924, who was the execution petitioner before the Subordinate Judge. That appears to me an obviously impossible contention. The answer of the decree-holder in O. S. No. 39 of 1924 was that Mr. Muthuswami Ayyar's client was merely a benamidar for the judgment-debtor in O. S. No. 39 of 1924, which would be an effective answer if true. It is quite impossible for Mr. Muthuswami Ayyar to maintain that his client had the right to come in with a petition under S. 47 of the Code, but that his opponent had no right to urge his answer and to claim that his answer should be heard under that section. I agree with the order proposed by my learned brother in regard to the disposal of the appeals and as to costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Order set aside.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 168

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND MADHAVAN NAIR, JJ.

(Allu) Ramalinga Ayyar — Defendant —Appellant.

v.

Malli N. M. Subba Ayyar (dead) and others—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Appeal No. 158 of 1929, Decided on 22nd April 1931, against order of First Addl. Sub-Judge, Madura, D/- 9th October 1928.

Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 78 and 49—Judgment-debtor becoming insolvent—Decree assigned—Direction in decree to prove debt in insolvency—Assignor referring to this direction in insolvency Court—Debt was deemed to have been proved.

A decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff after which the judgment-debtor was adjudicated an insolvent on his application filed pending the suit. The decree contained a direction that the plaintiffs should prove their debt in insolvency. The decree was assigned and the assignee applied to the insolvency Court to be recognized as the insolvent's creditor and referred to the direction as to proving the debt, in the decree.

Held: that in the above circumstances the debt must be held to have been proved, although the formal mode prescribed by S. 49 was not followed: A I R 1930 Mad 356, Rel on. [P 169 C 1]

D. Ramaswami Ayyangar—for Appellant.

A. Srirangachariar—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The question that this appeal raises is, whether the respondent has proved his debt within the meaning of S. 78, Provincial Insolvency Act. A certain Malli firm filed a suit claiming an amount against the appellant. During the pendency of the suit, the appellant applied to be adjudicated an insolvent, and the Insolvency Court appointed an interim receiver to take possession of his properties. Thereupon, the plaintiff, Malli firm, applied to the Court where the suit was pending, that the interim receiver might be brought on the record. That application was refused and eventually a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiffs. That decree contained a clause which ran thus: "The plaintiff may prove their debt in insolvency."

Some time after the passing of the decree, the appellant was adjudicated an insolvent. Then the decree was assigned by Malli firm in favour of the present respondent. We are now concerned with what happened subsequently. He applied to the insolvency Court, that he might be recognized as the insolvent's creditor, in the place of Malli firm. In the affidavit which he then filed, he stated expressly, that the decree directed that the claim was to be proved in insolvency. The insolvency Court directed notice of this application to the insolvent, to the assignors and to the Official Receiver. The Court finally made an order directing the respondent's name to be substituted for that of Malli firm.

The short question to decide is, whether the debt on these facts is to be deemed as proved or not. Mr. Ramaswami Aiyengar strongly contends, that the Act prescribes by S. 49, a special mode of proof and unless that mode is strictly followed, a debt must not be held to have been proved. This contention is, in our opinion, untenable. We must look to the substance and not to the form of the thing. The respondent, as we have pointed out, specially referred to the fact, that the decree contained a direction that the debt should be proved. What was his object in referring to this direction, unless he meant to convey that he was then seeking to prove the debt? Where a creditor obtained a decree after the debtor's adjudication, in the presence of the Official Receiver, it was held that the debt should be deemed as proved, although the formal mode prescribed by S. 49 was not followed: Ramalinga Ayyar v. Rayadu Aiyar (1). The facts of the present case bring it within the principle underlying that decision. We therefore hold that the debt has been proved and that S. 78 applies. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./B.V. Appeal dismissed.

1. A I R 1930 Mad 356=122 I C 341=53 Mad 243.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 169

RAMESAM, J.

(Puthiyakatu) Kunhammayan and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

(Eachali) Nalakath Kunhi Sow and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 2456 of 1927, Decided on 31st March 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Tellicherry, in A. S. No. 362 of 1926.

Malabar Law—Karar by majority of adult members of tarwad or tavazhi—Binding nature on other members considered.

A karar to which the majority of the adult members of a tarwad or tavazhi are parties is binding on the tavazhi in general. It is not binding on the dissentient members only to the extent of not depriving them of their right to succeed as karnavan and of not depriving them of their right to maintenance. Apart from these two it is binding even on the dissentient members. If there are no dissentient members, but if all the adult members are present at the spot and the other members are absent and if that was the reason why they were not parties to the karar, the position seems to become somewhat stronger: 38 I C 513, Foll. [P 170 C 2]

P. Govinda Menon—for Appellants.

K. P. Ramakrishna Ayyar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The suit out of which this second appeal arises was brought by plaintiff 1, as the assignee of plaintiffs 2 and 3 of their jenm rights under Ex. B and of their rights under the marupat Ex. A, to recover the suit property which is a shop from the three defendants or whichever of them who may be found by the Court to be in possession. To understand the position of the other defendants in the case we must go to the earlier history of the Cheeramoolayil Pookkoth tarwad of which defendant 2 is now the karnavan. The suit property originally belonged to one Kutti Acha, a member of the Cheeramoolayil Pookkoth tarwad and after her death it has become the property of the Cheeramoolayil Pookkoth tarwad. This was not originally admitted by the present plaintiffs, but the lower Courts have now found it and the plaintiffs do not question this finding before me now. After the death of Kutti Acha, her son Kunhikutti Ali became the karnavan of the tarwad. He died in November 1912 while on his return journey from Arabia where he had gone on a pilgrimage. So he is referred to as Hajee. Before he went on pilgrimage it would seem he was able to induce most of the adult members of the Cheeramoolayil Pookkoth tarwad to agree to a certain karar Ex. E according to which some arrangements were made. One of those arrangements was that Rs. 100 were to be paid by the tarwad to his three children by the second wife—they are the present plaintiffs 2 and 3—and his deceased son named Ammad. If the Rs. 100 are not to be paid within six months after his death, the suit property was to vest in the children as their property.

To this arrangement most of the adult members of the tarwad agreed. One of such agreeing members is the present defendant 2 who was then an anandravan of the tarwad but now karnavan of the tarwad. After Kutti Ali's death, the succeeding karnavan was one Kunhi Ali. It does not appear that he did anything to pay the Rs. 100 within six months. It looks as if he was willing that the suit property or shop should vest in the present plaintiffs 2 and 3. His conduct also supports to some extent the propriety of the arrangement made by the Hajee. After him, one Pookkoth Sow was the succeeding karnavan. It does not appear that Sow did anything either to question the validity of the karar or help the plaintiffs' right under the karar. It is said Suit No. 505 of 1915 was filed to question the karar by some of the members of the tarwad, but the papers connected with it are not filed and therefore we may ignore that suit. Another suit, 512 of 1915, also filed by some of the junior members of the tarwad, ended in a compromise, Ex. 2, according to which the provision in favour of plaintiffs 2 and 3 was made not binding on the tarwad. But this compromise cannot bind plaintiffs 2 and 3 because they were not parties to it and it was a collusive compromise between the members of the tarwad. Kunhi Ali was defendant 1 in that suit. From Ex. 2 it does not appear that he was even a party to the compromise. The property itself was held originally by one K. Ammad under a marupat executed to Kunhi Kutti Ali dated 11th July 1912, Ex. 5.

He afterwards assigned his lease rights to Hajee's eldest son, defendant 1, who was Hajee's son by a different wife from the mother of plaintiffs 2 and 3 and who therefore belonged to a different tarwad, namely, Eachal Nalakath. Defendant 1 afterwards executed a marupat Ex. A to plaintiffs 2 and 3. This produces the impression that at that time certainly defendant 1 and perhaps the senior members of the Cheeramoolayil Pookkoth tarwad were siding with the plaintiffs and were inclined to support the arrangements in the karar. Plaintiffs 2 and 3 afterwards sold their jenm right under Ex. B and their rights under the marupat Ex. A. In the present suit both the District Munsif and the Subordinate Judge in observing that the Hajee brought about the arrangement to benefit his children thought that Ex. E was not binding on the Cheeramoolayil Pookkoth tarwad. But it has been held in Cheria Pangi Achan v. Unnalachan (1), that a karar to which the majority of the adult members of a tarwad or tavazhi are parties is binding on the tavazhi in general and it is not binding on the dissentient members only to the extent of not depriving them of their right to succeed as karnavan and of not depriving them of their right to maintenance. Apart from these two it is binding even on the dissentient members. If there are no dissentient members but if all the adult members are present at the spot and the other members are absent and if that was the reason why they were not parties to the karar, the position seems to become somewhat stronger.

In the present case beyond the reasons given by the lower Courts, viz., that the Hajee got the arrangement made in favour of his children and the observation of the Subordinate Judge that the rights of plaintiffs 2 and 3 originally were only for Rs. 100 and that the granting of the shop was a penal provision, they do not seem to have gone into the question of the binding nature of the karar properly. If most of the adult members were there and agreed to do so, I do not see why the giving of the shop to plaintiffs 2 and 3 should be regarded as a penal provision and not a genuine provision inserted for their benefit. It is said that Hajee did so much for the welfare of the tarwad that all the other members readily consented. I do not know if these statements are correct or not. It is a matter which ought to be inquired into. Now seeing that defendant 2 is himself a party to the karar, it may be said that the interest of the other members of the tavazhi will not be properly represented by him only though he is the karnavan. I therefore think it proper that the case should go back for a fresh inquiry after making eight members of the particular tavazhi which is interested in attacking the karar parties to the suit in a representative capacity. The District Munsif will inquire and determine who the eight members ought to be. Preferably they ought to be members who are not parties to the karar but any other member of the tavazhi who wants to attack the karar may come on record of his own accord, but the plaintiffs should not be put to the expense of issuing notices to them. After making all these persons parties, the binding nature of the karar ought to be inquired into in the light of my observations and the decisions on the matter. The decrees of the Courts below are set aside and the suit remanded to the District Munsif for fresh disposal according to law. Court-fees paid in this Court and the lower appellate Court will be refunded to the plaintiffs. Costs up to date as well as hereafter will abide the result by which I do not mean that they should follow the result. The Courts will provide for the costs according to their discretion after the trial.

P.R.S./V.B.

*Case remanded.A. I. R. 1933 Madras 171

PANDALAI, J.

(Gudimalla) Narasimham and another—Appellants.

v.

(Paidimarri) Venkata Subbayya and another—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 2005 of 1927, Decided on 17th February 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Masulipatam, in A. S. No. 21 of 1927.

(a) Interest—Post diem—No stipulation for—Such contract may be implied and interest awarded.

Even where there is no express stipulation in a mortgage document for post diem interest, such interest may be awarded either under a contract to be implied or as compensation and the usual practice is to award such interest at the contract rate. [P 171 C 1]

(b) Interest—Compound interest.

No compound interest can be awarded unless it has been specially agreed to: A I R 1928 P C 80, Ref. [P 172 C 2]

(c) Deed—Construction—Registered mortgage deed setting out terms of contract—No subsequent conduct of parties should be looked to for interpreting it.

Where there is a registered document like a mortgage setting out the terms of the contract, namely, the interest, it is improper to look at the subsequent parol conduct for the purpose of interpreting the document. [P 172 C 2]

Ch. Raghava Rao and B. T. M. Raghavachari—for Appellants.

P. Somasundaram—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This was a suit upon a mortgage (Ex. A) in which the plaintiff was awarded a decree by the District Munsif for about Rs. 356 and in appeal by the learned Subordinate Judge for Rs. 2,982 odd. The discrepancy between the figures is mainly due to the difference in the findings of two Courts as to the plaintiff's right to compound interest. The District Munsif took a view which was adverse to the plaintiff on the question of compound interest, while the learned Subordinate Judge took a view in his favour. In second appeal by the defendants three points are raised: first, that the decree of the Subordinate Judge awarding compound interest to the plaintiff is wrong; second, that the decree of the Subordinate Judge awarding post diem interest to the plaintiff is wrong; and thirdly, that the defendants should have been awarded compensation for alleged breaches of the mortgage contract by the plaintiff. The second and third points may be briefly dealt with as there is no substance in them. The argument is that the mortgage document (Ex. A) does not contain any clear stipulation for post diem interest and therefore it should not have been awarded. This argument is not correct. It has been held that even where there is no express stipulation in a mortgage document for post diem interest, such interest may be awarded either under a contract to be implied or as compensation and the usual practice is to award such interest at the contract rate. I think no fault can be found with this part of the decree.

So also as to the claim for compensation by the defendants. The alleged breach by the plaintiff is that he failed to pay off two creditors to whom he undertook to pay Rs. 900 out of the mortgage money. It is admitted that the plaintiff did not make the payment and that the defendants themselves paid off those debts. But all this took place prior to 1913. The suit was brought in 1925. The Subordinate Judge has held that whatever claim the defendants may have had to compensation for the breach by the plaintiff, which would be the difference between the interest payable to the plaintiff and the interest subsequent to the mortgage actually paid to the creditors by the defendants, it is barred by limitation. It was urged that this view of the question of limitation was wrong. But it is immaterial to decide that point; because even if it is competent for the defendants to raise that question, there are no materials on record on which any relief can be given. From the first the defendants nowhere stated what was the amount of compensation due to them. I am not inclined to go into the question of limitation for the purpose of remanding the case in case it was found in favour of the appellant.

The only substantial point in the appeal is that relating to compound interest. On this the District Munsif held that the mortgage document did not provide for it, while the learned Subordinate Judge held that it did. Ex. A is a Telugu document, very brief and extremely unconventional. It was probably prepared by a village document writer. But as it is it has to be interpreted on its own words. According to the learned Subordinate Judge the provision relating to interest is as follows :

"The total sum due to you is Rs. 2,000. On this the interest is Rs. 0-14-3 per Rs. 100 per mensem. At this rate, with Salu-sari Vaddi (literally for every year-interest) we shall pay in four equal instalments of Rs. 500, each payable on 20th March of each year."

The District Munsif thought that "salu-sari vaddi" which means literally interest for every year or interest calculated for every year means simple interest for every year at the agreed rate and that there was no provision in the document for compound interest on default of payment of the instalments. The learned Subordinate Judge took the view that the expression "salu-sari vaddi" was ambiguous and that it may mean interest either "calculated for each year" or "with yearly rests." Having so held, he proceeded to resolve the ambiguity by what he describes as the subsequent conduct of the parties from which he inferred that the intention of the parties was to pay and to be paid compound interest. In the first place I think the learned Subordinate Judge is not right in imputing any ambiguity to the expression "salu-sari vaddi." There is no idea of rests or compound interest at all in it.

It looks as if the learned Judge was so impressed with what he describes as subsequent conduct that he led himself to be convinced that it might be read into the document itself. The document is, in my opinion, perfectly simple and is capable of only one meaning, namely that the principal sum of Rs. 2,000 was to be paid in four yearly instalments of Rs. 500 each on 30th March of each year (beginning from 30th March 1910) with interest at the agreed rate of Rs. 0-14-3 per cent per annum on the balance of principal remaining due for each year, that is, the year during which interest fell due. That being so, the agreement between the parties contained in the mortgage deed is only for simple interest and no compound interest can be awarded unless it has been specially agreed to: Jewan Lal v. Nilamani Choudhuri (1). The next point is whether, as the learned advocate for the respondent says, in ascertaining the meaning of the mortgage deed what is described by the learned Subordinate Judge as the subsequent conduct of the parties may be looked into; and if looked into, what is the result? It seems to me that where there is a registered document like a mortgage setting out the terms of the contract, namely the interest, it is improper to look at the subsequent parol conduct for the purpose of interpreting the document. There may be a subsequent agreement to alter the terms of a mortgage deed. If that is so, it is quite a different matter; and if any such agreement is pleaded, it will have to be proved as a fact and it must be supported by consideration. In this case there is no such question of subsequent agreement. No such agreement is either pleaded or found. The sole point then is whether from the subsequent conduct of the parties the meaning of the mortgage deed can be said to be something different from what it is. To make use of subsequent conduct for such purposes is improper. Assuming that it was admissible, the subsequent conduct adduced in this case is not sufficient to prove that at the time of the mortgage deed the parties agreed to compound interest. As to subsequent conduct there is only the inference to be drawn from Ex. 3 which was not put to defendant 1, but which is now sought to be used against him. In fact he himself produced it. He produced it for the purpose of showing not that he then agreed to pay compound interest but that he had paid Rs. 100 more to plaintiff than was admitted by him. But it appears that in Ex. 3 there are at the top the words "with annual compound interest." Ex. 3 is undoubtedly a document which came into existence long after the mortgage deed. Defendant 1 states that it was a voucher kept by him in which the plaintiff signed for the payments made to him. The first payment made was in

1. A I R 1928 P C 80=107 I C 337=55 I A 107 =7 Pat 305 (PC).

November 1909 the mortgage itself being on 23rd April 1909. It nowhere contains the signature of defendant 1, and it appears to be a memorandum containing the date of the mortgage, the name of the mortgagee, the principal amount and interest described in these words:

"Interest is settled to be paid at the rate of 14 annas and three pies per cent per mensem (with annual compound interest)."

Now in this document tendered by the plaintiff as a memorandum of acknowledgments of payment and prepared either by him or on his behalf and given to defendant 1, to be kept as a voucher seven months at least after the mortgage deed "compound interest" first occurs. I am not able to say how from this document said to have been kept by defendant 1 as a voucher and produced by him as such it is to be inferred that he had at the time of the mortgage agreed to compound interest. But it is pointed out that in the written statement it was not definitely denied that the plaintiff was entitled to compound interest under the mortgage deed. Whether that was so or not, the question of compound interest was undoubtedly in controversy between the parties in the Court of the District Munsif as well as in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, and the District Munsif found against the claim of the plaintiff on this head. What seems probable on this question of what is called subsequent conduct is that the plaintiff some time after the mortgage asked that the defendants should pay him compound interest, that on the contrary the defendants charged the plaintiff with having put them to loss by non-payment of the debts mentioned in the mortgage deed and that without any clear knowledge of their mutual rights they thought that if one gave up one claim the other would give up the other. I can find nothing which would affect the construction to be placed upon the mortgage document Ex. A and hold that the plaintiff is not entitled to compound interest. He is only entitled to simple interest at the rate mentioned in the mortgage.

The learned advocate for respondent 1 urged that even if he is not entitled to compound interest with annual rests his client is entitled at least to simple interest on the interest in arrear from the date of the first default. This is only a modified form of compound interest. I do not find any warrant for it any more than for a claim for compound interest with annual rests. This claim must also be disallowed. The result is that the decree of the Subordinate Judge must be varied by disallowing the claim for compound interest and also ordering an account by appropriating the payments made by the defendants as found by the learned Subordinate Judge towards interest, if any due in arrear on those dates. Before passing the decree, the office will draw up a calculation of the amount payable to the plaintiff on the above footing. (On receiving the accounts, the Court delivered the following)

Judgment.—The account ordered has now been taken and it is ascertained that Rs. 2,015-11-3 is the amount due to the plaintiff on 17th April 1931. It is declared that this is the amount due on that date exclusive of costs, and there will be a preliminary mortgage decree fixing the date of payment on that date. The plaintiff will get costs on Rs. 1,300 and pay costs on the balance of the amount sued for in the Court of first instance. The plaintiff will get costs on Rs. 1,000 and pay costs on the balance of the amount appealed for in the lower appellate Court. The defendant-appellant will get costs in this second appeal on Rs. 700 and pay costs on the balance of the amount appealed for.

P.R.S./B.V.

Decree varied.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 173

JACKSON AND WALSH, JJ.

Secy. of State—Appellant.

v.

Ram Narayan Sarma — Respondent.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 23 of 1927, Decided on 4th October 1932, against judgment and decree of Waller, J., D/- 7th December 1926, reported as A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 460.

 Government Servants' Conduct Rules—Fundamental R. 52 — Government servant accepting private job during leave period and drawing leave allowance—Leave not revoked by Government — Government is not entitled to refund of allowance paid.

Where a Government servant who is granted leave and who has been drawing allowance during such leave period, accepts a private job during the leave period, unless the order granting leave is revoked by the Government dating from the breach of the rule, allowance already paid cannot be refunded.

[P 174 C 2]

Advocate-General—for Appellant.

K. V. Krishnaswami Ayyar and T. K. Rangaswami—for Respondent.

Jackson, J.—The respondent, an overseer in the Public Works Department, took leave in January 1921 and was granted, Ex. F, extensions up to 3rd May 1923; but wrote on 11th August 1922, Ex. 3, to the Chief Engineer that he would resign from 6th September 1922. The Chief Engineer had learnt that during this leave the respondent took employment in a private firm in contravention of the Government Servants' Conduct Rules and of the express orders of the Chief Engineer issued in March 1921, Ex. D. Accordingly the Chief Engineer wrote on 29th August 1922 Ex. G calling on the respondent to show cause why he should not be dismissed and on 28th October 1922 an order was issued, Ex. J., that respondent was dismissed from the service of the Government for having taken up private employment during leave without permission in contravention of the rules and in direct disobedience of the orders of March 1921. At the same time the Executive Engineer of the division to which the respondent was attached was informed, Ex. 4, that no more leave allowance should be paid to him.

About nine months later, on 11th August 1923, the Government Solicitor wrote to the respondent demanding the refund of Rs. 1,312-1-0, the leave allowances drawn by him from 3rd January 1921 to 31st July 1922 while he was in private service without sanction in contravention of the Rules—Ex. K. The respondent replied that Government was not entitled to the refund of this sum "drawn as allowances for leave legitimately due," Ex. L. Hence the suit, and since plaintiff was non-suited by a single Judge of this Court on appeal, the Letters Patent appeal. On behalf of the appellant, the Secretary of State, it is not denied that respondent duly obtained leave, and was duly entitled to these allowances during leave in ordinary circumstances. But it is argued that he disentitled himself to the allowances by infringing the Government Servants' Conduct Rules; and when there has been a breach of duty allowances are no longer payable to a Government servant: cf. ground 6 of this Letters Patent appeal. The allowances therefore were paid under a mistake of fact, and should be refunded.

The respondent was duly granted leave and by virtue of that grant drew his allowances. His conduct may have been such as would justify Government in revoking his leave, but unless this was done it cannot be said that his conduct by itself effected a revocation. The rule that a Government servant may not undertake any employment is evidently framed with a view to the bearing that such employment may have upon a servant's conduct after his resumption of public duty; for easy and well paid employment may well amount to a bribe. But if the servant is not resuming public duty the objection to his private employment largely vanishes; and though in the present case the respondent's direct disobedience to orders might have justified the revocation of his leave it cannot be said that it necessarily involved such revocation. In view of his past good service, domestic trouble, and ultimate resignation, the superior authority might (which is not to say that it should) have condoned his lapse of conduct. Therefore it is not mere verbal formalism, as the learned Advocate-General would argue, for the Court to require assurance that the leave was actually revoked before it sanctions the refund.

Until there has been an order of revocation, or an order of dismissal dating from the breach of rule which would have the effect of revocation, Rule 52 of the Fundamental Rules makes it plain that a Government servant is entitled to draw his allowances. Here English case law in reference to mistake of fact affords no assistance. If the grant of leave justifies the payment of allowances and such grant cannot be automatically cancelled by the conduct of the servant, but only by the action of Government, then, when Government has taken no such action the grant remains as a fact justifying the payment; and there has been no mistake of fact. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 175

CURGENVEN, J.

C. Ramaswami Chettiar—Appellant.

v.

K. Ankappa Mudali and another — Respondents.

Appeal No. 211 of 1930, Decided on 1st December 1931, against appellate order of Sub Judge, South Malabar, in A. S. No. 54 of 1929.

(a) Hindu Law—Alienation — Guardian — Personal decree against—Minor's property is not liable if no decree is passed against minor as well.

On a mortgage executed by defendant 1 for himself and as guardian of his minor brother defendant 2, the mortgagee obtained a decree for sale but as the mortgaged property was sold under a decree on a prior mortgage he applied for a personal decree against defendants 1 and 2. Such a decree was passed against defendant 1 and not against defendant 2. The mortgagee then applied to proceed against the remaining family property of the mortgagors in execution of his personal decree on the ground that the decree was in substance and in effect against defendant 1 as family manager and accordingly a personal decree passed against him in that capacity would enable the decree-holder to get access to the whole family property.

Held : that if no supplementary decree under O. 34, R. 6, Civil P. C., which is in effect a money decree, has been passed against a minor such a decree passed against his guardian in his individual capacity could not have any effect in rendering the minor's property liable.

[P 175 C 2]

(b) Decree — Execution — Decree-holder cannot prove that property was family property and that defendant was manager thereof.

Where a suit leaves the matter in doubt as to the capacity which the defendant occupied against whom the claim was made, the omission may be supplied by adducing evidence in execution which ought more properly to have formed part of the record of the suit; still less where the capacity, that of a guardian, is expressly stated. It is therefore not open to the decree-holder or his transferee to prove in execution that the property mortgaged was in fact family property and the judgment-debtor was in fact manager of the family when he mortgaged it.

[P 176 C 1, 2]

K. P. Ramakrishna Ayyar—for Appellant.T. C. K. Krompt and P. K. Achari — for Respondents.

Judgment. — This appeal raises the question of the effect of a mortgage decree passed against two brothers. The mortgagee sued upon a deed executed by defendant 1 for himself and as guardian of his minor brother, defendant 2, and obtained an ordinary mortgage decree. It so happened that the mortgaged property was sold under a decree obtained on a prior mortgage, and the decree-holder accordingly applied to proceed against the other property of the brothers. He was granted a personal decree against defendant 1, but not against defendant 2, being a minor. He then applied to proceed against what he described as the remaining family property of the judgment-debtors and this has been allowed by the District Munsif upon the ground that the decree was in substance and in effect against defendant 1 as family manager and accordingly that a personal decree passed against him in that capacity would enable the decree-holder to get access to the whole family property. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge has reversed this decision and the transferee-decree-holder accordingly now presents this second appeal. An attempt has been made to contend that even in his capacity as a guardian a personal decree against defendant 1 would enable the minor's property to be proceeded against. That I think is clearly an unarguable position. O. 34, R. 6, Civil P. C., enables a supplementary personal decree to be passed if it is found that the mortgage security is insufficient to discharge the debt, and it is impossible to hold that if no such personal decree, which is in effect a decree for money, has been passed against a minor such a decree passed against his guardian in his individual capacity can have any effect in rendering the minor's property liable.

It can only be on the footing adopted by the learned District Munsif, that the suit was in substance and in effect a suit against defendant 1 as family manager upon a document which he executed in that capacity that such a consequence might ensue. I have been referred to a series of cases which relate in point of fact to families governed by Marumakathayam law although no doubt the principles enunciated in them extend equally to cases of an ordinary Hindu joint family, Manakat Velamma v. Ibrahim Lebba (1), Rayarappan Nambiar v. K. C. V. Kannaran (2) and Vesu v. Kannamma (3); and those cases decide I think that if in substance and in effect the suit and the decree is, in the case of a Mitakshara family, against a father or managing member as such, although it may not be expressly so stated, such a decree will bind the interests of the remaining members of the family. I cannot extract any more extensive principle than that from those decisions. It may of course be said that in order to ascertain whether the defendant was in fact the father or the managing member evidence was needed supplementary to the materials supplied by the decree. But I do not think that those cases go to the length of saying that where a suit leaves the matter in doubt as to the capacity which the defendant occupied against whom the claim was made the omission may be supplied by adducing evidence in execution which ought more properly to have formed part of the record of the suit; still less where the capacity—that of a guardian—is expressly stated.

1. (1904) 27 Mad 375.

2. (1918) 45 I C 489.

3. A I R 1926 Mad 991=97 I C 551.

In the present case, it would be necessary to show that defendant 1 was the family manager, that the property in respect of which the decree was obtained was the family property and that the purpose for which the mortgage was executed was one binding upon the family. It may perhaps be held that the records of the suit may be looked into in order to ascertain whether it was in substance a suit of that character, intended to bind the family property in the hands of the manager, and therefrom to construe the decree. But in the present case, as the learned Subordinate Judge has pointed out, there is no material whatever prior to the decree upon which such conclusions can be formed. We have neither the mortgage deed, nor the plaint nor the depositions in the case or other evidence, nor the judgment, and all that appears is that in the execution proceeding defendant 1 was put into the witness-box, evidently for an entirely different purpose on behalf of defendant 2, and an admission was extracted from him in cross-examination that he executed the mortgage deed as family manager and that he thought that it was in the family interest although he could not specify the precise purpose. In these circumstances, and the claim being perfectly intelligible, upon an entirely different aspect of the relationship between the two defendants, namely, that of guardian and ward, I think it would be going far beyond the reported cases to hold that it is open now to the decree-holder or his transferee to prove in execution that the property mortgaged was in fact family property and defendant 1 was in fact manager of the family when he mortgaged it. I can see no grounds accordingly for holding that the lower appellate Court has adopted an erroneous view of the law and I accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs.

P.R.S./K.N.

Appeal dismissed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 176

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

N. K. N. Ramier and Bros.—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

S. S. Ramudu Ayyar and another—Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1060 of 1928, Decided on 2nd August 1932, from decree of Dist. Judge, Madura, in A. S. No. 232 of 1926.

 (a) Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 37 (3)—Contract to supply goods—Refusal by buyer to take delivery and repudiation of entire contract on ground of defective tender—Subsequent plea as to goods being defective cannot be raised—Vendor and Purchaser.

Where a buyer of goods refuses to take delivery on the ground of defective tender and repudiates the whole contract he cannot be allowed to set up the plea of the goods being defective when the time has expired and there is no question of replacement. Such a plea is unbusiness like and unreasonable; Braithwaite v. Foreign Hardwood Co., (1905) 2 K. B. 543, Foll; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 974 and A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 778, Ref.

[P 177 C 2]

 (b) Sale of Goods Act (1930), S. 34—Contract to supply in instalments—Repudiation of instalment by buyer is not repudiation of whole contract where seller elects to keep contract alive—Vendor and Purchaser

The question whether a contract to supply goods in instalments is an indivisible one and whether a repudiation of one instalment by a buyer is a repudiation of the whole so as to absolve the seller from obligation to tender the remaining instalments is a matter of fact in each case. Where in such a contract the buyer repudiates the whole contract by refusing to take delivery of one instalment, but the seller without accepting the repudiation elects to keep alive the contract, he must be deemed to have treated the contract as divisible and he is not absolved from the obligation of tendering the remaining instalments; Frost v. Knight, 7 Ex. 3, Rel. on.

[P 178 C 1, 2]

T. R. Venkatarama Sastri and N. Rajagopala Ayyangar—for Appellants.

T. Krishnaswami Ayyangar and S. K. Narasimhachari—for Respondents.

Jackson, J.—The appellants-plaintiffs and respondents-defendants are Madura cotton brokers who on 21st August 1919, Ex. 8, engaged with others in what is known there as a chain contract. The mills of Messrs. Harvey were to produce 60 bales of certain counts, and, as they passed down the chain, these were to be received by Messrs. Ramudu Ayyar, the defendants, and sold by them to Messrs. Ram Ayyar, the plaintiffs, who will be described henceforth as the sellers and the buyers, because in previous litigation their position was reversed and the terms "plaintiffs" and "defendants" will only lead to confusion. 28 bales were tendered by the sellers, and taken delivery of by the buyers; nine bales were tendered (as will be shown below) by the sellers and rejected by the buyers. 23 bales have never been tendered at all. The buyers now sue for a return of the advance made by them to the sellers on the date of the contract with interest thereon in respect of the 32 bales of which they did not take delivery. The suit has been dismissed by both lower Courts, and the buyers appeal. We agree with the lower appellate Court that the terms of Ex. 9 clearly constitute a tender of the nine bales on 15th November 1918. On 19th December 1918, Ex. 10, the buyers complained that contrary to the custom of the trade deliveries were not being made as and when the bales were ready at the mills, and therefore they refused both to admit liability for the 28 bales already delivered, and to take delivery of the nine bales tendered on 15th November 1918.

It came out in the course of another suit between the parties that three out of these nine bales had been bought from the mills at a price less than that contracted for in the chain contract Ex. 8, and therefore the buyers would have been justified, on these grounds, in refusing not only the three defective bales, but the whole instalment. The point is not one covered by the Indian Contract Act, but is clearly laid down in the English Sale of Goods Act, 1893 which embodies the existing law on the subject. S. 30 (3):

"Where the seller delivers to the buyer the goods he contracted to sell mixed with goods of a different description not included in the contract, the buyer may reject the whole."

This section has been repeated since this suit began in S. 37 (3), Indian Sale of Goods Act (3 of 1930), and the parties are agreed that, whatever be its interpretation, this is the law on the subject.

1933 M/23 & 24

Therefore if on 19th December 1918 the buyers had said we reject the nine bales because six good are mixed with three bad bales, they would have been within their rights. The sellers might then immediately have tendered the six good bales as a fresh instalment, and, if so advised, they had plenty of time in which to replace the three bad bales. But since the buyers did not so state, but preferred to repudiate the whole contract, the question arises whether, when the time has expired and there is no further question of replacement, the buyers can for the first time complain that three bales were defective. This proposition is precisely what Mathew, L. J., stigmatizes as unbusiness like and unreasonable in the leading case on the subject Braithwaite v. Foreign Hardwood Co. (1): This case has been canvassed in the English rulings, but as regards our Court its principle is clearly affirmed in Rajulu Aiyar v. Kuppu Aiyar & Sons (2), and Nannier v. Rayalu Iyer Nagaswami Aiyar Co. (3), and the following passage, p. 551, shows how closely it runs on all fours with our present case:

"After there had been a general repudiation of the contract by the defendants, the plaintiff's agent informed them that he had received the bill of lading for the first instalment, but the defendants again wrote refusing to take the bill of lading on the ground that they had previously repudiated the whole contract, and refused to be bound by it."

In the opinion of Collins, M. R., "that act of the defendants amounted in fact to a waiver by them of the performance by the plaintiff of the conditions precedent which would otherwise have been necessary to the enforcement by him of the contract which presumably he had elected to keep alive against the defendants notwithstanding their prior repudiation, and it is not competent for the defendants now to hark back and say that the plaintiff was not willing and ready to perform the conditions precedent devolving upon him."

Commenting upon this decision in British and Beningtons, Ltd. v. N. W. Cachar Tea Co. (4), Lord Sumner says:

"Furthermore it does not anywhere appear that even if the first cargo might rightly have been rejected, the seller could not have found another exactly conforming with the contract which he might have duly tendered and so have put himself right,"

1. (1905) 2 K B 543=74 L J K B 688=92 L T 637=10 Com Cas 189=10 Asp M C 52=21 T L R 413.

2. A I R 1925 Mad 974=88 I C 241.

3. A I R 1926 Mad 778=93 I C 673=49 Mad 781.

4. (1923) A C 48=92 L J K B 62=128 L T 422 =28 Com Case 265.

Therefore since the sellers have proved that they duly tendered these nine bales we do not find that it is open to the buyers to raise the belated plea that three of the bales were not according to the contract which they had preferred entirely to repudiate. But as regards the 23 bales there was no tender at all. It is clear that the sellers did not accept the repudiation of the contract, and on 2nd April 1919, Ex. 14, they are warning the buyers that:

"you should also take delivery of the remaining bales (i. e., 23) without delay on payment of the amount when and as they are received;"

but as a matter of fact they never did tender, and there was never any rejection after tender, as with the nine bales. It was argued for the sellers that this contract though by instalments was indivisible and that a repudiation of one instalment was a repudiation of the whole so as to absolve the sellers from the obligation to tender the twenty-three bales. The answer to this is that as stated in S. 31 (2), English Sale of Goods Act, the question of indivisibility is a matter of fact in each case and as will later appear the sellers themselves clearly treated the contract as divisible. In these circumstances the law seems clear as laid down in Frost v. Knight (5):

"The promisee may treat the notice of intention (to renounce) as inoperative and await the time when the contract is to be executed, and then hold the other party responsible for all the consequences of non-performance. But in that case he keeps the contract alive for the benefit of the other party as well as his own; he remains subject to all his own obligations and liabilities under it, and enables the other party not only to complete the contract, if so advised, notwithstanding his previous repudiation of it, but also to take advantage of any supervening circumstance which would justify him in declining to complete it: cf. Leake on Contract, Edn. 8, p. 175."

The sellers were still under the obligation of tendering, as they themselves admitted in their letter of 2nd April 1919, Ex. 14, and in the "note" to their plaint in O. S. No. 70 of 1919, Madura Sub-Court, which is an exhibit in this case. The sellers at that time instead of bringing their suit regarding the 23 bales at once as they might have done elected to keep the contract alive so far as the 23 were concerned thereby preserving the mutual obligation of the parties intact. One of these obligations was that they, the sellers, should tender the goods; and since they never did tender, they cannot now be heard to say that they can retain the buyers' earnest money on account of the 23 bales. For the above reasons we agree with the lower Courts in respect of the nine bales, but allow the appeal in regard to the 23 bales, the advances for which must be returned with interest at 9 per cent from date of demand. Proportionate costs throughout.

P.R.S./K.S. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 178

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

Secretary of State—Petitioner.

v.

N. M. R. Ayyasami Chettiar — Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Case No. 520 of 1932, Decided on 8th September 1932, to revise order of Dist. Munsif, Dharapuram, D/- 4th December 1930.

Court-fees Act (Madras) (1870), S. 17—Sch. 1, Arts. 1 and 2—Suit on two promissory notes of Rs. 600 and Rs. 400—Court-fee should be paid on distinct amounts — Court-fee for Rs. 400 should be paid as under Art. 2 and not Art. 1.

In a suit on two promissory notes of Rs. 600 and Rs. 400 the court-fee should be paid not on the aggregate of the two but on the distinct amounts, and the claim in regard to Rs. 600 is governed by Art. 1, Sch. 1, but the claim in regard to Rs. 400 is governed not by Art. 1, Sch. 1 but by Art. 2, Sch. 1, as S. 6 is controlled by S. 17 which applies to this suit. [P 178 C 2]

Government Pleader—for Petitioner.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The view of the learned District Munsif is perfectly right. The question that has been raised may be stated in this form. If two sums of Rs. 600 and Rs. 400 respectively are claimed in a suit on the basis of two promissory notes, what is the court-fee payable? S. 17 provides expressly that it is not on the aggregate sum that the fee is to be paid, but on the several sums which go to make up that aggregate. Under that section the test is what is the amount that would be payable had separate plaints been filed for each of the several distinct claims, all of which the suit embraces? The claim in regard to Rs. 600 is governed by Art. 1 Sch. 1, but the other claim in regard to Rs. 400 comes, as the District Munsif rightly points out disagreeing with the court-fee examiner, within Art. 2 and not Art. 1. S. 6 is controlled by S. 17, which is the section applicable to the facts of the present case. The order of the learned District Munsif is right, and the civil revision petition is dismissed.

Reilly, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 179

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

Vasamsetti Swami—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

(Gundalattulla) Tatayya and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Misc. Second Appeal No. 143 of 1928, and Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1708 of 1928, Decided on 7th April 1931, against order of Sub-Judge, Amalapuram, in A. S. No. 9 of 1926.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 32, R. 3—Mother unsuccessfully tried to be served for being appointed guardian—Court officer made guardian—Minor cannot be said to be not represented at all.

In a suit one of the parties died and one of the two minor sons of the deceased was brought on record as the legal representative while the other son was not brought on record at all. The mother of the minor was to be made the guardian ad litem but could not be served for a long time. Therefore the Court, to avoid delay, appointed the Court officer as the minor's guardian ad litem and proceeded with the case.

Held: that the appointment of the Court officer as guardian of the minor in the circumstances of this case could not be deemed to be such an irregularity as would justify the Court in holding that the minor was not represented at all. The minor when represented by the Court officer as guardian could not strictly be deemed to be one who was not represented at all in the eye of the law however much it would be desirable to have appointed the mother herself as guardian, making some more attempts for effecting personal service on her. Also the omission to bring on record the other minor son of the deceased was not such an irregularity as would vitiate the whole case. If this omission was proved to be due to any fraud or collusion, then it would have been a different matter.

[P 180 C 1, 2]

(b) Practice—Abandonment—Execution sale—Objections—Inquiry by Munsif—Sale set aside on technical grounds—Appeal against order—Appellate Court confirming sale—Other objections not pressed by either party before any Court nor any mention made in revision application to set aside appellate Court's order of having pressed them—Presumption is that they were abandoned in lower Court.

After an execution sale some objections were filed against it in an application to set aside the sale on various grounds. On an inquiry by the Munsif, the sale had been set aside on some technical grounds. An appeal against that order had been filed. The appellate Court had confirmed the sale but had not considered any of the other objections to the sale. Those objections had been disallowed by the Munsif, and had not been pressed before the appellate Court by either side. Even in the grounds of the revision petition no specific mention was made of having followed that course by the petitioners for revision.

Held: that the petitioners ought to have pressed all their objections in the appellate Court, in case the appellate Court decided against them differing from the lower Court. Therefore in the circumstances of the case, the presumption had to be made to the effect that those objections had been abandoned by the petitioners in the lower appellate Court: A I R 1923 Lah 124, Ref.

[P 181 C 1]

K. Kameshwara Rao—for Petitioners.

K. Bhimasankaran—for Respondents.

Judgment.—As against an order passed by the Subordinate Judge of Amalapuram refusing to set aside a court-sale and confirming the sale, this civil revision petition and also the civil miscellaneous second appeal have been filed. The petitioners are the two minor sons of the deceased Rama Jogi who was one of the sons of the judgment-debtor Vasamsetti Swami. In the course of the execution proceedings against the four sons of the judgment-debtor, one of them, viz. Rama Jogi, died. The other three sons continued to be on record. In the place of the deceased Rama Jogi, his minor son was sought to be added as his legal representative and a petition for the appointment of his mother as his guardian was also put in. In respect of that petition, notices were taken out thrice to the proposed guardian, but as she could not be served personally, the Court seems to have dismissed that petition and the decree holder thereupon filed another petition for the appointment of a Court officer as guardian, and that was granted. The execution proceedings were then continued which eventually resulted in a sale of the attached properties being effected. In order to have that sale set aside, the aforesaid minor, and another son of Rama Jogi who was not brought on record at all, have filed the present petition, alleging various grounds for impeaching the validity of the Court sale.

There was an elaborate inquiry by the District Munsif who found that the alleged material irregularity in conducting and publishing the sale and the substantial injury by reason of any such material irregularity have not been made out. On the merits he decided the case against the petitioners, who however have thought fit to set aside the sale on two technical grounds, namely, that one of the minor sons of the deceased Rama Jogi, who was brought on record as his legal representative, was not properly represented as the appointment of the Court officer as guardian was not proper and as the other minor son of the deceased Rama Jogi was not brought on record at all. Against that order of the District Munsif an appeal was preferred by the auction-purchaser. The learned Subordinate Judge held that, in spite of the omissions aforementioned in the matter of bringing in the legal representatives of the deceased Rama Jogi, there was sufficient representation in the absence of any fraud or collusion. Some decisions have been relied on by him in support of this view. He held that the proceedings in execution have not been vitiated by any illegality and therefore differing from the view taken by the first Court he upheld the validity of the Court sale and allowed the appeal.

As regards the first point, I am clearly of opinion that the appointment of the Court officer as guardian of the minor son of Rama Jogi in the circumstances of this case cannot be deemed to be such an irregularity as would justify the Court in holding that that minor was not represented at all. As no person could be appointed as guardian for the minor, unless the proposed guardian was served with notice and also expressed his or her willingness to act as guardian, the Court seems to have thought that the effecting of personal service on the mother who was proposed as guardian could not be done without unreasonable delay and therefore that petition was dismissed. It cannot be said that the dismissal of that petition was due to any default, wilful or otherwise, on the part of the decree-holder. The Court seems to have thought fit to appoint another guardian for the minor and therefore the petition by the decree-holder proposing the Court officer as guardian was granted. I am of opinion that the minor when represented by the Court officer as guardian cannot strictly be deemed to be one who was not represented at all in the eye of the law, however much it would be desirable to have appointed the mother herself as guardian, making some more attempts for effecting personal service on her. The omission to bring on record the other minor son of the deceased Rama Jogi is not, in my opinion, such an irregularity as would vitiate the whole of the execution proceedings. If this omission is proved to be due to any fraud or collusion, then it would be a different matter. It is difficult to hold that the decree-holder was wanting in bona fides in proposing the appointment of a Court officer as guardian of the minor when his petition to appoint the mother was dismissed by the Court. I therefore agree with the Subordinate Judge in holding that these two omissions are not such as would justify us in holding that the sale itself was void on account of these defects.

It is unfortunate that the learned Subordinate Judge has omitted to deal with any of the other grounds which the petitioners urged in support of their contention that the Court sale is void or illegal. Those objections having been disallowed by the first Court, it seems to me that the appellant before the Subordinate Judge could have only argued the points decided against him by the lower Court. In all probability, that was the course adopted by the appellants' pleader. It looks as if the respondents' pleader contented himself with replying to those arguments and neither side seems to have dealt with the other grounds of objection put forward against the Court sale. It was not to the appellants' interests to agitate the points which had been decided in his favour by the lower Court. On the other hand, I should think that it was the duty of the respondents' pleader to have urged all or some of those points for the consideration of the Subordinate Judge, in case he thought fit to differ from the lower Court on the two points on which the sale itself was set aside. One would expect the respondents' pleader to have tried to support the judgment of the lower Court by attacking some of the findings which went against him.

It seems, such a course was not adopted by the respondents' pleader; otherwise the learned Subordinate Judge would have stated something in his order to indicate that any of those points was raised by the respondents' pleader and argued by him in order to support the order of the lower Court. Even in the grounds of the revision petition and the miscellaneous appeal filed in this Court there is no specific mention of any such course having been adopted by the res.

pondents' pleader in the lower Court. In such circumstances the presumption has to be made to the effect that those objections have been abandoned by the respondents' pleader in the lower Court. Such a view has been taken in a decision of the Lahore High Court reported in Abdul Karim v. Ram Jagu Ram (1). If I am satisfied that any of those points was really urged by the respondent's pleader before the learned Subordinate Judge in order to support the District Munsif's order and was omitted to be noticed in the judgment, I should send back this appeal to the lower Court for a re-hearing and disposal. If the omission on the part of the Subordinate Judge to consider any of those points was due to the reason aforementioned, there would be no justification to remand this case for re-hearing.

I therefore hold that there are no adequate grounds for interference with the order of the Subordinate Judge. In the result, the civil miscellaneous second appeal is dismissed with costs of respondent 3 and the civil revision petition without costs.

P.R.S./B.V.

Appeal dismissed.

1. A I R 1923 Lah 124=68 I C 740.

* * A. I. R. 1933 Madras 181

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Ranganatha Ayyangar—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

R. Rajagopala Ayyangar and others—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 437 of 1929, Decided on 21st August 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Mayavaram, in A.S. No. 25 of 1927.

 * Registration Act (1877), S. 17—Assignment of vendor's lien over property worth more than Rs. 100—Document is compulsorily registrable—Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 55 (4) and 8.

The unpaid vendor's lien under S. 55 (4), T. P. Act, is an interest in immovable property and therefore an instrument assigning such a right, when the property with respect to which the right exists is worth more than Rs. 100 in value, is compulsorily registrable under S. 17, Registration Act, despite the provisions of S. 8, T. P. Act : 39 I C 405; A I R 1922 Mad 344; A I R 1921 Mad 137 and 39 Mad 283, Dist. ; A I R 1926 Mad 903 ; A I R 1926 P C 94 and A I R 1931 P C 245, Ref. [P 184 C 1]

V. Rajagopalachariar—for Appellant.

K. Bhashyam Ayyangar and T. R. Srinivasan—for Respondents.

Judgment.—Defendant 2 is the appellant. Defendant 1 purchased the suit property from one Saranadha Ayyangar under Ex. A dated 5th October 1915 for a sum of Rs. 400. Towards payment of part of the consideration namely, Rs. 200, he executed a "debt-bond," Ex. B, dated 13th October 1915, in favour of the vendor. This bond was assigned by the vendor to the plaintiffs' father by Ex. B-1 dated 20th October 1915. The suit property is admittedly worth more than Rs. 100 and the assignment deed, Ex. B, has not been registered. The suit out of which this second appeal arises was instituted by the plaintiffs to recover by sale of the suit land and from defendant 1 personally, the sum of Rs. 351-12-3 due on the "debt-bond" executed by defendant 1 to Saranatha Ayyangar. The contesting defendant is defendant 2. He purchased the suit property from defendant 1 under Ex. 1 dated 3rd November 1921. Reversing the decree of the District Munsif which dismissed the plaintiffs' suit, the Subordinate Judge gave them a decree for the sum claimed together with interest against defendant 1 and also against the property.

It will be observed that under S. 55, Cl. 4 (b), T. P. Act, as part of the purchase-money due on the property remained unpaid by defendant 1, the vendor Saranadha Ayyangar had a charge on it in the hands of defendant 1 for the amount of this unpaid purchase-money. It is argued by the appellant that this "charge" called the unpaid vendor's statutory lien has been assigned under Ex. B-1 and as the assignment deed has not been registered under S. 17, Cl. 1 (b), Registration Act, the property being worth more than Rs. 100, the learned Subordinate Judge should have held that there has been no valid assignment of the "charge" and the plaintiffs' suit should have been dismissed in so far as it asked for relief against the property. S. 17, Cl. 1 (b), Registration Act, makes compulsorily registrable :

"instruments (other than instruments of gift) which purport or operate to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish, whether in present or in future, any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, to or in immovable property."

And by S. 49 it is declared that no instrument required by S. 17 to be registered should be received in evidence in any civil proceeding in any Court unless it had been registered. On behalf of the respondent it is argued that Ex. B-1 is a mere assignment of the simple debt due under Ex. B, that the "vendor's lien" is not assigned thereunder and that it is a mere security which passes to the assignee under S. 8, T. P. Act, as a "legal incident" of the transfer; and as such Ex. B-1 does not require registration. S. 8, T. P. Act, runs as follows :

" Unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied a transfer of property passes forthwith to the transferee all the interests which the transferor is then capable of passing in the property and in the legal incidents thereof. Such incidents include where the property is a debt or other actionable claim, the securities therefor"

Before dealing with the main question of law raised by the appellant, I shall first dispose of the argument of the respondent that what was conveyed under Ex. B-1 was only the simple debt due under Ex. B and that the vendor's lien has not been assigned thereunder except impliedly as an incident of the transfer. The material portions of the assignment deed run as follows :

" Deed of assignment executed on 20th October 1915 I have this day assigned to you the simple debt bond for Rs. 200 executed on 13th October 1915 to me by Kuppuswami Ayyangar The amount including the principal and interest due thereon is Rs. 200-5-0 and I have this day received the said sum from you and have assigned to you the said debt bond. As I have, in the manner aforesaid, assigned to you all my rights in respect of the said document, I have hereby assigned the right to you to collect the said amount either amicably or through Court"

The terms of the document make it clear that what was transferred under it was not a simple debt of Rs. 200 alone; all the rights in respect of the debt-bond were clearly assigned to the plaintiffs' father and these rights will include the right of enforcing the unpaid vendor's lien existing with reference to the property. That the plaintiffs understood the document thus appears to be clear from para. 7 of the plaint wherein they state that their father acquired :

" the entire right possessed by the said Saranadha Ayyangar to recover the balance of the sale consideration with interest on the liability of the properties covered by the said sale-deed and on the personal liability of defendant 1 according to the terms of the said debt-bond : see also para. 6 of the plaint."

The Subordinate Judge also came to the conclusion that the intention of the parties to Ex. B-1 was to assign the unpaid vendor's lien along with it : see para. 21 of the judgment. I have no doubt that under Ex. B-1 the assignor expressly conveyed to the father of the plaintiffs the unpaid vendor's lien which existed in his favour with respect to the suit property. The question is whether the document assigned such a right when the property with respect to which the right exists is worth more than Rs. 100 in value and requires registration under S. 17, Cl. 1 (b), Registration Act. No authority directly bearing on the question has been brought to my notice. In Kunchithapatam Pillai v. Palamalai Pillai (1), it is pointed out that the vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money can be transferred :

" if the vendor executed a proper conveyance in this behalf. But until such a transfer is made, the right inheres in the vendor and in him alone."

The question whether the conveyance should be by a registered document or not, did not arise for consideration in that case. In Perumal Ammal v. Perumal Naicker (2) it was held that in consequence of amendments made in 1900 to the Transfer of Property Act, mortgage debts have been excluded from the definition of actionable claims and can only be transferred together with the security as immovable property and therefore only by a registered instrument. The learned Judges observed that this rule is subject to the exceptions one of which is "that where the law still admits of the separate transfer of the mortgagedebt as by the endorsement of a promissory note secured by deposit of title-deeds or by the attachment and sale in execution of a mortgage debt under the Civil Procedure Code, S. 8 still operates to carry the security with it," meaning thereby that such transfers need not be by a registered instrument. This observation regarding a promissory note was clearly an obiter dictum and was dissented from in Elumalai Chetty v. Balakrishna Mudaliar (3), which held "that the endorsee for value of a negotiable instrument, the amount of which had been secured by a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds, cannot claim to enforce the mortgage in the absence of a registered instrument conveying the mortgage right to him."

1. (1917) 39 I C 405.

2. A I R 1921 Mad 137=61 I O 461=44 Mad 196.

3. A I R 1922 Mad 344=66 I C 168=44 Mad 965.

As we have not got to deal with the transfer of legal or equitable mortgage debts, but only with the transfer of a "charge," these decisions do not help us much in deciding the present case. The respondent relies strongly on a decision of Ramesam, J., in Sambasiva Aiyar v. Venkatarama Aiyar (4) in support of his contention. In that case the facts were as follows as will appear from the head-note:

"P owed plaintiff a sum of money on a promissory note. P sold some of his properties to D, the father of the defendants, and left a portion of the purchase money in D's hands with instructions to remit the same to plaintiff towards his promissory note debt. D remitted the sum to plaintiff but the latter refused to accept the amount on the ground that more was due to him. Plaintiff thereupon obtained a decree against P on the note, and in execution of that decree, he attached the debt due to P from D consisting of the unpaid purchase money with interest, and purchased it himself. Subsequently the plaintiff instituted the suit out of which the appeal arose to recover the amount from the defendants claiming also a lien upon the properties sold to D, their father. The question was whether the plaintiff was entitled to the lien claimed by him."

The learned Judge held that the plaintiff was entitled to the lien and that under S. 8, T. P. Act, P's lien as regards the unpaid purchase money passed to the plaintiff by virtue of the sale certificate along with the debt. In the course of his judgment, the learned Judge after pointing out the distinction between a "mortgage" and a "charge" made the following observations which are relied on strongly by the respondent:

"If there is no transfer of immovable property, the assignment of the charge need not be made by a registered instrument. The right of the debt being an actionable claim can be transferred only by an instrument in writing under S. 130, T. P. Act. In the present case we have an instrument in writing, namely, the sale certificate issued by the Court. It is conceded by the learned vakil for the respondents that the sale certificate need not be registered with reference to the exceptions of S. 17, Registration Act. It seems to follow that the right to the charge passes along with the debt. The learned vakil for the respondents relies on a dictum in Subbaraju v. Seetharamaraju (5), and contends that S. 8, T. P. Act, does not apply to Court sales. The passage relied on is not quite intelligible to me. I do not see why, under S. 8, T. P. Act, the vendor's lien does not pass with the right to the money."

There is no doubt that some of these observations seem to help the respondent. But regard must be had to the fact that the assignment of the unpaid vendor's lien in that case was by virtue of a sale certificate which is expressly excluded from registration under exception 12, S. 17, Registration Act. The decision itself cannot therefore be applied to the present case; and the observations are mere obiter dicta; and further, there is no discussion whether the assignment by a document requires registration under S. 17, Cl. 1 (b), Registration Act, as the point did not obviously arise for decision in that case. In this connexion attention may be drawn to the decision of the Privy Council in Dayal Singh v. Indar Singh (6), which I think affords considerable help in deciding the question.

In that case it was held assuming that the document under construction was an agreement for sale and not a conveyance, as the buyer had paid the earnest money and had been pressing for completion which the vendor refused, the document created, under S. 55, Cl. 6 (b), T. P. Act, "an interest in the property" within the meaning of S. 17, Registration Act, and was accordingly compulsorily registrable. If the right which the buyer has under S. 55, Cl. 6(b), T. P. Act, can be described to be an interest in the property, I think the "lien" which the seller under S. 55 (4) has, may also be described as an interest in property. If so it must follow that Ex. B-1 containing as it does an assignment of such a right in property worth more than Rs. 100 must be held to be compulsorily registrable under S. 17 Cl. 1 (b), Registration Act. The decision in Sambasiva Aiyar v. Venkatarama Aiyar (4) was prior to the decision of the Privy Council in Dayal Singh v. Indar Singh (6). Another Privy Council decision, Imperial Bank of India v. The Bengal National Bank (7), referred to by the appellant, may also be referred to with advantage in this connexion. In that case after pointing out that "debt" and "security" are separate, the Privy Council held that when both "debt" and "security" are transferred and the transfer of the security only fails for some reason—in that case for non-registration of the deed—the transferee can have no

4. A I R 1926 Mad 903=95 I C 447.

5. (1916) 39 Mad 283=28 I C 232.

6. A I R 1926 P C 94=98 I C 503=53 I A 214 (P C).

7. A I R 1931 P C 245=134 I C 651=58 I A 323 (P C).

right or interest in the security, but the transfer of the debt still subsists, etc.: see head-note. This would show that the transfer in the present case, so far as it relates to the security being unregistered, will be ineffectual.

For these reasons, in my opinion, the unpaid vendor's lien under the Transfer of Property Act is an "interest in immovable property," and as Ex. B-1 assigns such an interest in immovable property of the value of over Rs. 100 which is compulsorily registrable under the Registration Act, and as it has not been registered, the assignment is invalid and unenforceable against the suit property. S. 8, T. P. Act, no doubt says that when a debt is transferred the security therefor is also transferred as a legal incident of the transfer, but it does not prescribe the manner or method of the assignment of the security and cannot override the provisions of the Registration Act in cases where under that Act an assignment to be valid requires registration.

In the result the decree of the lower appellate Court in so far as it relates to the suit property is set aside and the decree will be modified accordingly. The parties will pay and receive proportionate costs in this and in the lower appellate Court. The order of the first Court as regards costs will stand.

P.R.S./R.K.

Decree modified.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 184

CURGENVEN, J.

V. H. R. Subbaraya Chettiar and others—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Sellamuthu Asari—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 757 of 1930, Decided on 28th August 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Trichinopoly, in Appeal Suit No. 4 of 1930.

(a) Evidence Act (1872), S. 35 — Oral admission acted on and recorded by Court in its judgment is admissible in evidence.

Where a deposition of a witness, had been recorded in the ordinary way that record and not an abstract of the evidence in the judgment is the proper evidence of the statement. But where the Court has acted upon an oral admission and recorded it in its judgment which constitutes the only official record of it, it is admissible in evidence under S. 35: A I R 1931 Mad 207 and A I R 1922 Mad 71, Dist.; A I R 1925 Mad 1019, Appl.; 15 Mad 378, Ref.

[P 184 C 2]

(b) Easements Act (1882), S. 13 — Natural rights.

Where a razinama stipulates that the cross wall shall be shifted to a point further south and that the defendants shall only be allowed to enter the lane for the purpose of executing repairs, it does not deprive the defendant of his natural rights to put doors or windows in his wall although it may restrict his use of them.

[P 185 C 1]

T. M. Krishnaswami Ayyar and K. V. Ramachandra Iyer—for Appellants.

N. S. Rangaswami Ayyangar — for Respondent.

Judgment.—This second appeal is taken upon three points. The first is whether the room A (2) is the exclusive property of the plaintiff or is common to him and the defendants. The lower Courts have relied upon an admission by defendant 1 in O. S. No. 877 of 1924. That was a suit brought by the plaintiff for an injunction to include amongst other things the use of this room. It is true that the admission is not to be found in the written statement filed in that suit but it is recorded in the judgment, and the only inference which I can draw is that the record is based upon an oral admission made by the defendant in the course of the trial. It is objected that this record of an admission contained in a judgment is not admissible as evidence of it. I am unable to agree. The case cited to me as authority for this position, Saradamba v. Pattabhiramayya, A. I. R. 1931 Mad 207, to which I was a party, only decided that where a deposition of a witness had been recorded in the ordinary way that record, and not an abstract of the evidence in the judgment was the proper evidence to give of the statement.

Here if the Court acted upon an oral admission and recorded it in its judgment, which constitutes the only official record of it, I think it would be admissible in evidence under S. 35, Evidence Act. This was the view taken in Thama v. Kondon (1). The Full Bench case Seethapathi Rao v. Venkanna Dora (2) related to judgments not inter partes, and as has been observed by Madhavan Nair, J., in Nalupuratatol Ibraine v. Parmeswara Bavanavar (3) the observations with regard to recitals in judgments inter partes to be found in the judgment in that case are mere obiter dicta. In the case last cited, Madhavan Nair, J., held that a judgment inter partes, which contains a recital of the pleadings, is admissible in a subsequent suit to prove an acknowledgment, and on the same principle it appears to me that the recital here of defendant 1's admission is equally evidence of it. It can hardly, I think, be disputed that proof may be adduced of the oral admission made in the prior suit, and if the only official record is not to afford means of proof it is difficult to see how it can be proved. It would be absurd to prefer to such a record the oral evidence of some person who heard what was said. I think there is no substance in this objection. I should also be prepared to hold with the learned Subordinate Judge that the finding in the previous suit operates as res judicata. It is clear that the Court decided the issue upon the defendant's admission and in view of that admission refrained from giving the plaintiff an injunction but dismissed his suit. It is surely not open to defendant now to re-agitate that issue.

1. (1892) 15 Mad 378.

2. A I R 1922 Mad 71=66 I C 280=45 Mad 332 (F B).

3. A I R 1925 Mad 1019=85 I C 996.

The second point relates to the door D. The lower Courts consider that the plaintiff is entitled to a mandatory injunction directing the defendant to remove this door. It has been found that part of the lane south of the cross-wall TU is the property of the plaintiff. The learned District Munsif admits that this finding would not in itself afford sufficient ground for an injunction because there is no such right to privacy as would justify it, but he thinks that the terms of the razinama contemplated that such privacy should be ensured. I cannot find anything in this razinama beyond the stipulations that the cross-wall shall be shifted to a point further south and that the defendants shall only be allowed to enter the lane for the purpose of executing repairs. It does not in fact take the matter further than the finding with regard to the plaintiff's title to the lower portion of the lane and I cannot hold that it deprives the defendant of his natural right to put door or windows in his wall, although it may restrict his use of them. The learned Subordinate Judge thinks that an injunction should follow from the agreement that, except for purposes of repair and then only by entry from the north end of the lane, the plaintiff is to have the exclusive benefit of the lane. It is not clear how the mere act of placing a door in the defendant's wall would run counter to this right although different questions will of course arise the moment he endeavours to take advantage of the door as a means of access to the lane. I think therefore that the fourth term in the decree "that defendants do remove the doorway at the point D in the wall FE at their cost" must be expunged.

The third point relates to the wall NX (2). The plan shows that this wall is built upon the plaintiff's property and that must be the ground upon which the decree directs its removal at the defendants' cost. There is no reason to interfere with this direction. I allow the second appeal in part and in other respects dismiss it. The parties will pay and receive proportionate costs.

P.R.S./K.N. Appeal partly allowed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 185

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

N. R. M. M. M. Muthiah Chettiar—Appellant.

v.

Official Receiver of Tinnevelly and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 217 of 1927 and Civil Mis. Petn. No. 4485 of 1932, Decided on 28th September 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Tinnevelly, D/- 26th April 1927.

(a) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 53 and 54—Order under—Second appeal—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100.

No second appeal lies from an order passed under Ss. 53 and 54, Provincial Insolvency Act. [P 186 C 1]

* (b) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 54—Period of three months should be calculated from date of registration.

In applications under S. 54, the period of three months should be calculated from the date of registration of the document and not three months from the date of execution. [P 189 C 1, 2]

K. V. Krishnaswami Ayyar—for Appellant.

R. Krishnaswami—for Respondents.

Judgment.—Respondent 2 in O. P. No. 29 of 1925 is the appellant. This civil miscellaneous second appeal arises out of an application filed by the Official Receiver for a declaration that a mortgage deed, dated 9th March 1922 executed by respondent 1, the insolvent in I. P. No. 26 of 1922, in favour of the appellant, one of his creditors, is void as against him both under Ss. 53 and 54, Provincial Insolvency Act. The application was dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge of Tuticorin. His decision was set aside in appeal by the learned District Judge of Tinnevely. He held that the transaction in question is bad under both Ss. 53 and 54 of the Act. The present second appeal is against the decision of the learned District Judge. A preliminary objection is taken by the respondent, the Official Receiver, that no second appeal lies in this case. This objection is accepted by the learned counsel for the appellant; but he argues that the decision of the case involves a decision on a question of jurisdiction and that therefore the case should be dealt with under S. 115, Civil P. C. His argument is twofold; (1) the alienation in question being in favour of a creditor, the petition to annul it does not fall under S. 53, Provincial Insolvency Act but falls only under S. 54; (2) and when treated as a petition under the latter section it will be found that the Court has no jurisdiction to annul it inasmuch as the alienation complained of was made more than three months before the date of presentation of the insolvency petition; or, in other words, that the petition for insolvency was presented after the expiry of three months after the date of the transaction. In support of his first argument the only decision relied on by Mr. Krishnaswami Ayyar is Appathorai Odayar v. The Official Receiver, Tanjore (1), but that decision does not support him; in fact the question now raised was not raised in that case at all. Two other decisions were also referred to by him, Ramanna v. Official Receiver Godavari (2) and Jawanmull v. Sripathi Rao (3); but these have hardly any bearing on the question. But I shall assume for the purpose of this case that the above argument is good and deal with the next argument, viz., whether the Court has jurisdiction to annul the alienation under S. 54. S. 54 runs as follows:

“(1) Every transfer of property, every payment made, every obligation incurred, and every judicial proceeding taken or suffered by any person unable to pay his debts as they become due from his own money in favour of any creditor, with a view of giving that creditor a preference over the other creditors, shall, if such person is adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date thereof, be deemed fraudulent and void as against the receiver, and shall be annulled by the Court.”

One of the conditions required to bring a case within the operation of the section is that the transfer complained of should have been made within three months before the date of the presentation of the insolvency petition. Mr. Krishnaswami Ayyar contends that in this case the insolvency petition was presented after the expiry of three months from the date of the mortgage Ex. 1, and therefore the Court had no jurisdiction to deal with the application under the section. To appreciate the arguments on this point it is necessary to state the following facts. The mortgage was executed on 9th March 1922. The Court closed for the summer recess on or about 9th May 1922. The document was registered on 9th June 1922. The Court opened after the summer recess on 10th July 1922. The petition was presented on 10th July 1922. It is argued that since the petition was presented on 10th July 1922, admittedly after the expiry of three months from the date of the transaction, 9th March 1922, the case does not fall within S. 54 of the Act. To this argument the learned counsel for the respondent offers three answers: (1) that the period of three months for presenting the petition should be calculated from 9th June 1922, the date when the document was registered as it was only then that a complete transfer of property was made under the document; (2) that even if the date is to be calculated from 9th March 1922, since the Court was closed at the time when three months expired from that date, the Official Receiver is entitled to file the petition on the reopening of the Court; (3) the third answer has reference to S. 9 (c), Provincial Insolvency Act.

In this case this alienation, that is the mortgage transaction in question, was itself the act of insolvency on which the insolvency petition was admitted. The Court acting on that petition has adjudicated respondent 1 an insolvent. Under S. 9 of the Act the insolvency petition, if by a creditor—and the petition in this case is by a creditor—must be filed within three months of the act of insolvency. One of the conditions

1. A I R 1927 Mad 412=39 I C 683.

2. A I R 1927 Mad 1090=101 I C 153.

3. A I R 1927 Mad 1144=101 I C 563.

required for the avoidance of transfers under S. 54 is that such person (the transferor) should be "adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date thereof" (that is the date of the transfer.) Having regard to the language used in S. 9 and in S. 54 it is argued that if the insolvency petition in this case has been filed properly within three months after the date of the transfer which is the act of insolvency, then for the purposes of S. 54 it may well be held that the transferor, that is the insolvent, is adjudged insolvent on a petition presented within three months after the date of the transfer; or in other words, that the petition of insolvency was presented within three months after the transfer; and that therefore the condition under S. 54 which is in question has been strictly complied with. All these three alternative arguments of the respondent deserve serious consideration, but I propose to deal only with the first point raised, by him, that is should the period of three months be calculated from the date of the execution of the documents or from the date of its registration? If the period may be calculated from the date of registration, then in this case the document having been registered on 9th June 1922 and the petition of insolvency having been presented on 10th July 1922, the petition was clearly presented within three months after the date of the transfer and the requirement referred to in S. 54 of the Act has been complied with.

The alienation in this case is a mortgage. The consideration for it is more than Rs. 100. That being so the mere execution of the document does not make it a valid transfer of property. Under S. 59, T. P. Act:

"Where the principal money secured is Rs. 100 or upwards a mortgage can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested at least by two witnesses."

Registration of the document is therefore essential to make it a valid transfer and when registered

"the document shall operate from the time it would have commenced to operate if no registration thereof had been required or made;" that is, in this case from the date when the document was executed, namely 9th March 1922. In a case like the present up to the date of registration there can be no valid transfer or mortgage of land within the meaning of S. 59, T. P. Act.

If the time was to run from the date of execution of the document the object of S. 54 could easily be frustrated. A mortgage or sale of immovable property may be registered up to four months after its execution. As pointed out by the learned Judge a dishonest insolvent has only therefore to date such fraudulent transfers with a date more than three months prior to the filing of the petition and then they cannot be avoided under S. 54. For the above reasons I would hold that even if the petition for the annulment is to be treated solely as one falling under S. 54, the Court had jurisdiction to deal with it as the conditions required under that section have been fully complied with. In this view the other points raised by the respondent need not be discussed.

If the petition can be dealt with under S. 53 of the Act also, as it has been dealt with by the lower Courts and as I think it can well be, then having regard to the findings it is clear that no question of jurisdiction arises. It therefore follows that in any event this civil miscellaneous second appeal should be dismissed. Respondent 1 will get his costs from the appellant.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 187

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

(Rachakonda) Narayanamurti — Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Darmana Ramalingam and others —
Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 181 of 1927, Decided on 17th August 1931, against decree of Dist. Judge, Ganjam, in A. S. No. 278 of 1925.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 8—From evidence Court noticing that consideration for suit transaction illegal — No objection raised by defendant—Still Court should look into facts and give proper decision.

When it comes to the notice of the Court that the real consideration for the suit transaction is not the consideration alleged and proved, but is one which is distinctly immoral and illegal, it cannot shut its eyes to the true state of affairs disclosed by the evidence and give a decree to the plaintiff as if the transaction between the parties was one which could not be impeached. If the illegality of a transaction is brought to the notice of the Court the Court should not assist the person who invokes its aid even though the defendant has not pleaded the illegality and does not wish to raise the objection.

This is based on grounds of public policy. A transaction submitted for adjudication may appear prima facie to be harmless; but if it appears to the Court that it has grown out of illegal or immoral circumstances it is the duty of the Court to take notice of such circumstances and give adjudication accordingly: Connolly v. Consumers' Cordage Co., (1904) 89 L T 347; A I R 1920 Cal 704 and A I R 1920 Mad 547, Rel. on; Hyams v. Stuart King, (1908) 2 K B 696 and North Western Salt Co. Ltd. v. Electrolytic Alkali Co. Ltd., (1914) A C 461, Dist. [P 189 C 1, 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 23—From evidence appellate Court noticing that consideration for suit transaction immoral—No issue and finding by trial Court on that point—Case should be remanded for such finding.

When it comes to the notice of the appellate Court from the evidence on record that the consideration for the suit transaction is of an illegal and immoral character, but no issue on that point has been framed by the trial Court nor has the defendant raised any objection to that effect, the appellate Court should remand the case for a finding on that point: Connolly v. Consumer's Cordage Co. Ltd., (1904) 89 L T 347, Rel. on. [P 190 C 1]

G. Lakshmanan—for Appellant.

B. Satyanarayana—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The plaintiff is the appellant. This second appeal arises out of a suit to recover from defendant 1 and his son defendant 2 Rs. 3,740 due on a promissory note executed by them in favour of defendant 3. Defendants endorsed the note in favour of the plaintiff who is his son-in-law. The contesting defendants pleaded want of consideration for the promissory note and also for the transfer in favour of the plaintiff. The two issues in the case were: (1) Whether the suit promissory note is not supported by consideration; and (2) Whether the endorsement of transfer is genuine and supported by consideration. On these issues both the Courts found that the consideration for the suit note was, as alleged by the plaintiff, the withdrawal of the sale deed, Ex. E, from registration and that the transfer of the suit promissory note was not for consideration. The learned Subordinate Judge on these findings gave a decree to the plaintiff treating him as a transferee for collection. Though the promissory note was found to be supported by consideration the learned District Judge declined to pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff because he held having regard to the facts disclosed in the evidence, that:

"the sole consideration for the suit pronote was an undertaking to forgo the fruits of systematic procurement, and this is not a form of consideration that any Court can take cognizance of."

In the last paragraph of the judgment he says:

"I find that the consideration for the suit pronote was nil, and that it was obtained by a disgraceful kind of blackmail."

His opinion apparently was that the history of the transaction which led to the execution of the promissory note showed that the real consideration for the promissory note was immoral and therefore the suit was not enforceable. In this view he set aside the decree of the Sub-Judge and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. To understand the conclusions arrived at by the learned Judge a few facts have to be mentioned and they are referred to in detail in the third and succeeding paragraphs of the appellate judgment. It would appear that defendant 1 is a rich raiyat and that defendant 2 is a young man addicted to drink and women and that defendant 3 gaining control over him by pandering to his weakness, persuaded him, to execute a sale deed in his favour, Ex. E, for Rs. 9,000. The document recites that a sum of Rs. 3,000 had been paid in cash to defendant 2 and that the balance of Rs. 6,000 would be paid at the time of registration. Defendant 3 is a pleader. When the document was presented for registration by his clerk, defendant 2 objected, alleging that it was executed by undue influence and while he was under the influence of drink and also that the consideration of Rs. 3,000 had not been paid. The document was therefore returned unregistered. During the inquiry before the Registrar a compromise was arranged between the parties at the intercession of one Venkateswarulu, a pleader, and defendants 1 and 2 executed the suit note, Ex. A, for Rs. 2,750 in favour of defendant 3 and he then withdrew the suit deed without pressing for its registration. It was in these circumstances that the learned District Judge came to the conclusion that the suit note was unenforceable. His reasoning may be put in his own words:

"What after all was the consideration for the suit pronote? Defendant 3 in Ex. E says that he paid defendant 2 Rs. 3,000 in cash. Defendant 2 denied this in Ex. 2. If it were true, then I do not see why defendant 2 was willing to accept a pronote for Rs. 2,750 and give up in return not only his own Rs. 3,000, but also the chance of buying valuable property. The fact that the property was valued and coveted is shown by the circumstances that Ex. E has not yet been returned." I am not satisfied that there was any consideration for the first sale deed Ex. E, other than housing defendant 2 and procuring for him women and drink. If this is so, then the sole consideration for the suit prostrate was an undertaking to forgo the fruits of systematic procurement, and this is not a form of consideration that any Court can take cognizance of. From the history of the transactions between defendants 3 and 2, I have no hesitation in believing the evidence of D. W. 1, viz., that the only consideration for Ex. E was an immoral one and in disbelieving the recital in Ex. 3 that it was a cash transaction. Defendant 3 has not given any evidence in this case and he was at pains to avoid doing so."

In second appeal Mr. G. Lakshmananna argues that the main question for decision being whether the promissory note was not supported by consideration and that point having been found in his favour by the District Judge he should have given the plaintiff a decree for the amount claimed as was done by the Sub-Judge; he also argues that the compromise which led to the execution of the promissory note, and the consideration for the first sale deed Ex. E not being impeached before him, it was not open to the District Judge in the absence of specific issues on those points to arrive at the conclusion that the consideration for the promissory note was immoral and to dismiss the plaintiff's suit on a point which was not raised and on which there was no issue. In an ordinary case I should have accepted this contention; but having regard to the special facts appearing in the evidence in this case on which the learned Judge has relied for his conclusions, I cannot accept the appellant's contention. It is true that no issue was raised regarding the immoral nature of the consideration, but an indication of the point is distinctly given in the beginning of para. 3 of the written statement of defendants 1 and 2 and the evidence on the facts relating to it has also been given. When it comes to the notice of the Court that the real consideration for the suit transaction is not the consideration alleged and proved but is one which is distinctly immoral and illegal, is it to shut its eyes to the true state of affairs disclosed by the evidence and give a decree to the plaintiff as if the transaction between the parties was one which could not be impeached? Mr. Lakshmananna would unhesitatingly say "yes"; but his contention appears to be untenable from the decisions which have been brought to my notice. What should be the duty of a Court in a case like this was pointed out by the Privy Council in Connolly v. Consumers' Cordage (1). In that case Lord Halsbury observed:

"that it is the right and duty of the Court at any stage of the cause to consider, and, if it is sufficiently proved, to act upon, an illegality which may turn out to be fatal to the claims of either of the parties to the litigation."

He adds further that:

"their Lordships however do not doubt that the learned Judges had a right and that it was their duty, if they thought the facts were established, to take care that the process of the Court should not be used for the purpose of establishing a claim that ought not to be permitted to be enforced in a Court of Justice."

In that case as no evidence was offered on the question of illegality, and as the Supreme Court of Canada assumed the existence of an illegality from the circumstances fraught with suspicion, the case was remanded for a new trial to decide the issue as to illegality after taking evidence. The principle enunciated by the Judicial Committee has been followed in many cases in England and America and in this country also. The English and American cases are referred to in the judgment of Mukerjee, J., in Atikulla v. Habibulla (2). As pointed out in that judgment, it may be taken to be well settled that if the illegality of a transaction is brought to the notice of the Court, the Court should not assist the person who invokes its aid even though the defendant has not pleaded the illegality and does not wish to raise the objection. This is based on grounds of public policy. A transaction submitted for adjudication may appear prima facie to be harmless; but if it appears to the Court that it has grown out of illegal or immoral circumstances it is the duty of the Court to take notice of such circumstances and give adjudication accordingly. The decision in Atikulla v. Habibulla (2) was followed in this Court by Curgenvin, J., in D. Lakshmiayya v. O. Murahari (3). The decisions relied on Mr. Lakshmananna, viz. Hyams v. Stuart King (4) and North Western Salt Co., Ltd. v. Electrolytic Alkali Co. Ltd. (5), dealing with transactions arising out of wagering contracts under the English law, do not really help him as wagering

1. (1904) 89 L T 347.

2. A I R 1920 Cal 704=53 I C 773.

3. A I R 1930 Mad 547=128 I C 512.

4. (1908) 2 K B 696=77 L J K B 794=99 L T 424=52 S J 551=24 T L R 675.

5. (1914) A C 461=83 L J K B 530=110 L T 552=58 S J 338=30 T L R 313.

contracts are not immoral or illegal but have only been declared to be void by statute. I do not think the considerations applicable to those cases can be successfully urged in support of the contention that if a contract, ostensibly good, is really based upon an immoral consideration and this is clearly brought to the notice of the Court, the Court should ignore it and proceed to give a decree to the plaintiff who desires to enforce the contract.

It is argued on behalf of the respondents that the conclusion arrived at by the Judge as regards the immoral consideration should be accepted, and that his decree should be upheld. As the point under consideration was not specifically raised in the case, I think the learned Judge should have given an opportunity to the plaintiff to meet the objection when it came to his notice that the suit transaction was of a questionable character, as was done in Connolly v. Consumers' Cordage Co. (1). I would therefore call upon the lower Court to submit a finding on the question "whether the consideration for the suit note is tainted with immorality."

In deciding this point the Court will have to consider the validity of the sale transaction Ex. E and of the compromise which immediately preceded the execution of the suit promissory note. Before I conclude I must point out that I have not expressed any opinion as regards the evidence relating to the alleged immoral nature of the transactions brought to light in this suit, nor do I desire to express any opinion lest any opinion of mine might embarrass the lower Court in arriving at its own conclusion. The lower Court is at liberty to consider the entire evidence afresh and arrive at its own conclusion. As the point is a new one it is open to the parties to adduce fresh evidence. The finding is to be submitted within three months after the receipt of this order and ten days for objections. (In pursuance of the order contained in the above judgment, the District Judge of Ganjam submitted the following)

Finding. — I find therefore that the consideration for the suit note was illegal, and of such a character that a contract based on it could not be enforced. (This second appeal coming on for final hearing after the return of the above finding, the Court delivered the following)

Judgment. — The finding that is now submitted is covered by my order calling "for a finding." The pronote now being found to be illegal cannot be made the basis of the suit. The finding is accepted and the second appeal is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./B.V.

Appeal dismissed.

A I. R. 1933 Madras 190

WALLACE AND STONE, JJ.

Collector of Chingleput—Appellant.

v.

Krishnaveni Ammal—Respondent.

Appeals Nos. 333 and 365 of 1929 and 77 of 1930, Decided on 5th March 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Chingleput, in C. R. O. P. Nos. 11 of 1924 and 13 of 1925.

Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 23—Value to be paid is value to owner as it exists at date of taking—Old owner taking property subject to restrictions—It is necessary to inquire how far these restrictions affect value.

In considering the claim of the owner, the value to be paid for is the value to the owner as it existed at the date of taking, not the value to the taker. The value to the owner consists in all advantages which the land possesses, present or future, but it is the present value alone of such advantages that falls to be determined. Then again the value which has to be assessed is the value to the old owner who parts with his property and not the value to the new owner who takes it over. Where the old owner takes the property subject to restrictions, it is necessary to inquire how far these restrictions affect the value. In determining the burden of the restrictions one circumstance to consider is the chance of such a restriction being determined and it may therefore become a relevant part of the inquiry as to by whom the restriction can be determined. When there was evidence to show that the area acquired was so situate as to make it possible that within a reasonable period some of it would become a building site, some allowance was made for such a possibility: Lucas and Chesterfield Gas and Water Board (1909), K.B. 516; A. I. R. 1914 P. C. 199; 25 Cal. 194 (P.C.) and A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 19, Rel. on; A. I. R. 1919 Mad. 222; A. I. R. 1929 All. 525 and 10 Bom. L. R. 657, Dist.

[P 192 C 1, 2]

*Govt. Pleader—*for Government.

*S. Varadachariar, C. Narasimhachariar and M. E. Rajagopalachari—*for Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal from the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Chingleput in a matter wherein the claimant, the respondent to the present appeal, is claiming compensation under the Land Acquisition Act for the acquisition by Government of 377.55 acres of land. As to 366 acres 23 cents the claimant has melwaram rights. As to the remaining 11 acres 32 cents the claimant claims as owner of the land. Of this land 11.32 acres are burdened by ponds, and 3 acres 50 cents are burdened by roads or pathways. The lands are all situate in Mambalam village and the notification is dated, 25th May 1920 which is before the passing of the Amending Act of 1923, so that the critical date in determining the market value of the rights acquired is the date of the notice under S. 6 which is 25th May aforesaid. The land acquisition officer, as to the item for roads and pathways, has allowed nothing for the reason, stated by him at pp. 11 and 12 of the pleadings, that the pathways are in public use and are to be used for the public. As regards the kuttas or ponds he finds that when they are silted up the zamindar, the claimant herein, has been granting them on patta. He accordingly awards compensation at varying rates: for S. No. 70/4 and 86, Rs. 450 an acre and for S. No. 106/1-A and 1-O, 114/1 and 131/24 at Rs. 500 an acre. S. No. 109 being on a higher level he values it at the same rate as the adjoining fields less Rs. 200 an acre, that is at Rs. 1,000 an acre. As regards the melwaram rights he takes the estimated annual value, but deducts the outgoings and gives 20 years' purchase. The Subordinate Judge largely increased this award and valued pathways at Rs. 2,700 an acre, the ponds at Rs. 2,250 an acre; and as to the melwaram rights, as to three quarters of the area he gave the same; as to one quarter he held that these were building sites and fixed the value at what he calls the mean between the maximum and the minimum rates, viz. Re. 1-8-0 per ground.

Before examining the law and the evidence in this case it is desirable to advert to the form in which the claim is framed. By letter dated 4th December 1923 a claim is put forward on behalf of the zamindar, then a minor, for compensation for all poramboke such as pathways, ponds, channels, etc., in the Mambalam zamindari. From this time onwards it appears quite clear that the claim in respect of rights in the land as distinct from melwaram rights over the land are made in respect of pathways and ponds in the area in question. It was urged before us that the true way of viewing this case was to take the market value of the whole area as land and deduct the value of interest other than that of the claimant and award the claimant the balance. In support of this proposition two cases, Rajah of Pittapuram v. Revenue Divisional Officer, Cocanada (1), at p. 646 of 42 Mad. and Rohan Lal v. Collector of Etah (2) at p. 768 of 51 All. et seq., were chiefly relied upon. It was urged that, if the principle laid down by these cases, which follows the decision in Collector of Belgaum v. Bhimrao (3), be followed one can regard the whole land as potential building sites, one can treat a pathway as adjacent to the land on either side of it so as to be saleable with the land on either side of it, and having arrived at that position one can say that the pathway has the same value as the land on either side of it and therefore that a pathway is a potential building-site. We see no reason to dissent from any of the observations made in the cases above mentioned; but those cases proceed on an entirely different set of facts and type of claim than is here made. Here a claim is made for compensation for the acquisition of three separate things: (1) land now used as pathways, (2) land now burdened with ponds, and (3) melwaram rights. We do not know what compensation has been paid to other persons admittedly interested in these separate things.

The three things are claimed for separately, evidence relating to them is taken separately, and there is no hint until the argument before us that the case was framed along the lines now indicated. We therefore decline to alter the nature of the claim at this stage and accordingly treat the claim as being in respect of three separate things. The result is that so far as the pathways are concerned one is concerned with a strip of land which from its very nature is not of a size or type that would render it likely to be marketable as a building site, quite apart from the question whether it is or is not burdened with an easement. As regards the ponds, we are concerned with

1. A I R 1919 Mad 222=51 I C 656=42 Mad 644.

2. A I R 1929 All 525=117 I C 612=51 All 765.

3. (1908) 10 Bom L R 657.

claim for land covered by water and accordingly land that is not so likely to have a marketable value as buildingsite as land not covered. As regards the melwaram rights, we are not concerned with land at all but with what is in effect a rent charge.

Before considering the evidence in this particular case, it may be desirable to indicate some of the principles which we conceive should be borne in mind when valuing land. And first we refer to the proposition first enunciated in In re Lucas and Chesterfield Gas and Water Board (1) and cited with approval in Cedars Rapids Manufacturing & Power Co. v. Lacoste (5) at p. 576, viz.:

"the value to be paid for is the value to the owner as it existed at the date of the taking, not the value to the taker; (2) the value to the owner consists in all advantages which the land possesses, present or future, but it is the present value alone of such advantages that falls to be determined."

Secondly, in calculating the value of the land you do not take into account changes due to the acquisition but consider the land as it was prior to the acquisition. Thus, for example, if you find the land burdened by a public road, but acquired for a purpose that will abolish the road, so that the land when used for such a purpose ceases to be a road and becomes unencumbered land, yet since that condition is due to the acquisition that condition cannot be regarded. Examples of this latter principle can be found in Stabbing's case (6) and in the Privy Council decision of Manmatha Nath Mitter v. Secy. of State (7). In both these cases it was either held or indicated by way of example that a roadway that ceased to be a roadway as a consequence of the acquisition could not be treated as having at the time of the acquisition a market value was considered by the Full Bench in Rajagopala Naidu v. Ramasubramania Ayyar (8) at p. 789 (of 46 Mad.), where the English meaning, viz., the value that it would fetch in the market under the state of of things existing at the time, was adopted. This definition is consonant with the principle enunciated above. Thirdly, and as a branch of the rule that the value which has to be assessed is the value to the old owner who parts with his property and not the value to the new owner who takes it over, where the old owner takes the property subject to restrictions, it is necessary to inquire how far these restrictions affect the value. In determining the burden of the restriction one circumstance to consider is the chance of such a restriction being determined and it may therefore become a relevant subject of inquiry as to by whom the restriction can be determined. Two extreme cases can be put: (1) where the restriction can be determined at any moment (as in the case of a revocable license) by the claimant; and (2) where the restriction is imposed by an Act of Parliament for the benefit of the public generally. In the first case the restriction, though grave, would have practically no effect upon the value. In the second case the restriction, since it is one not likely to be removed, would burden the property to the full extent of the restriction.

Applying those principles to the facts of this case we find the circumstances are as follows: These pathways are not, save as one small pathway, given any separate paimash number. They appear to have been used by the cultivators of the fields or other occupiers of these lands for a great number of years. They are narrow, and, even if unburdened, quite unsuited from their shape for use as building sites. It is not established that the claimant can change the direction or close them or in any way remove the burden created by them. In these circumstances we find it difficult to see how they could have any value at all either as building sites or as agricultural land. On this point we accordingly restore the award of the land acquisition officer. As regards the ponds the position is somewhat different. There is evidence to show that in the past grants have been made by the zamindar of these ponds to the extent to which they have silted up; that is to say, there is evidence to show that the zamindar is under no obligation to maintain the ponds as ponds, and, if this be so, then the value to the zamindar of this part of the land is the value of the land less the cost

4. (1909) 1 K B 16 = 77 L J K B 1009 = 99 L T 767 = 72 J P 437 = 6 L G R 1106 = 24 T L R 858.

5. A I R 1914 P C 199 = (1914) A C 569 = 83 L J P C 162 = 110 L T 873 = 30 T L R 293.

6. (1881) 6 Q B 42.

7. (1898) 25 Cal 194 = 24 I A 177 = 1 C W N 698 (P C).

8. A I R 1924 Mad 119 = 74 I C 198 = 46 Mad 782 (F B).

which he would have to incur before he could make that land available for any productive purpose. This is the basis adopted by the land acquisition officer and we see no reason to disturb his findings and award on this head and accordingly restore it. Finally as to melwaram rights. It may well be that a preferable way of arriving at the melwaram rights would have been to value the land over which these rights extend as land in a contest between the acquirer and all the persons whose rights were acquired, assigning to each interest its several proportion of the compensation given. This however has not been done and cannot now be done. We must therefore arrive at such a figure as we best can, not in the manner above indicated, but by taking the melwaram rights as a separate species of property or interest in land within the meaning of the Land Acquisition Act, that is, as a separate marketable interest in land. What is the marketable value of melwaram?

In our opinion it is that sum which that melwaram would fetch in the open market. In determining that figure we think that the fundamental question is how much is the melwaram? That question is the one which the land acquisition officer put to himself at p. 12 and he found it to be the admitted present figure of Rs. 1,020-6-5. He found that the peishkush on that sum payable was Rs. 413-11-7, and the net income accordingly was Rs. 606-10-10. Subject to one correction hereafter to be mentioned, this appears to us to be the correct method of determining the value of this right. As however an entirely different method of valuing this right was strongly pressed before us and was accepted by the Subordinate Judge, we consider shortly the alternative method of assessing the compensation put forward. It is, so far as we understand it, as follows:

The zamindar claims that when land over which he has melwaram rights is occupied as building-site, he is in the habit of charging an extra ground rent of Re. 1 per ground for the land actually built upon and he averages that area at a quarter of the total area. That is to say, if four grounds are granted as building site, one ground will be occupied by the house and for that ground he gets

Re. 1. The remaining three grounds, though within the ambit of a building-site, are treated for this purpose as agricultural land. This, as we understand, is the case put forward on his behalf and is certainly the case which is supported by the evidence led on behalf of the claimant. It is not the test which appears to have been accepted by the Subordinate Judge who appears to have treated building sites as falling within two categories (1) those on which a building was put up, which he takes the ground rent at the rate of a rupee per ground for the whole site and (2) those which were granted as building-sites but kept vacant, in which he takes the rate at half a rupee. He accordingly treats the two limits at Re. 1 and half a rupee as the maximum and minimum for the whole area, thus assuming (1) that the whole area is a building-site and (2) that the rupee is charged not over the area occupied by the building but over the whole area sold as a building site. We do not consider it necessary further to examine this part of the case excepting to say that we find no reason to show why, apart from the Mambalam building scheme (which is an element we are not entitled to take into consideration), the particular area should be regarded as though it were a building site. It had not hitherto been built upon to any extent.

It is however a matter for consideration whether, consonant to the principles above enunciated, some allowance should not be made for the possibility of a portion of this area within a reasonable period becoming a building site, even apart from the land acquisition purpose. From the very nature of the case one can only roughly calculate the prospects. There is some evidence that this area was so situate as to make it possible that within a reasonable period some of it would become a building site. Bearing this fact in mind we are prepared to regard one quarter of it as potential building site and three quarters of it as agricultural land. This will increase the award of the land acquisition officer under this head by an amount. We estimate that this, in the zamindari's own method of calculation, would give him an increased income of Rs. 349 which at 20 years' purchase amount to a capital sum of Rs. 6,980.

There remains the question raised as to whether there was here a sufficient specific claim for the purposes of S. 9, Land Acquisition Act. If not, it is urged that S. 25 (2) prevents the award exceeding the amount awarded by the Collector. The point only relates to the claim for paths and ponds and accordingly does not now arise. In the result the appeal is allowed, and the land acquisition officer's award increased by the sum of Rs. 6,980 is restored. Costs will be proportionate in both cases in both Courts. Appeal No. 77 of 1930 is dismissed with costs. The statutory increase of 15 per cent will be allowed on the Rs. 6,980. Interest at 6 per cent allowed on the total increase from date of the land acquisition officer's award. Same statutory percentage and interest will be allowed on the increase if any found due in 365/1929.

P.R.S./P.N. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 194

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

(Marneni) Kondapanaidu and others
—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

(Pamidimarri) Mahalakshmamma and another—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 1159, 1265 and 1266 of 1928, Decided on 31st August 1931, against decrees of Sub-Judge, Nellore, in A. S. No. 120 to 122 of 1926.

(a) Madras Estates Land Act (1908), S. 3 (2) (d)—Grant of melwaram right only—It is estate.

Where a grant in inam is a grant of both the landlords and the tenant's right in the land or as they are called the melwaram and the kudivaram, the land is not an estate; but if the grant is of the landlord's right or melwaram alone it is an estate. [P 194 C 2]

(b) Grant—Shrotriem grant—Significance, explained.

A shrotriem grant may be a grant of kudivaram as well as melwaram. [P 195 C 2]

(c) Deed—Construction.

A deed should be construed as a whole and not in isolated parts. [P 195 C 2]

(d) Deed—Construction—Grant of village—"M" does not necessarily mean mauza.

In construing a grant of a village in the absence of any evidence on the point it would be unsafe to act on a mere surmise that "M" stands for mauza: A. I. R. 1920 P. C. 115; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 1 and A. I. R. 1915 Mad. 727, Ref.

[P 196 C 1, 2]

B. Somayya—for Appellants.

Ch. Raghava Rao—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The defendants are the appellants. These second appeals arise out of suits filed by the plaintiffs for the recovery of sums of money due for rent in respect of lands in the possession of the defendants. One of the contentions raised by the defendants was that the civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suits, their contention being that the lands in respect of which the suits have been filed form an estate within the meaning of Cl. (d), sub-S. 3, Madras Estates Land Act. S. 3 (2) (d), Estates Land Act, defines an estate

"as a village of which the land revenue alone has been granted in inam to a person not owning the kudivaram, provided that the grant has been made, confirmed or recognized by the British Government or any separated part of such village."

The law is settled that where a grant in inam is a grant of both the landlord's and the tenant's right in the land or as they are called the melwaram and the kudivaram, the land is not an estate; but if the grant is of the landlord's right or melwaram alone it is an estate; so that the question to be decided is whether the grant is of the land itself or only of the right to the revenue from the land. If it is the former the civil Court has jurisdiction to try the suits. If it is the latter, then the jurisdiction to try them will lie in the Revenue Court. Both the lower Courts held that the grant in this case consisted of both the melwaram and the kudivaram and hence that the civil Court has jurisdiction to try the suits. In second appeal the defendants-appellants contend that this conclusion is wrong and that the lower Court should have held the lands form an estate as contended by them, and this is the only question argued before me. The grant in favour of the plaintiffs' predecessors is evidenced by Ex. A. The terms of the grant are as follows:

"Gift deed dated nil. Deed of gift of shrotriem executed and given by Mallavarapu Venkatachellam Garu to Pydimari Dikshatulu on 15th Makha Sudha of Manmatha year, corresponding to the glorious era of Salivahana 1698. Fixing a total annual shrotriem beriz of 120 (one hundred and twenty) Madras star pagodas in respect of M. Chintalapalem Paragane Gudlur inclusive of Sadarvar, Deeva, Tahariar, Divani, Va Nazr, etc., we have settled the shrotriem and made a gift of it in propitiation to God on this auspicious occasion of lunar eclipse with the pouring of water with gold from Fasli 1185. You shall get the lands cultivated extensively year after year, and make them yield, pay as aforesaid, the sircar beriz year after year and enjoy the entire produce realized therefrom as long as the sun and the moon last from son to grandson and so on in succession and be happy. Here enter usual Sanskrit slokas.

(Signed) Venkatachellam."

Both parties agree that the word "fruits" or "usufruct" would better represent the original Telugu word than the word "produce" appearing in the last sentence in the translation. In Somayajulu v. Seethayya (1), when a grant somewhat resembling the present one in its features, came before this Court for construction the Full Bench held that the words of the grant were equally consistent with the grant of the revenue or of the land itself and that being so, according to the decision in Muthu Goundan v. Perumal Iyer (2), the presumption was that the grant was of both warams and that therefore the civil Court had jurisdiction to try the suits with respect to the "grant" in question. This decision was taken in appeal to the Privy Council: see the decision in Seethaya v. Somayajulu (3). By the time the case was disposed of the Privy Council had held in Sivaprakasa Pandara Sannadhi v. Veerama Reddi (4), that there was no presumption either way and that each case must be decided on its own circumstances and on examining the circumstances of the case before them the learned Judges came to the conclusion that the grant in that case was of the melwaram only and that therefore the civil Court had no jurisdiction to try the suits. The decision of the Full Bench was accordingly set aside. This decision of the Privy Council was not in existence when the lower Courts dealt with the present case. Mr. Somayya argues that the lower Courts based their conclusions on the decision in Somayajulu v. Seethayya (1), and that since the presumption that the grant would consist of both the melwaram and the kudivaram which was the basis of that decision was not accepted by the Privy Council in appeal, the lower Courts' decision in the present case should be set aside following the Privy Council decision in Seethayya v. Subramanya Somayajulu (3). I am not satisfied that the lower Courts have based their decision on the decision in Somayajulu v. Seethayya (1).

Though there is a reference to it in the first Court's judgment with regard to the meaning of the word "mouja" which will be referred to later, in the judgment of the appellate Court there is no reference to it at all. It appears to me that both the lower Courts have decided these cases after an examination of the terms of the "grant" and the circumstances of the case, without in any way being influenced by the now exploded presumption that the grant consists of both the warams which is just what should be done according to the Privy Council decision in Seethayya v. Somayajulu (3). I have referred to this matter at some length as Mr. Somayya's main argument was, that these cases are like the case of Somayajulu v. Seethayya (1), and as the decision in that case was set aside by the Privy Council, the decisions in these cases also should be set aside following Seethayya v. Subramanya Somayajulu (3). This result does not necessarily follow.

According to Seethayya v. Somayajulu (3), each case should be decided on its own merits. As was done by their Lordships in the appeal before them, I shall now proceed to examine the terms of the document.

The grant purports to be a "gift of shrotriem." It refers to a total annual "shrotriem beriz" of 120 Madras star pagodas and says "we have settled the shrotriem and made a gift of it." A shrotriem grant may be a grant of kudivaram as well as melwaram. Mr. Somayya argues that in this document the word "shrotriem" means only a melwaram of 120 Madras star pagodas and that was what was constituted or "settled" as the shrotriem and gifted to the shrotriem-dars. It is difficult to accept this argument. We have to construe the document as a whole. It is clear from the last sentence that the "shrotriem beriz" referred to at the commencement is the "beriz" or the net revenue which the shrotriemdar has to pay year after year to the sircar. In the context it cannot refer to the "melwaram" which is now stated to be the subject of the grant. The last sentence in the document gives a clue as to the meaning of the word "shrotriem" used in the gift deed. The grantee is directed to get the lands culti-

1. A I R 1923 Mad 1=70 I C 729=46 Mad 92 (FB).

2. A I R 1921 Mad 145=63 I C 790=44 Mad 588 (FB).

3. A I R 1929 P C 115=117 I C 507=56 I A 141=52 Mad 453 (PC).

4. A I R 1922 P C 292=63 I C 538=49 I A 285=45 Mad. 586 (PC).

vated, pay the sircar beriz year after year and then enjoy the entire "fruits" realized "therefrom." I take it that this means that after paying the sircar beriz what remains of the fruits realized from the village should be enjoyed by the grantee. The expression "you shall get the lands cultivated" does not necessarily show that the lands were already in the possession of the tenants and the grantee is to get them cultivated by them as contended for by Mr. Somayya. It is quite consistent with the meaning that it was the entire village that was granted under the deed. The grantee being a Brahmin, who does not generally cultivate lands the grantor may well say he should get the lands cultivated by them. However, it is not safe to rely on it as an absolute test.

It is next argued that all doubts regarding the nature of the grant are removed because of the letter "M" used with reference to Chintampalem, the name of the village, the argument being that "M" stands for mauza; and mauza according to the decision of the Privy Council in Seethayya v. Somayajulu (3), means a village in which there are present proprietors owning cultivable lands. This argument would be conclusively in favour of the appellants' case if we could so understand the letter "M." In the document under construction in Seethayya v. Somayajulu (3) no doubt the letter "M" appeared in the description of the village and the Privy Council gave it the above interpretation; but it must be remembered that it was "agreed to" between the parties in that case that the letter "M" meant mauja: see the judgment of the learned Chief Justice in Somayajulu v. Seethayya (1) at p. 97 (of 46 Mad.), wherein he says:

"it is agreed that the letter "M," is an abbreviation for the word "mauza" or "mouja."

In the case in Venkata Sastrulu v. Sitaramudu (5), in which the word "mauja" was first judicially interpreted by Sadasiva Ayyar, J., the village Billapadu was called by the full name "a mauja or mauza," and so there was no dispute about the word. In the present case the parties are not agreed as to what the letter "M" stands for. As the learned Subordinate Judge points out:

"in the absence of any evidence on the point it would be unsafe to act on a mere surmise that "M" stands for mauza."

The present case comes from Nellore whereas the case in Somayajulu v. Seethayya (1) came from the Guntur District. If the full word "mauza" had been prefixed, then the appellants' argument would have considerable force. As it is, in the absence of evidence much weight cannot be given to it, especially so when the other contents of the document give a different indication as to the nature of the grant. Mr. Somayya requests that an opportunity may be given to the appellants to give evidence as to the meaning of the letter "M" used in the document; but no attempt was made in the lower Courts to give evidence on the point; and in second appeal I do not think it would be right to grant the request, especially so as the document taken as a whole leaves no doubt in my mind that what was granted as shrotriom was the entire village and not the melvaram alone.

Another circumstance of some importance in construing this document is the fact that the grant was made by Venkatachallam Garu who was at the time of the grant a Foujedar Diwan of the Nellore Taluk under the Nawab Walajah. Foujedar is an officer in charge of the police and criminal Judge; and he was also the chief officer and representative of the Nawab in the district with headquarters at Nellore: see p. 482 of the District Manual. He was also the head renter under the Nawab for the district: see p. 490 of the District Manual. In Seethayya v. Somayajulu (3), the grantors were Despandyas who were merely revenue officers or farmers of revenue. The Privy Council pointed out that that being so, the strong probability is that "they granted that which in their position as Despandyas they would possess, namely, the rights over the revenue."

In this case no such inference can be made as the foujedars were not only farmers of revenue, but also executive officers representing the Nawab. Their position would show that they may well have possessed entire villages as their own. No doubt the grant was made to a non-resident Brahmin, but, as pointed out by the Privy Council, this circumstance is by itself by no means conclusive. It has to be understood along with the other circumstances in the case.

Reading the document as a whole I think that what was granted under Ex. A was the entire village including the kudi-varam in it and not only the melwaram as contended for by Mr. Somayya. The last sentence in the document clearly shows that the shrotriem beriz referred to in the beginning of the grant is only the revenue that the grantee has to pay to the sircar and that the entire village saddled only with the responsibility of paying this revenue was granted to the grantee to be enjoyed for ever.

On the whole I agree with the opinion of the lower Courts regarding the construction of Ex. A. The meaning of the grant being clear, I do not think it necessary to examine the documents subsequent to the grant to find out its true nature. The lower Courts have however considered these documents and have come to the conclusion that the inference derived therefrom support the construction of the grant adopted by them. Some of these documents have been brought to my notice also and I may say that I agree generally with the view of the lower Courts in this matter. For the above reasons I hold that the view of the lower Courts that the civil Court has jurisdiction to try these cases, is correct and that the second appeals should be dismissed with costs. Before I conclude I must refer to a statement in the last paragraph of the learned Subordinate Judge's judgment referred to by the learned counsel for the appellants. In that paragraph it is stated :

"It has not been shown how the defendants have acquired permanent occupancy rights by any other means."

It is clear, and this is conceded also by Mr. Raghava Rao appearing for the respondents, that this sentence should be deleted as the defendants did not raise this question in the appeal before the lower Court and the plaintiff also did not appeal with respect to it.

P.R.S./B.V. Appeal dismissed.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 197

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

(Bukkapatnam) Triumala Narasimhacharyulu—Appellant.

v.

(Sree Rajah) Sabhnadri Appa Rao Bahadur Zamindar Garu—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 886 of 1929, Decided on 18th August 1932.

(a) Decree—Execution—Executing Court cannot go behind decree—Civil P. C. (1908). O. 21, R. 17.

An executing Court cannot go behind the decree and allow an objection as to the validity or binding character of the decree by anyone who was a party to the suit. Such a question must be made the subject of a separate suit: A I R 1932 Mad 7, Ref.

It may be that the contention that the decree is a nullity may be decided by the executing Court. [P 198 C 2]

* (b) Limitation Act (1908), S. 14—Proceedings attacking validity of decree under S. 47, Civil P. C., on the ground of fraud of guardian—Subsequent suit on the same ground and for the same relief—Prior proceedings prosecuted under legal advice—Such period to be excluded for limitation.

Misconception of the remedy sought in the previous action may be taken as criterion for deciding the existence of good faith but cannot be added for the necessary conditions in S. 14.

A suit was filed against A who was represented by a guardian. Through the gross negligence and fraud of the guardian a decree was passed against A and his property was attached on 19th September 1920. Upon which under the legal advice A started proceedings in the execution Court to set aside the decree on the above mentioned grounds. He went up to the High Court which on 14th September 1926 decided that the executing Court was incompetent to decide this question. A brought the present suit praying for same relief on the same grounds and claimed exclusion of time from 19th September 1920 to 14th September 1926 under S. 14.

Held: that A was entitled to exclude the period spent in the prosecution of the prior proceedings for computing the period of limitation: A I R 1929 P C 103, Foll. [P 200 C 1]

V. Govindarajachari—for Appellant.

P. Satyanarayana Rao—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The plaintiff is the appellant. This appeal arises out of a suit brought by him to set aside on the ground of fraud and gross negligence of his former guardian, the decree in O. S. No. 188 of 1906 in which he was impleaded as defendant 5. The preliminary question that was taken up for consideration by both the Courts below is one of limitation. One of the grounds urged by the plaintiff to save the suit from the bar of limitation is, that the fraud alleged in the plaint became known to him only on 19th September 1920, when his properties were attached in execution of the decree in the former suit. On that footing he seeks to have the period from 19th September 1920 to 14th September 1926 excluded under S. 14, Lim. Act, from computation of the period of limitation for this suit, as he was prosecuting the proceedings in

I. A. No. 1328 of 1920 (Ex. B) in good faith. The Courts below held that the afore-said period of time could not be excluded under S. 14, Lim. Act, and as a consequence of this finding, the suit was barred even assuming that the starting point of limitation was 1st September 1920 on account of the fraud alleged in the plaint.

The main point for consideration in this second appeal is, whether the plaintiff is entitled to the exclusion of time under S. 14, Lim. Act, or not. In order to apply the aforesaid section, it must be found that the former proceeding was founded upon the same cause of action and was prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature, was unable to entertain it. Another aspect for consideration under that section is whether the previous proceeding was for the same relief although not founded upon the same cause of action. In para. 5 of the lower Court's judgment, the learned District Judge has set forth the allegations which can be deemed to be common in the former application and in the present plaint. That application was presented under S. 47, Civil P. C., for certain relief to be obtained from the executing Court. If regard be had to the common allegations in the former petition and in the present plaint, I should observe that the grounds set forth by the plaintiff in order to obtain the reliefs required by him are substantially the same. Some of the allegations in the former application clearly indicate fraud on the part of the plaintiff in O. S. No. 188 of 1906 by reason of the suppression of the fact of adoption of the present plaintiff and also the gross negligence of his natural mother appointed as his guardian ad litem, though fraud and gross negligence are not stated specifically, there is enough indication that these are the grounds on which the present plaintiff attacked the validity of the decree passed against him. It is true that he went so far as to allege that he was not a party to that suit at all in the sense that there was no representation of him as the adopted son which, according to him, is his real status. In para. 6 of his application, he expressly says that the said decree cannot legally bind him or his property. It is on this basis he sought for a declaration that the properties of his adoptive family were not liable to attachment in execution of that decree and the proceedings in execution taken against him are not valid. In the present suit, after setting forth all the previous allegations with some embellishments, the relief asked for by him is a declaration that the former decree is not valid and binding on him.

The point to be considered is whether the present relief sought for in this suit and based upon substantially the same allegations as affording a cause of action was one which the executing Court had jurisdiction to grant on the former application. It is settled law that an executing Court cannot go behind the decree and allow an objection as to the validity or binding character of the decree by anyone who was a party to the suit. Such a question could not be gone into by the executing Court, but it must be made the subject of a separate suit: vide Gorindan Nadar v. Natesa Pillai (1). It may be that, if the decree sought to be executed is attacked as a nullity, such a contention may be decided by the executing Court. In the present case, though one of the objections taken by the present plaintiff was that he was not to be considered as a party to the former suit, he did raise several other objections which would only go to show that the decree could not be valid and binding on him. As his application was deemed to cover this kind of relief also, it was observed by Wallace, J., in the second appeal connected with the former application, that, if the petitioner's contention was, as it really seemed to be, that his natural mother did not properly look after his interests in the suit, he should get the decree set aside by proceedings ad hoc and could not resist the execution of the decree on that ground. On a due consideration of the allegations in the present plaint and those in the former application, I am of opinion that the material facts constituting the cause of action in the present suit were also alleged in the former application. I therefore hold that the former proceedings may be deemed to have been founded upon the same cause of action. It can even be said that this relief which is asked for in the present suit was in a way asked for in the former proceeding.

as ancillary to the main relief or reliefs claimed.

That being² so we have to see whether the former proceeding was prosecuted in good faith or not. Even the lower appellate Court does not seriously dispute this position and says that it may be assumed that the plaintiff prosecuted the prior proceeding in good faith since he acted under legal advice. The observation of the Privy Council in the case reported as Ramdutt Ramkishan Das v. F. D. Sassoon & Co. (2) is to the effect that S. 14, Lim. Act, was intended to protect a bona fide plaintiff from the consequence of some mistake which was made by his advisers in prosecuting his claim. If under the wrong advice given to the plaintiff, he believed that he could get the decree declared to be not valid and binding on him by an application to the executing Court, and under that belief he prosecuted the former proceeding right up to the High Court, it would be difficult to say that he was not acting in good faith in the conduct of that litigation. Some of the reliefs asked for by him were no doubt within the jurisdiction of the executing Court, although this particular relief was beyond the competency of that Court.

Granting the existence of good faith in the plaintiff, the next point to be considered is whether the executing Court was unable to entertain the application in respect of the aforesaid relief on account of defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature. The word "jurisdiction" occurring in S. 14, Lim. Act, should in my opinion be interpreted liberally and this is the view taken in some of the authorities. The decision in Dhansingh v. Basantsingh (3) deals with this question elaborately. As observed by Mahmood, J., on p. 527, adopting the meaning given in Wharton's Law Lexicon, "jurisdiction" means "legal authority, extent of power, declaration of the law." "Extent of power" may mean the territorial limits of jurisdiction or the pecuniary limits of jurisdiction. There is another category which has reference to the nature of the class to which the case belongs. For the purposes of the present appeal, it is enough to observe that the executing Court had no jurisdiction to grant the relief asked for in the present plaint, which was also one of the reliefs sought for in the former application. Several decisions have been cited by the learned advocate for the appellant as to what would be defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature, within the meaning of S. 14, Lim. Act. It is unnecessary to deal with those decisions. Suffice it to say, that in the present case the executing Court had no jurisdiction to grant the particular relief or at any rate, was unable to grant it from a cause of a like nature.

It is strongly contended by the learned advocate for the respondent that inasmuch as the former proceeding was a misconceived remedy the case is taken out of S. 14, Lim. Act. Reliance is placed upon the decision in Ganupathi Mudaliar v. Krishnamachari (4) which is the same as the decision in 70 I. C. 733 referred to by the lower appellate Court. If a suit or proceeding by reason of any inherent defect in it should fail before any Court, it cannot be said that the Court before which it was presented was unable to entertain it from defect of jurisdiction. If a suit or proceeding which is otherwise competent was presented before a wrong forum, then that Court could not entertain it for want of jurisdiction. If the present plaintiff had only sought for this relief by means of a suit, the Court would not be unable to entertain it for want of jurisdiction but as the same relief was asked for in an application under S. 47 to be decided by the executing Court, that Court was unable to entertain it for the express reason mentioned in S. 14 of the Act. In Ganapathi's case (4) above referred to, the learned Judges have considered the applicability of S. 14 as a question of secondary importance. The finding that that case was governed by Art. 167, Lim. Act, was sought for the disposal of that case. However, they considered the question relating to S. 14 also, and in the circumstances of that case they held that the former action was entirely misconceived.

If the misconception was of such a nature and so patent as to indicate to any Court want of due care and attention or want of ordinary diligence, then

2. A I R 1929 P C 103=115 I C 713=56 I A 128=56 Cal 1048 (P C).

3. (1886) 8 All 519=(1886) A WN 182.

4. A I R 1922 Mad 417=70 I C 743.

it may be said that the plaintiff cannot be deemed to have prosecuted the former action in good faith. In the decision reported as Murugesu Mudaliar v. Jatharam Dary (5), which was also referred to in the above case there is no express finding that the former action was not prosecuted in good faith. It may be that the learned Judges thought that the remedy was so glaringly misconceived as to amount to lack of good faith. In Ganapathi Mudaliar v. Krishnamachari (4) there is no doubt an observation that the plaintiff acted in good faith. I am however of opinion that we cannot add to the conditions set forth in S. 14, Lim. Act, as the requisites for the exclusion of time. The misconception of the remedy sought for in the previous action, may in my opinion, be taken as a criterion for determining the existence of good faith. But if all the requisites mentioned in S. 14 are found to exist, it seems to me that the benefit given by that section cannot be taken away on the mere ground that, in the opinion of the Court, the course adopted before was not a well-conceived one. However that may be, I do not consider that the former application by the plaintiff was entirely misconceived, as was the case considered in Ganppathi Mudaliar v. Krishnamachari (4).

For this reason I am of opinion that the period from 19th September 1920 to 14th September 1926, should be excluded from the computation of the period of limitation under S. 14, Lim. Act. That being so, the suit cannot be dismissed on the preliminary ground adopted by the Courts below. I may point out that the question whether the starting point of limitation for this suit is 19th September 1920, or not, is still an open question which has to be decided hereafter. The decrees of the Courts below are set aside and also the finding on issue 3, and the suit is remanded to the Court of first instance to be disposed of according to law. The appellant's costs in this appeal should be paid by the respondent, and the other costs will abide the final result and should be provided for by the first Court. The court-fee paid by the appellant in this Court and in the lower appellate Court will be refunded to him.

P.R.S./K.S.

Suit remanded.

5. (1900) 23 Mad 621.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 200

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

(Peria) Syed Levvai Rowther and another—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Syed Ammal—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 92 of 1930 and Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1508 of 1929, Decided on 12th August 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Madura, in A. S. No. 23 of 1929.

Limitation Act (1908), Art. 120 — Mahomedan family—Partition suit — Female asking for accounts from managing cosharer of property for ten years, i. e., for period prior to six years of suit — Demand for accounts within one year of suit—Suit is within time.

In a partition suit between the cosharers of a Mahomedan family, a female cosharer asked for accounts and profits of her share from the managing cosharer for a period of ten years.

Held : that in the circumstances of the case, the right to sue was a continuing one and arose when there was a demand and a refusal for accounts and profits. In this case the refusal was before one year of the suit and hence the suit was not barred under Art. 120. That the plaintiff could claim an account for the whole period of ten years. This was so because if such a suit had been brought within six years after the demand and refusal then the person liable may be asked to account for the entire period of his management even if it exceeds six years : Case law discussed. [P 202 C 1, 2]

K. Rajah Ayyar, V. Ramaswami Ayyar and K. Venkateswaran — for Appellant.

S. R. Muthuswamy Ayyar — for Respondent.

Judgment.—Defendants 2 and 4 are the appellants. This second appeal arises out of a suit for partition of the estate of one Syed Kalai Syed Levvai now deceased. He died leaving him surviving his widow, two daughters and his brother and sister. The widow is the plaintiff. The daughters are defendants 6 and 7 and the brother's heirs are defendants 1 to 5. The sister Bathammal is not a party to the suit. Syed Levvai died in February 1909. His brother Peria Narain Levvai died in October 1911. It has been found by the lower Courts that after that time defendant 4 has been in management of the estate. The plaintiff was given her share in the immovable properties. A decree was also given to her against defendant 4, her brother's son, to account for her share of the collections and income from the estate commencing from October 1911. She was also given a decree with respect to the mortgage amount in Ex. 21-a and in respect of Rs. 500 under Exs. D and D-1. Defendant 2 was made liable to account for the income of the lands till 1915 as admitted in his written statement. The suit has been preferred in 1922.

In this second appeal objection is taken as regards the period during which defendant 4 has been made liable to account for the income and collections, and also with regard to his liability to account for the amount due under Exs. 21-a and D and D-1. As regards the first point that is the period for which defendant 4 was made liable to account, which I shall deal with first, the argument of the learned counsel for the appellant is that Art. 120, Limitation Act, applies to the case and that the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in giving a decree to the plaintiff for the income and collections arising out of the estate for more than six years prior to the suit. The lower Courts found, as already stated, that defendant 4 was in management from the death of his brother in October 1911. It was also found that the plaintiff's demand for her share of the property was refused only in 1921, about a year before the suit. It is conceded that Art. 120 is the article of the Limitation Act applicable to the case. The article prescribes a period of six years for a suit for which no period of limitation is provided in the Limitation Act, the period being calculated from the time when the right to sue accrues. In applying this article it is argued that since the plaintiff's claim is for an account against defendant 4 for the income and collections made by him, it must be held that his cause of action for each year's income and the collections arose on the receipt of such income, and so, in taking the accounts the appellant should not have been asked to account for more than six years, (that is, for years prior to 1916) in this case. On behalf of the respondent, it is argued that the suit is for partition, that the right to sue is a continuing one and accrues in such a case only, when there has been a demand and a refusal and that if the suit has been brought within six years after the demand and refusal then the person liable may be asked to account for the entire period of his management even if it exceeds six years.

The claim for an account, though made in a partition suit, being in the nature of a suit for an account, it is pointed out that the respondent's argument is open to the criticism that by calling the suit a suit for partition, which, no doubt it really is, in one sense, the essential nature of the claim is overlooked and the claimant is enabled to keep alive his cause of action indefinitely which in many cases may be a source of hardship to the co-heir who is in management of the estate. This argument is not without some force, but this Court has in a series of cases allowed accounting in partition suits brought against co-heirs for more than six years. In Abdul Rahiman v. Pathumal Bivi (1), a case like the present between Mahomedan one of the reliefs claimed by a Mahomedan lady against her co-heir was in respect of the amount of a mortgage debt collected by the defendant more than six years before the suit and it was held that Art. 120 applied to the case and as the right to sue accrued from day to day the action was not barred. In arriving at their conclusion the learned Judges relied on the following remarks of Sankaran Nair, J. and Oldfield, J., in Marian Bivi Ammal v. Kadir Meera Saheb (2) :

"The defendants having taken up possession of the property as tenants-in-common they must be deemed to have been in possession of such property on behalf of themselves and of the plaintiff and it lies on them to say that so far as the plaintiff is concerned the character of the possession was changed six years before the date of the suit."

In that case which was similar to the one before them the learned Judges held that the plaintiff's claim was not barred though the moveables for which she claimed a share had come into the defendant's hands more than 20 years before suit. In Subba Row v. Rama Row (3), the plaintiff and the defendant were cosharers in a jaghir which was originally granted to their ancestor. The defendant had been appointed by the Government as the manager thereof in 1886 and was liable to account to the plaintiff for his share of the net income accruing due in every year. In 1913 the plaintiff sued for the recovery of his share of the income due for the

1. (1916) 32 I C 83.

2. (1915) 29 I C 275.

3. (1917) 40 Mad 291=32 I C 829 years 1905 to 1907, for a period prior to six years before the suit.

It was held that under Art. 120 the claim was not barred by limitation. It is argued for the appellant that in these cases the question for decision was whether Art. 62 or Art. 120, Lim. Act, would apply and not if, whether Art. 120 applied, a person liable to account should be called on to account for more than six years prior to the suit. It is true that this particular point did not arise for decision in those cases but the reasoning on which the learned Judges held that Art. 120 applied and not Art. 62 clearly shows that the liability to account would extend for more than six years prior to the suit, the right to partition being a continuing one. This appears to be clear from the observations regarding suits for partition in Mohabarat Shaha v. Abdul Hamid Khan (4) relied on by the learned Judges in Abdul Rahiman v. Pathumal Bivi (1) which are as follows:

"We might possibly hold that such suits are not beyond the scope of the Limitation Act, but that in each case the right to sue accrues every moment during the whole of the time, that the right to the property continues to exist; for instance, the liability to be partitioned is one of the incidents of joint property and a co-owner has the right to sue for partition at every moment of the whole period during which he continues to be co-owner."

The decisions which I have referred to are relied on in the Full Bench decision in Yerukola v. Yerukola (5). In that case which was also one for partition and an account, the Full Bench held that Art. 120 would apply and not Art. 89 and 109 or Art. 127 unless from the facts of the case it could be inferred that the person receiving the moneys, rents and profits acted as an agent in which case Art. 89 would apply. In holding that Art. 120 would apply, the learned Sir Walter Schwabe, C. J., dealt with the question as to whether (see p. 664 of 45 Mad.) the right to sue is to be deemed to accrue on the receipts of the profits or when the account is called for and refused, and his observations on that question deal with the point now pressed by the learned advocate for the appellant. The learned Judge observed as follows:

"In my judgment—and I have the support of the authority already referred to, Marian Biri Ammal v. Kadir Meera Saheb (2), the right to sue arises in this kind of cases when there is a demand and a refusal for account, or, it could be put as, when there is in fact, an ouster. It really follows from what I have already said there is no cause of action on the mere receipt by one of the brothers of any particular amount, and it is clear to my mind that the period of limitation cannot run until the cause of action arises. That cause of action does not come into being until, at any rate, there is something done which shows that the man who got the money into his possession is holding it adversely to the plaintiff."

This case was followed in Ayyakutti Thevan v. Sigappi Achi (6), in which case the plaintiff was given a decree for an account for the period mentioned in the plaint which appears from the papers was for 13 years, i. e. 1910 to 1923. So according to the trend of the decisions of this Court, having regard to the findings that the demand for the income and its refusal in this case was only in the year 1921 the plaintiff's right to demand from defendant 4 an account of the income from October 1911 to the date of the suit though the period is for more than six years cannot be held to be barred under Art. 120, Lim. Act.

The appellant has not been able to cite any decision of this Court in support of his contention, but he has referred to a few decisions of the other Courts and a decision of the Privy Council which I shall now consider. In Biswambar Halder v. Giri Bala Dasi (7) the present point did not arise for decision. That suit seems to have been treated mainly as a suit for an account, but however that may be, the only question that was decided was that Art. 10, Lim. Act, would not govern a suit for account against a karta and that Art. 120 is the article applicable. In Maung Po Nyun v. Ma Saw Pin (A. I. R. 1931 Rang. 150) the suit in which the claimants were decreed six years' profits was a suit for the recovery of rents and profits and not a suit for partition, the share of the property and the income to which the respondents were entitled having been already settled in a prior suit, and further the question whether, if Art. 120 applied, the suit would be barred for the recovery of profits for more than six years was not considered, the only question for decision being which of the articles, 109, 62 or 120, would apply. The appellant very strongly relied on the order of their Lordships of the Privy Council reported

4. (1905) 1 C L J 73.

5. A I R 1922 Mad 150=71 I C 177=45 Mad 648 (F B).

6. A I R 1928 Mad 1286=114 I C 364.

7. A I R 1921 Cal 571=58 I C 877.

in Midnapore Zamindari Co. v. Naresh Narayan, A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 93, overruling their decision in A I R 1924 P C 144. In the main case the plaintiff obtained a decree for the partition of certain lands in which he and the Midnapur Company were cosharers and the company was ordered to pay compensation to the plaintiff for his exclusive use of the land from 20th June 1908 until the partition has been effected and possession of the lands falling to plaintiff has been delivered. It is pointed out in Midnapur Zamindari Co. v. Kumar Naresh Narayan, A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 93, that the above judgment was subsequently amended by their Lordships by inserting the date 8th August 1906 in the place of 20th June 1903, the suit having been filed on 8th August 1912.

It is argued that this amendment shows that compensation for only six years under Art. 120 was allowed by the Privy Council and not for more than six years. The amendment no doubt justifies the argument urged by the appellants' counsel but the reasoning of their Lordships does not appear in the report and from the bare fact that the previous order was amended in the way indicated in the report I am not prepared to hold that the decisions of this Court which I have noticed require reconsideration. For the above reasons, following the decisions of this Court I agree with the lower Court, in holding that the plaintiff is entitled to claim from defendant 4 her share of the income and collections made by him for the full period commencing from October 1911 and not merely for a period of six years prior to the suit. The next argument relates to the mortgage amount in Ex. 21-A and Rs. 500 under Exs. D and D-1. The arguments urged in connexion with these items, deal with the findings of fact arrived at by the lower Courts which cannot be questioned in second appeal. In the result the second appeal is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./B.V.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 203

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

T. S. Sitarama Ayyar—Petitioner.

v.

G. Ramanuja Mudaliar — Respondent.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 109 of 1931, Decided on 8th April 1931.

(a) Court-fees Act (1870), Sch. 1, Art. 1—Term "set-off" may include equitable set-off—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 8, R. 6.

There is nothing to show that the set off mentioned in Art. 1 is confined only to legal set off coming under O. 8, R. 6, Civil P. C.; prima facie the expression "set-off" used in this article may well nigh include an equitable set off also: A I R 1923 All 118, Foll. [P 204 C 2]

(b) Court-fees Act (1870), Sch. 1, Art. 1—Suit on promissory note—Claim for specified amount by way of set-off by reason of breach of covenant of contract of sale out of which transaction in suit arose—Claim came under Art. 1.

Where on a suit brought on the basis of a promissory note the defendant claimed in his written statement a specified amount by way of damages, setting out the particulars of the claim made by him as one arising from the transaction of sale which led to the execution of the promissory note in favour of the plaintiff and by reason of the breach of covenant alleged to have been committed by the plaintiff:

Held: that the claim by way of set-off came under Art. 1, Sch. 1. [P 204 C 2]

V. Balasundaram Ayyar—for Petitioner.

A. V. Vishwanatha Sastri—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The question involved in this petition is whether the defendant-petitioner has to pay the court-fee under Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court-fees Act, on the amount of Rs. 2,000, which he has claimed as against the plaintiff in his written statement by way of damages in a suit brought by the plaintiff on a promissory note. The learned District Munsif has disposed of this question, which is not after all free from difficulty, in a single sentence, namely:

"I think the defendant must pay the court-fee due on the set off claimed by him as damages against the plaintiff."

It is amazing that he has not chosen to give his reasons for the conclusion arrived at by him. It is therefore difficult to know what reasons were operating on the mind of the learned District Munsif when he passed this order that the court-fee must be paid. This sort of deciding a contested petition should, to say the least, be deprecated. However I had the advantage of the arguments of the learned counsel on both sides on this question. O. 8, R. 6, Civil P. C., deals with set-off claimed by a defendant in his written statement. The amount so claimed should be an ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff. The question now is whether the claim of the present defendant made in his written statement is for any ascertained sum of money legally recoverable by him from the plaintiff within the meaning of R. 6, O. 8. No doubt, judicial decisions have recognized subtle distinctions between what is called a legal set-off and an equitable set-off. It is argued on behalf of the petitioner, that what is contemplated by R. 6, O. 8, Civil P. C., is only a legal set-off. Claims by way of equitable set-off are said to be outside the scope of this rule. One test applied for distinguishing the two sorts of set-off is whether the claim is for an ascertained sum of money or only for unliquidated damages. It will be going too far to contend that the moment the claim for a certain amount is stated to be by way of damages, it must be treated as a claim for an unliquidated sum and therefore it comes under equitable set-off only. The observations in the decision in Narasimha Rao v. Zamindar of Tiruvarur (1) go to show that the claim of the present defendant in his written statement would not strictly come under equitable set-off. In that case, the defendant asked for ascertainment of the amount due to him from the plaintiff on account of dealings between them and for the passing of a decree in his favour for any sum found to be due to him on such ascertainment, in excess of what is found due to the plaintiff.

In that case the defendant did not even fix a certain amount as due to him from the plaintiff. Strictly speaking, such a case would be one of equitable set-off. In the present case, the defendant sets out the particulars of the claim made by him as one arising from the transaction of sale which led to the execution of the promissory note in favour of the plaintiff. By reason of the breach of the covenants alleged to have been committed by the plaintiff, it is stated that the defendant sustained damages to the extent of Rs. 2,000, which he claimed to set off against the amount claimed by the plaintiff. In the first place the defendant himself claimed a specific amount alleged to be due to him on account of damages and as such it cannot be said that his claim is only for unliquidated damages. Even stretching the point in favour of the defendant and holding that his claim in the present case is not one strictly within the purview of O. 8, R. 6, Civil P. C., I am doubtful whether he can escape the liability of paying the court-fee on the sum of Rs. 2,000, fixed in his written statement as due from the plaintiff. In Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court-fees Act, it is stated that a written statement pleading a set-off or a counter-claim is liable to stamp duty as in the case of a plaint.

There is nothing to show that the set-off mentioned in this article is confined only to legal set-off coming under O. 8, R. 6, Civil P. C. Prima facie the expression "set-off" used in this article may well nigh include an equitable set-off also. As observed in the decision of the Allahabad High Court in Chhakkan Lal v. Kanhaiya Lal (2), at p. 220 (of 45 All.) the rulings of the High Courts before the date of the amendment of Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court-fees Act, may no longer be applicable in the matter of determining whether a written statement pleading a set-off is liable to stamp duty or not. It is only when the aforesaid article of the Court-fees Act was amended at the time of the enactment of the present Civil Procedure Code that a written statement pleading a set-off or a counter-claim was placed on a par with the plaint in the matter of payment of court-fee. I am therefore of opinion, taking into consideration the nature of the claim by way of set-off made in the written statement in the present case, that it certainly comes under Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court-fees Act, and the order of the District Munsif directing the payment of the necessary court-fee has to be upheld. This revision petition is therefore dismissed, but in the circumstances without costs. One month's time is allowed from this date to the defendant for the payment of the court-fee in the lower Court.

P.R.S./V.B.

Order accordingly.

2. A I R 1923 All 118=69 I C 921=45 All 218.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 204

CURGENVEN AND CORNISH, JJ.

Krishnaswami Sastrigal—Appellant.

v.

Avayambal Ammal and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 286 of 1928, Decided on 5th February 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Tiruvarur, in O. S. No. 41 of 1925.

(a) Hindu Law—Will—Construction of—To decide whether it creates trust or mere charge on estate, will must be taken as a whole.

1. A I R 1920 Mad 819=53 I C 234=42 Mad 873.

In determining whether the will of a Hindu gives the testator's estate to an idol subject to a charge in favour of heirs or makes the gift to the idol a charge upon the estate there is no fixed rule depending upon the use of particular terms in the will; the question depends upon the construction of the will as a whole: A I R 1921 P C 20, Ref. [P 206 C 1]

A will provided that the testator's sister shall enjoy the immovable property and from its income shall expend annually certain quantities of paddy and of cash towards the upkeep of the specified ceremonies and charities and shall give the testator's wife a certain quantity of paddy for maintenance and contained the following clause: 'In this manner my sister and her male heirs and their descendants from generation to generation shall defray the afore-said expenses and take the balance of the income for themselves:

Held: that the intention of the testator was to place the two charges on the same footing and this itself afforded a strong argument against the view that he was desirous of creating a trust. The will bequeathed the property to the sister subject to the charges specified.

[P 206 C 2]

(b) Hindu Law — Will — Two or more donees, when tenants-in-common and when joint tenants stated.

Except in a case where the donees in the absence of any testamentary disposition would have taken the property as ancestral property, they would take as tenants-in-common, unless a contrary intention is shown by the testator. If the property was in terms given to a joint Hindu family the family will take it with all the incidents of ancestral or joint family property; but if the gift is not to a joint family but to members of it individually, they would take it in severalty. Even in a case where a life estate is interposed the property will be taken by the eventual donees as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants: A I R 1924 Mad 273 and 27 Mad 300 (FB), Ref. [P 206 C 2]

(c) Hindu Law—Will—Tenancy is common or joint—Incidents of possession same—Onus to waive separate rights is on him who asserts it.

Where the incidents of possession of the property are the same whether the tenancy is in common or joint, the onus of establishing a clear intention to waive the separate rights to the property is upon the party who asserts it: A I R 1929 Cal 636 and A I R 1925 Mad 303, Ref. [P 207 C 1]

K. Narasimha Ayyangar—for Appellant.

T. L. Venkatarama Ayyar—for Respondents.

Curgenvén, J.—The decision of this case is dependent upon the construction to be placed upon a will, Ex. A, executed by one Venkatarama Ayyar in 1902 bequeathing certain properties to his sister Parvati, who died in February 1923. Parvati was the mother of defendant 1 and of Sitarama Sestri, who died in March 1924 and whose widow is the plaintiff. Together the two brothers formed a co-parcenary. Defendant 1 resists the plaintiff's claim to partition of the properties devised by the will firstly on the ground that it created a trust; and secondly, if that contention does not succeed, upon a claim of survivorship, it being argued that the brothers took the property as joint tenants and not as tenants-in-common. The learned Subordinate Judge of Tiruvarur has held in favour of the plaintiff upon both points and defendant 1 appeals.

We think the lower Court is correct in holding that the provisions of the will did not constitute a trust, and that Parvati took the devised property subject to charges in favour of certain charities and of an allowance for maintenance. Our attention has been drawn to two cases decided by the Privy Council, Sonatun Bysack v. Juggutsoon-daree Dossee (1) and Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn (2), in which it was held to be sufficient to rebut the construction of a trust that the instrument in question contained a bequest of surplus property for the use and benefit of private persons. In the latter of these two cases a Hindu lady left certain lands to her sons by will to support the daily worship of an idol and to defray the expenses of certain other religious ceremonies, with a provision that in the event of there being a surplus after these uses had been satisfied out of the revenue of the said lands, such surplus should be applied to the support of the family. Their Lordships held that the property was therefore not wholly debutter and that appears to have been the ground upon which they rejected the contention that it was trust property. We cite these cases to make it clear that the principles of construction to be applied in the case of a will or a gift deed executed by a Hindu are quite different from those which are appropriate in the case of a wakf, some attempt having been made before us to apply such a case as Ramanathan Chettiar v. Lervai Marakkayar (3), which expressly applies the Mahomedan law relating to trusts of that character. An instance of a trust created by a Hindu deed of endowment is furnished by Jadu Nath Singh v. Thakur Sita Ramji (4), which will be found referred to and distinguished by the Privy Council in Har Narayan v. Surja Kunwari (5). In the last mentioned case it was observed that in determining whether the will of a Hindu gives the testator's estate to an idol subject to a charge in favour of heirs or makes the gift to the idol a charge upon the estate, there is no fixed rule depending upon the use of particular terms in the will; the question depends upon the construction of the will as a whole.

1. (1859-61) 8 M I A 66=2 Suth. 37=1 Sar 721 (P C).

2. (1880) 5 Cal 438=6 I A 182=4 Sar 53 (P C).

3. A I R 1916 P C 86=39 I C 235=44 I A 21=40 Mad 116 (P C).

Applying these principles to the will Ex. A we find that it provides at the beginning that the testator's sister Parvati shall enjoy the immovable property and from its income shall expend annually certain quantities of paddy and of cash towards the upkeep of the specified ceremonies and charities. She is also to give the testator's wife Alamelu a certain quantity of paddy for maintenance. The learned Subordinate Judge estimates the yield of the property at not less than 350 kalams of paddy per annum. Of this the charities, etc., would absorb 95, and the widow Alamelu another 75, leaving 180 kalams as balance at the disposal of the beneficiary. This calculation omits a certain undefined quantity to be devoted annually to the feeding of Brahmins, but it is not probable that this would amount to a very substantial figure. Accordingly the amount to be devoted to religious and charitable purposes is only about one half as great as the surplus available from the property. It can scarcely be said therefore that the predominant purpose of the testator was to endow these charities, even if, as has been argued for the appellant, such a test would be appropriate. After making these dispositions the will continues:

"In this manner my sister Parvati and her male heirs and their descendants from generation to generation shall defray the aforesaid expenses and take the balance of the income for themselves," and concludes by naming certain of the lands as security, firstly, for the conduct of the charities and, secondly, for the payment of the maintenance to Alamelu. It seems therefore to have been the testator's intention to place these two charges upon the same footing, and this in itself affords a strong argument against the view that he was desirous of creating a trust. We agree with the lower Court in the view it has taken that the will bequeathed the property to Parvati subject to the charges specified. It seems clear further that on Parvati's death the two brothers inherited the property as tenants-in-common and that that would be so whether the will gave Parvati an absolute estate or only a life interest. The question of the nature of the estate taken in such cases has been very fully discussed by Kumaraswamy Sastri and Krishnan, J.J., in Janakiram Chetty v. Nagamony Mudaliar (6). The learned Judges except the case where the donees in the absence of any testamentary disposition, would have taken the property as ancestral property, and hold that in all other cases they would take as tenants-in-common, unless a contrary intention was shown by the testator. Krishnan, J. puts it in this way, that if the property was in terms given to a joint Hindu family the family will take it with all the incidents of ancestral or joint family property; but if the gift is not to a joint family but to members of it individually, they would take it in severalty. It is pointed out that even in a case where a life estate is interposed the property will be taken by the eventual donees as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants. The principles upon which this case was decided may be compared with those which influenced the Full Bench in Karuppai Nachiar v. Sankaranarayanan Chetty (7), in deciding that the sons, although forming an undivided Hindu family, take their mother's stridhanam property as tenants-in-common without the benefit of survivorship.

4. A I R 1917 P C 177=42 I C 225=44 I A 187=20 O C 200=29 All 553 (P C).

5. A I R 1921 P C 20=63 I C 31=18 I A 113=43 All 291 (P C).

It is then said that, granting this to be so, the suit property was blended with their joint family property by the two brothers. The authorities which have been cited before us upon this question are of little assistance, because they all deal with the blending of property exclusively owned by one member of a coparcenary. In such cases where property which would ordinarily be enjoyed separately is thrown into the common stock, the intention becomes clear enough. But in the present instance, in spite of the technical difference of title, the incidents of possession of the property would be the same whether the tenancy is in common or joint. As has been held in Rajani Kanta v. Bashiram, A. I. R. 1929 Cal 636 and Mayandi Servai v. Santhanam Servai (8), the onus of establishing a clear intention to waive the separate rights to the property is upon the party who asserts it and it is clear that there is no sufficient evidence for such a conclusion in the present case. Sitarama Sastri only survived his mother by one year and no accounts have been produced to show how the property was treated during that period. Defendant 1 asserts that the income from all their property was kept together, but even if that be true, such a course is hardly incompatible with the nature of the ownership. We agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that the letters produced throw no light upon this question and in general that there are no grounds for holding that the property, acquired in severalty, was converted into joint property.

6. A I R 1926 Mad 273=93 I C 662=49 Mad 98.

7. (1904) 27 Mad 300 (FB)

We accordingly dismiss the appeal with costs. (Cross-objections were also dismissed).

P.R.S./K.N. Order accordingly.

8. A I R 1925 Mad 10 — 81 I C 1031.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 207

BEASLEY, C. J. AND STONE, J.

Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd.—Appellant.

v.

Official Assignee of Madras — Respondent.

Original Side Appeal No. 67 of 1930, Decided on 30th March 1932, against original judgment of Waller, J., D/- 7th January 1930.

* (a) Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 52 (2) (c) — Person before adjudication borrowing money and assigning railway receipt to Bank—Official Assignee after adjudication claiming goods of insolvent under S. 52 (2) (c)—As assignment of railway receipt effects valid pledge of goods Official Assignee cannot succeed — Assignment of railway receipt coupled with letter of lien over goods passed constructive possession to Bank—Contract Act (1872), S. 178.

Where a person, dealing in extensive trade of ground-nuts, before he was adjudicated an insolvent, used to borrow money from a certain Bank before doing which he had to endorse and assign the railway receipt and sign and give a letter of lien over the goods, if after his adjudication as an insolvent the Official Assignee claims the goods under the reputed ownership clause of Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (1909), S. 52 (2) (c), Official Assignee cannot succeed in that there was a pledge of railway receipt and such pledge had the effect of pledging the goods, or even otherwise, there was good pledge of a railway receipt as a document and the effect of that was to give to the Bank as against either the insolvent or the Official Assignee the right to receive from the carrier those goods.

Construction of S. 178, Contract Act, thoroughly discussed: Case law discussed.

[P 209 C 1, 2]

Moreover, the endorsement of the railway receipt coupled with the letter of lien to the effect that the goods were deposited with the Bank by way of security had the effect of passing the goods in the constructive possession of the Bank irrespective of the fact that there was no notice to the carrier.

[P 209 C 1, 2]

(b) Transfer of Property Act (1882), Ss. 137 and 4 — S. 137 is made part of the Contract Act.

Section 137, T. P. Act, is part of a chapter which relates to contracts, and accordingly by S. 4, T. P. Act, it is made part of the Contract Act.

[P 209 C 2]

(c) Contract Act (1872), S. 178—"Person"—Not restricted to "mercantile agent"—Includes owner not in possession of goods.

The term "person" in S. 178 includes the owner of the goods not in possession of the goods and is not restricted only to "mercantile agent."

[P 210 C 1]

(d) Interpretation of Statutes—Some rules stated.

(1) In construing statutes the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adhered to, unless that would lead to absurdity or some repugnancy or inconsistency with the rest of the statute. Even if the result of the construction were absurd that is no reason to depart from clear and unequivocal language capable of only one meaning.

[P 210 C 1]

(2) The duty of a Court is not to draft laws so that they may be just or reasonable or consonant to accepted principle. Its duty is to expound the laws as they stand giving to all words used the meaning they have either according to common usage or, if defined, according to the meaning given therein in the Act in question or in the interpretation Act.

[P 210 C 2]

(3) Where one finds words included in one section and excluded in another, one must assume either carelessness or intention and unless the latter results in an impossible position the legislature must be assumed to be using its language intentionally.

[P 211 C 1]

Nugent Grant and Vere Mockett — for Appellants.

Advocate-General—for Respondent.

Stone, J.—The facts in this case are simple and can be stated as follows: The appellants who I shall hereafter refer to as the Bank lent one C. K. N., now an insolvent, money by various loans. These loans were arranged in order to finance the purchase by C. K. N., of groundnuts. C. K. N., was a large buyer of groundnuts. He purchased on credit. Sometimes he received delivery in the various centres in the mofussil; sometimes he received delivery in Madras. In the former case he was the consignor and the consignee; in the latter case he was the consignee mentioned in the various railway receipts relating to these various consignments during their transit by rail. Transit was by a carrier hereafter referred to as the Port Trust. The immediate destination in all cases was the Port Trust godowns at Madras. The goods were first placed in Port Trust godowns to await orders. The goods in question were there or en route at the time of the act of bankruptcy. That was the course of business pursued by C. K. N., his sellers; and his carriers in relation to the purchase, transport and delivery of these goods.

As regards C. K. N. and the Bank the following are the material acts done; C. K. N., having obtained railway receipts in respect of these goods bought on credit took or sent the railway receipt in respect of any particular consignment to the Bank to arrange a loan. Before a loan was granted the borrower was required: (1) to endorse and assign the railway receipt; (2) to sign and give a letter of lien: see documents at p. 49; (3) make and deliver a promissory note. The letter of lien is a document whereby the borrower acknowledges to have deposited with the Bank the property hereunder mentioned as a collateral security for the due payment of the promissory note. There are many other terms the general purpose of which is to enable the Bank to make up the security if there appear to be a deficiency, to hold in respect of charges or expenses, to sell and appropriate, or, if necessary, to obtain such further documents as may be found necessary to vest in the Bank the property to enable the Bank to sell and to prevent the borrower from doing anything to revoke or avoid any authority given or to be given to enable the Bank to sell. The hereunder-mentioned property is shown in the schedule. The schedule mentions bags of groundnuts and refers to the number of the loan, particulars of which appear in the loan register. The precise bags of groundnuts can be identified from the information given in the schedule or the loan registers through the railway receipt. The railway receipt is by the bank stamped with the bank stamp and endorsed on behalf of the bank by the manager. It is handed to the bank's head godown keeper and by him entered with particulars in a book. In the past many of those railway receipts had been handed by him to the godown keeper employed by the bank who worked at the Port Trust outside godowns (i. e. the godowns bearing the Bank's board) and by him handed to C. K. N.'s representative to enable him to obtain, on paying freight, the goods which, up to then, were in the Port Trust's inside godowns. It is unnecessary to complicate this narrative with a reference to various frauds, which were thereby committed, the goods, title to which is in dispute in this case, being at all material times (i. e. up to the date when the act of bankruptcy occurred, viz. 7th February 1929) either in course of transit by rail, or in the Port Trust's inside godown awaiting orders as to delivery.

As to the course of business between the bank and the Port Trust, the Port Trust were aware of the Bank's board on the outside godown but were not given actual notice by the Bank until after the adjudication of either the lien created by the letter of lien or the pledge created by the assignment by way of security of the railway receipts. At that stage the Bank notified the Port Trust but the Port Trust declined delivery to the Bank pending communication with the Official Assignee. The Official Assignee claimed the goods. Subsequently under order of Court the goods were sold by the Bank for the account of whosoever may be found entitled. The question of substance is "Who is entitled, the Official Assignee or the Bank?" The learned trial Judge on the issues as framed has held that the Official Assignee is entitled. From that decision this appeal is brought.

In considering the law involved in the determination of the above questions it is very desirable to make it clear that the issues and consequently the judgment appealed from do not raise directly a question as to the effect of the letter of lien. It is conceded however by the Advocate-General that (apart from the order and disposition clause) if either, (1) the letter of lien creates a charge on these goods, or (2) the railway receipt by endorsement transfers not merely a title to receive but constructive possession of the goods, then the Official Assignee's title is postponed to that of the Bank, the Bank having in the first case a charge for the amounts advanced against these goods and in the second case a pledge of the goods for the amount advanced. But it is urged that (a) a railway receipt unlike a bill of lading, though a document of title, is a document giving title to receive but not giving constructive possession, possession being a necessary ingredient of the transaction of pledge, there being no possession there is no perfected pledge; or (b) granted a perfected pledge, the goods have remained in the order or disposition of the insolvent so as to pass to the Official Assignee under the reputed ownership section of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, S. 52 (2)(c). The argument addressed to us hardly glances at the effect of the letter of lien.

On the other hand it is urged that the railway receipt has, by Statute, been assimilated for this purpose to a bill of lading, alternatively has been treated by the custom of merchants in Madras as equivalent to a document passing possession of the goods by delivery of the document itself. It is also urged that in the circumstances here present, granted that the Bank is to be deemed the true owner of these goods for the purpose of S. 52, they have not so acted as to make the insolvent the reputed owner. No argument has been addressed to us dealing with the consequences flowing from the fact that these goods are the subject-matter of letters of lien. As to custom: this is a question of fact and as there was some evidence on which the learned Judge could find as he did, his finding cannot be disturbed.

The most difficult question is as to the consequences which in law flow, in India, from the endorsement and delivery, by way of security for a loan, or a railway receipt. If, for this purpose, a railway receipt constructively passes possession, then it is not contested the insolvent pledged his goods; if on the other hand the railway receipt passes the title to receive goods in future and on presentation of the railway receipt and a pledge of documents of title do not (save in the case of bills of lading) operate as a pledge of the goods then it is conceded there was no pledge of the goods. This still leaves outstanding the question whether there was a pledge of the railway receipts and if so what effect in law that has. Issue 1, it is to be observed, relates to the transfer, the delivery and the pledging of railway receipts and mentions nothing about goods. The material statutory provisions are as follows :

By S. 137, T. P. Act, a railway receipt is declared to be included in the expression "mercantile document of title to goods." That section is part of a chapter which relates, and the section relates, to contracts, and accordingly by S. 4, T. P. Act, it is made part of the Contract Act. By S. 178, Contract Act, applicable (it has since been substantially amended so as to be brought in line with the English Factors Act and Sale of Goods Act) it is provided that (the words that create difficulty are italicized) :

"a person who is in possession of any goods, or of any bill of lading order for delivery, or any other document of title to goods, may make a valid pledge of such goods or document: provided that the pawnee acts in good faith, and under circumstances which are not such as to raise a reasonable presumption that the pawnor is acting improperly; provided also that such goods or documents have not been obtained from their lawful owner, or from any person in lawful custody of them, by reason of an offence or fraud."

It is to be observed that this provision occurs in that part of the Contract Act which is headed "Bailments of Pledge" and that by S. 172 :

"the bailment of goods as security for payment of a debt or performance of a promise is called "pledge."

So in a part which, by transposition of terms is purporting to deal with bailments of goods (whatever that may be) we have a provision which speaks of "a valid bailment of goods of such goods or documents." This, of course, is an impossible reading. The question is : (1) Is the expression "may make a valid pledge of such goods or documents" to be construed without reference to S. 172 or (2) as the words "of such goods or documents" to be deleted as redundant; or (3) should the expression be read as follows : "may make a valid pledge by the pledging of such goods or documents?" If the last alternative be chosen, then a pledge of the described documents has the same effect as pledging goods because "a valid pledge" means "a valid bailment of goods." If the second alternative be chosen, one is left in doubt how one may make the valid pledge, but one would have to assume the addition of the words "by pledging such goods or documents" and so arrive at the same meaning as in the third alternative. If the first alternative be chosen one has to consider what is the effect of pledging a document as distinct from pledging goods.

Next what is meant by "person?" This term can hardly be restricted to "mercantile agent." Can it in view of the words italicized, in the proviso be restricted to mean "a person other than the owner?" In construing this difficult Act I think it is well to bear in mind the so-called golden rule for the interpretation of statutes. It is thus stated in Maxwell, Edn. 5, at p. 4:

"In construing statutes the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words is to be adhered to, unless that would lead to absurdity or some repugnancy or inconsistency with the rest of the (statute):"

Thus Lord Wensleydale in Grey v. Pearson (1), Lord Ellenborough in Doe v. Jessop (2), described it as "a rule of common sense as strong as can be." Lord Cranworth in Gundry v. Pinniger (3), called it the cardinal rule and Jervis, C.J., in Mattison v. Hart (4) described it as the golden rule. Applying that rule to S. 178 one asks first: Does the phrase "person not in possession of goods" include (giving the words their ordinary meaning) the owner of the goods not in possession of goods? The answer is: It does. Next does that result in repugnancy or inconsistency with the rest of the instrument? Looking at S. 103 where the owner is expressly mentioned as a person having power to pledge (i. e., make a bailment of goods) by pledging documents of title the answer is that it does not. Looking at S. 108 one sees a difference, but neither a repugnancy nor an inconsistency. On the contrary the legislature when enacting the provisions of

S. 108 expressly excludes the owner from rights X (relating to sale); when enacting S. 178 includes the owner in the class having rights Y (relating to pledge). That is not inconsistent or repugnant. The argument founded on a supposed carelessness must be rejected; as must that founded on the supposition that India must necessarily follow at a respectful distance England in its legislative advances. Even if the result of the construction were absurd, that is no reason to depart from clear and unequivocal language capable of only one meaning: see Maxwell at p. 5, Op. Cit. The words in the proviso assist neither construction. They are neutral. Whether "person" includes owner or not, it clearly includes persons who are not owners and accordingly provision has to be made for them, and some classes of such persons have to be excluded. The provisos describe such excluded classes. The proviso relates, it should be observed, to pledges of goods as well as to pledges of documents.

The duty of a Court is not to draft laws so that they may be just or reasonable or consonant to accepted principle. Its duty is to expound the laws as they stand giving to all words used the meaning they have either according to common usage or, if defined, according to the meaning given therein in the Act in question or in the Interpretation Act. It is of course in the last degree unfortunate that an Act should be drafted and then that definitions should be added which result in most curious results, but however curious the results a Judge must give effect to them. The legislature must use the pruning knife if it is to be used at all. In deference to the argument addressed to us based upon other parts of the same Act and the state of the law as it stood when this Act in 1872 was passed, those arguments are now examined.

If Excep. 1, S. 108, is referred to, it will be seen that, when dealing with the contract of sale, persons in possession of these documents of title may give a better title than they have. Here the Act says "when any person is, by consent of the owner, in possession, etc." It is urged that as in S. 108 the inclusion of the words "by the consent of the owner" excludes the owner from the class covered by the word "person," so in S. 178 it was the intention of the legislature to

1. (1857) 6 H L C 61=26 L J Ch 473 = 3 Jur (n s) 823=5 W R 454.

2. 12 East 293.

3. (1852) 1 De G M & G 502=21 L J Ch 405=16 Jur 483.

4. (1854) 14 C B 357=2 C L R 314=23 L J C P 108=18 Jur 386=2 W R 327.

exclude "owner" from the term "person." I know however of no such rule of construction. It pre-supposes carelessness on the part of the legislature. The fact that owner is thus excluded from person in S. 108 suggests that it was not intended to exclude him in S. 178; otherwise, what could be easier than to use the same language in both cases? Where one finds words included in one section and excluded in another, one must assume either carelessness or intention and unless the latter results in an impossible position (and who is to say this position is impossible?) the legislature must be assumed to be using its language intentionally. Then there is S. 103. This speaks of the assigning of a "bill of lading or other instrument of title to any goods by the buyer by way of pledge."

In such a case, the unpaid vendor cannot stop except on satisfying the pledgee. Unless one is to use the word "pledge" here in one sense and in S. 172 in another, this section means that one may make a bailment of goods by pledging instruments of title. In Ramdas Vithaldas v. S. Ameerchand & Co. (5) at pp. 169 and 170 (of 43 I. A.) the Judicial Committee treated the effect of this section read with S. 102 as enabling a pledge of the goods to be effected by pledging not only bills of lading (which in English law operate, unlike all other documents of title, to pass constructive possession of goods) but also "instruments of title." Their Lordships also held that instruments of title and documents of title are terms having, for the purpose of this Act, similar meanings. For similar reasons, it may be concluded that the "mercantile documents of title" referred to in S. 137, T. P. Act, are documents which are included in the wider expression "documents of title" and that documents of title or instruments of title include railway receipts.

Now if under the provisions of S. 103, the pledging of a railway receipt effects a pledging of the goods, it is not desirable so to construe S. 178, if the rules of construction so permit, as to enable that section to be so read as to provide also for the pledging of goods by the pledging of documents of title? Otherwise, of course, very curious results flow. In this case this results. If here the unpaid vendor of the goods had exercised his power to stop, a power which arises on insolvency by S. 99, he could have defeated the Official Assignee, but he would have to pay off the bank; but if he does not exercise this power then (because S. 178 and not S. 103 applies, we are for the sake of the analysis assuming a different effect of pledging documents under S. 178 from that which flows as from S. 103) the pledge is only of the document, the goods are not pledged, the possession of the goods as distinct from the documents does not pass and the Official Assignee can claim as against the bank. This appears to result in the impossible position that the bank's position is entirely altered according to whether an independent third party does or does not exercise a power against the Official Assignee: improving if he does exercise the power and declining if he does not. This difficulty immediately disappears if one choose the third alternative reading of S. 178 above referred to. As no other reading appears necessarily to follow from the language used, this reading appears to be the one most consonant to the other provisions of the Act. There remains the difficulty caused by the use of the word "person." This difficulty may be expressed thus:

5. A I R 1916 P C 7=35 I C 954=43 I A 164=40 Bom 630 (P C).

"At Common law a pledge of goods could only be effected by parting with the possession actually or constructively of the goods. By the Law Merchant bills of lading but no other documents of title were treated as equivalent for this purpose to goods. The transfer of a delivery order operated only as a token of authority to take possession and not as a transfer of possession: see M^r Ewan v. Smith (6)."

This position was altered by the Factors Act which eventually enabled a restricted class of agents (but not the principal) to pledge goods by pledging documents of title to goods. This entirely changed the effect of a pledge of a document of title when, but only when the pledgor was a mercantile agent. The law in England did not reach even this stage until the Factors Act of 1877. The Indian Contract Act on the other hand was passed in 1872 and the law previously applicable was that enacted by the Indian Factors Act of 1844, the provisions of which are textually the same as the English Factors Act of 1842. This gave to the owner no such power to pledge goods by pledging documents. Therefore an owner cannot pledge goods by pledging documents unless delivery of the documents operates as constructive possession of the goods and this is so only in the case of bills of lading. That appears to be the argument based on the history of this legislation. Thus if the word "person" includes "owner," and if that section is read as above construed, it results in this: that in 1872 the Indian Legislature went far beyond the position arrived at in England even today for it made pledges of documents the same as pledges of goods not only when the document was pledged by a mercantile agent but where it was pledged by anybody (subject to the provisos) including the owner. Although this may seem improbable, it is not impossible and whether "person" does or does not include owner it certainly includes a wider class than the class of mercantile agents so that some extension of the English position on any reading must be involved. This being so, no reason is seen for giving to a word which appears to be unambiguous a meaning other than its ordinary meaning. That "person" in such a collocation includes "owner" prima facie appears to be clear.

6. (1849) 2 H L C 309.

But there is in my opinion a conclusive consideration to be derived from S. 103. This section, as the Judicial Committee in the above cited case have held, enables goods to be pledged by pledging documents of title. But the pledgor there referred to is left in no doubt. It is the buyer of the goods. That is to say, the owner may under S. 103 pledge goods by pledging documents. Why then is it necessary to do violence to the use of words by excluding him from the class of persons who may pledge goods by pledging documents when one is considering S. 178? If as is urged by the Advocate-General S. 178 relates to (a) the pledging of goods and (b) the pledging of documents, then, as also urged by him, no provision such as is contained in S. 3, English Factors Act, contained in the Indian Contract Act and so a pledge of a document of title has no other effect than pledging the document. For the reasons above assigned S. 178 should be so construed, i. e., it should not be construed so as to distinguish between pledge of goods and a pledge of documents. It is purporting to deal with pledges and pledges are defined as bailments of goods.

I am therefore of the opinion that here there was a pledge of railway receipts and such pledge had the effect of pledging the goods. Alternatively if I am wrong in regarding a pledge of a railway receipt as a pledge of the goods there was in my opinion a good pledge of a railway receipt as a document and the effect of that was to give to the pledgee as against either the insolvent or the Official Assignee the right to receive from the carrier those goods. There being no notice, assuming the alternative opinion is the correct one, had the Port Trust parted with actual possession to a third party, or had a third party lawfully seized the goods as in the Scots case of Inglis v. Roberston (7), it might well be that owing to the Bank's failure to notify the person having custody of the existence of the pledge the Bank would have no remedy either against the carrier or the person obtaining possession. No such question however here arises in my opinion.

It is necessary before parting with this branch of the case to advert to the practice of the Port Trust of delivering against indemnity bonds to persons without production of the railway receipts. This power is said to be derived from S. 57, Railways Act. It is said that such a power shows that a railway receipt is not a document of title capable of passing possession when pledged. I do not think so. The effect of so delivering is that the Port Trust, if held liable, have their remedy over against the person giving the indemnity. That is to say they have a right, derived from the indemnity bond, to claim to be indemnified. Indemnity only arises where the person to be indemnified suffers a loss. The loss arises because such person is made liable. Having been made liable and having suffered loss the carrier proceeds on the indemnity bond. If the person giving it is insolvent, that is the carrier's misfortune. Further the fact that it was considered necessary to give this statutory right to the carrier to refuse delivery suggests that apart from such statutory power he would have been bound to deliver and this appears to be so whether one regards a railway receipt as a document of title passing constructive possession (as a bill of lading) or a document of title giving the right to receive (as a delivery order).

The next question that arises is : Assuming that there was a pledge of the goods and that accordingly constructive possession had passed to the Bank, were the goods in the order and disposition of the bankrupt ? The material dates and facts are as follows : The goods in question were despatched in various parcels from various places between 13th January and 4th February; the act of bankruptcy occurred upon 7th February. At that date some of the goods were on rail, some were in the Port Trust's inside godown, i. e., freight charges had not been paid and the carrier was either carrying them or holding them in warehouse pending delivery. Such warehouse was the railway goods-shed or godown. The dates on which the various parcels arrived at the Port Trust godowns are shown at p. 41 of the document. In the case of items Nos. 7, 10, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 23, 24 and 25 the goods had arrived on or before 7th February. In all the other cases the goods arrived on or after 7th February, i. e., were in transit at the time of the act of bankruptcy. The learned trial Judge has expressed the opinion that in the circumstances here present the goods were in the order and disposition of the insolvents with the Bank's consent. He adds:

"It has always been held that the absence of notice by the true owner of his title to the bailee is evidence of such consent."

Now of course the reputed ownership clause is generally resorted to where the possession is in the insolvent and the ownership in a third person. Here the custody is in a carrier, the constructive possession is in the Bank, and the ownership in the insolvent. "True owner" for the purpose of S. 52 can have a very special meaning and can include a person having a lien, or an equitable charge, as well as a person having the legal title. But is the section applicable where, as here, not only are the documents of title transferred but the insolvent has given a letter declaring that the goods are deposited with the Bank by way of security and where the goods are not in any place or warehouse over which the insolvent has control but in a carrier's railway waggon or goods shed ? A case which in my opinion is similar to this came before the Courts in England in 1905. In that case In re Hamilton Young & Co. Ex parte Carter (8) the Bank advanced moneys to traders for the purchase, preparation and shipment of goods to the East. The course of business was for the traders to send the goods to bleachers who bleached them and sent them to packers to be packed for shipment. The Bank was handed bleacher's receipts. Prior to the act of bankruptcy the Bank gave notice to the bleachers and to traders claiming the goods. Here no notice was given to the Port Trust. Whether that makes all the difference on this point I shall consider. The first question was whether the letter of lien amounted to a bill of sale. No such question arises here. The next question was, assuming the letter of lien was not void were the goods in the actual possession of the bleachers in the order and disposition of the bankrupt as being held by their bailees (the bleachers) with the consent of the "true owner" (the bank as persons having a charge created by the letter of lien)? Bigham, J., at pp. 389 and 390, observes:

"It was said that the goods were in the order and disposition of the bankrupts at the commencement of the bankruptcy. That is a question of fact and there can be no doubt as to the answer to be given to it. The goods were no doubt the goods of the bank in the sense that they had a charge on them; but the bank never consented to the goods being in the order and disposition of the bankrupts in their trade or business, and certainly did not do so under such circumstances that the bankrupts became the reputed owners of the goods."

In re William Watson & Co., Ex parte Atkin Brothers (9) was followed. That case decided, what I believe has never since been doubted, that whether the clause applies depends upon the circumstances of the case and whether these circumstances necessarily lead to the inference of ownership. The inference of ownership must, not might, arise: see at pp. 756 and 757. On appeal in Hamilton Young's case (8) at p. 788 Vaughan Williams, L. J., does not put the matter on the ground of notice at all, and with respect, I think for a very good reason. He considers the documents, the letter of lien and the bleachers' receipts. He points out that the goods as from the moment of the giving of the letters of lien (not from the date of the notice) were subject to a good lien on the part of the bank. Coupled with the receipts he came to the conclusion (though I find p. 788 somewhat difficult to follow unless there is a misprint) that the bank had possession and control: see as to this Cozens-Hardy, L. J., at p. 790. The test there applied at p. 785 and at p. 790 was:

8. (1905) 2 K B 391 and on appeal 772=93 L T 591=54 W R 260=12 Manson 365=21 T L R 757=74 L J K B 905.

9. (1904) 2 K B 753 = 73 L J K B 854 = 11 Manson 256=20 T L R 727=73 L J K B 854.

"Would the Bank have been entitled to an injunction restraining the traders if the traders had attempted to take the goods out of the control of the Bank by dealing with them for a purpose other than that contemplated, viz., preparing, packing and shipping."

The answer being yes, it followed that the bank had control. The question there was of course whether the letter of lien coupled with the bleachers' certificate were documents "used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods" within the meaning of the Bills of Sales Act. But if that is so, how can it be said that in the circumstances here present with a pledge, and a letter of lien, with the goods on rail or in a carrier's warehouse, how can it be said that the goods were in either the possession, or order or disposition of the insolvent? And even if that were so, what is the evidence that it was with the consent of the true owner unless consent is to be assumed necessarily to follow from absence of notice to the carrier of the assignment of railway receipts or of the granting of letter of lien? In my opinion the appellants here are in the same case as the plaintiffs in C. Simeons and Co. v. Durand's Trustee (10). They did not by their conduct in any way induce a belief that these goods were in the possession, order or disposition of the bankrupt under such circumstances that he was the reputed owner thereof. I do not apprehend that the learned trial Judge made a finding of fact to the contrary, but rather that he arrived at his conclusion because the Bank had not notified the Port Trust that the Bank held the railway receipts and that "it had always been held" that absence of notice proved consent to the goods being in the order or disposition of the bankrupt as reputed owner. This appears to be a finding of law, and with great respect I think it goes too far.

Absence of notice is one circumstance. It is a circumstance that might make all the difference if, apart from notice, the possession remains in the insolvent; but here whether one regards the pledge or the lien, possession had constructively passed to the Bank. It might make a difference if the order or disposition remained in the insolvent, but without the railway receipts he could not demand delivery of these goods. S. 67, Railways Act, gives a right to the carrier; it gives no right to the consignee. Without those railways receipts, had the carrier so chosen, the consignee was powerless to touch the goods. Whether or not delivery under general indemnity bonds is authorized by S. 57, there is no evidence that the Bank either knew of such practice in general or that C. K. N. was on the general indemnity list. The Bank had no reason to imagine that delivery would be made to anyone in the absence of the railway receipts. The previous course of business had been, so far as the Bank knew, that delivery was made on railway receipt to any outside godown bearing the Bank's name. If a bona fide person had demanded these goods from the Port Trust and the Port Trust, not having notice of any other claims, had delivered, without production of the railway receipt, then the absence of notice would probably be a matter of great importance when considering the liability of the Port Trust or the title as against the Bank of the person to whom delivery had been made; but I cannot think it concludes the question as to whether the goods are in the possession, order or disposition of the insolvent by the consent of the true owner under such circumstances that he is the reputed owner thereof.

Again the absence of notice might be a critical matter in a contest between a pledgee or a lienee and the Official Assignee where the pledge or lien to be made effective require a third party in custody of the goods to alter his position from that of a bailee possessing on behalf of the insolvent to that of a bailee possessing on behalf of the pledgee or lienee, because until that change in possession had occurred the pledge or lien might be deemed imperfect. Where however, as here, the pledges of the documents are as though they were pledges of goods the pledge is perfect and there is constructive transfer of possession from the pledgor to the pledgee apart from notice. And even though I may be wrong in attributing this effect to the pledging of a document of title and such a pledge of a document of title does not operate as constructive possession of the goods, yet in this case one cannot ignore in this connexion the letter of lien. In my view, as between the insolvent and the Bank, as from the moment any good letter of lien was completed and handed to the Bank, from that moment the Bank is to be deemed in any contest between the Bank and C. K. N. or C. K. N's representative-in-title as having possession of the goods, the subject matter of the letter of lien. Were it otherwise, one would not be giving effect to the plain words of the letter which are to the effect that the goods in question are deposited with the Bank by way of security. It is true that they are not deposited actually upon the Bank's premises, but I think the clear intention of the parties is that as from that moment those particular goods are to be deemed to be held by either the insolvent or any bailee from the insolvent not from the insolvent but for the Bank and insolvent's possession or the possession of a bailee from the insolvent is to be deemed in any contest between the Bank and the insolvent or his representative in interest as the possession of the Bank. It might well be that the absence of notice of this arrangement come to between the Bank and the insolvent would enable a third party who has in the absence of such notice altered his position for the worse to raise a plea of estoppel based on the absence of such notice.

10. (1928) 2 K B 66 = 97 L J K B 537 = 138 L T 612 = 44 T L R 310 = 72 S J 155 = 1928 B & Cr 19.

It might well be that a bailee who in the eye of the law would be deemed a bailee for the insolvent would be able to defend himself against a claim founded in a wrongful delivery to a person other than the Bank on the ground that the Bank had not notified him of that lien. In all such contests as these absence of notice might be critical, but I do not think that absence of notice to the carrier in itself renders the conclusion inevitable that the goods were in the order or disposition of the insolvent as reputed owner with the consent of the true owner. I think any member of the public finding that the document of title to receive these goods were not with the insolvent would arrive at the conclusion that the goods were not in his order and disposition. I am clearly of the opinion that they would not be compelled to come to the conclusion that they were in the insolvent's order and disposition simply because on inquiry of the carrier the carrier informed them that no notice of any assignment or other dealing with the railway receipts had been received. Very different considerations would arise if the circumstances were that the goods had been delivered to outside godowns whence the insolvent could remove them without the railway receipt. In such a case notice to the warehouse keeper might in some circumstances I think be necessary to prevent the goods being in the order and disposition. That however is a question to be decided when it arises. It does not in my opinion arise in this case.

In my view accordingly the appeal succeeds with costs here and below.

Baxley, C. J.—I agree.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 215

ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, J.

M. R. Srinivasa Ayyangar—Defendant—Petitioner.

V.

Venkatarama Ayyar — Plaintiff—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petns. Nos. 1774 and 1775 of 1930, Decided on 24th April 1931, against orders of the Sub-Judge, Tanjore, D/- 27th June 1930.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 18—Right to set off cannot be claimed unless both decrees are before same Court for execution.

The right to set off cannot be claimed unless both the decrees which are sought to be set off against each other are before the same Court for execution: 32 Mad 336, Foll. [P 216 C 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 49—Equities have to be enforced though assignee is assignee without notice.

For the purpose of S. 49 the equities have to be enforced even though the assignee might in fact have been an assignee without notice. Otherwise the very object of S. 49 would be in effect frustrated and its provisions rendered nugatory: 7 I C 55, Rel on. [P 217 C 1]

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 49—Right of set off can be available against assignee of decree.

Where the right of set-off is available to a judgment-debtor against his assignor decree-holder, it is also available against the assignee of the decree: A I R 1930 Lrh 508, Dist.

[P 217 C 2]

D. Ramaswami Iyengar — for Petitioner.

K. Swaminathan for A. V. Viswanatha Sastri—for Opposite Party.

Judgment. — These are two revision petitions filed by the decree-holder (Srinivasa Ayyangar) in S. C. S. No. 883 of 1926 on the file of the Subordinate Judge's Court of West Tanjore. He obtained a decree for Rs. 216 against one Manicka Thevar. Manicka Thevar however obtained a decree against the petitioner Srinivasa Ayyangar in the same Court in S. C. S. No. 1101 of 1926 for Rs. 66. The decree-holder in S. C. S. No. 883 of 1926 applied for satisfaction being entered in respect of the amount of Rs. 66 odd due by him under the decree in S. C. S. No. 1101 of 1926. The lower Court refused to grant that request and accordingly the decree-holder in Suit No. 883 of 1926 had preferred one of the two revision petitions. The decree-holder in S. C. S. No. 1101 of 1926 assigned his rights under the decree to one Venkataramaier. Venkataramaier applied to the Court which passed the decree, namely, the Subordinate Judge's Court of West Tanjore, under O. 21, R. 16, for recognizing him as assignee decree-holder and for execution of the decree in 1101 of 1926. In spite of the protest raised by the decree-holder in Suit No. 883, the learned Subordinate Judge, recognized the assignment and allowed the assignee to take out execution for the amount due under the decree in 1101 of 1926. Against that order the decree-holder in 883 of 1926, who is the judgment-debtor in 1101 of 1926, has filed the second of the two revision petitions before me.

It would appear that the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 applied on a former occasion to execute his decree. That was at a time when the decree-holder in 1101 of 1926 had his decree transferred from the Tanjore Court to the Court of Mannargudi. In these circumstances the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 did not apply for a set off and his execution petition was subsequently dismissed for some reason not affecting the merits and not material for the present. Subsequently the decree-holder in 1101 of 1926 having assigned his decree as observed above, to Venkataramaier, Venkataramaier applied to the said Court of West Tanjore for recognizing his assignment and for executing the decree in S. C. S. No. 1101 of 1926. When that application was pending before the Tanjore Court, the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 applied to the same Court for execution of his decree and for setting off the amount due under the decree in 1101 of 1926 towards the larger amount due under the decree in 883 of 1926. The learned Subordinate Judge, while passing orders in the two connected matters, held that the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 was not entitled to the set off claimed by him, for two reasons: (1) not having applied for the set-off in January 1930 when he first applied for execution he had lost his right; and (2) as the decree in 1101 of 1926 had been assigned to a third person the right to set off, which the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 had, had ceased to exist thereafter.

I am of opinion that the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge on both these points is erroneous. From what has been stated above, it is clear that, when the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 applied for execution in January 1930 the decree in 1101 of 1926 was not available for execution in the Subordinate Judge's Court of Tanjore, having been transferred to the Mannargudi Court for execution. It is clear that, unless both the decrees are before the same Court for execution, the right to set off could not be claimed: see Ponnuswamy Nadar v. Doraiswamy Ayyar (1). That being so, the first reason is not in my opinion sound. Nor do I think that there is anything in the second of the reasons mentioned by him. The learned Subordinate Judge observes that this right to set off could not be available against an assignee of the decree. If we refer to S. 49, Civil P. C., it is seen that "every transferee of a decree shall hold the same subject to the equities, if any, which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the original decree-holder."

That this was an equity available to the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 against the decree-holder in 1101 of 1926 is clear, as both were decrees passed by the same Court; and subject to the other conditions, this right of set off would be applicable in respect of the said decrees. Attention may be drawn also to the provisions of O. 21, R. 18 (2), which indicate that the rule laid down by O. 21,

1. (1909) 32 Mad 336=1 I C 247.

R. 18, shall be deemed to apply even when either party is an assignee of one of the decrees, as well in respect of judgment-debts due by the original assignor as in respect of judgment debts due by the assignee himself. The learned advocate for the counter-petitioner-respondent before me argues that R. 18 (2) could not be availed of by the petitioner in the present case. I think in one sense his contention may be right; but in the face of the provision contained in S. 49, namely, that the transferee-decree-holder shall hold the same subject to the equities which the judgment-debtor might have enforced against the original decree-holder, I am not able to see how the transferee Venkataramaier in this case could claim the higher right that he puts forward before me which his assignor had not. Then the learned advocate argued that the question of notice has to be inquired into and that it is only when it is found that Venkataramaier was an assignee with notice that S. 49 and the equities mentioned therein could be applied as against him. The first answer to this is that no plea of bona fide assignee for value without notice seems to have been put forward in the lower Court, and I am not able to find anything in the order of the lower Court which indicates that such a point was raised before it. Further, the ruling in Monmohan v. Dwaraka Nath (2) is clear that for the purpose of S. 49 the equities have to be enforced even though the assignee might in fact have been an assignee without notice. Otherwise the very object of S. 49 would be in effect frustrated and its provisions rendered nugatory.

Finally the decision of the Lahore High Court in Salig Ram v. Ishar Das Dharam Chand, A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 508, p. 511, was relied on. As I understand the facts of that case that decision in no way supports the assignee decree-holder's contention urged before the lower Court. In that case at one point of time both the decrees were before the Court at Amritsar for execution, and though an order was passed that it would be open to one of the decree-holders to take advantage of the provisions of set off, the said decree-holder did not in fact try to take advantage of the same, but subsequently had the decree transferred from the Court at Amritsar to the Court at Karachi. It was held in those circumstances that as no advantage was taken of the order declaring a right to set off the execution Court at Amritsar could not be effectively moved to pass orders in this respect after the other decrees were withdrawn from it and transferred to the Karachi Court for execution. I do not understand that judgment to lay down anything which would prevent a right of set off on the facts stated by me in the present case before me.

2. (1910) 7 I C 55.

The result is that I allow the revision petitions and direct in respect of the decree in Suit No. 1101 of 1926 that the amount of the same should be set off against the amount of the decree in 883 of 1926 and satisfaction to that extent entered in respect of the decree in 883 of 1926 and that the decree-holder in 883 of 1926 would be entitled to proceed in execution with reference to the balance only. The transferee's application to execute the decree in 1101 of 1926 will stand dismissed and satisfaction entered in respect of the decree in Suit 1101 of 1926. I allow costs in C.R.P. 1774 of 1930, but I do not allow any costs in the connected revision petition as the matter is practically one and the same.

P.R.S./P.N.

Petition allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 217

CORNISH, J.

(Nekkanti) Seeramma — Plaintiff — Petitioner.

v.

(Nekkanti) Seshamma — Defendant —
Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petns. Nos. 1046 of 1928, and 124 of 1929, Decided on 29th January 1932, against orders of Dist. Munsif, Ramachandrapur, D/- 25th April 1928.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 4 (2) (b) — Under O. 47, R. 4, "Strict proof" means formal proof.

It would be a contravention of R. 4 to grant an application for review on the discovery of new matter alleged not to have been within the applicant's knowledge without strict proof of such allegation. "Strict proof" means formal proof. Where the applicant for review supports his application with an affidavit, the requirement as to "strict proof" is satisfied and review should be granted: 42 Cal. 820, Foll.

[P 218 C 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908). S. 115 — Appeal allowed—Revision should not be granted.

Where the remedy of appeal has been open to the petitioner in revision, the petition for revision should not be entertained. [P 218 C 2]

V. Kiyamma—for Petitioner.

T. Satyanarayana and T. Ramamurthi—for Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 124 of 1929.

Judgment.—The petitioner here was defendant in a suit for maintenance brought by the respondent. The suit was decreed, and the maintenance was made a charge on a particular item of property. The date of the decree was 22nd August 1927. The plaintiff afterwards discovered that this item of property had been misdescribed by her in the schedule to her plaint, and applied on 16th November 1927 to have the mistake rectified in an application under S. 152, Civil P. C. This application was dismissed, the Court suggesting that the proper remedy might be an application for review. The plaintiff then, after a considerable delay, which has been excused by the learned District Munsif on the ground that the time taken up by the plaintiff in obtaining the advice of lawyers and in procuring the necessary funds, filed an application for review under O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. This was on 9th March 1928. The ground on which the review was sought was that the discovery of the right survey number of the property charged with her maintenance was the discovery of new and important matter which was excusably not within her knowledge at the time when the decree was made. The learned District Munsif granted the application. It was resisted by the petitioner here on the ground that the application was long out of time and that no sufficient reason had been shown for excusing the delay under S. 5, Lim. Act, and also on the ground that the correct description of the property could have been discovered by plaintiff with the exercise of due diligence. As already observed the learned District Munsif excused the delay and also expressed himself satisfied that the respondent had made out a case for granting a review.

A preliminary objection to the maintainability of the revision petition is made by the respondent, the argument being that the petitioner has a remedy by way of appeal against the Munsif's order. O. 43, R. 1 (w), Civil P. C., gives a right of appeal against an order under R. 4, O. 47, Civil P. C., granting an application for review. O. 47, R. 7, Civil P. C., gives a right of objection which may be taken by an appeal against an order granting an application to review, on the ground that the application was (a) in contravention of the provisions of R. 2 (b) or in contravention of the provisions of R. 4 (c) after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed therefor and without sufficient cause. Now, looking at the language of R. 7 (1), I think that the objection raised by the petitioner being that the application for review was made after the expiration of the period of limitation and with inexcusable delay, the rule clearly gives him the remedy of appeal. With regard to R. 7 (b) it would be a contravention of R. 4 to grant an application for review on the discovery of new matter alleged not to have been within the applicant's knowledge without strict proof of such allegation. "Strict proof" means formal proof: Ahid Khondkar v. Mahendra Lal (1). The respondent supported her application with an affidavit which satisfied this requirement as to "strict proof" and was accepted by the Munsif. In my opinion this is a case where the remedy of an appeal was open to the petitioner and consequently this revision petition should not be entertained. The petition is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./B.V. Petition dismissed.

1. (1915) 42 Cal 830=29 I C 282.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 218

MADHAVAN NAIR AND JACKSON, JJ.

T. A. Mahommad Naina Rowther and others—Appellants.

v.

Muhammad Hehiya Rowther and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 79 of 1928, Decided on 4th September 1931, against order of Sub-Judge, Madura, D/- 14th February 1927.

Civil P. C. (1908). O. 22, Rr. 4 and 11—Death of one respondent before decree in appeal—Appeal could proceed without bringing legal representative of deceased on record—Decree of appellate Court is valid.

Where a respondent dies before the decree of the appellate Court and his legal representative is not brought on record, if the appeal is of such a nature that it can proceed without bringing the legal representative on record, the decree is not invalid for that reason, and it can be executed if it is not barred under Art. 132: A I R 1930 Mad 719; 39 Mad 386 and A I R 1925 Pat 480, Foll. [P 219 C 1]

K. Rajah Ayyar—for Appellants.

Madhavan Nair, J. — The learned Judge's view that the decree of the High Court is invalid because plaintiff 6 (one of the respondents) died before the decree and his legal representatives had not been brought on record, is clearly wrong. The appellants should have brought the legal representatives on record before the decree, but they did not do so. The appeal was dismissed after hearing on merits. That the decree passed in such cases is not invalid is established beyond doubt by the decision of this Court reported in Suryanarayana Rao v. G. Joga Rao (1) and Vellayan Chetty v. Mahalinga Ayyar (2). In Kashi Nath Singh v. Kailas Singh (3), a case very much like the present, it was held that the decree is a valid one and can be executed if it is not barred under Art. 182, Lim. Act. No doubt the decree in that case was a consent decree, but we do not think that this would affect the principle of the decision. In this case the petition is not barred as it falls within three years from the date of the High Court decree. The order of the lower Court is set aside with costs of this Court. The learned Subordinate Judge will restore the petition to file and deal with it according to law.

Jackson, J.—I agree, and am very doubtful if the lower Court could have gone behind our decree which on its face is quite valid.

P.R.S./V.B.

Order set aside.

1. A I R 1930 Mad 719=123 I C 607.
2. (1916) 39 Mad 386=28 I C 83.
3. A I R 1925 Pat 480=89 I C 236=1 Pat 53.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 219

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Rami Reddi Chinna Vobula Reddi—Appellant.

v.

Kethepalli Gurumurthi and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 211 of 1927, Decided on 1st September 1932, against decree of Dist. Judge, Cuddappah, D/- 5th February 1927.

* (a) Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 182 and 65—Attachment before judgment — Surety bond executed in pursuance of order under O. 21, R. 43—Limitation for enforcing liability of surety is three years from date of decree—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 43.

Where a surety executes a bond under O. 21, R. 43 undertaking to produce the property whenever called upon by the Court failing which he and his heirs would be bound by such orders as the Court may pass, the limitation for an action on such bond is governed by Art. 182 and not by Art. 65. And the period is three years from the date of the decree and not three years from the date when the surety is called upon and he fails or refuses to produce the property; A I R 1915 Mad 423, Rel on. [P 220 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 145 and O. 21, R. 43—S. 145 applies to enforce surety bond executed under O. 21, R. 43.

The provisions of S. 145, Civil P. C., apply to security bonds executed under O. 21, R. 43, and invariably resort is had to S. 145 for enforcing the liability of the surety. [P 220 C 2]

* (c) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 43—Attachment before judgment and surety bond—Proper procedure for decree-holder to enforce liability of surety is to proceed in execution—Civil P. C., Ss. 145 and 47

Where a surety bond is executed under O. 21, R. 43 the proper procedure for the decree-holder to enforce the liability of the surety is not to get an assignment of the bond and institute a suit, but to proceed in execution: A I R 1926 Mad 1005, Foll. [P 220 C 2]

T. R. Arunachalam—for Appellant.

Kasturi Seshagiri Rao — for Respondents.

Judgment.—This civil miscellaneous second appeal arises in connexion with the execution of a decree against a surety. The surety is the appellant. The question in this second appeal is whether the execution application is barred by limitation. The first Court held that it was barred and in appeal this decision was set aside. The facts briefly are as follows:

In the course of a suit prior to its termination an order for attachment before judgment of the judgment-debtor's properties was made by the Court. His moveables were attached by the Amin and were by him entrusted to the custody of the appellant who executed a surety bond. After stating that the bond is executed by the surety, the document ends as follows:

" The said Amin put me in possession of the said items of property of the value of rupees two hundred and fourteen. I shall therefore produce the said items of property whenever called upon by the Court. If I fail to so produce, I and my heirs shall be bound by such orders as may be passed by the Court. To this effect is the security bond written and given."

Then occurs the signature of the surety. The bond is dated 7th November 1921. The decree in the suit was passed on 7th September 1922. An application was put in by the transferee decree-holder respondent to recognize the transfer of the decree in his favour. On 7th November 1925 the present application to

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115 — Appeal allowed—Revision should not be granted.

Where the remedy of appeal has been open to the petitioner in revision, the petition for revision should not be entertained. [P 218 C 2]

V. Kiyamma—for Petitioner.

T. Satyanarayana and T. Ramamurthi—for Opposite Party.

Civil Reven. Petn. No. 124 of 1929.

Judgment.—The petitioner here was defendant in a suit for maintenance brought by the respondent. The suit was decreed, and the maintenance was made a charge on a particular item of property. The date of the decree was 22nd August 1927. The plaintiff afterwards discovered that this item of property had been misdescribed by her in the schedule to her plaint, and applied on 16th November 1927 to have the mistake rectified in an application under S. 152, Civil P. C. This application was dismissed, the Court suggesting that the proper remedy might be an application for review. The plaintiff then, after a considerable delay, which has been excused by the learned District Munsif on the ground that the time taken up by the plaintiff in obtaining the advice of lawyers and in procuring the necessary funds, filed an application for review under O. 47, R. 1, Civil P. C. This was on 9th March 1928. The ground on which the review was sought was that the discovery of the right survey number of the property charged with her maintenance was the discovery of new and important matter which was excusably not within her knowledge at the time when the decree was made. The learned District Munsif granted the application. It was resisted by the petitioner here on the ground that the application was long out of time and that no sufficient reason had been shown for excusing the delay under S. 5, Lim. Act, and also on the ground that the correct description of the property could have been discovered by plaintiff with the exercise of due diligence. As already observed the learned District Munsif excused the delay and also expressed himself satisfied that the respondent had made out a case for granting a review.

A preliminary objection to the maintainability of the revision petition is made by the respondent, the argument being that the petitioner has a remedy by way of appeal against the Munsif's order. O. 43, R. 1 (w), Civil P. C., gives a right of appeal against an order under R. 4, O. 47, Civil P. C., granting an application for review. O. 47, R. 7, Civil P. C., gives a right of objection which may be taken by an appeal against an order granting an application to review, on the ground that the application was (a) in contravention of the provisions of R. 2 (b) or in contravention of the provisions of R. 4 (c) after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed therefor and without sufficient cause. Now, looking at the language of R. 7 (1), I think that the objection raised by the petitioner being that the application for review was made after the expiration of the period of limitation and with inexcusable delay, the rule clearly gives him the remedy of appeal. With regard to R. 7 (b) it would be a contravention of R. 4 to grant an application for review on the discovery of new matter alleged not to have been within the applicant's knowledge without strict proof of such allegation. "Strict proof" means formal proof: Ahid Khondkar v. Mahendra Lal (1). The respondent supported her application with an affidavit which satisfied this requirement as to "strict proof" and was accepted by the Munsif. In my opinion this is a case where the remedy of an appeal was open to the petitioner and consequently this revision petition should not be entertained. The petition is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./B.V. Petition dismissed.

1. (1915) 12 Cal 830=29 I C 282.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 218

MADHAVAN NAIR AND JACKSON, JJ.

T. A. Mahommed Naina Rowther and others—Appellants.

v.

Muhammad Hehiya Rowther and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 79 of 1928, Decided on 4th September 1931, against order of Sub-Judge, Madura, D/- 14th February 1927.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, Rr. 4 and 11—Death of one respondent before decree in appeal—Appeal could proceed without bringing legal representative of deceased on record—Decree of appellate Court is valid.

Where a respondent dies before the decree of the appellate Court and his legal representative is not brought on record, if the appeal is of such a nature that it can proceed without bringing the legal representative on record, the decree is not invalid for that reason, and it can be executed if it is not barred under Art. 132: A I R 1930 Mad 719; 39 Mad 386 and A I R 1925 Pat 480, Foll. [P 219 C 1]

K. Rajah Ayyar—for Appellants.

Madhavan Nair, J. — The learned Judge's view that the decree of the High Court is invalid because plaintiff 6 (one of the respondents) died before the decree and his legal representatives had not been brought on record, is clearly wrong. The appellants should have brought the legal representatives on record before the decree, but they did not do so. The appeal was dismissed after hearing on merits. That the decree passed in such cases is not invalid is established beyond doubt by the decision of this Court reported in Suryanarayana Rao v. G. Joga Rao (1) and Vellayan Chetty v. Mahalinga Ayyar (2). In Kashi Nath Singh v. Kailas Singh (3), a case very much like the present, it was held that the decree is a valid one and can be executed if it is not barred under Art. 182, Lim. Act. No doubt the decree in that case was a consent decree, but we do not think that this would affect the principle of the decision. In this case the petition is not barred as it falls within three years from the date of the High Court decree. The order of the lower Court is set aside with costs of this Court. The learned Subordinate Judge will restore the petition to file and deal with it according to law.

Jackson, J.—I agree, and am very doubtful if the lower Court could have gone behind our decree which on its face is quite valid.

P.R.S./V.B.

Order set aside.

1. A I R 1930 Mad 719=123 I C 607.
2. (1916) 39 Mad 386=28 I C 83.
3. A I R 1925 Pat 480=89 I C 236=1 Pat 53.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 219

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Rami Reddi Chinna Vobula Reddi—Appellant.

v.

Kethepalli Gurumurthi and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 211 of 1927, Decided on 1st September 1932, against decree of Dist. Judge, Cuddappah, D/- 5th February 1927.

* (a) Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 182 and 65—Attachment before judgment — Surety bond executed in pursuance of order under O. 21, R. 43—Limitation for enforcing liability of surety is three years from date of decree—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 43.

Where a surety executes a bond under O. 21, R. 43 undertaking to produce the property whenever called upon by the Court failing which he and his heirs would be bound by such orders as the Court may pass, the limitation for an action on such bond is governed by Art. 182 and not by Art. 65. And the period is three years from the date of the decree and not three years from the date when the surety is called upon and he fails or refuses to produce the property : A I R 1915 Mad 423, Rel on. [P 220 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 145 and O. 21, R. 43—S. 145 applies to enforce surety bond executed under O. 21, R. 43.

The provisions of S. 145, Civil P. C., apply to security bonds executed under O. 21, R. 43, and invariably resort is had to S. 145 for enforcing the liability of the surety. [P 220 C 2]

* (c) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 43—Attachment before judgment and surety bond—Proper procedure for decree-holder to enforce liability of surety is to proceed in execution—Civil P. C., Ss. 145 and 47

Where a surety bond is executed under O. 21, R. 43 the proper procedure for the decree-holder to enforce the liability of the surety is not to get an assignment of the bond and institute a suit, but to proceed in execution : A I R 1926 Mad 1005, Foll. [P 220 C 2]

T. R. Arunachalam—for Appellant.

Kasturi Seshagiri Rao — for Respondents.

Judgment.—This civil miscellaneous second appeal arises in connexion with the execution of a decree against a surety. The surety is the appellant. The question in this second appeal is whether the execution application is barred by limitation. The first Court held that it was barred and in appeal this decision was set aside. The facts briefly are as follows :

In the course of a suit prior to its termination an order for attachment before judgment of the judgment-debtor's properties was made by the Court. His moveables were attached by the Amin and were by him entrusted to the custody of the appellant who executed a surety bond. After stating that the bond is executed by the surety, the document ends as follows :

" The said Amin put me in possession of the said items of property of the value of rupees two hundred and fourteen. I shall therefore produce the said items of property whenever called upon by the Court. If I fail to so produce, I and my heirs shall be bound by such orders as may be passed by the Court. To this effect is the security bond written and given."

Then occurs the signature of the surety. The bond is dated 7th November 1921. The decree in the suit was passed on 7th September 1922. An application was put in by the transferee decree-holder respondent to recognize the transfer of the decree in his favour. On 7th November 1925 the present application to execute the decree against the surety was filed. The date of the decree being 7th September 1922 it is clear that if Article 182, Lim. Act, applies, the application is barred by limitation. The first Court held that it was so barred. In appeal the learned Judge held that the cause of action against the surety arose only on 5th December 1925 when in response to the application for execution he appeared before the Court and demurred to produce the property by setting up the plea of limitation. The learned Judge says that the cause of action on the bond as against the surety did not arise until 5th December 1925 and therefore the application is not barred by limitation. According to him the question of limitation is governed by Art. 65, Lim. Act, but no authority has been cited in support of that position. The learned Judge's reasoning may be stated in his own words :

"The bond executed by respondent 2 was a conditional one and the cause of action for enforcing the terms thereof would arise only on the breach of its condition, viz., when the respondent fails or refuses to produce the property when called upon by the Court to do so. To an action on such a bond, Art. 65, Lim. Act, would be applicable."

It seems to me that the reasoning of the learned Judge cannot be accepted. The question is not when the cause of action would arise against the surety. In my view the conditional liability to be proceeded against came into existence on the date of the security bond itself. The real question is when that conditional liability may be enforced by the decree-holder. He may enforce it under Article 182, Lim. Act, within three years from the date of the decree or within such other time as is allowed by the various provisions of that article. Now clearly the present application is beyond three years from the date of the decree and no other starting point than the date mentioned by the learned Judge, viz., 5th December 1925, has been relied on before me. In my opinion the case is governed by the decision of this Court in Venkata Ranga Row v. Venkata Rama Narasimha Rao (1), (C. M. S. A. No. 62 of 1913 on the file of the High Court). In that case also there was an attachment before judgment and a surety bond was executed under O. 21, R. 43 as in the present case. There was no question as to the applicability of Art. 182, Lim. Act, in that case. The application in that case being admittedly beyond three years it was assumed that it was barred. The arguments addressed related to the question whether the applications previous to the application in question could be relied upon to claim an extension of the period of limitation. The learned counsel appearing for the respondent seeks to distinguish this case by saying that the terms of the security bond in Venkata Ranga Row v. Venkata Rama Narasimha Rao (1) are different from those of the security bond in the present case. It is true that in Venkata Ranga Row v. Venkata Rama Narasimha Rao (1) the surety explicitly makes himself responsible for the discharge of the decree. In the present case there is no such explicit statement that he makes himself liable for the decree, but the words used are :

"I and my heirs shall be bound by such orders as may be passed by the Court."

I cannot see any distinction between this statement appearing in the present security bond and the statement in the security bond in Venkata Ranga Row v. Venkata Rama Narasimha Rao (1). "Any orders that might be passed by the Court" would certainly include the decree which may eventually be passed in the course of the suit. Then it is argued that the provisions of S. 145 will not relate to security bonds executed under O. 21, R. 43. No authority in support of this position has been quoted. On the other hand invariably resort is had to S. 145, Civil P. C., for enforcing the liability of the surety. The learned Judge also holds that the proper procedure for the decree-holder is to get an assignment of the bond and institute a suit instead of proceeding in execution. According to the recent decision of this Court in Sankunni Variar v. Vasudevan Nambudripad (2) this position is no longer tenable. For the above reasons I set aside the order of the lower appellate Court and restore that of the District Munsif with costs here and in the Court below. The memorandum of objections is dismissed. I make no order as to costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Order set aside.

1. A I R 1915 Mad 423=21 I C 842=38 Mad 509.

2. A I R 1926 Mad 1005=97 I C 787.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 221

RAMESAM AND MADHAVAN NAIR, JJ.

(Sri Mirja Raja Sri Pushavati) Alakh Narayan Gajapathiraj—Petitioner.

v.

Konda Chinna Jogudu and others—
Opposite Parties.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 1477 of 1928, Decided on 1st October 1931, for a certificate to appeal to His Majesty in Council, against decree of High Court in Appeal Suit No. 311 of 1923.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 110—Substantial question of law as between parties to the case, and not merely of general importance, must exist to give right of appeal to Privy Council.

The existence of a point of law by itself does not give a right of appeal to the Privy Council under S. 110. There must be a substantial question of law. The words "substantial question of law" do not mean a question of general importance but a substantial question of law as between the parties in the case. The question must be one in respect of which there may be a difference of opinion.

A village A was granted, some time after the permanent settlement, by a zamindar C to D and others on condition of rendering service as palanquin bearers and the profits of the village were to be enjoyed in lieu of the wages payable in respect of such service. Subsequently C by a deed sold his zamindari "bearing boundaries, extents and other particulars detailed in the schedule annexed hereto" (the village in question not being mentioned in the schedule) to K, C thus not being at the time of sale owner of the village but only possessing a right of resumption in respect of the village. Later on C sold to S the entire remaining village of A assigned to D and others addressing a letter to them directing them to render service to S. Later on R purchased the village A in execution of a decree against S, and subsequently called upon D and others to render service to him properly and gave them notice to quit. The Subordinate Judge and the High Court in appeal, on construction of the deed in favour of K, held that the whole zamindari was sold to K and there was nothing for R to purchase. During the pendency of the suit some of the defendants tried to compromise the suit with R and the petitions were filed in the first Court. The High Court held that defendants being tenants under the Estates Land Act, any agreement by which rent was enhanced was not lawful under S. 187, Estates Land Act and hence the compromise was illegal. R applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council.

Held: that the petitioner R had a fairly arguable question of law to argue before His Majesty in Council, that the deed in favour of K and subsequent transactions had been misconstrued by the High Court as also the question whether the compromise filed in the suit were illegal and were not valid in view of the Estates Land Act: A I R 1927 P C 110; A I R 1928 P C 172; 23 All 227 and A I R 1928 All 61, Foll.

[P 222 C 2]

(b) Grant—Service grant—Sale of zamindari does not give right to recover possession of village granted to third persons and not resumed.

The sale of a mere zamindari may not cover the right to resume and to recover possession of a village granted to third persons in return for service not in possession of the vendor and as to which no order of resumption has been passed.

[P 222 C 2]

K. Rajah Ayyar and S. Venkatesa Ayyangar—for Petitioner.

P. Somasundaram — for Opposite Parties.

Ramesam, J.—This is an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council against the judgment and decree of this Court in Appeal No. 311 of 1923. We are under the disadvantage of not being the Judges who disposed of the case. The petition happens to be posted before us as the learned Judges who disposed of the appeal have now ceased to be Judges of this Court. On this ground we have had a fuller argument than usual on the facts of the case, but this was only for the purpose of making up our minds as to whether there is a substantial question of law. The value of the subject-matter of the suit in the Court of first instance is Rs. 12,000 and the value of the subject-matter in the appeal to His Majesty in Council would also be the same amount unless we can come to the conclusion that there is no substantial question of law in respect of a portion of the appeal. As the judgment of this Court is a confirming judgment, the main point for our decision is whether there is a substantial question of law within the meaning of S. 110, Civil P. C., and for this purpose I proceed to state the main facts and the matter in controversy between the parties.

The suit was filed by the Raja of Vizianagaram to resume the village of Annamarajuvalasa in the zamindari of Chemudu from the defendants who were Gadabas. The allegation of the plaintiff was that the village was granted some time after the permanent settlement by the then zamindar of Chemudu to the predecessors-in-title of defendants 1 to 56 on condition of rendering service as palanquin bearers, and the profits of the village were to be enjoyed in lieu of the wages payable in respect of such service. If the allegations of the plaintiff can be made out, a grant under such conditions would be resumable. The Subordinate

Judge of Vizagapatam who tried the suit found that there was a grant for service on terms which make the grant resumable, but he held that it was not the whole village but only the revenue that was the subject of the grant and therefore resumable. But apart from this he dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff has no right to resume. Some facts have got to be stated for elucidating this point. By Ex. 14, dated 12th March 1889, the then zamindar of Chemudu sold his Chemudu zamindari,

"bearing the boundaries, extents and other particulars detailed in the schedule annexed hereto,"

the suit village not being in the schedule (which can only mean all that he then possessed in the zamindari) to the minor Zamindar of Kurupam, another permanently settled estate in the same district. At the time of the sale the Zamindar of Chemudu was not the owner of the suit village, he having granted it to the defendants' predecessors for service. All that he had in respect of the suit village was the right of resumption. But it is not suggested that any order of resumption was passed prior to the sale deed. In 1892 the Zamindar of Chemudu sold to K. Suryanarayana Patnaik and another by Ex. E the entire remaining village of Annamrajuvalasa assigned to 13 palanquin bearers for performance of service, the same being determinable at will and pleasure, and on the same day an order was addressed to the predecessors-in-title of the defendants directing them to render service to the vendees: Ex. E 1. The absence of an order like Ex. E, at the time of Ex. 14, is significant. Later on, the Raja of Vizianagaram purchased it in Court auction in execution of a decree against the said Suryanarayana Patnaik who became the sole owner by sale certificate and further deeds of transfer ending with the sale deed Ex. W dated 8th September 1899. On 30th July 1907 the Raja called upon the defendants to render service to him properly and on 19th December 1907 notice to quit was given. Hence the suit. The Subordinate Judge and on appeal the learned Judges of the High Court held on a construction of Ex. 14 that the whole zamindari was sold away to the Raja of Kurupam and therefore there was nothing for the Raja of Vizianagaram to purchase: but it seems to us that there is at least a fair point for the plaintiff to argue before His Majesty in Council that the Zamindar of Chemudu could not have sold by Ex. 14 what he did not possess at that time and that when he sold the whole of Chemudu Zamindari in 1889 he only sold such part of the zamindari as he possessed and to which he had title to convey. The sale of a mere zamindari may not cover the right to resume and to recover possession of a village granted to third persons, not in the possession of the vendor and as to which no order of resumption had been passed.

It does not appear that the Zamindar of Kurupam ever claimed any rights over the village. It seems to us therefore that the plaintiff has a fairly arguable question of law to urge before His Majesty in Council that Ex. 14 and the subsequent transactions have been misconstrued by the learned Judges of the High Court. In connexion with the same matter the Raja's advocate seems to have argued in appeal that the attornment to Suryanarayana Patnaik, the vendee of 1892, and the Raja of Vizianagaram amounts to recognition of the Raja as the superior landlord of the village. In dealing with this point the learned Judges say that this argument amounted to trying to make out title by adverse possession and estoppel by reason of the attornment, and they disallow the point on the ground that it was not raised in the plaint. The petitioners now complain before us that it is not that they want to raise any case of title by adverse possession but only they want to refer to the non-enjoyment by the Zamindar of Kurupam and the later recognition of Suryanarayana Patnaik and the Raja of Vizianagaram as superior landlords as merely throwing light on the sale deed of 1889 and not as creating separate title and that their contention has been misunderstood by the learned Judges. It seems to us that there is something to be said for the petitioners in this matter also.

Then there is another point. Some of the defendants have compromised the suit with the Raja and petitions of compromise were filed in the first Court. On the ground that the compromise was not beneficial to the minors the Subordinate Judge did not grant sanction for the compromise. The learned Judges of the High Court on appeal also say that the defendants being tenants under the Estates Land Act, any agreement by which the rent is enhanced would not be lawful under S. 187, Estates Land Act, and therefore the compromise is illegal; but the petitioners urge that the Estates Land Act does not cover cases of land held on service tenure and there is at least 'reasonable doubt as to whether the Estates Land Act covers this case. When there is a doubt as to the applicability of the Estates Land Act and a compromise for the purpose of settling that doubt for ever, the provisions of the Act cannot be applied for the purpose of showing that the terms of the compromise are illegal. If the applicability of the Act is admitted by both the parties a compromise in breach of the provisions of the Act may be illegal, but where the applicability itself is doubtful a compromise to resolve that doubt, being one falling within the well-known principle that compromises of disputed or doubtful claims will not be closely scrutinized by Courts of law, would be valid. It seems to us that this question also is fairly arguable by the petitioners. Undoubtedly, the two points above indicated are not questions of fact. Having regard to the rulings of the Privy Council in Raghunath Prasad Singh v. Deputy Commissioner, Partabgarh (1) and Guran Ditta v. Ram Ditta (2), we think these are substantial questions of law in the case within the meaning of S. 110, Civil P. C. The orders of the Judicial Committee require us to state the questions of law in the case of a confirming judgment. They are :

(1) Whether having regard to the construction of the document, Ex. 14, the attornment after Ex. E and the subsequent enjoyment, the title to the suit village is not in the Raja of Vizianagaram as opposed to the Raja of Kurupam; and (2) whether the compromises filed in the suit are illegal and are not valid.

Certificate will issue that the case is a proper one for appeal to His Majesty in Council under S. 110, Civil P. C., stating the questions.

Madhavan Nair, J.—I agree. Of the two questions formulated by my learned

1. A I R 1927 P C 110=102 I C 889 = 54 I A 126=2 Luck 93 (P C).
2. A I R 1928 P C 172=109 I C 723 = 55 I A 235=55 Cal 944 (P C).

brother for submission to the Privy Council I have no doubt that the second question is a substantial question of law. As regards the first it has been argued that the question involved is merely the construction of Ex. 14 in the light of the circumstances of the case and that no "substantial question of law" arises in the appeal; but it seems to me that in construing the document a subsidiary question of some importance also arises, namely, whether, having regard to the fact the village in question has not been resumed by the Zamindar of Chemudu, can it be said that he has the power to sell it? and there is the further fact that the learned Judges who heard the appeal, if I may say so respectfully have not properly appreciated, as pointed out by my learned brother, one aspect of the appellant's argument which, I think, has a direct bearing on the question. In these circumstances it is difficult to say that the question of law raised in point No. 1 is merely the construction of title deed, Ex. 14, and nothing more, and is therefore not a substantial question of law. No doubt the existence of a point of law by itself does not give a right of appeal to the Privy Council under S. 110, Civil P. C., as pointed out in Banarasi Prasad v. Kashi Krishna Narain (3).

There must be a substantial question of law. In Raghunath Prasad Singh v. Deputy Commissioner, Partabgarh (1) the Privy Council has said that these words do not mean a question of general importance but a substantial question of law as between the parties in the case involved. In Guran Ditta v. Ram Ditta (2) their Lordships held that the question whether a fixed deposit in a bank in the name of two persons payable to either or survivor was in fact payable to the survivor or belonged to the estate of the person who originally supplied the money was a substantial question of law. In Mathura Kurmi v. Jagadeo Singh (4), followed in Gokul Chand v. Sanwal Das (5), it was pointed out by the learned Judges that the question contemplated by this section (S. 110) must be one in respect of which there may be a difference of opinion. In the light of these decisions I am satisfied that question 1 also raises a substantial question of law between the parties.

3. (1901) 23 All 227 = 28 I A 11 = 8 Sar 447 (P C).

4. A I R 1928 All 61=107 I C 33=50 All 208.

5. A I R 1924 Lah 473 = 78 I C 417 = 5 Lah. 260.

P.R.S./R.M. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 224(1)

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

(Charali) Ramakrishnayya—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

(Ycleswarapu) Soorayanarayana Sarma—Defendant—Respondent.

Second Appeal No. 2289 of 1927, Decided on 23rd January 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Narasapur, in A. S. No. 35 of 1927.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 35—Costs are in discretion of trial Court—High Court will seldom interfere unless some principle is involved.

Under S. 35 costs are in the discretion of the trial Court, and unless a principle is involved on which the decision of the point is based the High Court will very seldom interfere with the order in such cases.

The guardian of a minor could not give an effective discharge and was not also a man of property. Hence the defendant on legal advice asked for security from the guardian, which he refused. The guardian filed a suit and got a decree, but no costs were allowed in the lower Court.

Held: that though the guardian's refusal as to security alone was not a proper ground for refusing costs, yet in the above circumstances there was no indiscretion on the part of the lower Court in refusing costs. [P 224 C 1, 2]

G. Lakshmana—for Appellant.

A. Satyanarayana—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The only question in this second appeal is whether the plaintiff should have been awarded his costs of the suit by the lower Courts. The plaintiff is a minor appearing by his guardian. In favour of the plaintiff represented by this guardian a promissory note was executed by the defendant. The guardian asked for the money. The defendant refused to give it unless he executed a security bond. As he refused to pay money this suit was instituted. The plaintiff has been given a decree for the amount, but has not been given his costs. Under S. 35, Civil P. C., costs are in the discretion of the trial Court, and unless a principle is involved on which the decision of the point is based, this Court very seldom interferes with the order made by the lower Courts. In this case both the lower Courts have come to the same conclusion. One of the reasons given by the appellate Court, that the guardian cannot give an effective discharge and therefore the defendant is entitled to ask for security, may not be a proper ground for refusing costs. But the lower Courts on the evidence find that the guardian is not a man of property and the defendant acted upon proper legal advice in insisting that security should be given. Having regard to these circumstances, which are also relied upon by the lower Courts, I cannot say that the discretion of the lower Courts has been wrongly exercised in this case. In these circumstances the second appeal is dismissed. In this Court each party will bear his own costs.

P.R.S./B.V. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 224(2)

LAKSHMANA RAO, J.

Venkatarama Ayyar—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Somasundara Vandayar—Defendant Respondent.

Appeal No. 104 of 1927, Decided on 11th August 1931, against appellate order of Dist. Judge, East Tanjore, D/- 13th December 1926.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47, and O. 21, R. 22—Application by legal representative of deceased judgment-debtor to set aside sale for want of notice under O. 21, R. 22—Sale is invalid only to the extent of applicant's share.

Where the legal representative of a deceased judgment-debtor makes an application to set aside an auction sale on the ground that he was not served with the requisite notice under O. 21, R. 22, the sale is not invalid entirely, but only to the extent of the applicant's share: A I R 1931 Cal 555, Foll. [P 224 C 2]

A. Ganesa Iyer—for Appellant.

K. Bahshyam and T. R. Srinivasan—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The view of the lower Courts that the sale is void as against all the defendants is erroneous, and as pointed out in Shrish Chandra Nandi v. Rahat-annessa Bibi (1) the sale will be invalid only to the extent of the share of the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor who was not served with the requisite notice under O. 21, R. 22, Civil P. C. There is, on principle also, no reason for holding that the sale is void in its entirety; and just as a decree may be had proportionate to the shares of those who have been impleaded, a sale too can be upheld to the extent of the shares of those who were duly served.

1. A I R 1931 Cal 555=193 I C 670=58 Cal 825.

O. 21, R. 90, Civil P. C., is not applicable in so far as the petition is based on the absence of notice under O. 21, R. 22, and the sale will be invalid only to the extent of the interest, if any, of the deceased, defendant 7. It is however urged that the sale was impugned on other grounds as well under O. 21, R. 90, and the matter has not been inquired into. The order of the lower appellate Court is therefore set aside and the petition is remanded to the Court of first instance for disposal according to law in the light of the above observations. Costs up to date will follow and abide the result.

P.R.S./R.M.

Case remanded.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 225

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

Satrucherla Sivaskandaraju and others
—Appellants.

v.

Narasimha Pattamani and others —
Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 412 and 413 of 1930, Decided on 5th October 1932.

(a) Evidence—Statement given on oath must be believed unless inherently improbable or contradicted.

Where there is nothing to show that a statement is inherently improbable, it would be wrong to hold that a statement given on oath is false, when not only it remains uncontradicted but when the opposite party, who challenges it, deliberately abstains from adducing evidence to the contrary. [P 226 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 90—Irregularity in conduct of sale—Evidence of injury.

When a sale is sought to be set aside on the ground of irregularity in conducting the sale, the applicant can show that the injury is the result of the irregularity not necessarily by direct evidence but by circumstantial evidence also. [P 227 C 1]

(c) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 90—Several villages to be sold in one lot—Proclamation affixed in each village showing only that village as subject of sale is material irregularity.

Where several villages were to be sold in one lot but the proclamation affixed in each village showed only the particular village as the subject of the sale:

Held: that there was material irregularity within O. 21, R. 90 but that the sale could not be set aside unless the judgment-debtor proved substantial injury by reason of this irregularity. [P 226 C 2; P 227 C 1]

(d) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 90—System of conducting sale from day to day and fixing date for bringing sale to end deprecated.

Conducting a sale from day to day and fixing a date for bringing the sale to an end does not necessarily amount to material irregularity, but the system of conducting sales in such a manner must be condemned and deprecated. The defects of conducting sales from day to day explained.

[P 227 C 1, 2]

K. Ramanatha Shenai, V. Govindachari, K. Krishnamurthi and B. V. Ramanarasu—for Appellants.

Advocate-General and P. Somasundaram—for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The first question with which I propose to deal is, whether the judgment-debtors have sustained substantial injury within the meaning of O. 21, R. 90. If this point is answered in the negative, the consideration of the other questions raised becomes unnecessary. In regard to the injury alleged, there is one puzzling feature in the case, to which I shall presently refer. But, apart from that, we have to decide whether the lower Court's finding that no damage has been sustained is correct or not. The sale commenced by order of Court on 27th June 1928; leave to bid was granted to the decree-holders on 12th July and on the lastmentioned date an order was made directing that the sale was to proceed from day to day to the end of July. On 17th July the Zamindar of Andra bid Rs. 2,50,000 for each of the two lots. It may be mentioned that the zamindar is a near relation of one of the judgment-debtors. On 31st July there was no further bid made until the decree-holders offered for each lot a sum of Rs. 1,000 more. At 5 p. m. on 31st July the sale was concluded and the decree-holders were declared the purchasers, their bid for Rs. 2,51,000 for each of the two lots having been accepted by the Court.

The sale proclamation was settled on 17th April 1928. It may be mentioned that this estate had been for several years in the possession of receivers appointed by the Court. At the time when the learned Judge settled the proclamation, he obtained the necessary information from the receiver then in charge and arrived at the reserve price. The income was about Rs. 22,000 a year, and the Judge fixed the value of the property as being 20 times the annual income. On that calculation, the reserve price was fixed at Rs. 2,25,969 for one lot and Rs. 2,12,888 for the other. At the sale by auction the price fetched was slightly higher than these sums. Not only was the sale advertised in the usual manner, but wide publicity was given by an.

nouncements in various leading newspapers. We may adopt another method for testing whether the amounts mentioned in the proclamation as the reserve price were an under-estimate. One of the mortgages in favour of the plaintiff was granted in 1906. The instrument of mortgage describes the property in great detail; the name of each village is shown there and the total income as stated in the deed was Rs. 29,000, less peishcush Rs. 9,000. In other words the net income of the properties as stated in the deed was Rs. 20,000. Adopting this test it cannot be said that there has been inadequacy in the sale price realized at the auction.

But there remains the evidence of P. W. 5, on which very rightly Mr. Ramanatha Shenai, the learned counsel for the appellants, has laid much stress. P. W. 5 is the standing wakil of the Andra Zamindar. He deposes that in his presence the zamindar proposed to the Dewan of Jeypore offering to purchase one of the two lots for four and half lakhs, but the Dewan was unwilling to part with it for less than five lakhs. This witness's statement is direct and unequivocal. If his evidence was untrue, why was not the Dewan of Jeypore called to contradict him? Mr. Ramanatha Shenai says that in the absence of evidence to the contrary we must accept the evidence of P. W. 5. The learned Judge is alive to this difficulty, but gets over it by finding definitely that this witness's evidence is false. I am afraid I must most strongly differ from this view. On what material does the learned Judge hold that this witness cannot be believed? How is he justified in coming to the conclusion that his evidence is perjured? Where there is nothing to show that the statement is inherently improbable, it would be wrong to hold that a statement given on oath is false, when not only it remains uncontradicted but when the opposite party, who challenges it, deliberately abstains from adducing evidence to the contrary. In this case, whatever my conclusion may be, I am definitely of the opinion that the Judge's finding, that P. W. 5 has spoken a falsehood, cannot and ought not to be supported.

But the question still remains: Does the evidence of this witness go far enough to show that there was an under-valuation? If his evidence be carefully read, the point emerges that what was then contemplated was not a direct purchase by the Andra Zamindar. The proposal seems to be that the purchase was to be made at the auction by the Dewan for the decree-holders and that he was in his turn to sell one of the lots to the Andra Zamindar. Thus the sale that was contemplated was to be contingent upon certain events, and, as the evidence shows, it was not to be even for cash. The Andra Zamindar, connected as he was with the judgment-debtors, would be prepared to pay a price, which the property would not fetch in the open market; to him it had a value which it might not have to others. The Dewan of Jeypore was well aware of that fact, and might well have tried to make what profit he could for the mortgagee. We cannot also overlook the fact that the Andra Zamindar was not in a position to then and there complete the purchase. It would not be very safe to act upon the statement of the Dewan of Jeypore as representing his considered opinion as to the price of the property. Although the appellants' learned counsel was entitled to comment and comment strongly on the fact that the Dewan of Jeypore did not venture to go into the witness-box and contradict P. W. 5, I am not prepared to infer from this omission that the statement as to the price in the proclamation was an under-estimate.

This finding would be enough to dispose of these appeals. But I cannot help adverting to certain irregularities in the conduct of the sale brought to our notice in the course of the hearing. In the lower Court several objections were taken by the judgment-debtors, but it is regrettable that a most patent irregularity that occurred has not been noticed. The sale was ordered to be made in two lots, each lot comprising several villages. The proclamation was published in the usual way, and, as I have said, the sale was widely announced also in the leading newspapers. But the decree-holders affixed proclamations of sale in each village, and the fact has now come to light that what was described in each copy as the subject of the sale, was the particular village at which that copy was posted and not the lot of which that village was but a part. That it is a material irregularity within the rule admits in my opinion of no doubt. If I was satisfied that the judgment-debtors have sustained substantial injury by reason of this irregularity I should without doubt have set aside the sale. I think it necessary in this connexion to notice one contention put forward by the learned Advocate-General. It is argued that only by direct, as opposed to circumstantial, evidence an applicant under O. 21, R. 90 can show that the injury is the result of the irregularity. This contention does not require serious notice. He has cited cases which cannot be held to be authorities on the interpretation of the rule as it now stands. As a matter of fact those very cases, I presume, have led to an important amendment of the rule by the legislature. In the view I have taken, this question of law does not assume any importance, but I have been obliged to refer to it on account of the contention put forward by the learned Advocate-General. As I pointed out in the course of the argument, if the property to be sold is 1,000 acres of valuable wet land, say in the Godavari delta tract, and the proclamation describes it as dry land, would any Court insist upon direct evidence for proving that the injury is the result of this irregularity? Or again, as has happened in one of the cases to which our attention has been drawn, if a sale announced to take place at 11 o'clock is held at 7, can nothing short of direct oral evidence satisfy the Court that the loss is due to that patent and obvious irregularity? It is unnecessary, as I have said, in the view I have taken, to pursue this matter.

Then remains another argument to which I must now advert. Mr. Ramanatha Shenai complains against the manner in which the sale was conducted. I must observe that the learned Judge attended to several matters in connexion with the sale with great care, but allowed the sale to spread over a long period; in fact he made an order, as I have said, that the sale was to continue from day to day from the 27th June to the 31st July. Mr. Ramanatha Shenai contends that it is wrong to fix a date for the terminating of the sale. I entirely agree. It is not only proper, but necessary, to fix the time when the sale is to commence; but what possible purpose can be served by fixing in advance the time when the sale is to come to an end? The person or authority in control of the sale must be free to decide, as the person most competent to do so, when the sale is to terminate. This fixing of time for the bringing the sale to an end is allied to the pernicious system, to which I have adverted, that of directing the sale to be conducted from day to day. A sale by auction fundamentally differs from a sale by private contract. In a private sale negotiations move slowly, the parties consult and deliberate at leisure; but in the case of an auction-sale investigations are made and inquiries are pursued beforehand; at the moment of the auction, the various bids offered in quick succession are intended to stimulate competition, and rapid decisions have to be made, and are made, on the spot. If the sale is lengthened out (in this case the duration was over a month) the bidders, who are diligent enough to attend on the first day, may not care to attend on the second, and may never dream of waiting till the last; and the very object of adopting this method of sale would be completely defeated. Moreover, what prevents a person, who has made under the stimulus of competition a good bid from holding himself not bound by it when he finds that the sale is protracted and prolonged? It is not my intention to lay down at once that the conducting of a sale in this manner necessarily amounts to a material irregularity, but I must most strongly condemn and deprecate the practice that has grown up.

Lastly, I am not prepared to believe that the Andra Zamindar came to the Court on the 31st July after 5 p. m., with a bona fide desire to purchase the property. In the result the appeals fail and are dismissed. Ordinarily I should direct the unsuccessful party to pay the costs, but in this case to mark my disapproval of the manner in which the case was conducted for the decree-holders, I deprive them of costs. Each party shall therefore bear his own costs.

Reilly, J.—I agree with the result at which my learned brother has arrived, though I have reached it perhaps by a slightly different road. In the first place I should like to say that I agree with what my learned brother has said about the extraordinary prolongation of this sale, which began on 27th June 1928 and was closed on 31st July of that year, being continued from day to day. That appears to me to be a very bad and unbusiness like way of conducting a Court-auction; and it is not the intention, I think, of the Code of Civil Procedure that an auction should be so conducted. There are many obvious disadvantages in such a method of conducting an auction. Bidders may come at the beginning, as my learned brother has pointed out, and may go away in despair; they cannot wait for weeks. They may change their minds. Some, who have money at the beginning of the auction, may not have money at the end. Nobody at first considers the matter at all as serious: there is plenty of time, and intending bidders need not make up their minds what they are going to bid. I agree that a Court-auction should not be conducted in that way. But in this case I understand that no complaint has been made by the judgment-debtors on the ground of the extraordinary extension of the sale. Their complaint, as put before us, has been rather that it was not extended a little longer. In the circumstances I do not think we can say that the sale is vitiated by the length of time over which it was spread in this case. At any rate we cannot come to such a conclusion in favour of the judgment-debtors.

But it has been urged before us that these two estates, which were put up for auction, were eventually sold much below their real value, that they were very much undervalued in the sale proclamation and that thereby substantial loss was caused to the judgment-debtors. In the sale-proclamation one of the estates was valued at Rs. 2,25,969 and the other at Rs. 2,12,888; and it has not been disputed before us that the two estates are approximately equal in value. The learned District Judge in settling that proclamation appears to have taken a great deal of trouble and to have done his best to arrive at a proper valuation. A receiver had been in charge of these estates for a number of years, and his reports were considered with the details he gave about the rents to be obtained from each village. The judgment-debtors were heard and were able to represent everything they wished against the valuation, which was eventually adopted by the learned District Judge. And besides this it happens that in the original mortgage deed of 1906 the income of two estates was set out, the total being about Rs. 29,000, of which about Rs. 9,000 had to be paid to the Government as peshcush. And the income so given was not only for the major parts of the estates, which were sold in this auction with which we are concerned, but it also included the income of other parts of the estates, which extended up into the Agency hills and which, we are told, have since been sold for about Rs. 59,000. So far there does not appear to be any reason to suppose that the learned Judge's valuation as given in the sale-proclamation was too low. (After discussing the evidence of P. W. 5, a pleader practising in Vizagapatam, His Lordship concluded). I think we must take it therefore that on the evidence there was an under-valuation of each of these estates in the sale proclamation and a considerable under-valuation.

Does it follow that the sale is vitiated? I do not see any reason to suppose that there was fraud in the under-valuation. The District Judge did his best to arrive at a proper valuation of both the estates after hearing all the judgment-debtors had to say. I do not see how fraud can be made out in that matter. But so seriously to under-value property announced for sale in such a proclamation is undoubtedly an irregularity. Can we say that that irregularity led to the estates being sold for less than what they would otherwise have fetched in this case? That in my opinion the judgment-debtors have been unable to make out. These estates were advertised for sale in Court auction in a number of newspapers all over India. There were repeated publications in April 1928. Those advertisements, which have been exhibited in the case, show that the estates were described sufficiently; it was stated that they were to be sold in two lots, one estate in each lot, and no valuation was given in the advertisements. Now, anybody who wished to bid for these estates or thought that it would perhaps be profitable for him to bid at the auction which was advertised would have to make inquiries as to what the value of the estate was. I do not think it at all probable that people, who would be likely to bid for these estates, would pin their faith in any way to the value mentioned in the Court's proclamation. They would make, if they were sensible people at all, a very much more careful investigation than that ; they would pursue their inquiries a great deal further. They would inquire not only what was the rent to be obtained from the villages of the two estates but what prospects there were of developing the estates and what difficulties would be likely to face new proprietors, if they purchased them, and a great many other things, which could only be ascertained by local inquiry.

There was ample time, as I have mentioned, for such an inquiry to be made : sale was begun more than two months after it was advertised and it continued, according to the extraordinary procedure followed, for about five weeks. During that time everybody concerned had ample time to find out everything that could be found out about the estates. And I may mention that besides advertising the sale of these estates in newspapers a separate notice was sent to every zamindar in the Presidency. Zamindars would no doubt be the people who would be most likely to bid at the sale, and they would certainly be the persons most likely to know what inquiries to make about the value of such estates and how to push those inquiries through. Although these estates were eventually sold in this auction for comparatively low prices Rs. 2,51,000 in each case, in the circumstances, I am not at all satisfied that that was due to the unduly low values entered in the sale proclamation. It has been suggested for the judgment-debtors also that there was some fraud towards the close of the auction in regard to the Dewan of Andra, who was somehow prevented by the Dewan of Jeypore from bidding more than two and half lakhs for each estate in accordance with his master's directions. There is really no evidence in support of that suggestion, and it is destroyed I think by the fact that the Dewan of Andra was still in the service of the Zamindar of Andra when this case was tried by the District Judge more than a year after the sale.

As my learned brother has pointed out in the course of the hearing before us a very curious feature of the case was discovered, namely, that in every village in the two estates a proclamation in regard to the sale was put up in April or May, but that proclamation was inaccurate. We find from the specimen proclamations at which we have looked that what was put up in the villages in each case was a proclamation that the sale would be held for the decree-debt. That was correct ; but the property described as for sale in each of those proclamations was the village itself and nothing more. That would undoubtedly be misleading to anybody who paid any attention to it. It was a very curious and careless irregularity. But it has not been denied before us, and it has not been denied at any stage, that a proper proclamation, stating that each estate would be sold as a whole in one lot, was duly published in accordance with law ; it was put up in the District court-house, in the Collector's Office and in the proper place in each of the two estates. Although no doubt there was a proper proclamation made in accordance with all the prescribed rules in regard to the auction as it was actually held, that is to say for the sale of each estate in one lot, there were these superfluous notices in the villages, notices which were both superfluous and inaccurate and would have misled anybody who had paid attention to them. But there is no evidence whatever that anybody, who was at all likely to be a bidder, ever imagined that the villages would be sold individually and not the estate in one lot each.

And in the absence of any such evidence we could not find, I think, that the publication of these superfluous and inaccurate notices, as indeed they were, in the villages had any effect upon the result of the sale. I do not wish it to be understood that the absence of direct evidence in such a case as this, that is the evidence of some witness coming before the Court and saying that he was misled by such a notice as those which were published in the villages, would in all cases prevent a reasonable inference being drawn that by such an irregularity in the publication of the proclamations substantial loss had been caused to the judgment-debtors. Whatever may have been declared in any decision to have been the law before what corresponded to R. 90, O. 21, Civil P. C., assumed its present form, certainly it is not necessary now to rule out reasonable inferences from evidence in order to establish that an irregularity in the conduct and publication of a sale has caused substantial loss. In this case however there is not only no direct evidence, but I see no sufficient ground for an inference that the result of these sales was affected by the inaccurate proclamations published in the villages. And, as I mentioned, the publication of these notices in the villages was discovered in this Court. The judgment-debtors said nothing about it at any stage and felt no grievance on this account. Indeed it would be a proper objection, which their opponents might well raise, that the point was never taken by the judgment-debtors in their petition to the District Court, that it was not taken in the grounds of appeal here, and that, until it had been noticed by us accidentally during the course of the hearing of this appeal, the judgment-debtors would have known nothing about it. There is no reason to interfere with the sales on that account.

There is one other matter to which Mr. Ramanatha Shenai referred as being of some importance. He objected to the eventual closing of this long-protracted sale at 5 p. m. on 31st July 1928. The Judge had ordered that the sale should be continued until 31st July of that year. That was long enough. But it is suggested by Mr. Ramanatha Shenai that we ought not to understand the order that the sale was to continue till 31st July as meaning that it should stop at the end of court hours on that day, but that it should have been continued until some unspecified hour in the night. I can see no basis whatever for any such suggestion. It is urged that the Zamin-dar of Andra came to the court-house after 5 p. m. on 31st July anxious to make some belated bid for these estates. If he did intend to bid at that hour, he had nothing to complain of when he found that the sale had stopped, as it was obviously intended that it should stop, at the close of the court hours on 31st July. The judgment-debtors can have no reasonable grievance whatever in the fact that the sale at last came to an end when the working court hours for 31st July ended. In my opinion there were irregularities in this case and some very curious irregularities, but there is no sufficient reason why we should interfere with the decision of the District Judge. I agree that these appeals should be dismissed, and I agree also with the order which my learned brother has proposed as to costs.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeals dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 230

VENKATASUBBA RAO, J.

Public Prosecutor—Appellant.

v.

Mayandi Nadar—Accused.

Criminal Appeal No. 590 of 1931, Decided on 4th November 1931.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 417—Government must sparingly use right of appeal against acquittal.

The right of appeal against an acquittal vested in the Crown, should be used sparingly and with circumspection. [P 230 C 2]

(b) Penal Code (1860), S. 193.—Though perjury is offence every perjurer should not be charged.

Perjury is a concomitant of a Court of law, the question always being one of degree. Every act of perjury is in strict law an offence, but it does not follow that on that account every perjurer should be charged. [P 230 C 2]

Judgment.—It is an accepted maxim that the right of appeal against an acquittal vested in the Crown should be used sparingly and with circumspection. In the present case, if the Sessions Judge, instead of acquitting the accused, had imposed upon him a nominal fine the requirements of the law would have been satisfied. But on this purely technical ground this appeal should not have been filed. The observations of the learned Judge are no doubt strong but by no means stronger than the facts warrant. I say nothing regarding the conviction of the thief himself, but this prosecution, there can be no doubt, was illconceived. Suppose a man is being tried on a capital charge and his wife is forced into the witness box by the Crown, is she to take her trial for perjury on the score that, in screening her husband she has given false evidence? Perjury is a concomitant of a Court of law, the question always being one of degree. Every act of perjury is, in strict law, an offence but it does not follow, that on that account every perjurer should be charged. The police, I should have expected, would have profited by the remarks of the lower Court, which in my opinion, were pertinent and rightly made. The Government's position is different from that of a private party and this appeal, as I have said, should never have been filed, and it is dismissed.

P.R.S./B.V. Appeal dismissed,

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 231 (1)

JACKSON, J.

Zamindar of Khallikote—Petitioner.

v.

Sivaram Bevartha Patnaik and others—
Opposite Parties.Civil Revn. Petn. No. 531 of 1930, Decided on 2nd November 1931.(a) Madras Estates Land Act (1908), S. 75
—Collector deciding rent payable in cash—Question whether rent is payable in cash or kind is not res judicata.Although a Collector acting under S. 75 decides that the rent is payable in cash, the question whether the rent is payable in cash or kind is not res judicata in subsequent proceedings: 32 I C 706, Foll. P 231 C 1 Civil P.C. (1908) Ss. 11 and 115—High Court cannot interfere with wrong decision on point of res judicata.A Court has jurisdiction to decide wrongly and it can decide wrongly over a point of res judicata and the High Court has no jurisdiction to interfere under S. 115 in such a case: 11 Cal
6 and 11 Bom 488, Rel on.; A I R 1921 Mad 195, Dist. [P 231 C 1]C. Sambasiva Rao—for Petitioner.B. Jagannadha Das — for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—The learned District Judge has held that the question whether rent is payable in cash or kind is res judicata since the Collector acting under S. 75, Madras Estates Land Act, decided in a previous proceeding that the rent was payable in cash. Probably in the light of Talagapu Tavudu v. Zamindar of Tarla (1), this is not res judicata; but the question still remains whether this Court can interfere under S. 115, Civil
P. C. It is one of those hard cases which raise the question whether a Court has jurisdiction to decide wrongly, which undoubtedly it has, and that it can decide wrongly over a point of res judicata is held in Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh (2) and Amritrav Krishna
v. Balakrishna Ganesh (3). The petitioner relies upon The Midnapore Zamin- dary Co., Ltd. v. Muthappudayan (4), but there it was held that this Court would interfere where an applicant had been denied locus standi. In this case there was no denial of locus standi and consequent refusal to exercise jurisdiction. It must be found that no petition lies under S. 115, Civil P. C.

P.R.S./R.M. Petition dismissed.

1. (1916) 32 I C 706.

2. (1885) 11 Cal 6=11 I A 237 (P C).

3. (1887) 11 Bom. 488.

4. A I R 1921 Mad 195=62 I C 337=44 Mad.
534. A. I. R. 1933 Madras 231(2)

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Thangachi Ammal — Petitioner.

v.

Mohamed Moideen Maricair— Opposite Party.Civil Revn. Petn. No. 365 of 1932, Decided on 4th October 1932.* Court-fees Act (1870), Ss. 7 (4) (a) and 7 (5)—Suit by vendor to set aside sale deed and for recovery of possession of property—Court-fee for relief for possession is not necessary.In a suit by vendor for setting aside a sale deed and for recovery of possession of the property covered by the deed, it is enough if the plaintiff pays court-fee for cancellation of the deed under S. (7) (4) (a). The claim with regard to possession of the property is only ancillary to the setting aside of the deed and hence no court-fee under S. 7 (5) need be paid for the relief for possession: A I R 1926 Mad 96, Rel.
on; A I R 1932 Mad 605 and A I R 1915 Mad 550, Ref. [P 232 C 1, 2]K. S. Desikan—for Petitioner.K. S. Champakesa Ayyangar—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The plaintiff is the petitioner. The question raised in the case is whether the court-fee paid by her is sufficient. The suit was for cancellation of a sale deed executed by the plaintiff and for recovery of possession of the land and mesne profits. The consideration for the sale deed was Rs. 2,750. The petitioner paid court-fee for the cancellation of the sale deed on the amount of the consideration specified in the deed under S. 7 (4) (a), Court-fees Act. She also paid court-fee on the mesne profits. The defendant's contention is that the petitioner should pay court-fee in respect of the claim for possession of the property also. The point for decision is whether the plaintiff is bound to pay court-fee in respect of the claim for recovery of possession of the land from the defendant.
The lower Court held that the plaintiff should pay court-fee for possession as well under S. 7 (5), Court-fees Act. S. 7 (4), Court-fees Act, has been amended in 1922 and Cl. 4-A has been newly introduced by the amendment. It states:

“In a suit for cancellation of a decree for money or other property having a money value, or other document securing money or other property having such value,”

the court-fee should be calculated

“according to the value of the subject-matter of the suit, and such value shall be deemed to be etc.”Prior to this amendment suits like the present one fell under S. 7 (4) (c); that is, for purposes of court-fee such suits were considered as suits to obtain a declaratory decree or order where consequential relief is prayed. It is not disputed that the plaintiff has to pay court-fee so far as the setting aside of the sale deed is concerned under Cl. 4-A of the section. The only question is whether besides paying court-fee under Cl. 4-A the petitioner should be compelled to pay court-fee under S. 7 (5) also. No decision directly bearing on the point has been brought to my notice. Though the question has not been specifically decided in any case, some decisions of this Court may with advantage be referred to, those being In re Lakshmi Ammal (1) and Venkatasiva Rao v. Satyanarayana-murthy (2). Of these two the first one, In re Lakshmi Ammal (1), is very much like the present case though the particular point now argued does not seem to have been specifically raised in that case. The present suit, as I have already stated, is one by a vendor to set aside a sale deed and for the recovery of possession of the property covered by the deed. The suit In re Lakshmi Ammal (1) was by the vendee. That was also for setting aside a sale deed. The relief asked for was the return of the consideration and some damages. It was argued in that case that the suit should be valued as one falling under S. 7 (4) (c), i. e., for the purpose of court-fee it should be treated as a suit for a declaratory decree where consequential relief is prayed. Having regard to the prayer for cancellation of the document and the new amendment introduced by the legislature in 1922, Devadoss, J., held that the suit should be valued under S. 7 (4-A). Should it be valued also under S. 7 (5) with regard to the return of the money does not seem to have been specifically argued. But it was urged that under S. 7 (4) (c) the plaintiff is bound to value the relief sought for at Rs. 1,300, i. e., the amount so claimed. With regard to this argument the learned Judge pointed out: "the main relief claimed is really the setting aside of the conveyance and the claim for money is one ancillary to it. To such cases S. 7 (4) (c) has no application."

And then the learned Judge held that the new clause applied to this case. In the same way it may be said in this case also that the claim with regard to the possession of the property is ancillary to the setting aside of the document and if so, S. 7 (4-A) is the only provision under which the court-fee has to be levied. In Venkatasiva Rao v. Satyanarayana-murthy (2), a decree was sought to be set aside and possession as a result of such setting aside of the decree was also asked for. The learned Judges held that the case fell under both S. 7 (4-A) and S. 7 (5). But they did not say that both the provisions applied to the case and that the plaintiff should pay court-fee under the two provisions. No doubt the point was not specifically raised in the case as I have already pointed out. Some support for the position contended for by the petitioner may be found in Rajagopal v. Vijayaraghavalu (3), though the question of court-fee in that case arose before the amendment of the Act in 1922. That was a suit for a declaration that a certain decree was of no legal effect and for possession of the properties. Under the present Act the suit would be one for cancellation of the decree and for possession of the properties. The learned Judges in the course of their judgment pointed out with reference to the claim of possession in that case that "possession is not asked for on any other ground than that the decree in execution of which it was lost, should be declared invalid; and it is therefore asked for consequently on the grant of declaration."

Using a similar language it may be said in the present case that possession is not asked for on any other ground than that the sale deed by the execution of which it was lost should be set aside and it is therefore asked for consequently on the setting aside of the sale deed; or in other words as mentioned by Devados, J., In re Lakshmi Ammal (1) the claim with respect to possession is only ancillary to the main claim which is the setting aside of the sale deed. For the above reasons I am of opinion that in this case the petitioner need not pay court-fee on the relief with regard to possession. The order of the lower Court is set aside with costs here and in the Court below.

P.R.S./K.S.

Order set aside.

3. A I R 1915 Mad 550 = 33 Mad 1184 = 25
I C 633.

1. A I R 1926 Mad 96 = 91 I C 720.

2. A I R 1932 Mad 605 = 139 I C 317.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 233

BEASLEY, C. J. AND REILLY, J.

Kallam Narayana — Appellant.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 98 of 1932, Decided on 25th April 1932.

(a) Evidence Act (1872), S. 27—Statement leading to discovery of articles is admissible.

Statement leading to discovery of hidden articles is admissible under S. 27 even though made in the presence of the police: 14 Bom 260 (F B) and A I R 1926 Mad 638, Rel on.

[P 234 C 2]

* (b) Evidence Act (1872), S. 114—Duty of Judge or jury drawing presumptions or inferences from evidence explained—Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 298 and 299.

In making presumptions of fact or in drawing inference of fact from evidence a Judge or a jury must always have regard to all the known facts of the case. And that they must do because they are required to decide on all questions of fact as reasonable men. To attempt to isolate a particular fact or group of facts from surrounding circumstances and to discuss the logical inference may be useful mental exercise; but it is wholly out of place in a judicial decision: A I R 1932 Mad 343, Foll.; A I R 1926 Mad 638, Expl.

[P 235 C 2; P 236 C 1]

It is not the law that the Judge or jury must be certain that no other explanation of the facts is possible before they find the accused person guilty. But if their inference is that he is guilty it must be a reasonable inference, reached with due regard to all the circumstances and with such care and assurance as a reasonable man would think necessary before he drew an important inference in his own most serious affairs.

[P 236 C 2; P 237 C 1]

Accused, who was under arrest for murder, admitted to the police while they were investigating into a murder of a girl that he along with the other accused buried all the ornaments missing from the person of the murdered girl and produced them from a place very near where the girl was murdered. Neither then nor at any other time did he give any explanation of his connexion with the ornaments:

Held: in the above circumstances the Court was entitled to draw the reasonable inference that the accused has taken part in the murder: A I R 1932 Mad 748, Dist.; 13 Mad 426; 12 I C 652 and 21 I C 156, Ref.

[P 237 C 2]

* (c) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 342—Accused defended by counsel—Failure of Magistrate to put explicit questions is immaterial.

Duty of a Judge under S. 342 is a very difficult duty and a duty which has to be performed with the greatest caution so that without the slightest flavour of cross-examination, without asking anything which may lead the accused to incriminate himself, the important points against him may be brought to his notice and he may have an opportunity of explaining them. The task is such a difficult one that, when the accused is represented by counsel, it is often in his interest that the Judge should formally comply with the section by asking a general question and then leave the accused's counsel to offer explanations on his behalf in the way most favourable and least dangerous to him. Hence where an accused is defended by counsel, the failure of the Magistrate to put explicit questions beyond asking a formal general question as to what he had to say does not vitiate the trial especially when the accused is not prejudiced by such examination. [P 238 C 2]

(d) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 162 — Statement made by witness to police in course of investigation cannot be used to corroborate witnesses' evidence — Evidence Act (1872), S. 145.

Statements made by a witness to the police in the course of the investigation of a case can never be used to corroborate the witness's evidence; and, if the written record of what a prosecution witness has said to the police is to be used to contradict him under S. 162, Criminal P. C., it must be proved and used in accordance with the provisions of S. 145, Evidence Act.

[P 239 C 1]

(e) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 367 — Judgment should not be unnecessarily long.

A judgment should not be too long with a number of repetitions. It should set out the effect of the evidence fully, the accused's case, the attacks which are made upon the evidence by either side, the Judge's own criticisms of it and the reasons for his conclusions. [P 239 C 1]

S. Vepa—for Appellant.Parakat Govinda Menon for Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.Reilly, J.—Accused 1 in this case, the appellant before us, a boy of 16, has been convicted of murdering Ambama, a girl of 12-14, at Amaravathi on 30th September 1931. Accused 2 in the case, who was charged with the same offence, was acquitted.

There is undisputed evidence that Ambama, who lived at Amaravathi with her mother, P. W. 1, was at her mother's house soon after dark on the evening of 30th September: she then went to the adjoining house, where P. W. 3 lives: about evening mealtime she was missing; her mother and relations searched for her all night but did not find her: early the next morning her dead body was found in a ruined and deserted fort at Amaravathi; death had been due to strangulation, part of her sari having been tied tightly round her neck with four knots; there were three incised wounds, described by P. W. 10, the Sub-Assistant Surgeon, who examined the body, as "muscle-deep," one above the navel, one on the left side of her abdomen and one on the back of her left wrist; there were also indications that she had been raped; a pair of silver anklets, two pairs of gold plated copper bangles and a gold bead necklace, worth in all Rs. 45—50, which Ambama had been wearing on the previous evening and was in the habit of wearing, were missing from the body. P. Ws. 2 and 4 have given some evidence against the appellant, which the learned Sessions Judge regards as quite untrustworthy and which it is not suggested for the Public Prosecutor we should treat as of any value. P. W. 5, a lamp-lighter, has given evidence that, while he was lighting lamps on the evening of 30th September, he saw Ambama going alone through the bazaar towards a temple, by which he appears to mean the temple close to the ruined fort, where her body was found next day. P. W. 3 says that about sunset on the evening of 30th September Ambama came to her house to play, as she used to do, and that, while they and others were playing Ambama went away saying that the appellant was calling her.

The evidence against the appellant is that on the morning of 4th October, after he had been arrested, he said in the presence of the Inspector of Police, P. W. 7, the Sub-Inspector, P. W. 15, the Village Magistrate, P. W. 8, and P. W. 9, an assistant karnam, that he and accused 2 had hidden Ambama's ornaments in the fort and that he would show them; what he said was recorded in Ex. B, which was signed by P. Ws. 8 and 9 and others; then they all went to the fort, and at a spot about 25 feet from the place where the body had been found the appellant removed some tiles and took out the earth, in which they had been buried, a pair of silver anklets and two pairs gold plated bangles, which have been identified as those Ambama had been wearing. The recovery of these things is recorded in a later part of Ex. B, which is again signed by P. Ws. 8, 9 and others and at this place also by the Sub-Inspector. The evidence of what the appellant said and did on that occasion has not been recorded in the witnesses' depositions in the Sessions Court as fully and explicitly as it should have been. But what I have mentioned is the effect of their depositions and of Ex. B. That the appellant said and did what I have mentioned is not now disputed; nor is it disputed that the anklets and bangles then produced by him, M. Os. 1 and 2, are the anklets and bangles which Ambama was wearing on the evening of 30th September. And of neither his production of the ornaments nor his statement that he and accused 2 hid them has the appellant ever offered any explanation. At the trial he merely denied them. It has been contended for the appellant that evidence of his statement that he and accused 2 hid the ornaments in the fort is not admissible. But that part of his statement distinctly relates to the discovery of the ornaments and is admissible under S. 27, Evidence Act: cf. Queen-Empress v. Nana (1), and the opinions of all the Judges in Sogaimuthu Padayachi v. Emperor (2). What is much more seriously contended is that the production of the ornaments by the appellant and his statement that he and accused 2 had hidden them provide no ground for inference that he murdered, or took part in the murder of, Ambama. It is suggested that from the appellant's possession and hiding of the ornaments no more serious inference should be drawn than that he stole the ornaments. Mr. Vepa for the appellant has relied on the opinion of Wallace, J., in Sogaimuthu Padayachi v. Emperor (2), with whom, when the difference between Wallace and Devadoss, JJ., was referred to him, Spencer, J., agreed. In the case there was evidence that the Pandarasannadhi of a mutt had been murdered and that some jewels, currency notes, etc., belonging to the murdered man or to his mutt were produced by the accused after making statements admissible under S. 27, Evidence Act, that they had buried them. The accused offered no explanation how they came to be in possession of the things; but Wallace, J., refused to draw an inference that they had taken part in the murder. I gather from the report that the things recovered were buried by the accused at a considerable distance from the mutt where the murder was committed. It appears that none of the things was on the person of the murdered man at the time he was killed, that there was no evidence that they were in the mutt at the time of the murder, that there was no evidence that they were missing when the murder was discovered and that there was evidence that, after the murder was discovered and before the loss of these things was discovered, the jewel room of the mutt, in which they had been kept, was raided by people of the crowd who came to the mutt after the murder was discovered. With respect it appears to me clear that Wallace, J., was right in that case in refusing to draw from the production of the jewels and notes by the accused and their admissions that they had buried them an inference that they had taken part in the murder of the Pandarasannadhi.

1. (1890) 14 Bom 260 (F B).

2. A I R 1926 Mad 688=93 I C 42=27 Cr L J 394=50 Mad 274.

Mr. Vepa however relies not on the actual decision in that case, but on passages in the judgments of Wallace and Spencer, JJ. In Wallace, J's judgment he says:

"In such a case I am confident that neither law nor justice justifies the hanging of a man simply because he does not plead guilty to being a thief or a receiver of stolen property. The Court has to be satisfied, not merely that the thief could not have come into possession of the property unless murder has been committed, but also that he could not have come into possession of the property unless he himself has taken part in the murder or was party to it."

Spencer, J., expressed agreement with the first of those sentences and also said:

"When the charge is that the accused committed murder or theft in a building or both, is it legitimate to presume that the accused are guilty of the more serious offence of murder because they are unable or unwilling to explain their possession of stolen property? I think the answer must be that, if there is other evidence to connect the accused with the death of the murdered man, a jury, or in this country a Judge, may find upon circumstantial evidence that he is the murderer. But when the unexplained possession of the stolen property is the only circumstance appearing in the evidence against an accused charged with murder and theft, the accused cannot be convicted of murder unless the Court is satisfied that possession of the property could not have been transferred from the deceased to the accused except by the former being murdered."

With great respect these general statements do not appear to me to have been necessary for the disposal of the case in which they were made. But it must be remembered that the first sentence quoted from Wallace, J's judgment begins with the words. "In such a case," meaning such as the one with which he was dealing; and I do not think it was fair to the learned Judge to quote the rest of the sentence, as Spencer, J., did omitting those very important qualifying words. But with the greatest respect I do not understand why the sentence even with those qualifying words appears in the judgment. I do not understand why any reference to the nature of the punishment which may follow should be brought into a discussion of the inference of fact to be drawn from certain evidence. And, as for convicting a man of murder in such a case or in any case "simply because he does not plead guilty to being a thief or a receiver of stolen property," no one can seriously suppose that any such question ever arose. And the statement that :

"the Court has to be satisfied not merely that the thief could not have come into possession of the property unless murder has been committed but also that he could not have come into possession of the property unless he himself has taken part in the murder or was privy to it," whether intended to apply generally or only to the case with which the learned Judge was then dealing, was I venture to think, a serious over-statement. When it is the duty of a Judge or a jury to draw from evidence a reasonable inference, it is not their duty to find that there was no conceivable possibility other than the conclusion which they reach. It is not possible for reasonable men to conduct the affairs of life or to make judicial decisions on questions of fact with mathematical certainty. And again with the greatest respect Spencer, J's remark as to what can be done :

"when the unexplained possession of stolen property is the only circumstance appearing against an accused charged with murder and theft," does not appear to me to be helpful apart from the fact that it is inconsistent with the latter part of the same sentence. We are here dealing with inferences of fact and presumptions of fact within the principle of S. 114, Evidence Act. It is often instructive to observe what inference other Judges have thought proper to draw from certain evidence or what assumptions or presumptions of fact they have thought fit to make in certain circumstances. But outside the sphere of presumptions of law it appears to me a waste of words and effort for any Judge or Court to attempt to lay down by general ruling, or even to express general opinions, what inferences may or may not be drawn by other Judges from other facts in other cases. That is a matter which Anantakrishna Ayyar and I had to discuss recently in Bommadevara Chayademma v. Venkataswamy (3). There is one general rule which must never be forgotten, namely, that in making presumptions of fact or in drawing inferences of fact from evidence a Judge or a jury must always have regard to all the known facts of the case. And that they must do because they are required to decide on all questions of fact as reasonable men. To attempt to isolate a particular fact or group of facts from surrounding circumstances and to discuss the logical inference may be useful mental exercise; but it appears to me wholly out of place in a judicial decision.

What are the facts proved in this case? The girl Ambama was murdered in the ruined and deserted fort at some time between lamp-lighting time on the evening of 30th September and the early morning of 1st October; she was also raped; ornaments of considerable value, which she habitually wore and which she was wearing on the evening of 30th September, were missing from her body when it was discovered the next morning, though there were then on the body some trinkets of small value; the appellant, as he admitted on 4th October, with accused 2 buried all the missing ornaments but one at a spot in the fort only a few yards from the place where the girl was murdered, and from that spot he produced those ornaments; he made that admission when he was under arrest for the murder of the girl to the officers who were investigating the murder; neither then nor at any other time has he given any explanation admissible in evidence of his connexion with the ornaments. Of the surrounding circumstances we may infer from the evidence that Ambama might go about the town by herself without exciting surprise, that her mother, when she was missing, thought it possible that she had gone off to watch a theatrical performance, and that she went away from P. W. 3's house on the evening of 30th September in the middle of a game, saying that accused 1 was calling her, which did not excite any protest from P. W. 3. What is the reasonable inference to be drawn from the proved facts? It has been suggested that before it can properly be inferred from these facts that the appellant took part in the murder of Ambama all other possible explanations of his part in burying the ornaments must be shown to be untrue or very improbable and that the fact that he was at one time in possession of these ornaments shows at the utmost that he took part in stealing them: possession of stolen property, it is urged, may be evidence of theft but not of a more serious offence. These arguments I think involve confusion of thought. The evidence that an accused person was in possession of stolen property soon after it was stolen is most commonly of use in theft cases. But the possession by itself is never sufficient evidence that the possessor was the thief.

In such cases it is the possession of the stolen property soon after the theft combined with the failure of the possessor to give any reasonable explanation of his possession which enables the Judge or jury to draw an inference that he was the thief, if after considering all the circumstances so far as they are known, they think that inference reasonable. There may be many conceivable explanations why the accused person was in possession of stolen property. He might have been induced by the real thief innocently to take care of the stolen things; he might have been compelled to do so under a threat of violence; he might have seen the real thief drop them or he might have found them lying on the ground, and in either case he might have intended to misappropriate them or merely to keep them until he ascertained who was their owner; he might have himself stolen them from the original thief or have robbed or murdered the original thief in order to get possession of them. There may be a hundred possible explanations other than that he himself was the original thief. But it is not for the Judge or jury to invent or imagine such explanations. It is for the accused person to give his explanation if he has one. If he gives no explanation, then it is for the Judge or jury as reasonable men to draw an inference from the proved facts after considering all the circumstances. And on the way to that inference they may raise such presumptions of fact as appear to them reasonable presumptions which arise from their experience of the world and of life, the course of human conduct and human nature. Such presumptions they will often reach by unconscious reasoning, and they will be based not on facts proved by evidence in the case, but on facts of general knowledge. In essence such presumptions also are inferences of fact. It is not the law that the Judge or Jury must be certain that no other explanation of the facts is possible before they find the accused person guilty.

But if their inference is that he is guilty, it must be a reasonable inference reached with due regard to all the circumstances and with such care and assurance as a reasonable man would think necessary before he drew an important inference in his own most serious affairs, and all the facts proved must be clearly in their minds, including the very important fact that the accused person has offered no explanation of his possession of the stolen things. The Judge or jury must be satisfied that there is no reasonable doubt that the accused person was the thief, and in that sense they must be satisfied that the only explanation of the facts reasonably to be accepted is that he was the thief. It is not required that they should be satisfied that no other conceivable explanation is consistent with the facts. If the accused person offers a reasonable explanation then, as pointed out by the Court of criminal appeal in Rex v. Schama (4), it is for the prosecution to show that that explanation is untrue. But, if the accused offers no explanation, it is not for the Judge or jury to invent one. One of the facts before them, which it is their duty to take into account, is the fact that he has offered no explanation.

The possession of stolen things and the failure to explain that possession may be relevant and important facts in cases other than those of simple theft. When the theft has been committed in the course of, or in connexion with, house-breaking, they may often be important facts for use in making an inference that the accused person took part in the house-breaking. And when things, which were on a murdered person's body at the time when he was murdered, are traced to a person accused of the murder and he gives no explanation of his possession of them, those may be important facts for use in making an inference that he took part in the murder: cf. Queen-Empress v. Sami (5), Public Prosecutor v. Chireddi Munayya (6), and Emperor v. Neamat-ulla (7). In the present case it is possible to suggest many conceivable explanations how the appellant came to join with accused 2 in burying Ambama's ornaments. It is not inconceivable that they took the ornaments from her while she was alive and that some one else afterwards murdered her. It is not inconceivable that they found her lying dead and then removed her ornaments. It is not inconceivable that accused 2 murdered her and afterwards forced the appellant to assist him in burying the ornaments. It is possible to imagine many other explanations of what the appellant has admitted that he did. But it is not for us to invent those explanations. During all the time which has elapsed since the appellant made his admission on 4th October he has never offered any such explanation. We have no right, and the learned Sessions Judge had no right, to indulge in speculation. We must return to the question what in the circumstances is the reasonable inference from the facts proved, the murder of Ambama in the ruined and deserted fort, the removal of her valuable ornaments on the night of her murder, the burial of all but one of those ornaments in the fort a few yards from the scene of the murder, the appellant's production of those ornaments, his admission while he was under arrest for the murder of Ambama to the officers who he knew were investigating that murder, that he and accused 2 had buried the ornaments there and his failure to offer any explanation why he did so.

The learned Sessions Judge and three of the four assessors drew the inference that the appellant took part in the murder of Ambama. In my opinion that was a reasonable inference, which in the circumstances they were entitled to make. In my opinion there is no sufficient reason to doubt that that was the right inference to make. Mr. Vepa has urged that this case is complicated by the fact that what the appellant admitted was that he and accused 2 buried the ornaments and that, even if the appellant took part in burying them, we are left in uncertainty whether he or accused 2 actually committed the murder. He urges also that, as the appellant is a boy of 16 and accused 2 a young man of 23, it is more likely that accused 2 was the murderer than the appellant. He has invited our attention to

4. (1915) 84 L J K B 306=112 L T 480=79 J P 184=31 T L R 88=59 S J 288=24 Cox C C 591.

5. (1890) 13 Mad 426=1 Weir 290.

6. (1911) 12 Cr L J 564=12 I C 652.

7. (1913) 14 Cr L J 556=21 I C 156.

Public Prosecutor v. Venkatamma (8), to show that, where there is a doubt which of two persons committed a murder, neither can be convicted of it. In that case two women, a mother and daughter, were charged with the murder of a little boy. There was evidence, which all the learned Judges accepted as sufficient, to prove that the boy was murdered in the house where both the women lived when no one but the women were there and therefore that the boy was murdered by one or other of the women or by both. There was also evidence that the two women joined in disposing of the body. On a difference of opinion between Waller, J., and Krishnan Pandalai, J. Curgenvén, J., agreed with Krishnan Pandalai, J., that it was not proved that both the women took part in the murder, that one or other of them must have been guilty of murder, but it was not clear which, and that therefore both must be acquitted of murder, though both should be convicted of causing evidence to disappear.

I do not think that case is of help to us. Their relation to each other might well induce either the mother or daughter to help the other in disposing of the body if the other had committed the murder. I gather from the report that only the daughter admitted taking any part in disposing of the body and she attributed the murder to her mother and denied having had anything to do with it, a denial which neither Krishnan Pandalai, J., nor Curgenvén, J., was satisfied was untrue. In this case the position is quite different. The appellant has admitted that he and accused 2 buried Ambama's ornaments. He has offered no explanation why he joined accused 2 in doing so. He is of a different caste from accused 2, and no explanation can be inferred from any circumstance in the case why he should join accused 2 in burying the ornaments where they were found if he had not taken part in the murder. Mr. Vepa is right in laying stress on the difference in age between the two accused, from which it may reasonably be inferred that the appellant was not the leader. But it cannot be said that his statement that he acted with accused 2 in burying the ornaments in the absence of any further explanation leaves a reasonable doubt that accused 2 alone may have committed the murder and may afterwards have compelled or induced the appellant to assist him in the simple matter of burying the ornaments.

Mr. Vepa has raised one other contention for the appellant: that he was not properly examined by the Sessions Judge in accordance with the provisions of S. 342, Criminal P. C. That section provides that, after the prosecution witnesses have been examined, the Judge shall question the accused generally on the case for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him. Before the committing Magistrate the appellant had merely said that he knew nothing about the murder. The Sessions Judge asked him whether the record of his statement before the Committing Magistrate was correct, which the appellant said it was, and apart from asking whether the appellant intended to examine defence witnesses the only other question put by the Sessions Judge was "Do you wish to say anything more now"? Mr. Vepa urges that it was incumbent on the Sessions Judge to draw the appellant's attention to his production of the ornaments and his admission that he had joined in burying them and to give him an opportunity of explaining those facts then if he wished to do so. I agree that the Sessions Judge might have put more explicit questions to the appellant. Indeed I think many Sessions Judges fail to carry out properly the duty imposed on them by S. 342 of the Code, especially when the accused are undefended.

But it is a very difficult duty and a duty which has to be performed with the greatest caution so that without the slightest flavour of cross-examination, without asking anything which may lead the accused to incriminate himself, the important points against him may be brought to his notice and he may have an opportunity of explaining them. The task is such a difficult one that, when the accused is represented by counsel, it is often in his interest that the Judge should formally comply with the section by asking a general question and then leave the accused's counsel to offer explanations on his behalf in the way most favourable and least dangerous to him. In the present case the appellant has nothing to complain of in this respect.

8. A I R 1932 Mad 748=1932 Cr C 923=199
I C 725=33 Cr L J 814.

He was represented by counsel, who no doubt put forward the appellant's case in the manner which appeared to him best. And beside that, when the appellant was asked by the Sessions Judge whether he wished to say anything more than he had said before the committing Magistrate, he took the opportunity to deny that he ever showed Ambama's ornaments to the police and that they were ever in his possession and added that he did not know who had given them to the police. It will be seen therefore that the appellant on that occasion gave the answer he wished to give to the question about the ornaments which Mr. Vepa complains was not asked. In the circumstances the appellant was not prejudiced in any way by the method of his examination by the Sessions Judge. In my opinion the conviction of the appellant was right: his conviction and sentence should be confirmed and his appeal dismissed.

In conclusion there are two matters which I think call for some remark. First, the learned Sessions Judge allowed questions to be put to the Sub-Inspector, P. W. 15, and put a number of questions himself to that witness, which were inadmissible. Statements made by a witness to the police in the course of the investigation of a case can never be used to corroborate the witness's evidence; and, if the written record of what a prosecution witness has said to the police is to be used to contradict him under S. 162, Criminal P. C., it must be proved and used in accordance with the provisions of S. 145, Evidence Act. The learned Sessions Judge should be careful not to transgress the provisions of S. 162, Criminal P. C., in future. Secondly, the learned Sessions Judge in his anxiety to do justice to the case has written a very careful and very elaborate judgment; but it is far too long and contains a number of repetitions. I should be the last to encourage Sessions Judges to write short and perfunctory judgments in serious cases. The judgment in such a case should set out the effect of the evidence fully, the accused's case, the attacks which are made upon the evidence by either side, the Judge's own criticisms of it and the reasons for his conclusions. But in this case the learned Sessions Judge has written much more than was necessary. The whole oral evidence in the case occupies only 17 printed pages.

The judgment covers 19 closely printed pages, each of which contains about twice as many words as a page of evidence. In writing such a judgment the learned Sessions Judge has given unnecessary trouble to himself and unnecessary work to those who have to read his judgment.

Beasley, C. J.—I entirely agree and only desire to make a few observations with regard to Sogaimuthu Padayachi v. Emperor (2). On the facts of that case I quite agree with Wallace, J., and with Spencer, J., to whom the case was referred on a disagreement between Devadoss and Wallace, JJ., that it was not right to draw the inference that the accused had taken part in the offence of murder merely from the production of the jewels by the accused and their admissions that they had buried them for which matters no explanation was given by the accused; but with the general observations of Spencer, J., and Wallace, J., with regard to whether it is open to the Court to draw such inference in cases where the charge against the accused is not one of theft or of receiving stolen property, I find myself in disagreement with those learned Judges. Wallace, J., has stated that the Court has to be satisfied not merely that the thief could not have come into possession of the property unless murder has been committed but also that he could not have come into possession of the property unless he himself has taken part in the murder or was privy to it. Spencer, J., has stated that, when the unexplained possession of the stolen property is the only circumstance appearing in the evidence against an accused charged with murder and theft, the accused cannot be convicted of murder unless the Court is satisfied that possession of the property could not have been transferred from the deceased to the accused except by the former being murdered. Wallace, J., qualifies his statement by the use of the words "in such a case"; but Spencer, J.'s observations have no such important qualification. In my view it is not correct to say that the Court is not entitled to draw the inference that the accused committed a murder or was present when it was committed when the accused is found in possession of property proved to have been in the possession of the murdered person at the time of the murder or is able to point out the place or places where such property is concealed and admits having concealed such property and fails to give any explanation for the possession of those goods or their disposal or such an explanation as can reasonably be accepted. S. 114, Evidence Act, allows the Court to draw inferences of fact and presumptions of fact. That section provides :

"The Court may presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business, in their relation to the facts of the particular case "

This section therefore entitles the Court to draw any reasonable inference or presumption of fact. It is a matter of common procedure to utilize evidence of this kind and the presumption such as this in connexion not only with theft and the receipt of stolen goods but with more aggravated offences. I propose to refer to two cases only. One of which deals very clearly with the presumption in the case of the offence of receiving stolen property and the other with the presumption in a case of murder ; the former is an English case, viz. Rex v. Schama (4). The appellants there were charged with the offence of receiving stolen goods well knowing the same to have been stolen. The evidence for the prosecution established that the appellants were in possession of goods recently stolen and the Judge in directing the jury said :

"It is the duty of the prosecution to prove the case against the prisoners. The burden of proof is on them up to a point, that is to say, they have to prove that the goods were stolen, and the stolen goods were in the hands of these people ; but then the prisoners have to give an account of how the goods came into their possession."

and

"As I said from the beginning the prosecution have to prove that these men were dealing with stolen goods. That they have done. The prisoners are then put to explain how it came that they were dealing with these stolen goods, and to give an explanation which will satisfy twelve reasonable men."

It was held by the Court of criminal appeal that this was misdirection and that the true position was that, in the absence of any explanation by the accused of the way in which the goods came into his possession, which might reasonably be true, the jury might convict the prisoner but that, if an explanation were given which the jury thought might reasonably be true, although they were not convinced of its truth, the prisoner was entitled to be acquitted inasmuch as the Crown would have failed to discharge the duty cast upon it of satisfying the jury beyond reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. The other case is Emperor v. Nemetulla (7). There it was held by Jenkins, C. J., and Sharfuddin, J., that, where in a case of murder blood-stained ornaments were found in the room occupied by the accused and the evidence established that those articles belonged to the deceased, and in the Sessions Judge's charge to the jury there was no direction pointing out that the possession in the case, if believed, was a fact from which the Court might presume not merely theft or receipt of stolen property but also murder with which the accused was charged, that was a serious omission detracting materially from the value of the verdict and opinion of the jurors. Jenkins, C. J., points out in the course of his judgment that it is clear that the inferences and presumptions in criminal cases which are provided for in S. 114, Evidence Act, arise not only in connexion with cases of theft and receipt of stolen goods but also in connexion with other offences.

I have thought it necessary to make these observations which are entirely in agreement with those which have fallen from my learned brother because Sogaimuthu Padayachi v. Emperor (2) is constantly quoted in this High Court as an authority for the principle that criminal Courts in the absence of any explanation by the accused can only draw an inference that the accused committed the murder where no other inference is possible. It was not necessary in Sogaimuthu Padayachi v. Emperor (2) to lay down any such general principle and for that reason it cannot be accepted as a decision upon this point ; and, for the reasons I have already given, I do not agree with the opinions of the learned Judges on this question in that case.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

— —

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 241

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Dwarampudi Basivireddi—Appellant.

v.

Gadi Kamaraju and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 218 of 1927, Decided on 7th September 1932 against order of Sub-Judge, Narasapur, D/- 10th March 1927, in Appeal No. 127 of 1926.

Mortgage—Moveable property—Mortgagee is entitled to right of sale.

A mortgage of moveable property is valid and decree can be passed in enforcement of that mortgage. A mortgagee of moveable property is entitled to a right of sale quite as much as a mortgagee of immovable property in execution of the decree: 42 Cal 455, Ref.

[P 241 C 1; P 242 C 2]

G. Lakshmana—for Appellant.Ch. Raghava Rao and A. Sundaram Aiyar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The point for determination in this Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeal is whether the decree-holder in O. S. No. 296 of 1924 is entitled to take the amount in deposit in preference to the decree-holder in O. S. No. 410 of 1918.

The decree-holder in O. S. No. 410 is the appellant before this Court. In O. S. No. 296, respondent 1 obtained a mortgage decree. The subject matter of the mortgage was immovable property and the crops that may grow on it. The decree stated generally that the decree-holder may realize his decree by sale of the mortgage property. To that decree the present appellant was a party as he also held a mortgage over the same property. He was defendant 3 in the suit. Before the execution of the mortgage decree the present appellant obtained a money decree and brought the standing crops on the property to sale. The mortgagee decree-holder then put in an application stating that the amount brought into Court should be utilized towards the discharge of his decree. His prayer was that the deposit amount may be transferred to his mortgage suit and that meanwhile the said amount may be attached and prevented from being paid to others.

It is undoubted law that a mortgage of moveable property is valid, and a decree can be passed in enforcement of that mortgage. The learned District Munsif held that inasmuch as the mortgage was of immovable property the decree-holder's right was not to take steps to sell it, but to enforce the lien which alone he has on the moveable property by obtaining a decree for money in a subsequent suit and as the procedure which the decree holder has resorted to was unwarranted in law, he dismissed his application. In appeal the learned Subordinate Judge set aside the order of the District Munsif and ordered execution to proceed.

In this second appeal Mr. Lakshmana has again emphasized the point on which the decision of the District Munsif is based, i. e., his contention is that without obtaining a separate personal decree no execution can be proceeded with against the moveable property. What he states is that a separate suit should be instituted and it is only after obtaining a decree for money that any execution can be taken. In my opinion this contention cannot be accepted. Once a decree for sale of property has been passed, the distinction that part of the mortgage property is moveable and part is immovable is altogether effaced. There is a decree for sale of the mortgage property including the moveable as well as the immovable property and as the decree gives the decree-holder the right to sell, I think without resorting to a separate suit the mortgage property can be brought to sale. Otherwise the position will lead to this complication. Having once obtained a decree for the sale of the property, moveable though it may be, he cannot execute that decree unless he obtains another decree in respect of the same property. A suit for the same relief in those circumstances cannot lie.

There is no direct authority on this point in any decision of the High Court, but a decision in Mahamaya Debi v. Haridas Haldar (1) lends support to the conclusion arrived at by the appellate Court. There, there was a mortgage of intangible property and a decree for foreclosure was passed. The learned Judges held that such a decree could be passed and executed. Relying on that decision the learned commentator, Sir D. F. Mulla, in his Civil Procedure Code, says:

"A mortgagee of chattels is entitled to foreclosure quite as much as a mortgagee of immovable property."

1. (1915) 42 Cal 455=27 I C 400.

If a mortgagee of chattels is entitled for foreclosure quite as much as mortgagee of immovable property, I do not see any reason why a mortgagee of moveable property is not entitled to right of sale quite as much as a mortgagee of immovable property.

In this case there is a further difficulty. The present appellant was a party to the decree in the mortgage suit. Even assuming, as is argued on his behalf, that there was only a lien declared by the decree as regards the moveable property, still being a party to the decree, his rights can only be subject to this lien and he cannot be heard now to say that his rights should be recognized first and that the rights of the decree-holder in the mortgage suit should be recognized only later.

In these circumstances I think the order of the lower Court is right and this Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeal is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 242

RAMESAM AND MOCKETT, JJ.

P. Rajagopala Gramani—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Baggiammal—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Original Side Appeal No. 59 of 1932, Decided on 11th October 1932, from judgment of Stone, J., D/- 8th August 1932.

Trusts Act (1882), S. 11—Court can sanction reasonable amount for an object unprovided for by the author of trust which is beneficial and essential to beneficiary.

Where an emergency or a state of circumstances which it may reasonably be supposed was not foreseen or anticipated by the author of the trust and is unprovided for by the trust instrument arises, the Court would exercise its general administrative jurisdiction on behalf of all the parties interested.

Where the paramount intention of the author of the trust is to benefit his granddaughter, but no provision is made in the deed for her marriage and other ceremonies the Court can sanction a reasonable amount for the expenses of such ceremonies: New's case, (1901) 2 Ch. 534; in Re : Tollemache (1903) 1 Ch. 955, Appl.

[P 243 C 1, 2]

Short, Bewes & Co.—for Appellant.

V. S. Rangachariar—for Respondent.

Ramesam, J.—This is an appeal from the decree of our brother Stone, J., dated 8th August 1932, in Application No. 1879 of 1932 in C. S. No. 137 of 1932. The defendant is the appellant before us.

The facts out of which this appeal arises may be briefly stated. One Raju Gramani executed a deed of trust on 1st September 1919 under which he settled his properties upon trust appointing the defendant, who is his son-in-law by his second wife, as trustee. At the time of his death, he had three houses and had a fixed deposit for a sum of Rs. 50,000 in the Imperial Bank. He provided that one of the houses shall be utilized for the residence of the members of his family, that is, his wife and his daughters until their marriage. The income of the other houses which is said to be Rs. 80 per month was to be utilized by the trustee for paying taxes in respect of the estate, for repairs and for the expenses of his first wife Baggiammal, who is the plaintiff in this suit. After her death, the net income was to be paid over to his son Gnanasundaram and after the death of Gnanasundaram it was to be distributed equally between his children. But if he dies issueless, it was to be distributed equally between the daughters. The interest accruing on the fixed deposit in the Imperial Bank was to be spent similarly. Misunderstandings have arisen between the first wife Baggiammal and the trustee and this suit was filed by Baggiammal against the defendant for the purpose of removing him from trusteeship.

A Judge's summons was taken in this suit by a notice of motion for the purpose of obtaining an interlocutory order from the Court directing the defendant to pay: (1) Rs. 1,500 required for the nuptial ceremonies of the plaintiff's granddaughter, that is, the daughter of Gnanasundaram, including the amount required for the earlier ceremony when she attained age; (2) a sum of Rs. 2,000 required for paying off certain creditors from whom she borrowed for the expenses of her Suits Nos. 268 and 269 of 1931; (3) a sum of Rs. 1,000 required for paying off the decree-holder in S. C. S. No. 2480 of 1931, the plaintiff having borrowed that amount for the marriage expenses of her grand-daughter from one Ratna Bai; and (4) certain miscellaneous items such as maintenance, etc., amounting to Rs. 1,000. Altogether she applies for the payment of Rs. 6,500. The duties of the trustee are defined in the deed of trust already mentioned. No provision was made by the settlor for expenses of suits between his wife and the trustee, nor has he provided for the expenses of the marriage and nuptials and other ceremonies connected with his granddaughter. It is very difficult to say what exactly he intended. Perhaps he intended that the expenses of the marriage and other ceremonies of the granddaughter were to be defrayed by the wife out of the net income which was to be paid to her, or perhaps it was an oversight on his part. The duties of the trustee are governed by S. 11, Trusts Act, which runs as follows:

"The trustee is bound to fulfil the purpose of the trust, and to obey the directions of the author of the trust given at the time of its creation, except as modified by the consent of all the beneficiaries being competent to contract. Where the beneficiary is incompetent to contract, his consent may, for the purposes of this section, be given by a principal civil Court of original jurisdiction."

In this case Gnanasundaram's children are both minors and other children may be born who are entitled to take under the trust deed. The Court's consent is therefore necessary. S. 11 is based on the well recognized principles of English law. In In re Walker, Walker v. Dencombe (1) at p. 885 Farwell, J., observed:

"The question that I have to consider is whether I can on the true construction of this will authorize the trustees to make any expenditure larger than the sum mentioned in the will. I decline to accept any suggestion that the Court has an inherent jurisdiction to alter a man's will because it thinks it beneficial. It seems to me that is quite impossible. But in considering what is the true construction of the will, it is open to the Court to ascertain if there be a paramount intention expressed in the will, and if so, to consider whether particular directions are properly to be read as subordinate to such paramount intention, or are to be treated as independent positive provisions."

Here there being a paramount intention to benefit the granddaughter, the question is whether the Court cannot sanction expenses for her marriage and other ceremonies as subordinate to that intention. In New's case (2) it was held:

"Where . . . there arises an emergency or a state of circumstances which it may reasonably be supposed was not foreseen or anticipated by the author of the trust and is unprovided for by the trust instrument, and which renders it desirable and perhaps even essential, in the interests of the beneficiaries, that certain acts should be done by the trustees which they themselves have no power to do, and to which the consent of all the beneficiaries cannot be obtained by reason of some not being sui juris or not yet in existence, the Court will exercise its general administrative jurisdiction by sanctioning, on behalf of all parties interested, those acts being done by the trustees," and it is said that this principle particularly applies where the estate consists of a business or of shares in a mercantile company. In Re Tollemache (3), on appeal from the judgment of Kekewich, J., at p. 457 of the same volume, the Court on appeal affirmed the judgment of Kekewich, J., and dismissed the appeal. Romer, L. J., said:

"New's case (2) shews how far the Court will go, and beyond what point it will not go."

Cozens-Hardy, L. J., observed:

"In my opinion New's case (2) constitutes the high-water mark of the exercise by the Court of its extraordinary jurisdiction in relation to trusts."

In Kekewich J's. judgment at p. 457 he enumerated various sub-headings of this extraordinary jurisdiction. The first sub-heading is where an advance was sought out of the capital of the estate for the benefit of a minor who is a beneficiary with a vested or contingent interest. The present case must if at all fall under this heading. The second sub-heading is where a business has got to be continued. The third is where a business is to be sold to a joint stock company. The fourth is where reconstruction of a company is contemplated. The fifth is where mortgages have got to be dealt with. As I already said, the further headings do not help the petitioner in this case: vide also Lewin on Trusts, pp. 319 and 398. Having regard to the principles laid down in the above cited English cases and the provisions of S. 11, Trusts Act, we think we may sanction a reasonable amount for the expenses of the consummation ceremony of the granddaughter. But we think the amount sanctioned by the learned Judge is rather too high. We think it is enough to allow Rs. 750 for the coming of age ceremony and for the consummation ceremony, the amount to be distributed according to the discretion of the grandmother. This amount may be raised by a loan in the Imperial Bank or any other Bank on the security of the fixed deposit receipt at a reasonable rate of interest, and the interest and the principal of the loan should be paid off in monthly instalments of Rs. 50 to be deducted out of the monthly payment to the plaintiff from the net income. If before the loan is discharged the plaintiff and Gnanasundara die, the balance should be debited against the interest of the granddaughter Chandrambal. But as to the second, third and other items, we are unable to see how these expenses fall within the principles mentioned above.

1. (1901) 1 Ch 879=70 L J Ch 417=84 L T 193=49 W R 394.

2. (1901) 2 Ch 534.

3. (1903) 1 Ch 955=72 L J Ch 539=88 L T 670=51 W R 597.

It is said by the learned advocate for the respondent that the trustee practically consented to the order of the learned Judge. Mr. Brooke Elliot, who appeared before us for the appellant, denies that he ever consented, but on the other hand opposed the petition. He however stated his willingness to obey the directions of the Court. The trustee is of course bound to obey the directions of the Court and a statement to that effect cannot amount to a consent that the plaintiff's application in respect of the various items should be allowed. Even Mr. Krishnaswami Ayyangar does not say that there was any consent that a particular amount should be awarded. Under these circumstances we think that the matter is really left to the Court to decide under S. 11, Trusts Act. The consent of the other beneficiaries will not be necessary. We allow the appeal to the extent indicated above. The plaintiff will pay 2/3rds of the cost of the trustee to be debited against her monthly allowance in instalments. The trustee will reimburse himself in respect of his own costs from the interest on the trust estate. The direction to pay the amount to the advocate will remain.

Mockett, J.—I agree. I must however add that I am satisfied that, whether there was or was not a consent decree in the strict sense, there was no serious opposition to the course adopted by the learned Judge. Previous orders in this trusteeship had been made by several Judges of this Court, all apparently by consent. Now the trustee takes up the correct attitude that the terms of the trust deed must be strictly applied and on that basis informs us that he argued before the learned trial Judge and has now in this appeal through his counsel addressed learned arguments to us based on the provisions of the Indian Trusts Act and certain decisions of the English Chancery Courts. We must of course accept this assurance. I cannot help thinking that the argument before us was at least a little more emphatic than that addressed to the learned Judge. I do not find in the learned Judge's judgment which has not been printed and which is very brief any indication that the question of importance which is now raised was argued before him. I mention this as I was at one time, during the course of this appeal, of opinion that we ought to send the matter back to the learned trial Judge for decision after argument, but after what Mr. Brooks Elliot has said I concur with my learned brother that as the matter has now been fully argued before us it is better to deal with it here in the interests of saving judicial time.

The facts have been stated by my learned brother and I do not propose to repeat them. It is sufficient to say that in the estate of Raju Grammany deceased, his widow, the plaintiff, is given a life interest, with remainder over to the settlor's son for life and after his death to his children. The widow Baggiam Ammal is now suing to remove the trustee with whom she is quarrelling. In fact she asks for Rs. 1,500 for the nuptial ceremonies of her granddaughter, Rupees 2,000 for paying off creditors from whom she borrowed for the expenses of litigation in 1931 and Rs. 1,000 for paying off a decree-holder. This debt was in respect of money borrowed for the marriage expenses of her granddaughter and miscellaneous items to the extent of Rupees 1,000. She asks that this money should be advanced out of the capital of the trust property. We are told that this widow is an elderly lady. It must be borne in mind that she has a life interest only. There is no specific provision for maintenance or for raising loans in the trust deed. But S. 41, Trusts Act, would appear to give power to the trustee to do this when necessary. That surely must apply to the case of persons having reversionary interest in the capital. S. 11 of the Act deals with the duties of trustees. It will be seen that they are bound to carry out the purpose of the trust except as modified by the consent of all the beneficiaries being competent to contract or where the beneficiary being incompetent to contract, the consent of a principal civil Court of original jurisdiction has been obtained. There is a proviso that nothing in the section requires the trustee to obey any direction when to do so would be impracticable, illegal or manifestly injurious to the beneficiaries. Now it is clear I think that to raise Rs. 6,500 out of the capital for the purposes for which it is intended in this case to be used is not within the provisions of the Trusts Act. There has been no consent of the beneficiaries competent to contract and it is not suggested the matter was brought to the learned trial Judge on the basis that this was a matter so beneficial or advantageous to the minor beneficiaries that the formal permission of the Court should be obtained. S. 11, Trusts Act, would appear to have been founded on the principles which are specifically stated in In re New (2) and I think that the doctrine therein enunciated applies to this country, namely, that :

"where an emergency or a state of circumstances which, it may reasonably be supposed, was not foreseen or anticipated by the author of the trust and is unprovided for by the trust instrument arises, the Court would exercise its general administrative jurisdiction on behalf of all the parties interested."

As pointed out New's case has been held in England now to :

"constitute the high-water mark of the exercise by the Court of its extraordinary jurisdiction in relation to trusts."

The judgment of Kekewich, J., in Re Tollemache (3) which is approved by the Court of appeal in Re Tollemache (4) and which appears to be the leading case on the subject) sets out the grounds on which the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Court would be exercised. I agree with my learned brother that the only payment which has been sanctioned in this case and which can conceivably be brought within that judgment is the amount of the nuptial expenses of the granddaughter who has a contingent interest in the trust. My learned brother considers that Rs. 750 is adequate for the purpose named and I of course agree with him in any estimate of this sort. I also agree with the safeguards which he has named for the protection of the corpus of the trust property against diminution caused by the raising of Rs. 750. I agree that the appeal should be allowed to the extent which this sole payment involves and also with the order proposed as to costs.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal partly allowed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 245

BARDSWELL, J.

Perumal Konan and others—Petitioners.

v.

Tirumalai Machi Reddiar and others—Opposite Parties.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 203 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 188 of 1932, Decided on 6th September 1932, to revise the order of First Class Sub-divisional Magistrate, Ariyalur, D. - 24th December 1931.

* (a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 147 — Dispute as to possession and right to perform puja—Magistrate can deal with latter claim also.

When there is a dispute as to the possession of a temple and the right to perform puja therein the Magistrate can deal with the claim as to the right to perform puja as part of the larger relief that is prayed for. If however it is not so included in the major relief, it is doubtful whether an application under S. 147 can lie merely as to the right to perform puja in a certain temple : 34 I C 651, Foll. [P 246 C 1]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 145 — Pujari having possession on behalf of trustee cannot set up that that possession is his own.

A trustee has authority over an archaka or pujari even if his post is hereditary. Hence a pujari having possession on behalf of his superior trustee, cannot set up that that possession is his own: 25 Mad 631, Rel on.; 2 Weir 107, List. [P 246 C 1]

A. V. Narayanasami Ayyar— for Petitioner.

K. S. Jayaram Ayyar and K. G. Srinivasa Ayyar— for Opposite Parties.

Order.—The petitioners put in a petition under Ss. 145 and 147, Criminal P. C., asking that it might be declared that they and their pangalies alone have been in and are entitled to possession of certain temples, and asking that the counter-petitioners may be prohibited from interfering with the exclusive rights of the petitioners and their pangalies to do puja in the said temples. The petition has been dismissed, and the petitioners have come in revision.

There seems to be no reason whatever for interfering with the order under S. 145. The oral evidence on either side is found not to be very satisfactory, but the documentary evidence clearly indicates that the petitioners occupied a subordinate position to C. P. 1 who held the post of trustee. Possession has been found to be with C. P. 1, while such possession as the petitioners had was on his behalf as subordinate to him as such trustee. The learned advocate for the petitioners on this petition has called to my attention certain authorities, and principally Baboo Reddi v. Kullappa Nattan (1), in which it has been held that when there is a dispute between a tenant and a landlord as to actual possession the point cannot be taken that the possession by the tenant is possession by the landlord. But this view has nothing to do with the facts of the present case. It is a matter of the possession of a servant or subordinate being the possession of the person who has authority over him. That a trustee has authority over an archaka or pujari, even if his post is hereditary as petitioners claim theirs to be, is shown by the decision in Seshadri Aiyangar v. Ranga Bhattar (2). No authority has been quoted to show that a servant can set up that possession by him for his master or superior is his own possession, or that the master or superior cannot set up that that possession is his own, though exercised for him by the servant.

The next point is as to the application under S. 147. As to this the Magistrate has passed no order perhaps because he thought that what was applied for under S. 147 was included in what was applied for under S. 145. As has been pointed out by Sir William Ayling, J., in Palaniyandi Pandaram v. Palaniappa Thevan (3), when there is a dispute as to the possession of a temple and the right to perform puja therein, the Magistrate can deal with the claim as to the right to perform puja as part of the larger relief that is prayed for. If however it is not so included in the major relief, the same decision shows that it is doubtful whether an application under S. 147 can lie merely as to the right to perform puja in a certain temple. As Ayling, J., had pointed out, the wording of the present S. 147 is different from the language of that section in the old Criminal Procedure Code. In the present case then there can be no doubt but that it was competent for the petitioners to make the application under S. 147. I shall therefore refer to it on its merits.

As has been stated above, the petitioners claim a hereditary right to be pujaries in the temples in question, though it does not appear that they were ever formally appointed to that position; but rather the case appears to be that they assumed the position on the removal of certain other persons who held the office before them though, as they contend, under no right. Be this as it may, the attempt of the petitioners to show that they have a hereditary right has not been established before the Magistrate. Though the Magistrate holds it to be immaterial for the purpose of this case, to find whether the first petitioner was an hereditary pujari or not, he has stated that there was no particle of trustworthy evidence to support the hereditary claim. There he has left the matter. He has also found that the first petitioner—the only petitioner who gave evidence—was such a liar that it was only by mistake that he ever told the truth. The claim, then, of the petitioners in so far as it rests upon a hereditary right has at any rate not been made out before the Magistrate. Nor is it a case in which orders such as those passed in Baboo Reddi v. Kullappa Nattan (1) and Palaniyandi Pandaram v. Palaniappa Thevan (3) could apply. It is not a case in which the temples have been attached so that no service can be performed such as the public have a right to expect. Nor again is it a case of some one who, though he cannot claim possession of the temple, yet has a right to enter the temple to perform puja therein. The petitioners have established no right at all before the Magistrate. Their case under S. 147 also must therefore fail.

The third point taken is the matter of costs. It has been ordered that the petitioners are to pay the costs incurred by the counter-petitioners, in respect of the witnesses actually examined in Court, and pleader's fee for one advocate at the scale of fees paid to the Public Prosecutor for Crown work. Considering the number of witnesses examined and the number of exhibits filed, and considering also the opinion which the Magistrate has held of the petitioners, I think that both the costs have been properly awarded and that the rate of costs allowed is not excessive. The petition therefore fails throughout and is dismissed.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition dismissed.

1. (1881) 2 Weir 107.

2. (1912) 35 Mad 631=10 I C. 548.

3. (1916) 17 Cr L J 235=34 I C. 651.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 247

BARDSWELL, J.

Bhogi Reddi Ankamma and others—
Petitioners, In re.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 601 of 1932, Criminal Misc. Petn. No. 783 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 557 of 1932, Decided on 2nd September 1932, from order of Sess. Judge, Guntur D/-9th August 1932.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 439 — Court cannot revise its own order.

A Court cannot revise its own revisional order. Even a High Court cannot do this : 16 I C 518, Ref. [P 248 C 1]

* (b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 437—Person committed to Sessions Court for offence under S. 201, I. P. C.—Subsequent examination of witness under S. 219, Criminal P. C., by committing Magistrate—Sessions Judge adding charge under S. 302, I. P. C., also on basis of such evidence—Such charge must be quashed.

An order under S. 437 has to be passed on an examination of the record of any case as it stands at the time when the Judge takes it up for consideration. Accused were committed to the Sessions Court for a charge under S. 201, I. P. C. One of the prosecution witnesses was again called by the committing Magistrate and he was examined under S. 219, Criminal P. C. On the basis of his evidence, a charge under S. 302, I. P. C., was also added.

Held : that the charge under S. 302 must be quashed as the evidence of the witness recorded under S. 219, Criminal P. C., was a later addition by way of supplement to the record and did not form part of it. [P 249 C 1, 2]

* (c) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 226 and 219—S. 226 cannot be applied with reference to additional evidence taken under S. 219.

Section 226 has to do with a charge that is imperfect or erroneous when any person is committed for trial and in order to apply the section the charge must be imperfect or erroneous at the time of commitment. S. 219 provides for the taking of supplementary evidence after commitment but before the trial, and there is no provision that the charge can be altered or a fresh committal order made by the Magistrate of his own motion after the taking of such evidence; and therefore S. 226 cannot be applied with reference to additional evidence taken under S. 219, Criminal P. C. : 32 Cal 22 and A I R 1920 Mad 131, Ref. [P 250 C 2]

K.S. Jayarama Ayyar and G. Gopala-swami—for Petitioners.

Order.—The five petitioners come in revision against the order of the Sessions Judge of Guntur, directing that they stand their trial at the Sessions on a charge of murder in addition to a charge under S. 201, I. P. C., already framed by the committing Magistrate. They ask on various points of law that the commitment on the charge of murder may be quashed. A charge sheet was put in against them and sixteen others by the Station House Officer, Bapatla, the offences stated being those punishable under Ss. 302 and 201, I. P. C. In the charge sheet the petitioners figured as accused 3, 4, 5, 8 and 16. The Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Guntur, who held the preliminary inquiry discharged sixteen of the accused, including all the petitioners in respect of both offences and, while discharging accused 1 (Ankamma) before him in respect of the offence of murder, framed a charge sheet against him under S. 201 and committed him to the Sessions to stand his trial on that charge. The Sessions Judge, on reading the committal order, issued, on his own motion on 25th July 1932, notice to : (1) accused 1, 4, 6, 7, 9 to 15 and 17 to shew cause why they should not be committed on a charge of murder ; and (2) accused 2, 3, 5, 8 and 16, the present petitioners, to show cause why they should not be committed for offences punishable under Ss. 302 and 201, I. P. C.

After hearing the petition the learned Judge, in his Criminal Revision Proceedings 22 of 1932, of the same date, passed orders that accused 2 should be committed to the Sessions on a charge of murder and that the petitioners should be committed to the Sessions for the offence under S. 201, I. P. C. The Sub-Magistrate committed these several persons to the Sessions accordingly. This also was on 26th July 1932. On 8th August 1932 the Public Prosecutor made an application to the Sessions Judge under S. 338, Criminal P. C., in which he represented the expediency of tendering a conditional pardon to Ankamma (Accused 1) in order that he might be examined as witness against the other accused, whether for the prosecution or on behalf of the Court.

The learned Judge then tendered a pardon to Ankamma, and adjourned the case (S. C. 24/32) against him sine die, and directed that he should be heard as a witness, though not as a prosecution witness, as the right of the prosecution to summon an additional witness, was, to use his own words, "exhausted under S. 219, Criminal P. C." In another order however of the same date he adjourned the case (S. C. 36/32) against the petitioners to 4 p. m. the next day, in order to enable the prosecution to summon Ankamma before the committing Magistrate under that very S. 219. His reasons for adjourning the case were that, if Ankamma repeated his version, the interests of justice would require that some or all of the petitioners and others should be tried for murder and that some or all of those others should be tried for the offence under S. 201, I. P. C. On the following day 9th August 1932, after Ankamma had been examined as a witness by the committing Magistrate, he passed an order that the charges against the petitioners were to be under S. 302 as well as under S. 201, I. P. C.

One ground on which this order is attacked in revision is that it was a review such as was not within his competence by the Sessions Judge of his revisional order of 26th July 1932. It is not disputed that a Court cannot revise its own revisional order. Even a High Court cannot do this : Ranga Rao, In re (1). The learned Judge however has tried to show that in his order of 9th August 1932 he was not revising his earlier order dated 26th July 1932, but only interpreting it; but the learned Public Prosecutor does not try to support a great part of the reasoning by which he tries to show this, nor, indeed, can it be supported.

He sets out that, in his order of 26th July 1932, he should have said merely that he had directed the committing Magistrate to commit accused 3, 4, 5, 8, 16 (petitioners) for trial and that, when he said further that the trial was to be "for the offence under S. 201, I. P. C." those additional words were mere surplusage. At least this is what he clearly means, though he has only underlined the words "S. 201" as being by way of surplusage. That he should have so expressed himself is most astonishing. By the terms of S. 437, Criminal P. C., under which the order of 26th July 1932 must be taken to have been passed, the Sessions Judge may order that a person, who has been improperly discharged by an inferior Court in a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session, be committed for trial upon the matter of which he has been, in the opinion of the Sessions Judge, improperly discharged. Obviously the order cannot be confined to a bare direction that the person is to be committed, but must state the matter in respect of which the commitment is to be made. It is true that S. 437 does not say that the commitment is to be on a specific charge, but the very sections in Ch. 28 on which the learned Judge relies in support of his view show that a Magistrate, in committing any person to the Sessions, has to frame against him a charge showing with what offence he is charged. It was under Ch. 28 that the Magistrate had to make the commitment. Indeed I cannot follow the line of argument of the Sessions Judge in this connexion, nor has any attempt been made to explain it. He says, with a strange confusion of tenses:

"the committing Magistrate framed a charge under S. 210 and he cancels it under S. 213 (2) Criminal P. C., but when he commits under S. 213 (1), Criminal P. C., he merely commits the accused for trial without being under any obligation to commit accused for trial for any particular offence. If he refers to any particular offence, with reference to his committal, the reference is surplusage."

Why he should have at all dragged in S. 213 (2) is past my imagining. The Magistrate in this case has not cancelled any charge and, had he done so, under the provisions of S. 213 (2), there would of course have remained nothing left on which the petitioners could be committed. It almost seems as if the learned Judge thought that, because S. 218 comes later than S. 213 (2), it is somehow affected by it, so that for the purposes of applying S. 218, the Magistrate's action in framing a charge as required by S. 210 is washed out. It is only by taking it that he had some such idea in his head that I can understand his making the further remark that

"the distinction between the framing of a charge by the committing Magistrate and the committal made by him may be seen in Form No. 33 of the Criminal Rules of Practice," though what he means by this is beyond me. S. 210 provides that, when the Magistrate is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused for trial, he shall frame a charge under his hand, declaring with what offence the accused is charged, while in Form 33, which is the form to be used when applying S. 218, there have to be stated the offence in respect of which there is a charge against the accused; and S. 218 itself is even more explicit. By it when an accused is committed for trial a notification has to be sent by the Magistrate to the person appointed by the local Government on that behalf, in which the offence is to be stated in the same form as the charge, and the charge together with the record of inquiry, is to be sent to the Court of Session. The word "charge" in this section can only mean the charge framed as provided by S. 243. It is clear then that the Magistrate in committing the petitioners had to frame a charge showing of what offence they were accused, and this is what he has, in fact, done in framing a charge against them under S. 201, I. P. C., in accordance with the Sessions Judge's revisional order of 26th July 1932. Mr. Bewes tries to support that part of the learned Judge's order under review in which it is stated:

"I must find that I did not accept the discharge of the present accused 1 to 6 (petitioners) by the committing Magistrate as regards S. 302 as final, on grounds other than those on which the Judge has himself based his finding."

Mr. Bewes points out that there was a notice issued to the petitioners to show cause why they should not be committed to the Sessions for offences under both Ss. 201 and 302, I. P. C., and argues that as the order of 26th July 1932, while directing this committal under S. 201, I. P. C., did not specifically discharge the notice as against them in respect of S. 302, there was not a definite disposal of that notice as regards the charge of murder. Even however, assuming, without allowing, that it was open to the learned Judge to make such a reservation while passing what was on the face of it a final order, and that he did, in fact, make such a reservation, I cannot find that in any way justifies his order of 9th August 1932 against the petitioners. An order under S. 437 has to be passed on an examination of the record of any case; and so any order passed by the learned Judge, in pursuance of his notice to the petitioners to show cause, could only be with reference to the record as it stood at the time when he took it up for consideration. The evidence of Ankamma, recorded under S. 219 was a later addition by way of supplement to that record and by no means a part of it. I understand the learned Public Prosecutor to concede, at least, that there would have been no committal of the petitioners for murder without the evidence of Ankamma, and that such is the case is, indeed, plain from what the learned Judge has stated in his earlier revisional order. He doubted very seriously whether certain statements made by Ankamma as an accused party could be used in evidence against his fellow accused, and found that the evidence of P. Ws. 10, 13 and 14, the only other witnesses against the petitioners, justified a charge against them only under S. 201, I. P. C. It is evident, then, from his order now under review that it was because of the additional evidence of Ankamma that he directed that the petitioners should be charged with murder. That order, then, was not based on the record as it stood before him either when he initiated proceedings under S. 435, Criminal P. C., or at the time of his passing the order itself under S. 437, and it is therefore unsustainable. The learned Judge has given, as another reason for holding that his order of 26th July 1932 against the petitioners was not final, that he wound up the order thus:

"I hope that eventually further investigation will disclose who the offenders beside accused 2, are in respect of the charge of murder."

But the taking from Ankamma on oath of a statement in consonance with what he had previously stated, without being sworn to it, as an accused, can hardly be regarded as a further investigation, while anything that came out in a further investigation, could not be part of the record as it then stood before the Sessions Judge. Investigation, too, I may note, normally means investigation by the police. My conclusion, then, is that the order of the learned Judge now under review cannot be upheld, as far as it is considered as having been passed under S. 437, Criminal P. C. I have next to consider whether the framing of the additional charge of murder can be justified under the terms of S. 226, Criminal P. C. By that section, when any person is committed for trial without a charge, or with an imperfect or erroneous charge, the Court may frame a charge, or add to or otherwise alter the charge, as may be, having regard to the rules contained in the Code as to the form of charges. The learned Judge has referred to this section also and has observed that, once the Sessions Court has seisin by virtue of the committal, it can frame any charge that arises on the evidence adduced in the committing Magistrate's Court. Now, in the present case, the petitioners have certainly not been committed for trial without a charge, neither can it be said, with reference to the evidence, to which I have already alluded, that was available at the time of the committal, that they were committed with an imperfect or erroneous charge. The absence of any such defect is clearer here than in Queen-Empress v. Kharga (2), which has been brought to my notice. Reference has also to be made to Rama Varma Raja v. The Queen (3).

In that decision it is pointed out that a Court of Session has power, when the accused has been committed without a charge at all, or upon a charge which the Court, upon a reference to the proceedings before the committing Magistrate, considers improper, to draw up a charge for any offence which it considers proved by the evidence taken before the committing Magistrate. A charge which was added by the Sessions Court and which could not be supported by the evidence taken by the Magistrate was found to have been framed ultra vires. It is true that in the same case it was found that there was no evidence taken by the Magistrate which would have supported the charge that was framed, whereas here, after the examination of Ankamma under S. 219, there is evidence, taken by the Magistrate, on which the charge of murder might be supported. But in the circumstances of that case the evidence taken by the Magistrate could only have been the evidence taken up to the time of committal, as the additional witness on the strength of whose evidence the conviction on the added charge could alone be sustained, was not at all examined by the Magistrate, but only at the Sessions. The decision does not deal with S. 219, because, in the circumstances, it had no occasion to do so, but so far as it goes it does not, as I read it, encourage the idea that S. 226 can be applied with reference to additional evidence taken under S. 219. I may note that the additional charge in that case was framed before the additional witness was examined and so it was added, or purported to be added, under S. 226. S. 227, which has to be read with S. 237, can only apply after some evidence has been taken at the trial in the Sessions Court. I have not now to consider the applicability of that section as the stage for applying it, if it can be applied at all, has not been reached. There appears to be no decision as to the effect upon S. 226 of additional evidence recorded under S. 219; but, without any authority, it seems clear enough that, as contended by Mr. Jayarama Ayyar, its effect upon that section must be nil.

Section 226 has to do with a charge that is imperfect or erroneous when any person is committed for trial, and this, I take it, can only mean that, for it to apply, the charge must be imperfect or erroneous at the time of commitment. S. 219 provides for the taking of supplementary evidence after commitment but before the trial, and there is no provision that the charge can be altered or a fresh committal order made by the Magistrate of his own motion, after the taking of such evidence. And so, though the additional evidence may be, and in this case has been, recorded by the committing Magistrate, it forms no part of the record upon which the accused has been, or could have been, committed for trial. Though it has no bearing upon the effect of S. 219, I may here refer, for the purpose of showing the general principle, to Birendra Lal Bhaduri v. Emperor (4), in which it is pointed out that:

"the Sessions Court is not a Court of original jurisdiction and, though vested with large powers for amending and adding to charges, can only do so with reference to the immediate subject of the prosecution and committal and not with regard to matter not covered by the indictment."

This statement of principle has been quoted with approval in Muhtu Goundan v. Emperor (5). I must hold that the learned Sessions Judge was not authorized under S. 226 in framing the additional charge of murder against the petitioners, in that the charge against them at the time of their commitment was neither imperfect nor erroneous. As I have remarked above the question of whether the additional charge of murder can be framed later on on the strength of S. 227, is not a matter with which I have now to deal. I do not therefore discuss some rulings bearing on that section which have been quoted in the course of the argument on the petition.

4. (1905) 32 Cal 22=S C W N 784=1 Cr L J 794.

5. A I R 1920 Mad 131=54 I C 21=21 Cr L J 57.

2. (1886) 8 All 665=(1886) A W N 254.

3. (1881) 3 Mad 351=2 Weir 269.

Another point that has been taken for the petitioners is that the committing Magistrate was not warranted in law in recording the evidence of Ankamma under S. 219, and that the Sessions Judge should not have ordered him to take it. I do not however find that the learned Judge ordered the Magistrate to record this evidence. What he did was to allow time to the prosecution to examine Ankamma before the committing Magistrate. I must take it that the Magistrate was asked to record the evidence of Ankamma and that he recorded it because he thought fit to do so. This would be in accordance with S. 219 and as I see no reason to think that the provisions of that section were not complied with, the petitioners fail on the point. As however they have succeeded on the other points, I quash the charge against them under S. 302, leaving open the matter of whether that charge can be added later on under S. 227.

P.R.S./K.S. Order accordingly.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 251 (1)

BURN, J.

Bhogole China Somayya and others—
Accused—Petitioners, In re.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 489 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 485 of 1932, Decided on D/- 13th October 1932.

 Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 367 — Judgment signed but not pronounced by Magistrate—Judgment pronounced by successor of such Magistrate — Accused is not entitled to de novo trial.

The trial of a criminal case is over as soon as the Magistrate has determined the issue of the guilt or innocence of the accused. The mere pronouncing of the judgment is not a part of the trial.

Where a Magistrate who signs a judgment but does not pronounce it is transferred and the judgment is pronounced by his successor there is no irregularity, much less illegality, and the accused is not entitled to a de novo trial: A I R 1929 Mad 201 and 18 M L J 197, Rel on.; 40 Mad 103; A I R 1920 Mad 337 and 27 Mad 510, Ref. [P 251 C 2]

V. Suryanarayana—for Petitioners.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The case was finished on 17th March 1932, and adjourned on that date to 22nd March 1932, for judgment. The judgment was signed and dated by the Magistrate on 22nd March 1932, but was not pronounced by him because some of the accused were absent. On 31st March 1932 the Magistrate who wrote the judgment handed it over to his successor, who pronounced the judgment on 4th April. I respectfully agree with the reasoning and conclusion of Reilly, J., in Public Prosecutor, Madras v. Chockalingam Ambalam (1). The trial was over before the petitioners made their application, on 4th April, for a de novo trial. In whatever sense the word "trial" is used [In re Savrimuthu Pillai (2), Venkatachinnayya v. Emperor (3) and In the matter of Ramasamy Chetty (4)] it is clear that the trial of a criminal case is over as soon as the Magistrate has determined the issue of the guilt or innocence of the accused. The mere pronouncing of the judgment is not a part of the trial. Hence in my opinion the petitioners in this case were not entitled to a de novo trial and there was no irregularity, much less illegality, in the pronouncement of judgment by the successor of the Magistrate who wrote it: In re Sankara Pillai (5).

On the merits little is to be said. It is contended that the learned Subdivisional Magistrate has not given findings as to the common object of the petitioners, their bona fides and so forth. I agree with the learned Public Prosecutor that the findings on these points are sufficiently well indicated in the judgment of the appellate Court. The sentences are not excessive. This petition is dismissed.

P.R.S./K.S.

Petition dismissed.

1. A I R 1929 Mad 201=118 I C 374=30 Cr L J 903=52 Mad 355.
2. (1916) 40 Mad 103=17 Cr L J 163=33 I C 646.
3. A I R 1920 Mad 337=53 I C 50=21 Cr L J 402=43 Mad 511 (F B).
4. (1904) 27 Mad. 510=1 Weir 787.
5. (1908) 18 M L J 197=7 Cr L J 450.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 251 (2)

PANDALAI, J.

Vancheswara Sastri—Petitioner.

v.

Narayana Ayyar—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1052 of 1929, Decided on 14th September 1932, from order of Sub-Judge, Ottapalam.

 (a) Limitation Act (1908), S. 19—Promissory note insufficiently stamped containing acknowledgment of prior liability is admissible to save limitation.

A promissory note which was insufficiently stamped ran as follows: "I have received full consideration by adjustment of the sums which I owe you, namely, Rs. 300 due to you by me on the occasion of your marriage with my granddaughter for her jewels; Rs. 200 due for cloths, silks and vessels for the sixth month ceremony and nuptials."

Held: that the former part of the instrument which is the promissory note is inadmissible as it is insufficiently stamped, but that the latter part contains an express acknowledgment of a prior liability and is admissible as such to save limitation. [P 252 C 1]

(b) Limitation Act (1908), S. 20 — No agreement to pay interest in contract—Subsequent entry as to payment of interest saves limitation.

An entry as to payment of interest, even though there is no agreement at the time of contract, will save limitation because it is enough if there is a subsequent agreement for interest to which the actual payment of interest is the best evidence. [P 252 C 1]

S. Venkatachala Sastri — for Petitioner.

C. S. Swaminathan — for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—This case is fully covered by the decision in Rakkapan v. Surppiah (1). Here as in that case the promissory note dated 14th May 1924 consists of two parts and is as follows:

"Rupees 500.—I, Narayana Iyer, son of Vanchi Patter of Kavaseeri Ottupura Gramam, hereby promise to pay Vancheswara Sastri, son of Gopal-krishna Pattar of Kavasseri Ottupura Gramam, or order, the above sum, Rs. 500, with interest at 7½ per cent per annum; I have received full consideration by adjustment of the sums which I owe you, namely, Rs. 200, due to you by me on the occasion of your marriage with Laxmi my granddaughter for her jewels; Rs. 200 due for cloths, silks and vessels for the sixth month ceremony and nuptials."

The former part of the instrument which is the promissory note is inadmissible as it is insufficiently stamped. But the latter part contains an express acknowledgment of a prior liability and is admissible as such to save limitation. It is found that on 2nd May 1926 the defendant signed an entry on the promissory note, written in the handwriting of his son, stating that in April 1925 Rs. 25 has been sent by money order and that Rs. 12-8-0 was paid on that date making up Rs. 37-8-0 on account of interest for one year.

The learned Subordinate Judge says that this entry does not save limitation as a payment of interest because there was no agreement for interest at the time of the marriage and the nuptials and sixth-month ceremony. He is clearly wrong because it is enough if there was any subsequent agreement for interest as to which the payment itself is the best evidence. The suit was clearly in time. The decree of the lower Court is set aside and there will be a decree as prayed with costs in both Courts.

P.R.S./K.S.

Decree set aside.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 252

ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, J.

M. Kunju Nair — Plaintiff — Petitioner.

v.

Narayanan Nair—Defendant—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 822 of 1929, Decided on 29th April 1932, against decree of Dist. Munsif, Palghat, in S. C. S. No. 1485 of 1928.

Malabar Law — Chit fund — Stipulation making prize winners liable to pay all future instalments on default is not penal — Contract Act (1872), S. 74.

A particular stipulation in a kuriwari may be of the nature of a penalty. But the provision to pay all the future instalments in a lump sum in the case of default by a prize-winner in payment of any instalment provided for by the kuriwari is by itself not a penalty : Case law discussed.

[P 255 C 2]

C. Unnikanda Memon—for Petitioner.

P. A. Krishnankutti Nair—for Opposite Party.

Judgment. — The plaintiff in Small Cause Suit No. 1498 of 1925, on the file of the District Munsif of Palghat, is the petitioner in this civil revision petition. He started a kuri in which the defendant took one ticket. The defendant bid in auction and was paid the amount due. As per the kuriwari Ex. B and the receipt Ex. C (executed by the defendant to the plaintiff when he was paid the amount of the auction), the defendant was bound to pay the future instalments regularly ; but having made default, the plaintiff sued to recover the whole of the future instalments at once. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not entitled to claim the future subscriptions in one lump sum. The main point for determination was whether the plaintiff was entitled to claim the amounts of the future instalments in one lump sum. There was no oral evidence in the case, neither the plaintiff nor the defendant having gone into the box nor adduced any oral evidence. The only exhibits filed in the case were : Ex. A, the registered notice sent by the plaintiff's wakil to the defendant prior to this suit demanding the amount ; Ex. B the kuriwari (the rules and conditions of the kuri) ; and Ex. C, the receipt granted by the defendant when he was paid the prize money when he bid at the auction. The learned District Munsif held (1) that under the terms of the kuriwari, the plaintiff was not entitled to claim all the future instalments in a lump sum, and (2) that "in any case the plaintiff can only claim the subscriptions which have actually become due."

The plaintiff's suit was decreed with reference to the amounts due for the instalments which fell due up to the date of the plaint, and the claim for the other instalments was disallowed. The plaintiff has preferred this revision petition claiming the whole of the future instalments in a lump sum, the default by the defendant having been found by the lower Court. On a construction of the kuriwari, I have no reasonable doubt on the first point. Para. 6 of the kuriwari Ex. B runs as follows :

"The person who bids and receives moneys is to pay his subscription on the same date of auction to the stake-holder, and cause entries thereof to be made in his book by the stake-holder. If default has been made thereof, it is to be paid within five days at a profit of four annas in the rupee, and if default is made even in that, the stake-holder is entitled to recover all the amounts to be paid in future together in a lump sum with interest at 2 per cent per mensem."

The provision is clear that when the defendant made default in the payment of subscriptions for two consecutive instalments according to the finding in the present case, the plaintiff, the stakeholder, was entitled to recover the whole of the amounts due for all the future instalments. Whether the provision is valid or not (a question to be considered presently) it is clear that there is such a provision in the kuriwari. The learned advocate for the respondent did not seriously contest this position, and I think that the learned District Munsif was not right in his construction of the kuriwari. I hold that the terms of the kuriwari provide that the plaintiff would be entitled to recover all the amounts due for all the future instalments in this case.

The second question which was fully argued before me by the learned advocates who appeared in the case is whether such a stipulation is valid and whether the plaintiff is entitled to enforce that provision. On that point also I am unable to agree with the decision of the lower Court. As the question is one likely to arise frequently in practice having regard to the prevalence of kuries (chit funds) in Malabar and some other Districts in the Presidency, I think it is better that I just mention the line of reasoning which has led me to arrive at my conclusion. The plaintiff is the stake-holder called kuttimooan in Malabar, and karaswan in some other districts. The kuri is to consist of 50 tickets of the value of Rs. 6 each. There was to be an auction once in every month. The stake-holder is to collect moneys from the ticket holders, and he is himself responsible to pay the amount bid in auction to the successful bidder. The auction bidder is to be paid the amount of the bid by the stake-holder within 15 days on furnishing sufficient security or surety to the satisfaction of the stake-holder. If sufficient security be not furnished, the stake-holder is to deposit the amount bid in auction in a particular bank in the stake-holder's name. The future instalments are to be paid by the stake-holder from out of the said deposit and any deficiency is to be recovered by the stake-holder from the subscriber in question. If there be no subscribers who were prepared to bid in an auction, then tickets that yet remain to be drawn were to be drawn by the casting of lots and the subscriber in whose name the ticket happened to be drawn has to be paid the amount after deducting Rs. 15 which is to be taken by the stake-holder as his remuneration for his pains.

The stake-holder and the subscriber have signed the kuriwari. Except that the stake-holder is allowed to take Rs. 15 out of the collections every month for his pains, the rules of this kuriwari are substantially the same as those which find a place in the ordinary kuries, as seen, for example, from the kuriwaris set out in the cases reported in Panchena Manchu Nayar v. G. K. Padmanabhan Nayar (1) and Vasudevan Nambudri v. Mammad (2). The question is whether in the absence of any special circumstances, the stake-holder is entitled to recover the amounts due for all the future instalments in case there was default in paying any future instalment as provided in the kuriwari. It was argued that such a stipulation is in the nature of a penalty and that the stake-holder is only entitled to a decree in respect of the amounts due for the instalments that have actually fallen due, with interest, but that he is not entitled to a decree for anything more. As the matter has come before the Courts on various occasions, I think it will be convenient to note how the Courts have viewed similar provisions of such kuriwaris. In Periasami Thalevar v. Subramanian Asari (3), Benson and Bhashyam Ayyangar, JJ., had before them a case "where under the terms of a bond executed to the stake-holders of a certain chit fund the obligor bound himself to pay 27 cottas of paddy in certain instalments, and, that on default, to pay one-sixteenth cotta per cotta per diem for interest from date of default."

1. (1897) 20 Mad 68=7 M L J 26.

2. (1899) 22 Mad. 212.

The Court held that "the stipulation was not unenforceable." The learned Judges observed as follows:

"There is no allegation that the defendant did not enter into the transaction with his eyes open, or was deceived as to its terms. The bond was entered into in accordance with the rules of the chit fund, which are not in any way illegal. There is no ground for not allowing the rule to be given effect to."

No doubt the question before the Court then was not exactly the same as the one before me. But the observations are useful as throwing light on the general nature of the bonds entered into between ticket holders and the stake-holder in chit funds. In Vaithinatha Iyer v. Govindasami Odayar (4), Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ., had more directly to consider the effect of similar provisions in kuriwaris. At p. 557 (of 42 M L J), the learned Judge observed as follows:

"Throughout the whole of the lower Court's judgment we find no mention of the special relation in which the stake-holder of the chit is to the subscribers, and the special necessity for provision for protection of his interest in the agreement by which these relations are regulated. That this relation is of a special nature and justifies stringency in those conditions and in particular in the rate of interest provided for cases of default has been clearly recognized in the decisions with which we respectfully agree. The stake-holder has necessarily to depend on punctual payments from his subscribers and to reserve to himself powers to enforce such payments. For the stake-holder alone is liable to each subscriber and there is no liability between the subscribers inter se and without punctual payments by the individual subscribers, the stake-holder could not discharge his liabilities to the successful bidders, as they arose Looking at the transaction as a whole as defined by Ex. A we are unable to hold that any of the conditions are unreasonable or are such as the parties might not naturally recognize should regulate the exceptional relations between them. Generally therefore we cannot treat any of them as penal."

In Ayya Patter v. A. Manakkal Karnavan (5), Abdur Rahim and Spencer, JJ., observed as follows:

"Generally speaking and apart from the conduct of the parties in this case we should say that time in such transaction is of the very essence of the contract."

In Sankunni Menon v. The Empire of India Life Insurance Co. Ltd., Bombay (6), Venkatasubba Rao, J., remarked at p. 394 (of 61 M L J) as follows:

"What may be construed as a penalty in the case of an ordinary loan, is not necessarily a penalty in the case of a chit fund transaction. That is the effect of the decision in Vaithinatha Iyer v. Govindasami Odayar (4). It is there pointed out that in the case of a stake-holder of a chit, his relation to the subscribers being of a special nature, special necessity exists justifying stringent provisions to protect his interest. The learned Judges observed: 'Without punctual payments by the individual subscribers, the stake-holder could not discharge his liabilities to the successful bidders as they arose.' Such remarks will apply with greater force to the contract of insurance."

One may refer also to contracts of hire purchase. In Ellammal v. Venkataramana Rao (7), Spencer and Devadoss, JJ., held that "time was of the essence of the contract in such cases."

It is true, as held by Ramesam, J., in Muthukumaraswami Pillai v. Subramania Chettiar (8), that it could not be said that the doctrine of penalty would not apply at all under any circumstances to provisions in a kuriwari. In the words of the learned Judge, "the terms of a chit fund contract may be penal." But I do not understand the learned Judge to say that a stipulation to pay the whole of the future instalments in a lump sum in case of default in payment of an instalment as provided in the kuriwari should be considered as a penalty and should always be relieved against. I have gone through the judgment of the learned Judge, and I do not think that the learned Judge meant to decide that question. This is what the learned Judge says:

"The second point argued before me is that the conditions of the bond are penal. Under this point he (the defendant) raises two ques-

5. A I R 1920 Mad 822=52 I C 938.

6. A I R 1932 Mad 241=134 I C 977=61 M L J 388.

7. A I R 1924 Mad 796=79 I C 958.

8. A I R 1927 Mad 1105=102 I C 14.

3. (1904) 14 M L J 136.

4. A I R 1922 Mad 67=67 I C 995=42 M L J 551.

tions. The first is that the rate of interest payable in default is penal, and secondly, the stipulation relating to payment of all the future instalments on two defaults is also penal. Mr. Patanjali Sastri appearing for the respondent argues that the second point was really not raised either in the written statement or in the issues. It was raised very vaguely in the written statement. It is true it is not raised in the issues. Defendant 4's conduct in depositing the amount of the instalments 6 to 21 with interest at 12 per cent from the date of the 6th call up to 17th August 1920, namely, Rs. 1,746, seems to suggest that he intended to raise no question about the advancing for the payment of instalments 6 to 21. The suit was filed on 8th September 1920. By that date instalments 6 to 13 had fallen overdue, and 14 to 21 had not. Even assuming that the stipulation about the payment of all the instalments on defaults is penal, there is nothing to prevent defendants from paying and the plaintiff from accepting the amount of instalments 14 to 21 before their time. The only question is whether the amount of interest which he has paid for these instalments, namely, Rs. 546, was too much, if it is regarded as the amount of interest only on instalments 6 to 13. One thing is clear, that he was quite content to get rid of the obligation to pay instalments 6 to 21 by paying an interest of Rs. 546 for them, whichever way the figure may be arrived at."

The learned Judge's decision was really only on the question of the amount of interest that the plaintiff was entitled to, in the peculiar circumstances of that case. There was a Letters Patent Appeal (L. P. A. No. 199 of 1927) preferred against the learned Judge's judgment by the plaintiff. The learned Judge's decision on the question of interest was confirmed in the circumstances but the plaintiff was given a decree in respect of the future instalments also. The District Munsif had passed a decree in respect of all the other instalments, in regard to which the defendant had preferred an appeal. Accordingly, by the decision in the Letters Patent appeal the amount fixed in the decree in S. A. No. 563 of 1925 was added to the amount due under the District Munsif's decree.

I have thought it necessary to quote the relevant passages from the judgment of the learned Judge, as it was strongly pressed upon me by the learned advocate for the respondent that the question before me was decided by the learned Judge in Muthu Kumaraswami Pillay v. Subramania Chettiar (8), in favour of the respondent's contention. But from what I have said above, it seems to me that the learned Judge's judgment in this case is no authority in favour of the contention that a provision in a kuriwari to pay all the future instalments in case of default of payment of one instalment, should always be treated as penal and relieved against. In fact that learned Judge sitting with Oldfield, J., had decided the contrary in the case reported as Vaithinatha Iyer v. Govindasami Odayar (4), and there is no reason to think that the learned Judge was inclined to withdraw from the position taken up in that case, as was contended before me by the learned advocate for the respondent.

The learned advocate for the respondent strongly relied on two decisions of V. V. Srinivasa Ayyangar, J., reported as Ramalinga Adaviar v. Meenakshisundaram Pillai (9) and Subbiah Pillai v. Shanmuga Pillai (10). As those decisions have been recently considered at length by Curgenvin, J., in S. A. No. 921 of 1926, I do not purpose to go into them in detail. The learned Judge—Curgenvin, J.—after discussing the questions whether such a case would fall under Illus. (f) or Illus. (g), S. 74, Contract Act came to the following conclusion :

"I can see no reason therefore for not following the decision in Vaithinatha Iyer v. Govindasami Odayar (4), which sitting singly I should feel bound either to follow, or to refer this case to a Bench. I conclude that the claim to the principal should be allowed in full."

The case before the learned Judge was also a case of a chit fund, and it was held that a stipulation for payment of the entire amount of the future instalments on default in payment of one, was not a stipulation by way of penalty. As already mentioned, particular stipulation in a kuriwari may be of the nature of a penalty, as observed by Ramesam, J., in Muthu Kumara Swami Pillay v. Subramania Chettiar (8) : see also the decision of the Full Bench in Avathani Muthu Krishnier v. Sankaralingam Pillai (11). But the provision to pay all the future instalments in a lump sum in the case of default by a prize winner in payment of any instalment, provided for by the kuriwari has been held in a number of cases in this Court to be by itself not a penalty.

The decision of Odgers and Curgenvin, JJ., in V. Tatayya v. K. Gangayya, (12).

9. A I R 1925 Mad 177=85 I C 261.

10. A I R 1928 Mad 245=108 I C 319.

11. (1913) 36 Mad 229=18 I C 417 (F B).

12. A I R 1927 Mad 965=105 I C 789.

was also referred to. But that was not a case of a chit fund, but of a decree incorporating a razinama between the parties, and the Court held that the provision that in default of payment of any one of the instalments, the plaintiff could recover, irrespective of the future instalments, the entire amount of principal and interest that remained outstanding by that date, was not in the nature of a penalty under S. 74, Contract Act. As the question has been discussed in the cases already quoted by me, I propose only to give reference to the decision of the House of Lords in Wallingford v. Director of the Mutual Society (13), of the Court of appeal in England in Protector Loan Co. v. Grice (14), and of the Irish Court: In the matter of O. B.: An Arranging Debtor (15). In 13 Halsbury's Laws of England, p. 152, para. 179, there are the following observations which seem to be relevant to the present case:

"Where money is actually payable or to become payable, a provision may validly be made for diminishing the amount, or making it payable by instalments, or allowing other concessions to the debtor upon stipulated terms; and if the debtor complies with the terms he is entitled to the benefit of the provisions. But he must purchase the benefit by strict compliance with the terms; and if he is in default the full debt is payable and he cannot claim relief as against a penalty. Upon this principle when a higher rate of interest has been stipulated for in a mortgage, interest at a lower rate may be substituted on condition of punctual payment; and where a debt is payable by instalments, a stipulation that on nonpayment of any instalment the entire debt shall become due is not in the nature of a penalty: see also para. 1325, at p. 555, of Story on Equity, 3rd Edn., by A. E. Rendall."

In essence the transaction before me is a loan of a common fund to one member. The member to whom the loan is to be advanced is selected either by casting of lots or by other means. The person who offers the highest discount is in some cases selected as the person entitled to the loan of the common fund. But the amount advanced to such member is a loan, and the common fund is lent to each subscriber in turn. As observed by Scotland, C. J., and Frere, J., in Kamakshi Achari v. Appavu Pillai (16):

13. (1880) 5 A C 685=50 L J Q B 49=20 W R S1=43 L T 258.

14. (1880) 5 Q B D 592=49 L J Q B S12=43 L T 564=45 J P 172.

15. (1917) 2 Ir L R 354.

16. (1862) 1 M H C R 418.

"It is simply a loan of the common fund to each subscriber in turn."

These remarks were made in 1863. It is really a debt in praesenti but to be paid by particular instalments if certain conditions be duly observed, but otherwise to be paid up at once irrespective of the benefit of time and instalments. It has been so viewed in this Presidency for a long time. English Courts have held that in such cases no question of penalty arises: see the observations of Lord Selborne, at p. 696, of Lord Blackburn at p. 705 and of Lord Watson, at p. 710. With reference to the general nature of such kuri transaction, I may quote the following observations of Benson and Sundara Ayyar, JJ., in Appeal No. 218 of 1911. The learned Judges say:

"the kuri as a well-known institution in Malabar and is resorted to help thrifty persons for the purpose of their investing savings with good chances of profit."

As kuri transactions are common in the States of Travancore and Cochin also, I just wanted to see how the Courts in those States have dealt with such a matter. Such transactions are in Travancore called chitty-transactions and I find that the Travancore High Court has held that "a stipulation of the kind in a chitty bond is not penal": see Venkatusubrahmaniam Ayyar v. Velayudham (17) and Krishnan Raman v. Raman Aiyappan (18), (which latter case refers at p. 55 to a Full Bench decision of that Court to the same effect) and 44 T. L. R. 461. The Chief Court of Cochin has also taken the same view: see 7 Cochin Law Reports 309, where it is remarked as follows:

"When regard is had to the nature of a kuri, it is impossible to regard such a provision as a penalty."

I do not feel called upon in the circumstances to refer this question to a Bench. I may note that no question has been argued before me whether the provision in this kuriwari relating to interest is penal or not, and so it is not necessary for me to give any opinion on that point in this case. For the above reasons I think that the learned District Munsif was in error in this case in holding that the plaintiff, the stakeholder was not entitled to the amounts due for all the instalments together, and his decree will be modified by giving the plaintiff a decree for the whole of the amount sued for, together with interest at 6 per cent from date of plaint till date of payment, with costs in this and in the lower Court.

17. 15 Trav L R 182.

18. 22 Trav L R 52.

P.R.S./R.K. Decree modified.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 257

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

S. R. M. Annamalai Chettiar—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Rama Narasimhulu Naidu and another—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 727 and 728 of 1930, Decided on 30th October 1932, against decrees of Dist. Judge, Chittoor, in Appeal Suits Nos. 133 and 134 of 1928.

Madras Estates Land Act (1908), S. 13 (3)—Raiyat digging well in patta land at his sole expense—Landlord cannot charge higher rate of rent.

Where the raiyat sinks a well in his patta land for the supply of water for agricultural purposes at his sole expense, the landlord is not entitled to charge higher rate of rent on account of any increase of production by virtue of S. 13 (3); nor can the landlord be regarded as having contributed something towards the improvement by reason of the fact that he loses the chance of recovering any rent on the area of the site covered by the well. The landlord can claim like that if the well is dug in poramboke land : 27 I. C. 869, Dist. [P 258 C 1]

B. Somayya and V. Satyanarayana—for Appellant.

S. A. Seshadri—for Respondents.

Judgment.—These are connected second appeals arising out of two suits filed by two raiyats against the landholder for grant of patta under S. 55, Madras Estates Land Act, for fasli 1336. The main point argued is whether the plaintiffs have effected any improvements at their sole expense within the meaning of S. 13, Cl. 3 of the said Act in some of the dry lands in question, and whether the land-holder can charge rent according to cropwar rates and second crop rates prevailing in the village, although crops of a superior nature such as garden and wet crops raised on such dry lands were the result of those improvements. According to the findings of the lower Courts, it is clear that these lands are classified as dry that though they were originally poramboke, they have become patta lands of the plaintiffs, that the improvements effected by the raiyats (plaintiffs) consist of wells sunk in their patta lands at their own cost, subsequent to the passing of the Estates Land Act, and that before the sinking of those wells, only ordinary dry crops could be raised on these lands. It is admitted that the usage in this village is to levy cropwar rates of rent, which depends upon the nature of the crop raised and the extent of land actually cultivated. As would appear from the pattas filed (for instance Cl. 10 of the patta Ex. C) no rent would be charged on lands left waste or uncultivated unless the non-cultivation is due to the neglect of the raiyat.

In the light of these facts the question in issue has to be determined. S. 13, Cl. 3, declares that notwithstanding any usage or contract to the contrary a raiyat shall not by reason of making an improvement at his sole expense, become liable to pay a higher rate of rent on account of any increase of production or of any change in the nature of the crop raised as a consequence of such improvement. In the present case, there is no doubt that the well sunk by the raiyats in their patta lands for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, would be an improvement within the meaning of S. 3 (4) of the Act. These wells are not shown to prejudicially affect any other land of the land-holder. Nor is it the case of the defendant, that any money was contributed by him for the expenses of sinking these wells. It is argued by the learned advocate for the appellant, that the landholder may be deemed to have contributed something towards the improvement, by reason of the fact that he loses the chance of recovering any rent on the area of the site covered by the wells. In support of this contention reliance is placed on the decision in Lodd Govindoss v. Chinnappa Naidu (1). It is strenuously contended on the respondent's side that that decision has no application to the present case. In that case the point was whether in view of the facts disclosed in the evidence, the zamindar was entitled to charge enhanced rates for crops grown with the aid of well water. S. 13, Cl. (3), Estates Land Act, was held to be not applicable to that case, as the improvements were those effected prior to the Act. But the question turned upon the validity of the contract to pay enhanced rates. In order to see whether there was consideration for the contract, some facts had to be taken into account. It was shown that the wells were dug by the raiyats in land entered in the accounts as poramboke, and that the area covered by the wells was rendered uncultivable. The land in which the wells were dug was not the property of the raiyats, but belonged to the zamindar. That is why Napier, J., has observed thus :

1. (1915) 27 I C 869.

“ By handing over that area to the raiyats for the construction of wells he has in our opinion contributed to the cost of the wells and such contribution is good consideration for the contract set up by him.”

For the purpose of applying Cl. 3, S. 13, the important point is whether the wells in question were sunk at the sole expense of the raiyats. In order to dig a well, the first requisite is land which must serve as the site for the well. If the wells in question were dug in poramboke land, the land-holder by handing over that site for sinking the wells, can be regarded as having contributed towards the cost of these improvements and the case would be taken out of the operation of the said section. The prospective loss of rent on the area of the site covered by the wells cannot by any stretch of the observation in Lodd Govinddoss's case (1) be deemed to be a contribution by the land-holder towards the cost of sinking the wells, and for this reason, it cannot be held, that the improvements are not those made at the sole expense of the raiyats, within the meaning of S. 13 (3) of the Act. For the damage sustained on account of any such loss of rent, it seems to me a remedy will be available. If by the neglect of the raiyat, any plot is left waste or uncultivated, the land-holder is entitled to charge rent. By a voluntary act of the raiyat, if he disables himself from cultivating a certain plot he cannot say, that for causes beyond his control, the cultivation could not be carried on. Though the land-holder cannot prevent the raiyat from making an improvement by way of digging a well in the holding, he may have recourse to the method of charging rent even on the area of the site of the wells, at the dry rates. But in view of the bar created by Cl. 3, S. 13, he cannot levy higher rates of rent, under the prevailing system of charging crop-war rates, if the change in the nature of the crops raised by the consequence of the improvements effected by the raiyat at his sole expense.

The same question was recently considered by Anantakrishna Ayyar, J., in S. A. No. 1980 of 1927, and that decision is clearly in favour of respondents' contention. It is true that the ruling in Lodd Govindoss v. Chinnappa Naidu (1) was not considered in that decision. But, in my view, that ruling does not materially help the appellant in the present appeals. I therefore confirm the finding of the Courts below on this point. As regards the memorandum of objections I see no substance in them. The lands, Nos. 592 and 593, have been classed as wet, and treated so in the previous pattas. They must be presumed to be wet lands liable to be charged accordingly, until the raiyats resort to an appropriate remedy and get the classification changed or assessment reduced. In the result, these appeals and the memoranda of objections are dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeals dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 258

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

M. V. Sundaresa Ayyar—Appellant.

v.

Pacala Subba Rao and others—Respondents,

Appeal No. 496 of 1931 and Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1973 of 1931, Decided on 5th September 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Nellore, D/- 13th March 1931.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151—Court has no inherent right to deprive party of right obtained by limitation.

Where the defendant has acquired a right by operation of the law of limitation to claim that the litigation against him should cease, the Court has no inherent power to deprive the defendant of that right, and to order the litigation to proceed. [P 258 C 2]

K. Umamaheshwaran—for Appellant.

Judgment.—The Subordinate Judge has restored an application to restore a suit after that application was itself time barred. He seems to have thought that where the defendant had acquired the right by operation of the law of limitation to claim that the litigation against him should cease, the Court has an inherent power to deprive the defendant of that right, and to order the litigation to proceed. Obviously S. 151 never confers any such power upon a Court—a power for the ends of injustice and to promote abuse of the process of the Court. The defendant after the plaintiff has exhausted his statutory limit of time clearly has justice on his side and the Court has no right to interfere in order to override a lawful bar of limitation. The petition is allowed with costs throughout and the lower Court's order is cancelled. This disposes of the appeal.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 259

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

K. V. Srinivasathathachar—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Naravalur Srinivasathathachar—Defendant—Respondent.

Appeal No. 112 of 1931, Decided on 26th August 1932, against an order of Sub-Judge, Salem, D/- 14th November 1930.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 54—Partition of revenue also is not necessary for applicability of section.

In construing S. 54 which is plain and unambiguous, words not to be found there should not be imported into it. Hence for the applicability of the section it not necessary that the partition should be is not only of the land, but also of the revenue assessed on it: A I R 1931 Cal 93 and A I R 1931 Cal 104, Rel on.

[P 259 C 1, 2]

* (b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 54—Decree for partition of portion of undivided estate is outside scope of section.

Section 54 applies only to a case where the decree comprehends the partition of the whole of the estate paying revenue to Government. A decree directing partition of a portion of an undivided estate does not fall within the terms of the section: A I R 1931 Cal 93; A I R 1931 Cal 104 and 24 Cal 725, Rel on.

[P 259 C 2]

C. S. Venkatachariar—for Appellant.

B. Sitarama Rao—for Respondent.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The question raised relates to the construction of S. 54, Civil P. C. The lower Court has made an order directing the decree to be forwarded to the Collector for partition being effected. Mr. Venkatachari for the appellant contends that the order is wrong. It is first urged that the section does not apply unless the partition is not only of the land, but also of the revenue assessed on it; in other words, unless the division of the land is to be followed by the apportionment of the revenue. This construction is opposed to the plain provisions of the section. What the section refers to is, the partition of the estate assessed to the payment of revenue and not the partition of the estate as well as the revenue. Why in construing the section, which is plain and unambiguous, words not to be found there should be imported into it, I fail to see. I agree with the observations of Rankin, C. J., on this point in the two cases cited at the Bar, namely Abdul Razack v. Sri Nath Ghose (1), and Kiran Chandra Rai v. Rama Nath Dutta Chowdhury (2). But it is unnecessary to pursue this point, as the second contention of Mr. Venkatachari is, in my opinion, clearly well founded. He argues that what the section contemplates is an entire undivided estate and not merely a part of it. In the present case, the plaintiff and the defendant were entitled to a portion of the undivided estate and the decree directed that that portion should be divided into two equal halves. Such a decree does not fall within the terms of the section. Is this decree . . . one for the partition of an undivided estate? Or again, is it for the separate possession of a share of such an estate? The answer is in the negative. A share of an estate is not equivalent to a share of a portion of an estate; when the decree relates to the separate possession of a share of a portion, that decree does not fall within the terms of the section. Trevelyan, J., expresses this tersely in Jagadishury Debya v. Kailash Chandra Lahiry (3), in a passage extracted by Rankin, C. J., in the first of the two cases already cited. Says Trevelyan, J.:

"The section applies only to a case where the decree comprehends the partition of the whole of the estate paying revenue to Government. A decree for possession of a share of a portion of an undivided estate is not a decree for "possession of a share of an undivided estate" in any sense."

The intention of the statute seems to be, that where the duty is cast upon the Collector of executing the decree, the partition he has to effect is to be both complete and perfect, that is, not only is the land to be divided, but the revenue also is to be allocated, the object being that the interests of the Government are safeguarded and there is also a final adjudication of the rights and liabilities of the parties in the sense, that one sharer shall no longer be at the mercy of the other co-owners; and such a course the

1. A I R 1931 Cal 93=130 I C 129=58 Cal 122.

2. A I R 1931 Cal. 104=130 I C 287.

3. (1897) 24 Cal 725=1 C W N 374.

Collector can appropriately adopt only when the decree relates to the whole, and not merely a part of, undivided estate and all the parties interested and to be affected by the proposed division, are before him. I agree with the view taken of the section by the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court in Abdul Razack v. Sri Nath Ghose (1) and Kiran Chandra Rai v. Rama Nath Dutta Chowdhury (2), referred to by me. The result is the Subordinate Judge's order is set aside and the appeal is allowed with costs. I must point out that there was some difficulty in the lower Court as regards getting a proper officer appointed for effecting the partition. The Commissioner selected reported that without the aid of an expert surveyor he was unable to make a partition. We direct the Court to appoint a fresh Commissioner and would suggest that, if possible, a trained surveyor should be appointed.

Reilly, J.—It appears in this case that the aghaharamdars of the village in 1876 by an arrangement among themselves allotted certain plots of land in the village to each other to be enjoyed separately in accordance with their vrithis, reserving, we are told, certain other plots still to be enjoyed in common. In course of time plots of land representing about 7/9ths of the whole village, we are told, came into the possession of the plaintiff and the defendant in the suit. The suit is for the partition of those plots between the plaintiff and the defendant. It appears to me quite clear that such a suit does not come within the meaning of S. 54 of the Code. It is certainly not a suit for the partition of an undivided estate within the words of the section. It is not a suit for the partition of the whole aghaharam village. Nor is it a suit for the separate possession of a share of that village. If it were a suit for the separate possession of a share of that village, not only would the plaintiff and the defendant be parties, but all the aghaharamdars would have to be parties to the suit. Here we are quite outside the provisions of S. 54 of the Code, as I understand them. Perhaps I may also say with respect that I entirely agree with the interpretation of S. 54 of the Code given by Rankin, C. J., in Abdul Razack v. Sri Nath Ghose (1). I agree that this appeal should be allowed with costs and that the revision petition should be dismissed, but without costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 260

PANDALAI, J.

R. Kandaswami Chettiar—Petitioner.

v.

Municipal Council of Pollachi—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 759 of 1932, Decided on 11th August 1932, to revise an order of Dist. Judge, Coimbatore, D/- 22nd April 1932.

(a) Madras District Municipalities Act (5 of 1920), S. 51—Decision by District Judge under S. 51 is not open to revision by High Court.

Provided a District Judge is acting within his jurisdiction, his decision under S. 51, however erroneous on the facts or even on the construction of the rules, cannot be revised by the High Court. For where a District Judge who has jurisdiction to inquire into an election petition under the rules, passes, as the result of his inquiry, an erroneous order based on an erroneous construction of the sections of the Act or the rules, it cannot be interfered with in revision, and it cannot be said in such case that on account of this error of law the District Judge exercised a jurisdiction which did not exist: A I R 1924 Mad 561, Rel. on.

[P 261 C 2; P 262 C 1]

(b) Madras District Municipalities Amending Act (1930), S. 177—There is no intention to exempt future elections from conditions necessary for all elections.

All that S. 177 of the Amending Act 1930 purports to do is to enable the Government to extend the tenure of the councillors holding office on the date when the Act came into force and that extension is expressly made subject to four sections, S. 48 (2), 50, 51 and 60. The mention of these specific sections is to make it clear that if during the extension any of the so extended councillors took Government service under S. 48 (2) or became subject to any of the disqualifications mentioned in S. 50 or S. 60, they would still be liable to be declared disqualified under S. 51. There was no intention to exempt future elections from the conditions necessary for all elections.

[P 262 C 1, 2]

(c) Madras District Municipalities Act (1920), S. 51—Scope.

Objections under S. 51 may embrace disqualifications existing before the election. [P 262 C 2]

(d) Madras District Municipalities Act (1920), S. 49 (2) (f)—Persons standing in superior or subordinate positions to councillor should be excluded.

The effect of S. 49 (2) (f) is not merely to disqualify Government village officers or part-time Government officers who are subordinates or superiors of sitting councillors. The much more natural and reasonable meaning of the words is that persons standing in a superior or subordinate position to a sitting councillor and holding office as such, not necessarily Government office, should be excluded from election.

[P 263 C 2]

T. R. Ramachandra Ayyar—for Petitioner.

M. Krishna Bharati — for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—This is a petition to revise an order of the learned District Judge of Coimbatore passed under S. 51, District Municipalities Act, on an application to him under the same section by the present petitioners. They were respectively the President and the Secretary of the Pollachi Town Bank, Limited, having been elected to these offices on 15th July 1931. They were also Councillors of the Municipal Council of Pollachi. The life of the council then in existence was, in pursuance of S. 177 of the Amending Act of 1930, extended by Government to 1st December 1931, some time previous to which the elections for the new council, which was to come into existence on the above date, took place. At that election which was governed by the District Municipalities Act as amended, the present petitioners, being still President and Secretary of the Bank, were re-elected members of the new council. No objection was apparently then taken. They entered on their offices and were functioning as such. After some time questions arose, at whose instance it does not matter, which led to the Chairman of the Council calling a special meeting to consider the matter. The petitioners forestalling any action that might be taken by the council or at its instance presented this petition to the District Judge, purporting to do so under S. 51 of the Act as amended, stating that unfounded questions and doubts had been raised about the validity of their election and asking for an order that such doubts and questions were unfounded and that they were holding their offices as councillors legally. The respondent to the petition was the Municipal Council which appeared through its Chairman and put forward the objection that under S. 49 (2) (f) both the petitioners were disqualified for being elected as Councillors on the ground that at the time of election one was the official superior and the other the official inferior of the other. This was the only question before the District Judge. On an examination of the clauses of the Articles of Association of the Bank the learned Judge held that the first petitioner, President, was the official superior of the second petitioner the Secretary of the Bank, and therefore they were both disqualified for election to the council.

In the grounds of the petition to this Court the only ground taken is that the Secretary is not an official inferior of the President of a Bank, and that the learned Judge was in error in taking that view. A preliminary objection was taken for the respondent against the petition being heard on the grounds stated in the petition on the ground, that assuming that the learned Judge took an erroneous view, this Court is not competent to revise that opinion, and for this Cl. 2, S. 51 of the Act was relied upon, which says that the said Judge after making such inquiry as he deems necessary shall determine whether or not such a person is disqualified under sub-S. (1), Ss. 48, 49, S. 50 or S. 60, and his decision shall be final. On this section a number of decisions of this Court have put it now beyond dispute that, provided the District Judge was acting within his jurisdiction, his decision however erroneous on the facts or even on the construction of the rules, cannot be revised by this Court. In Umar Uduman v. Moideen Pillai (1) it was held that, although a District or Subordinate Judge deciding an election petition under the rules is not a persona designata but a Court subordinate to this Court's jurisdiction, yet if all the fault that can be found with the decision of that Court is that it was wrong on the merits or even upon a doubtful question of construction of the rules, this Court will not interfere. That however was in an election petition. The case in Duraiswami Nadar v. Joseph (2) was also one of an election petition. In Ramaswami Goundan v. Muthu Velappa Gounder (3) it was held that a District Judge inquiring into an objection under S. 57, Local Boards Act (corresponding to S. 51, District Municipalities Act), cannot give himself jurisdiction to entertain a matter not within it by committing an error of law. And this opinion was repeated in Parthasaradhi Naidu v. Koteswara Rao (4) where the ultimate decision was in a

1. A I R 1929 Mad 257=119 I C 145.

2. A I R 1926 Mad 319=92 I C 119.

3. A I R 1923 Mad 192=71 I C 1039=46 Mad 536.

4. A I R 1924 Mad 561=78 I C 98=47 Mad 369 (F B).

1287

THE JAMMU & KASHMIR UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

DATE LOAND

Class No. _____ Book No _____

Vol. _____ Copy _____

Accession No. _____

--	--	--

fied under S. 48 (1), S. 49, S. 50 or S. 60 and such person does not admit the allegation or whenever any Councillor is himself in doubt whether or not he has become disqualified for office under S. 50 or S. 60 such Councillor or any other Councillor or the Chairman at the request of the Council shall apply to the District Judge, etc. It is obvious that the applicant under the section must be some Councillor or the President at the request of his Council. No stranger can apply; that is no voter can apply; no candidate who has been defeated can apply. This provision is entirely in favour of the Councillors and the Council acting through its Chairman. It is reasonable to suppose that the person against whom the application under the section on the footing of S. 49 was contemplated was not the person under disqualification himself, because the section says or supposes that such person does not admit the allegation, which implies that he disputes it and that some other Councillor makes the application. The only case of a Councillor applying about his own disqualification is when he is in doubt as to S. 50 or S. 60. However that may be, these two petitioners may be regarded as having filed an application in the character of "any other Councillor" about each other. It is now too late for them to say that they made a petition against themselves and that they are not willing to be bound by the result. The petitioners having invoked the jurisdiction of the District Judge, no doubt hoping for a favourable order, cannot be heard to repudiate it now that it is pronounced against them.

These are the objections raised to show that the lower Court has no jurisdiction to entertain or decide this petition, and in my opinion they fail. Therefore, even if the decision that the petitioners are subordinate and superior to each other be incorrect, I should not be empowered to interfere. As however the matter has been argued, I ought to notice the objection taken that on a proper construction of S. 49 (2) (f) persons who stand in the relation of official subordination or superiority to a Councillor holding office on the said date must be persons holding some Government office. I think that this is quite unfounded for the reason that S. 48 (2) of the Act debars Government servants as a class from standing for election and it was not necessary to enact this clause to exclude from election Government officials standing in subordinate or superior position to some Councillor holding office on a particular date. But it was said that Government officials are not totally excluded and that village officers are eligible, and also the only officials are excluded are whole time servants of the Government remunerated by salary or fees. In other words part-time Government servants, whether remunerated or not by salary or fees, are not excluded. In my opinion the effect of S. 49 (2) (f) is not merely to disqualify Government village officers or part-time Government officers who are subordinates or superior of sitting Councillors. The much more natural and reasonable meaning of the words is that persons standing in a superior or subordinate position to a sitting Councillor and holding office as such, not necessarily Government office, should be excluded from election. The reason is that it is necessary to maintain the independence of Municipal Councils and the purity of their administration, which would be imperilled if subordinates or superiors of existing Councillors in an official capacity were to be allowed to compete for seats as they would have the natural advantage of the influence and position of the sitting Councillors and, if successful, might form cliques and factions with them.

The only remaining and last point was that the Secretary of this bank by its rules does not occupy a subordinate position to the President. On this point I will shortly say that I am not satisfied that the view of the learned Judge is wrong. The petition fails and is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./v.S. Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 263

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

A. Ghulam Muhiuddin Rowther—Appellant.

v.

Sulaiman Rowther and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 258 of 1930, Decided on 13th September 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, Tanjore, D/- 11th November 1929.

Civil P. C. (1908). O. 21, R. 89 — Amount deposited in Court is not amount "received" within the meaning of R. 89.

An amount which has been deposited in Court cannot be said to have been received within the meaning of O. 21, R. 89 (1) (b) unless it is actually received by the Court: 23 Bom 723 and A I R 1923 Bom 299, Appr. [P 264 C 1]

S. Venugopala Chari—for Appellant.

M. S. Venkatarama Ayyar—for Respondents.

Judgment—This is a question under O. 21, R. 89, Civil P. C. The short point is whether an amount which has been deposited in Court can be said to have been received within the meaning of O. 21, R. 89 (1) (b). It is argued for the respondents that "received" means "virtually received" or constructively received and that actual receipt is not necessary. We cannot accede to this argument. "Received" means what it says, that is, received free from qualifying adverbs. We agree with the view taken in Trimbak Narayan v. Ramchandra Narsingrao (1) and Husenuddin Nuruddin v. Dulakshidas (2), which are cases in point, and accordingly allow this appeal with costs throughout.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal allowed.

1. (1899) 23 Bom. 723=1 Bom L R 215.

2. A I R 1923 Bom 299=77 I C 474.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 264

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Chitti Babu Mudaliar—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

A. Venkatasubbu Mudaliar and another—Defendants—Respondents.

City Civil Court Appeal No. 53 of 1929, Decided on 19th August 1932.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9—Suit for mere "honours" does not lie—Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 42.

Plaintiff sued for a declaration that the right to conduct a particular festival in a temple vested in his family and that he being the senior member of it was entitled to conduct the festival. It was conceded by the plaintiff that he was neither bound to go to the temple for the festival nor could the temple authorities compel him to come to the temple on the festival day to perform it.

Held: that the claim of the plaintiff was only one for mere honours and as such it did not lie and further as there was no mutuality of obligations, the plaintiff could not be said to have any rights which could be enforced against the temple even though the suit may be described as a suit for a declaration of a right: 36 I C 568, Dist.

[P 265 C 1,2]

K. Krishnaswamy Ayyangar and V. S. Rangachari—for Appellant.

V. Ganapathi—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The plaintiff is the appellant. This is an appeal against the decree passed by the learned City Civil Court Judge in O. S. No. 167 of 1929 dismissing the plaintiff's suit on the ground that a suit of the nature brought by him is not maintainable under S. 9, Civil P. C. The plaintiff's suit was for a declaration that the right to conduct Aroodra Utsavam at the Sree Kabaleeswarar temple at Mylapore is vested in his family and that he being the senior member of it is solely entitled to conduct the said Utsavam as Ubayakar or Kattalaidar. This is stated in para. 3 of the plaint. In para. 5 it is stated that the trustees of the temple, the defendants, denied the right of the plaintiffs and of the members of his family and denied to them the rights and honours appertaining to the Utsavam and the conduct thereof. It was conceded before the learned City Civil Court Judge that in so far as the suit was one for mere "honours," it does not lie. This concession having been made, what is now argued before me is that the plaintiff is entitled to get a declaration of his right to conduct the Utsavam and that the lower Court was wrong in having held that such a suit will not lie. If more concessions than what I have just referred to had not been made before the lower Court, it may probably be said with some force that the plaintiff's right is not barred by S. 9, Civil P. C., though the nature of the right disclosed by the learned counsel—no evidence having been taken in the case—is, I must say, somewhat novel.

It is said that the fund for conducting the Utsavam is under the control of the trustees as the result of an endowment created by an ancestor of the plaintiff, that what the plaintiff is entitled to do is either to conduct the Utsavam after getting the interest of the fund from the trustees or by asking the trustees to conduct it under his own supervision. It is also said that he need not be present when the Utsavam ceremony is being held but he may send a substitute to supervise it. Assuming that a suit of the nature herein described will lie under S. 9, Civil P. C., the various concessions made by the counsel which I shall refer to presently make it impossible to hold that S. 9 will not be a bar to the suit. The plaintiff conceded that he does not claim any right of property in the temple or any office. The learned City Civil Judge, in the course of the case, asked the plaintiff's counsel:

"whether his client was bound to go to the temple in connexion with the annual Aroodra festival and perform the ceremony."

He frankly said that his client was not so bound. The learned City Civil Judge also says that he was also good enough to concede that the temple could not compel him by action or otherwise to come on the Aroodra festival day to perform the festival or to do any function or even take any part of it. All that he claims is that should he happen to go, the temple authorities "are compellable to put into his hands votive offerings and that when he has presented the offerings they must again confer upon him the usual honours."

This would show as the learned Judge remarks "that there is no mutuality of obligations." According to the decisions no doubt a person may have a right to institute a suit for a declaration that he is entitled to perform the duties of an office, to conduct a Mandahappady, for instance, as in Thirumalai Alwar Ayyangar v. Srinivasachariar (1). But that is not the case which is presented before the Court by the plaintiff having regard to the various concessions made by his counsel. To constitute an office I think it will be essential to have some duties attached to it which the office holder will be under a legal obligation to perform, the non-performance of which will be visited with penalties; but that is not the case with respect to the claim made by the plaintiff. As already observed nobody can compel him to perform the Utsavam or even to be present at the place. Shortly stated what the plaintiff says is, if he happens to go to the temple at the time of the ceremony the usual honours must be conferred upon him. As the learned City Civil Judge remarks there is evidently no mutuality about the obligations. The nature of the plaintiff's claim has been considerably modified as a result of the concessions made by him in reply to questions put by the Court. In so far as the suit is a claim for mere honours it will not lie and though it may be described as a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to conduct an Utsavam, having regard to the fact that he is under no obligation to perform any particular function, it cannot be said that he has any rights which can be enforced against the temple. This being the true nature of the claim set out in the plaint, I agree with the learned City Civil Judge that the plaintiff's suit is not maintainable. I would therefore dismiss this appeal with costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 265

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

Karingali Thendambalath Karnavan and others—Appellants.

v.

Karlingali Thendambalath Govindan Nambi and others—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 806 of 1930, Decided on 7th September 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, South Malabar.

(a) Malabar Law—Maintenance arrears—Mere delay or omission to make demand does not amount to waiver of claim.

Mere delay in the matter of claiming maintenance and the mere omission to make demands would not be sufficient to draw an inference as to waiver or abandonment. Over and above these factors, it must be clearly shown in each case that there are justifiable grounds for inferring that the claim for arrears of maintenance was abandoned : 36 Mad. 563, Expl. [P 266 C 1]

(b) Malabar Law—Maintenance—Private acquisition of members should be taken into account in fixing maintenance allowance where tarwad income is insufficient to provide suitable subsistence.

The circumstance of each member in respect of his private acquisitions should be taken into account by the karnavan in fixing the maintenance allowable to that member if the income of the tarwad would not be sufficient to provide a suitable subsistence for all the members : A I R 1923 Mad 280 and 5 Mad 71, Rel on

[P 266 C 2]

(c) Malabar Law—Maintenance—Arrears claimed in lump sum—Court has discretion to fix rate.

When the plaintiff claims a lump sum on account of arrears of maintenance for some years, a discretion is vested in the Court in the matter of fixing the rate. The point of view would not be the same in cases where future maintenance is to be declared and fixed. [P 267 C 1,2]

(d) Malabar Law—Maintenance—Karnavan is not personally liable for maintenance dues of members.

The karnavan as manager of the tarwad is bound to maintain the other members from out of the family income only. In the absence of proof of malversation or misappropriation of the income by the karnavan it would be most unreasonable to make him personally liable for such dues. [P 267 C 2]

K. Kuttikrishna Menon and E. P. Narayana Nair—for Appellants.

P. Govinda Menon—for Respondents.

1. (1916) 36 I C 563.

Judgment.—This second appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff as a member of a Makkathayam family, of which defendant 1 is the karnavan, for the recovery of a lump sum of money as arrears of maintenance due for six years eight months at the rate of Rs. 20 per mensem. The claim was hotly contested by defendant 1 and the first Court decreed the plaintiff's suit by awarding arrears of maintenance at the rate of Rs. 16 a month. The lower appellate Court modified the first Court's decree by reducing the rate of maintenance to Rs. 12 per mensem. In this second appeal preferred by defendant 1, the main contention urged is that the lower Courts should have inferred waiver or abandonment of the right to arrears of maintenance on the part of the plaintiff from all the circumstances of this case. The claim for maintenance relates to a period of six years eight months commencing from June 1920 and the registered notice of demand was sent by the plaintiff only in January 1927. It is settled law that mere delay in the matter of claiming maintenance and the mere omission to make demands would not be sufficient to draw an inference as to waiver or abandonment. Over and above these factors it must be clearly shown in each case that there are justifiable grounds for inferring that the claim for arrears of maintenance was abandoned.

The learned Subordinate Judge observes that there is hardly any evidence worth the name to prove that the plaintiff waived his right. Several decisions have been relied on by the learned counsel for the appellant, in which the question of waiver has been considered. As far as I can see, those decisions do not support the appellant in the contention that mere delay and omission to make demands are enough to give rise to an inference about waiver. In the present case, there is no justification for holding that the plaintiffs' conduct was such as to mislead defendant 1 into the belief that the plaintiff would not set up any claim for the arrears of maintenance. There being no tangible basis for presuming that there was justification for defendant 1 to suppose an abandonment of the claim by the plaintiff, I am of opinion, that the ground of attack based on waiver must fail. The observation in the judgment of a Division Bench of this Court reported in Muthu Amma v. Gopalan (1) (at pp. 596 and 597) is to the effect, that if a man is rich and able to provide properly for his wife and children, and if no demand for maintenance is made on the tarwad for a long time, the Court would be justified in inferring an intention to abandon the claim, but the question whether there was really a waiver should be decided on the circumstances of each case. This observation does not materially help defendant 1 in this case, in the absence of some special circumstances giving rise to an inference in favour of abandonment.

The next question for consideration is whether the rate of maintenance awarded by the lower appellate Court is liable to reduction. The net income available for maintenance as taken by the lower appellate Court would be Rs. 1,430-8-0 per annum. Though a higher amount was fixed by the first Court as the annual income of the tarwad the Subordinate Judge thought fit to proceed on the admitted annual income and arrive at a lower estimation by way of caution. Taking the members of the family as eight majors and two minors, he fixed the allowance at Rs. 12 per mensem for each member. In arriving at this rate the learned Subordinate Judge has failed to take into consideration some material circumstances. It has been held in the decision in Ekanat Thayu Kunji Amma v. Ekanat Shangunni Valia Kyamal (2), which was followed in Kunhalikutti Haji v. Kunhamayan (3) that the circumstance of each member in respect of his private acquisitions should be taken into account by the karnavan in fixing the maintenance allowable to that member if the income of the tarwad would not be sufficient to provide a suitable subsistence for all the members. The method of dividing the total net income by the number of members in the tarwad without due regard to the real necessities of the several members thereof would not be always a correct method. If there is income sufficient enough for providing a suitable subsistence for all the members then the fact of a particular member having other and independent means would not affect the question.

1. (1913) 36 Mad 593=16 I C 895.

2. (1882) 5 Mad 71.

3. A I R 1923 Mad. 280==46 Mad 567.

In this particular case I am of opinion that the income of the tarwad is not sufficient to provide a suitable subsistence for all the members. That being so, we have to see whether the plaintiff has any other source of income which would be an important factor for consideration in fixing the rate of maintenance awardable to him. It is clear from the evidence in this case that the plaintiff had been employed in some department which procured him an income of Rs. 40 per mensem on an average.

We may take it that he was deriving this income from about August 1922, i. e. for a period of four years six months out of the period for which arrears of maintenance are claimed. This independent income derived by the plaintiff is more than thrice the rate of maintenance which each member in this tarwad could get out of its income. In making the allotment among the members on account of maintenance, it would be reasonable to take into consideration the fact of the plaintiff getting an extra income of Rs. 40 per mensem. It is urged on behalf of the appellant that in the course of two years eight months during the period in question the plaintiff and his wife and children were the recipients of several presents in the shape of cash and cloth from the karnavan and that fact also should be taken into account in fixing the rate of maintenance. These appear to be the customary presents which any member of the tarwad would be ordinarily entitled to. I do not think there is any basis for holding that these presents have any manner of connexion with the maintenance otherwise due to a member. Even if a member of the tarwad was actually living in the family and fed on its income, he would still be entitled to such customary presents. There is no good reason to take this circumstance into account in fixing the rate of maintenance due to the plaintiff. For the other reason already set forth, it seems to me that the plaintiff should not be allowed the rate of Rs. 12 per mensem arrived at by the lower appellate Court without having regard to any of the circumstances which should be taken into consideration.

When the plaintiff claims a lump sum on account of arrears of maintenance for more than six years, a discretion is vested in the Court in the matter of fixing the rate. The point of view would not be the same as in the case where future maintenance is to be declared and fixed. In view of the discretionary power vested in the Court and taking into account the fact of the plaintiff getting Rs. 40 per mensem as an independent source for his livelihood, I think fit to reduce the rate of maintenance decreed by the lower appellate Court to Rs. 6 per mensem for the period of four years six months during which the plaintiff was getting the said extra income.

One other question remains to be considered. The Courts below have made defendant 1 personally liable for the amount decreed to the plaintiff. There are no satisfactory grounds in this case to deviate from the general principle that the karnavan as manager of the tarwad is bound to maintain the other members from out of the family income only. In the absence of proof of malversation or misappropriation of the income by the karnavan, it would be most unreasonable to make him personally liable for such dues. I feel it necessary to observe that the considerations which prevailed in the present case for reducing the rate of maintenance decreed to the plaintiff are confined to his claim viewed as one for a lump sum as arrears of maintenance for more than six years. The discretion vested in the Court in dealing with such claims has been exercised in this case. These considerations may not be taken as the guiding factors in any claim for future maintenance to be made by the plaintiff or by any other member of the family. A claim of that kind will depend upon proof of circumstances relating to the family and the member claiming it.

In the result, the decree of the lower appellate Court is modified by awarding to the plaintiff maintenance at the rate of Rs. 12 per mensem for the first period of two years and two months and for the remaining period of four years and six months at the rate of Rs. 6 per mensem. Defendant 1 will not be personally liable for this amount, but he should pay the same from out of the income of the tarwad properties and also from the properties of the tarwad. The parties will give and take proportionate costs in all the Courts.

P.R.S./K.S.

Decree modified.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 268

BURN, J.

M. N. Schamnad and another — Accused—Petitioners.

v.

M. N. Rama Rao—Complainant—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 677 of 1932 (Crim. Revn. Petn. No. 632 of 1932), Decided on 17th October 1932, from order of Subdivl. First Class, Magistrate, Mangalore, D/- 11th June 1932.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 132 and Penal Code (1860), S. 79—Protection given by two sections—Difference pointed out.

Section 79 can only be applied when all the facts are known, i. e., when the trial is over; S. 132, Criminal P. C., can only operate when the trial begins. Protection given by S. 79 is a protection against conviction, while the protection given by S. 132, Criminal P. C., is a protection against trial. It is impossible to hold that these protections are identical. [P 269 C 1]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 132—Application of section.

It is not correct to say that in order to decide whether a prosecution is barred under S. 132, Criminal P. C., for want of the sanction of the Local Government, only the complaint and the sworn statement should be referred to. [P 269 C 1]

(c) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 132 and 197—Construction.

The terms of S. 132 are as wide as, if not wider than, those of S. 197. It is framed in very wide terms. It requires that Judges, Magistrates and certain public servants shall not be prosecuted without the sanction of the competent authority for any offences alleged to have been committed by them while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of their official duties. The object obviously is to protect responsible public servants against the institution of possibly vexatious criminal proceedings for offences alleged to have been committed by them, while they were acting or purporting to act as public servants. The policy of the legislature is, to afford adequate protection to public servants, to ensure that they are not prosecuted for anything done by them in the discharge of their official duties without reasonable cause and, if sanction is granted, to confer on the Local Government, if they choose to exercise it, complete control of the prosecution. Hence the section must be construed as widely as it has been framed: A I R 1929 Mad 659, Foll.

[P 269 C 2]

V. L. Ethiraj and A. S. Sivakaminathan—for Petitioners.

T. R. Venkatarama Sastri for M. C. Sridharan—for Opposite Party.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The petitioners are an Inspector and a Sub-Inspector of Police against whom a complaint has been laid in the Court of the Subdivisional Magistrate of Mangalore. The substance of the complaint is that on 11th April 1932, while the complainant and another were peacefully picketing a certain shop, a lorry full of reserve constables numbering in all about a dozen, armed with canes, came led by the accused; and accused 1 Inspector of Police, after warning the complainant and his companion to move, ordered the constables to beat them. In consequence of this order the complainant alleged that he and his companion were severely beaten, and the complainant said he believed that the 12 constables at the instance of the accused had fractured his ankle joint. A sworn statement was recorded on 19th April in which the complainant said that it was the Inspector who directed the beating and that the Sub-Inspector was present with him. The Subdivisional Magistrate took the case on the file for an offence under S. 326, I. P. C., against both the accused and issued process.

The accused made an application to the Subdivisional Magistrate in which they alleged that they had acted in the exercise of their powers under Ss. 127 and 128, Criminal P. C., in dispersing an unlawful assembly and that the complaint was barred by S. 132, Criminal P. C., for want of sanction of the Local Government. The learned Subdivisional Magistrate has held that the sanction was not necessary and that the trial must go on. He considers that the main question for decision is whether there was an unlawful assembly when the beating was ordered, and says that if the evidence at any stage discloses that there was an unlawful assembly at the time of the beating further proceedings will be stopped, but not till then. The learned advocate for the respondent contends that the learned Subdivisional Magistrate's view is correct. He says that in the first instance there must be a finding on the point whether there was any unlawful assembly, and without such a finding the Court cannot interfere and stay proceedings. Mr. Ethiraj for the petitioners contends that this view is incorrect. It is equivalent to a demand that the police officers must prove themselves to be innocent of the offences alleged against them in order to show that the complaint was invalid for want of sanction.

It appears to me that Mr. Ethiraj's contention is sound. If there was in fact an unlawful assembly the accused were acting within their powers under S. 128, Criminal P. C., in using force to disperse it. Even if there was not an unlawful assembly but the accused in good faith and by reason of a mistake of fact believed that there was an unlawful assembly, their action would be no offence by reason of S. 79, I. P. C. But to say that the accused in this case must prove the existence of an unlawful assembly, or their bona fide belief in the existence of an unlawful assembly, is to contend that the protection afforded by S. 132, Criminal P. C., is no more than the protection afforded by S. 79, I. P. C. That is clearly not the case. S. 79 can only be applied when all the facts are known, i. e., when the trial is over; S. 132, Criminal P. C., can only operate before the trial begins. Protection given by S. 79 is a protection against conviction, while the protection given by S. 132, Criminal P. C., is a protection against trial. It is impossible to hold that these provisions are identical. The learned Sub-divisional Magistrate undertakes to stop further proceedings if it is shown at any time that there was an unlawful assembly. The learned advocate for the respondent says that the learned Sub-divisional Magistrate is right in giving such an undertaking, but he cannot refer me to any provision of the Criminal Procedure Code which would authorize the Magistrate to stop the proceedings in such a case. There is no such provision, nor is any such provision necessary, because in those circumstances the accused would have to be discharged or, if a charge had been framed, acquitted. Then the impossible position would be reached that the accused would have to be discharged or acquitted in a case which by reason of S. 132, Criminal P. C., ought never to have been instituted at all.

The contention of the learned advocate for the complainant is that in order to decide whether a prosecution is barred under S. 132, Criminal P. C., for want of the sanction of the Local Government only the complaint and the sworn statement should be referred to. This is a proposition to which I cannot assent. If it were sound it would follow that any one by appropriate assertions in his complaint and sworn statement could deprive police officers of the protection which the legislature has given them under S. 132, Criminal P. C. In the present case however there are in my opinion quite sufficient indications in the complaint and sworn statement that the accused were acting or purporting to act in the discharge of their duty under Ss. 127 and 128, Criminal P. C. The complainant himself speaks of the "attempt to disperse an unlawful assembly of two pickets;" and although I am told by the learned advocate that these words were used sarcastically they show quite clearly that the complainant was well aware what powers the police were using or purporting to use. I agree with Mr. Ethiraj for the police officers that the principle of the decision in Gangaraju v. Venki (1) is applicable to this case. Referring to sub-S. (1), S. 197, Criminal P. C., Waller, J., has observed as follows:

"It is framed in very wide terms. It requires that Judges, Magistrates and certain public servants shall not be prosecuted without the sanction of the competent authority for any offences alleged to have been committed by them while acting or purporting to act in the discharge of their official duties. The object obviously is to protect responsible public servants against the institution of possibly vexatious criminal proceedings for offences alleged to have been committed by them, while they were acting or purporting to act as public servants. The policy of the legislature is, we conceive, to afford adequate protection to public servants, to ensure that they are not prosecuted for anything done by them in the discharge of their official duties without reasonable cause and, if sanction is granted, to confer on the Local Government, if they choose to exercise it, complete control of the prosecution. We can see nothing in these precautions to which the public at large can legitimately take exception, and consider that the sub-section should be construed as widely as it has been framed."

In my opinion, every word of this passage is equally applicable to S. 132, Criminal P. C., the terms of which are as wide as, if not wider than, those of S. 197. I therefore allow this petition and quash the proceedings of the Sub-divisional Magistrate of Mangalore taking cognizance of the offence alleged to have been committed by the petitioners. There are two further points which call for remark. Against the Sub-Inspector of Police there is nothing alleged in the complaint or sworn statement except that he was present with the Inspector. Why the learned Sub-divisional Magistrate should have considered that to be an offence is not clear. So far as the Sub-Inspector is concerned, no offence whatever is disclosed in the complaint or sworn statement, and no process should have issued to him. Again it is not clear why the learned Subdivisional Magistrate supposed an offence under S. 326, I. P. C., to be disclosed in the complaint. The complainant alleged in the complaint that he believed his ankle joint to have been fractured. In his sworn statement this was modified into a suspicion that his leg bone was broken, but the complaint is quite clear on the point that the constables who beat the complainant were armed only with canes, which are certainly not "deadly weapons." At the worst the offence made out in the complaint is one under S. 325, I. P. C., and that not against the Inspector but against the constables. The Inspector was not alleged to have done any beating himself. He could be said to have abetted the beating by the constables. But since the constables were armed with canes only I do not myself see how the Inspector could be supposed to know that they were likely to cause grievous hurt. S. 111, I. P. C., could have no application to such a case and the worst offence the Inspector could be said to have committed was one of simple hurt under S. 323 read with S. 114, I. P. C.

1. A I R 1929 Mad 659=1929 Cr C 140=118
I C 102=30 Cr L J 864=52 Mad 602.

P.R.S./K.S.

Petition allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 270

BARDSWELL, J.

Erranki Venkatasubba Rao— Accused —Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case of 442 of 1932, (Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 411 of 1932), Decided on 26th August 1932, for revising order of Stationary Second Class Magistrate, Kovvur, D/- 2nd May 1932.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898) S. 197—Karnam acting as Village Magistrate.

Though S. 197 does not apply to a karnam, it is applicable when the karnam is acting as Village Magistrate at the time of commission of the alleged offence imputed to him. [P 270 C 2]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 197 — Village Magistrate charged with offence under S. 411, I. P. C.—Sanction under S. 197 is not necessary—Penal Code (1860), S. 411.

A Village Magistrate charged under S. 411, I. P. C., cannot have the benefit of S. 197, Criminal P. C., as that offence cannot be taken even as the perversion of an act that he could do in his official capacity. [P 270 C 2]

P. Satyanarayana Rao — for Petitioner.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Kovvur, has held that S. 197, Criminal P. C., does not apply to the case of the petitioner (accused 3) as he was the karnam. His order cannot be supported on this ground, as though the petitioner was the karnam, he was also acting the as Village Magistrate at the time when he is alleged to have committed the offence. What then has to be seen is whether the offence imputed to him by the prosecution can be in any way attributed to or connected with his office as Village Magistrate. It is not necessary in this particular case to put the matter more meticulously or to balance carefully the various rulings which have been called to my notice on the rather vexed subject of how and when S. 197 applies, as it is clear to me that the offence is not one for a prosecution for which a sanction is required under that section. He is charged by the police with having dishonestly received or retained stolen property under S. 411, I. P. C. That offence cannot be taken even as the perversion of an act that he could do in his official capacity, and the mere fact that he was acting as Village Magistrate at the time when he is alleged to have committed it will not give him the benefit of the section. I do not see how S. 2, Regn. 11 of 1816, to which I have been referred, has any bearing on the point.

It is true that, according to the charge sheet, accused 5 has said that he gave stolen property to the petitioner because the petitioner had threatened to report against him. It is not clear however whether this statement by accused 5, which appears to have been made to the police, is one that is admissible under S. 27, Evidence Act, or whether there is any evidence that would justify a charge of an offence under S. 161, I. P. C. And any way he is not charged with the offence of taking a bribe. Even now were he charged by the police with having received a bribe it is a question whether his retention of the bribe, when the bribe consisted of stolen property, cannot be said to be an act done purporting to be done in his official capacity. I need not however deal with this point now. As things stand I must hold that the petitioner is not accused of any offence for which a sanction under S. 197 is necessary. Of course, if it is made to appear in the course of the hearing that the petitioner has committed an offence to which S. 197 applies, and no distinct and independent offence, then he must have the benefit of that section. The petition is dismissed.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition dismissed.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 271

RAMESAM AND MADHAVAN NAIR, JJ.
(Gunturu) Pullayya and another—Appellants.

v.

Official Receiver of Kistna and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 314 of 1924, Decided on 7th March 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Kistna, D/- 18th December 1923.

(a) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 53—Burden of proof.

In a proceeding under S. 53, the burden of proof is on the party who questions the bonafides of the sale deed i. e., on the Official Receiver or creditors who want to question the sale deed : A I R 1930 P C 265, Rel on. [P 274 C 1]

 (b) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 4 and 53—If transfer by insolvent is not bona fide further transaction by transferee also falls — Court can set aside such further transaction under S. 4.

Even if later transaction by the transferee from the insolvent cannot be considered in a petition under S. 53 they cannot be so considered only on grounds peculiar and not as consequential on the main transaction. And if the sale deed by the insolvent is not bona fide the further transactions by the transferees also fall to the ground. In such cases even if it were to be held that the Court cannot declare the further transactions invalid under S. 53, it has jurisdiction under S. 4 to declare such transactions invalid : A I R 1932 Pat 199, Ref.; A I R 1927 Mad 158, Dist. [P 274 C 2]

P. Somasundaram and V. Krishna Mohan—for Appellants.

Ch. Raghava Rao and B. T. M. Raghavachari—for Respondents.

Ramesam, J. — The facts out which this C. M. Appeal arises may be stated as follows : The properties which are the subject of dispute originally belonged to one Mantravadi Suryanarayana Sastri. He had no children and he adopted his brother's son Kutumba Rao. This Kutumba Rao, soon after he attained majority, seems to have entered on a career of extravagance. A deed of partition was then brought about between the adoptive father and the son. This is Ex. C, dated 23rd July 1914. We then have got a sale deed, Ex. 1 (a), dated 26th July 1914, of the whole of the son's share of the properties in favour of one Nallanchakrvarthulu Venkatacharyulu. It appears from the evidence that this Venkatacharyulu was a student of Suryanarayana Sastri for two or three years and studied Maha Bhashyam (Patanjali's great work in Sanskrit grammar) under him : vide R. W. 1. The partition deed and the sale deed were registered on the same day, namely, 28th July. The inference is irresistible that they are parts of the same arrangement that the sale was agreed upon even before the partition was made effective by the execution of a registered deed. This sale deed was for Rs. 20,000. The details given for the consideration are: (1) the amount due in respect of the previous loans, Rupees 11,463-8-0 ; (2) the amount received in cash on the date of the sale deed, Rupees 4,536-8-0; and (3) the amount agreed to be paid before the sub-Registrar, Rupees 4,000.

Two decrees were obtained against Kutumba Rao: (1) by Sukavasi Veerayya in O. S. 92 of 1915, and (2) another in O. S. 72 of 1915. One of these suits was instituted prior to the sale deed, Exhibit 1 (a). The other was filed a few days afterwards. In execution of these decrees the decree-holders attached the properties sold by the son Kutumba Rao as if they still belonged to him. The purchaser under Ex. 1-a, i. e. Venkatacharyulu, filed a claim petition which came on for orders before the District Munsif who passed the decree and his order is now filed as Ex. L. In that order he found that the two prior debts now filed as Exs. 6 and 4 and marked before the District Munsif's inquiry as Exs. B and C were not bona fide transactions. He also found as to the sale deed Ex. 1-a (then marked as Ex. A) that the vendee went to the Registrar's office to see its execution. The vendee's statement that it was registered at Gannavaram was erroneous, and he did not take the sale deed from the Registrar's office and neither he nor his witnesses knew who took it back from the Registrar's office. The claimant did not produce the receipts for the sircar cists which he claimed to have paid. He never saw the lands before purchasing them. The judgment-debtor was a young man of admittedly bad character. Suryanarayana Sastri was present at the execution of the sale deed and the District Munsif inferred that it must have been returned to him. He found that the sale deed was a bogus transaction and dismissed the claim petition.

It is doubtful how far the reasons given in this order can be regarded as evidence in the present matter. I am not to be understood as referring to the contents of Ex. L as evidence. I am only narrating what happened in that inquiry. Venkatacharyulu had given evidence, and though by the time the present proceedings were started he was still living he did not care to give evidence in the present inquiry. He was respondent 1 in the Court below. In the appeal originally filed in the High Court he was respondent 2, but during its pendency he died. He was not available to give evidence when the case was sent back for fresh evidence. The fact remains that he was not examined in support of the sale deed. On 11th April 1917 Venkatacharyulu executed an agreement in favour of Suryanarayana Sastry agreeing to resell the whole property to him for Rs. 18,000 (Ex. 7). On the same date a receipt was executed reciting the payment of Rs. 18,000 as the consideration (Ex. 8), but curiously, and it seems to me an extraordinary circumstance, no sale deed was actually executed in favour of Suryanarayana Sastry. After the Transfer of Property Act has been in force for 35 years, it is very rare to find sale-deeds without registration, especially when the amount involved was very large; and it is so unusual that I regard the circumstance as extraordinary. It suggests that the original sale deed itself was a benami transaction and that the parties themselves were of opinion that the title never really changed and no fresh sale deed was really therefore necessary. However mere suspicions will not amount to proof and one has to look into it more fully before coming to any decisive conclusion. At present, I only mention the suspicion that arises. Suryanarayana Sastry executed an agreement on 9th December 1917, in favour of his brother's wife Venkatalakshamma, that is, the natural mother of his adoptive son. It recites that he purchased the property from Venkatacharyulu on 11th April 1917, and obtained possession, and the receipt of Rs. 18,000 and agrees to convey the land to her and directing that she herself should get a deed of sale executed in her favour by the said Venkatacharyulu and purports to deliver possession of the lands. Thus we see the property has come back to the mother of Kutumba Rao in a roundabout way through three transactions. Here again I pause to remark that a suspicion naturally arises that the transactions were really benami and constitute an attempt to screen the property from the creditors of Kutumba Rao and were intended really to benefit the family of Kutumba Rao and his mother, the title being ostensibly made to rest on the mother. Kutumba Rao was adjudicated insolvent by the District Court on 26th March 1917 on a petition dated 22nd September 1915. The date is very significant. On 7th October 1917 Suryanarayana Sastry executed a will, Ex. D. He says his brother's wife Venkatalakshamma should protect him in future and there is nobody else to look after him. Soon after the dismissal of the claim petition of Venkatacharyulu by Ex. L, suits were filed in the name of Venkatacharyulu against the decree-holders. These are O. S. Nos. 129 and 130 of 1916 on the file of the District Munsif's Court of Bapatla. They were afterwards numbered as 725 and 726 on the file of the District Munsif's Court of Tenali to which Court they were transferred. I will later on show that these suits were conducted and the expenses connected with them were really incurred by Suryanarayana Sastry himself and not by Venkatacharyulu as one would expect if the sale deed was a real transaction. After Suryanarayana Sastry's death towards the end of 1917, Venkatalakshamma sent her brother to demand a sale deed from Venkatacharyulu. This attempt resulted in a sale deed from Venkatacharyulu, in favour of Manda Venkayya, father-in-law of Venkatalakshamma's brother, Ex. 3, dated 18th March 1920. Venkatalakshamma naturally attacked the bona fides of this sale deed. One recital in the sale-deed is very significant:

"If in respect of the schedule-mentioned property covered by the sale, any others should institute any suit you should yourself bear the loss and profits and also bear the costs of the suit."

We have here got a clause which is opposite to the usual warranty of title in a sale deed. Here the vendor is not to be responsible for any dispute regarding the sale, but the vendee has to look to it. This adds to the suspicion that the vendor himself had not much interest in the property. However, as I have said, the bona fides of Ex. 3 was in question and the matter was ultimately settled by the execution of Ex. 22 by Manda Chinna Venkayya, vendee, under Ex. 3, in favour of Venkatalakshamma. The document is described as a sale deed or a deed of conveyance. But it was only for Rupees 4,000. It recites that Venkatalakshamma questioned the bona fides of the sale deed, Ex. 3, dated 18th March 1920, and therefore he relinquished all the rights possessed by him in favour of Venkatalakshamma for a consideration of Rs. 4,000. Strictly it does not look like a deed of conveyance and it looks more like a document of release. It simply says that Venkayya will not dispute her title to the property, that Ex. 3 was a document obtained improperly by Venkayya from Venkatacharyulu and is inoperative to convey any title to Venkatalakshamma. It shows the consciousness of the parties that Venkayya had no title to convey. If Venkatalakshamma is to get a valid title from Venkatacharyulu, the proper thing is to obtain a sale deed from him. Such a sale deed has never been obtained to this day in spite of the agreement, Ex. 7, and of the receipt Ex. 8 and the agreement, Ex. II-A. That throws some light on the title possessed by Venkatacharyulu in the belief of the parties. The present proceedings were started by a petition filed by the Official Receiver of Kistna in September 1921. He prayed for annulment of the sale deed, Ex. 1 (a), dated 26th July 1914, and the further sale deed, Ex. 3, dated 18th March 1920. The District Judge, Mr. Lakshmana Rao, dismissed the petition. A Civil Miscellaneous Appeal was filed against that order.

This appeal came on before us on a former occasion, namely, on 2nd December 1927, and we passed an order on that date in which most of the facts now stated were mentioned. Many of the suspicious circumstances now referred to by me were also mentioned. We formed the tentative opinion on that occasion that the sale deed, Ex. 1 (a) and further transactions following it were not bona fide transactions. But it was complained before us by the learned advocate for the respondent Venkatalakshamma that he was not able to adduce full evidence in the matter because the Official Receiver was not seriously pressing his petition. The District Judge himself has noted that the Official Receiver stated before him that he pressed the claim only formally. It may be mentioned here that the services of the Official Receiver were since dispensed with by Government on the recommendation of the High Court, and having regard to this fact we thought it was possible that the respondent did not place before the Court all the available evidence and we thought it proper to give another opportunity to Venkatalakshamma to adduce all her evidence. We regarded the opinion we then formed as merely tentative and without arriving at any final conclusion we sent the case back for further evidence. In the order passed on the former occasion several deficiencies in the evidence were noticed.

It was suggested by the learned advocate that Venkatacharyulu was the guardian of Lakshminarasimhacharyulu who was supposed to be the creditor under the promissory note, Ex. 6, dated 1913. The suggestion is that the guardian in taking the sale deed, Ex. 1 (a) adjusted the amount due under Ex. 6 in the accounts between himself and the widow (mother of Lakshminarasimhacharyulu). The further evidence now taken proves the guardianship. The promissory note itself was not then filed. The agreement of sale by Venkatacharyulu in favour of Suryanarayana Sastry to sell the property Ex. 7, was not then filed. The final decision in the regular suit in the Tenali Munsif's Court on the dismissal of the claim petition was not then filed. It is now filed as Ex. 26. Having regard to these gaps in the evidence we thought the advocate's complaint was justified. Fresh evidence has now been adduced on both sides and the matter comes on before us for final disposal.

At the outset I must recognize that the burden of proof is upon the Official Receiver or the creditors who want to question the sale deed. Prima facie when a registered sale deed is produced, the presumption is in favour of the transfer of title under it. Even in a proceeding under S. 53, Provincial Insolvency Act, it was recently held by the Privy Council in The Official Assignee, of the Estate of Cheah Soo Tuan v. Khoo

Saw Chiew (1) that burden of proof is on the party who questions the bona fides of the sale deed. Though at the time of the former order it was thought that the respondent had to adduce further evidence, as a matter of fact both parties have adduced further evidence and all evidence in the case is before us. We can therefore deal with it on the footing that the burden is on the creditors and the Official Receiver. The first thing to be noted is that Kutumba Rao was declared insolvent on his own petition filed on 22nd September 1915. That suggests that even in 1914 he must have been in very involved circumstances. The consideration for the sale Ex. 1 (a) consists of two promissory notes besides cash payments. It is always easy to get a promissory note in support of other transactions. It is not usual to lend large sums on promissory notes, that is without any security except in commercial transactions. (After considering some of the exhibits, the judgment proceeded). On this second occasion when the case was heard, a question of law was raised by the learned advocate for the respondent that in proceeding under S. 53, Insolvency Act, only the transfer by the insolvent can be annulled and the further transactions by the transferees cannot be set aside. He referred to a decision of the Lahore High Court in Hayat Muhammad v. Bhawani Das (2) and Sudhu v. F. N. C. Daulat Ram (3).

That is also a decision of this Court in Ponnamai Ammal v. District Official Receiver, Tinnevely (4) to which my brother Madhavan Nair, J., was a party. But when the facts of the case are examined it scarcely supports the proposition contended for. The learned Judges have found in that case that Ex. 10 ought to be upheld. That being so there is no ground to attack Ex. 11, the further transfer by the vendee. On these facts really no such question arises. What the learned Judges seem to have meant in that case was that later transactions by the transferee cannot be questioned on a ground peculiar to themselves and independent of the attack in the main transaction but surely there can be no objection to holding that if the sale deed by the insolvent was not bona fide the further transactions by the transferees also fall to the ground along with it. The matter was further considered by another Bench of this Court in Jagannadha Ayyangar v. Narayana Ayyangar (5). One of the learned Judges (Oldfield, J.) points out that the practice in England is different and refers to In re Vansittart, Ex parte Brown (6) and In re Brall Ex parte, Norton (7). He however thinks that the language in the Indian Act is different and proceeds to disallow the contention by pointing out that the real point in that case was that there was no real transfer by Ex. 3 by the first transferee but only a concealment of the insolvent's property and if that is established there is really no real transfer to any intermediate transferee. That is exactly the point in the case before us and the learned Judge's distinction equally applies now. The learned Judge also says that even if under S. 36 of the old Act (corresponding to S. 53 of the present Act) only the first transfer can be annulled, he was not expressing any opinion in respect of the validity of the later transfers as the foundation for further legal proceedings. Seshagiri Iyer, J., thinks even under the Indian Act all the transactions can be annulled and he relies on the English cases.

I am inclined to agree with the opinion of Seshagiri Iyer, J., and even if it can be really said that later transactions by the transferees from the insolvent cannot be considered in a petition under S. 53 they cannot be considered only on grounds peculiar and not as consequential on the main transaction. If we remember that distinction, I do not think there is any real difficulty. Moreover the question does not really arise in the present case. There is no sale deed by Venkatacharyulu in favour of Venkatalakshamma and the Official Receiver does not seek to set aside any such sale deed. No doubt, the Official Receiver wanted to have Ex. 3 cancelled. But that relief is now unnecessary. The parties themselves have cancelled Ex. 3 by the relinquishment deed,

1. A I R 1930 P C 265=128 I C 662=(1931)
A C 67=100 L J P C 45=44 L T 130,
2. A I R 1926 Lah 146=90 I C 1037.
3. A I R 1925 Lah 295=88 I O 89.
4. A I R 1929 Mad 58=97 I C 918.

5. A I R 1920 Mad 917=52 I O 761.
6. (1893) 2 Q B 377=62 L J Q B 279=5 R 280
=68 L T 233=41 W R 286=10 Morrell 44.
7. (1893) 2 Q B 381=62 L J Q B 457=5 R 440.

Ex. 22. China Venkayya himself admits that he has no more right to the property. No formal annulment of Ex. 3 is now necessary and the only sale deed that has strictly to be annulled is Ex. 1 (a) of July 1914. The point has been raised at a very late stage in the case and it is purely technical. Even if S. 53 does not apply we can declare such transactions void under S. 4: see Biseshwar Chaudhuri v. Kanhai Singh (8). Both on the merits and on the other grounds indicated I decide this point against the respondent.

The result is the appeal must be allowed and the sale deed, Ex. 1 (a) is annulled as a fraud on the creditors. The Official Receiver is declared entitled to proceed against the properties in the sale deed for the benefit of the creditors. I understand that most of the creditors have either been paid or did not take interest in the matter. Only one creditor, one who filed C. M. A. No. 314 originally, has to be paid up. If his debt is paid up, Venkatalakshmamma can still enjoy the property which once belonged to her husband's family and her son. We hope the parties will settle the matters on such a footing. If they do not, the property must be available for distribution among the creditors. Venkatalakshmamma must pay the costs of this appeal and in the Court below to the original appellant.

Madhavan Nair, J.—I agree with my learned brother; but on the point of law argued by Mr. Raghava Rao relying on Ponnamai Ammal v. District Official Receiver, Tinnevelly (4), I will add a few words. Strictly speaking, the point raised by the learned counsel does not arise in this case as there is no sale deed by Venkataraghavulu, the insolvent in favour of respondent 4. It is true that the Official Receiver desires to have Ex. 3 cancelled but that has been cancelled by Ex. 22. However, as the point has been argued, I will express my opinion. In Ponnamai Ammal v. District Official Receiver, Tinnevelly (4), Wallace, J., and I pointed out, basing our judgment on the words of S. 53, Provincial Insolvency Act, that it was not open to the Official Receiver to attack a transfer from the transferee of the insolvent. In that case it must be noticed that the transfer by the insolvent which was questioned was upheld; and then the Official Receiver sought to question the transfer made by the transferee on altogether independent grounds and we held that this could not be done under S. 53, Insolvency Act. In the present case the transactions in question including the alienations made by the transferee from the insolvent are all attacked as links in a chain of fraudulent and connected transactions intended to screen the property from the claims of the creditors, so that while the transaction in favour of respondent 4 is attacked what is really attacked is the original alienation made by the insolvent himself. Viewed in this light the alienation made by the insolvent cannot be considered apart from the alienation in favour of respondent 4. The transactions in question are all interlinked. The decision in Ponnamai Ammal v. District Official Receiver Tinnevelly (4), is thus distinguishable on the facts from the present case. I may here add that in Ponnamai Ammal v. District Official Receiver Tinnevelly (4), it was not argued before us whether the validity of the transaction could be questioned under any other provision of the Provincial Insolvency Act. In a case like the present, if the facts are proved, I do not think it can be said that insolvency Court has no jurisdiction to declare the transactions to be invalid and not binding on the creditors. Though S. 53 of the Act may not strictly apply, in a proper case I think the Court has jurisdiction under S. 4, Insolvency Act, to declare the transactions invalid. S. 4, Cl. 1, Act 5 of 1920 is as follows:

"Subject to the provisions of this Act, the Court shall have full power to decide all questions whether of title, or priority, or of any nature whatsoever and whether involving matters of law or of fact, which may arise in any case of insolvency coming within the cognizance of the Court, or which the Court may deem it expedient or necessary to decide for the purpose of doing complete justice or making a complete distribution of property in any such case."

It will be seen that this section is very widely worded and gives insolvency Courts powers not only to decide all questions of title or priority but all other questions which the Courts may deem it expedient or necessary to decide for the purpose of doing complete justice or making a complete distribution of property. The jurisdiction conferred under S. 4 on the Insolvency Court is not limited in any way by Ss. 53 or 54, Insolvency Act. In my opinion, in a case like the present, S. 4 may be relied on by the Official Receiver in support of the contention that the Court has jurisdiction to declare that the transactions in question are invalid. I would therefore hold that the decision in Ponnamai Ammal v. District Official Receiver, Tinnevely (4) is inapplicable to the present case.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 276

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Vasireddy Ramayya and others—Appellants.

v.

Mulugu Kotayya and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 22 of 1930, Decided on 20th September 1932, against an order of Sub-Judge, Bapatla, D/- 14th March 1929.

* Limitation Act (1908), Sch. 1, Art. 182 (3) —Review and revised decree—Limitation for execution of decree runs from date of revised decree even as against persons not parties to the review proceedings.

Where a decree is reviewed at the instance of only some of the defendants, limitation for execution of the decree runs from the date of the revised decree even as against the defendants who are not parties to the review proceedings: 24 Mad 1 and 38 Mad 419, Dist; 35 Mad 670 and A I R 1932 P C 165, Rel on. [P 276 C 2]

P. Somasundaram—for Appellants.

B. Somayya—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The decree sought to be executed is dated 16th February 1914. The petitioners (appellants) petitioned to execute it against defendants 4, 18 and 42, respondents 1, 2 and 3, in respect of mesne profits and for possession of a plot of land. The decree was joint and several against all the defendants. The defendants appealed to the High Court against the above decree and the appeal was dismissed on 29th March 1916. On 18th January 1917, the High Court reviewed the decree at the instance of defendants 19, 21 and 22 and limited their liability to certain items. The respondents were not made parties to the review application.

In the present execution petition the appellants give the "date of decree" as "date of amended decree 18th January 1917." They now appeal against the order in execution in so far as the learned Subordinate Judge has held that subsequent profits for the years 1910 to 1919 are not recoverable in execution as no final decree has been passed in respect thereof. We think that this construction of the decree is clearly wrong and Mr. Somayya for respondent 2 does not argue otherwise.

There is however a memorandum of objections which raises a point which if sound goes to the root of the whole matter. Mr. Somayya argued that limitation should run not from the date of the review order but from the date of the original decree. If he is right this execution petition is time-barred. The basis of his argument is that inasmuch as the respondents were not parties to the review application their legal rights cannot be affected by an ex parte order, that is, that a fresh period of limitation cannot be created by an order in their absence. Art. 182 (3), Limitation Act, is prima facie against this contention—the words "where there has been a review" are not limited or qualified. The cases cited do not in our view support this contention: K. Venkata Subbamma Rao v. V. Venkatarama Rao (1), it was urged, is an authority in its favour but this was decided on the ground that the High Court acted ultra vires and that such an order could not prejudice absent parties who could therefore rightly claim that the original decree was intact. Abdul Khadir v. Ahammad Shaiwa Ravuther (2) is a case of fraud by one judgment-debtor being invoked to extend time against an innocent co-defendant. This position was not acceptable to the Full Bench who preferred the view of Sundaram Iyer, J., to that of Phillips, J., in Abdul Khadir v. Aliger Ahammad (3), the subject of the Full Bench decision. In that case Sundaram Iyer, J., at p. 675, observes:

"No doubt where an appeal has been preferred against a decree or the decree has been amended or judgment reviewed, time would run for execution only from the date of the final or revised decree though not all the judgment-debtors may be concerned in the appeal, review or amendment."

The learned Judge then proceeds to distinguish the special consideration applicable to fraud under S. 48, Civil P. C. The respondent is therefore asking us to

1. (1901) 24 Mad 1=27 I A 197=74 Sar 673 (PC).

2. (1915) 38 Mad 419=30 I C 423.

3. (1912) 35 Mad 670=12 I C 677.

apply to Art. 182 a restricted meaning for which there is no authority. On the other hand the recent decision of the Privy Council, Nagendra Nath Roy v. Suresh Chandra (4), is strongly opposed to the respondents' case. Their Lordships dealing with Art. 182 (2) express the following view :

"There is no warrant for reading into the words quoted any qualification either as to the character of the appeal or as to the parties to it, the words mean just what they say."

If Mr. Somayya's argument was accepted by us we should have to read into Art. 182 (3) an elaborate proviso protecting persons not parties to the review, that is, a qualification as to the parties which is precisely what the above judgment prohibits. We consider that the plain wording of Art. 182 (3) must be followed and as there has been a review, time will run from the date of the review. The result of the above conclusions is that the Appeal Against Order No. 22 of 1931 must be allowed and the memorandum of objections disallowed with costs throughout.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

4. A I R 1932 P C 165=137 I C 529=59 I A 283.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 277

WALSH, J.

(Peria) Kalathi Mudali—Complainant
—Petitioner.

v.

Venkatesa Mudali and others—Accused —Opposite Parties.

Criminal Revn. No. 23 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 22 of 1932, Decided on 18th April 1932, from judgment of Sub-Divl. Magistrate, Ranipet, D/- 16th November 1931.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 422—Notice of appeal not sent to officer appointed by Government—No objection by Government—Appellate order should not be interfered with unless injustice is caused.

The accused were convicted by the trial Court of a petty offence and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 25 each out of which Rs. 25 was ordered to be paid as compensation to the petitioner. On appeal they were acquitted. The petitioner appeared, but was refused adjournment. No notice of appeal was sent to the officer appointed by the Government, but no objection was taken by the Government regarding this.

Held : that the mere fact that notice of the appeal was not served on the officer appointed under S. 422, Criminal P. C., was no ground for interfering with an order of acquittal, where no injustice had been occasioned: A I R 1923 Bom 264 and A I R 1924 Mad 837, Rel on; A I R 1926 Cal 1054, Ref. [P 278 C 1]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 422—Notice to complainant.

The Code does not require notice to be issued to the complainant : 20 I C 418, Ref.

[P 278 C 1]

A. C. Sampath Ayyangar—for Petitioner.

V. L. Ethiraj—for Opposite Parties.
Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The accused in this case were convicted by the trial Court of an offence under S. 352, I. P. C., and sentenced to a fine of Rs. 25 each, out of which Rs. 25 was ordered to be paid as compensation to P. W. 1, the petitioner. On appeal they were acquitted. This revision petition is against the acquittal, the only ground being that the petitioner was not in a position to deal effectively with the pleas raised for the accused in appeal.

The petitioner has put in an affidavit in which he says that the notice of appeal was served on him on 15th November 1931, at about 12 noon, at his village of Tirumalpur which is three miles away from Pallur Railway Station; Sholingur camp was 9 miles from the Sholingur Railway Station. He left his village for Sholingur by 6.30 p.m. train and reached Sholingur Station at 11 p.m. He took a bus to Sholingur town at 6 a.m. next morning and reached Sholingur town at 7 a.m. He represented to the Sub-divisional Magistrate that he could not bring his advocate who had his record owing to the short notice; nevertheless adjournment was refused and the appeal was heard and disposed of. Another ground taken in the petition was that notice of the appeal was not sent under S. 422, Criminal P. C., to the officer appointed by the Government. There has been no objection by the Government in this case. As regards the latter point Devendra v. Shettappa (1) has been quoted to show that when the District Magistrate does not raise any objection to the procedure, the High Court will not interfere in revision. The learned advocate for the petitioner relies on Bharasa Naw v. Sukhdeo (2). That was a case somewhat similar to the present case, where compensation was ordered to be paid to the complainant; but in that case he had no notice at all. Duval, J., says :

1. A I R 1923 Bom 264=26 Cr L J 751=56 I C 287.

2. A I R 1926 Cal 1054=27 Cr L J 1056=53 Cal 969=97 I C 62.

"It is clear that no notice to the officer appointed by the Local Government was given as required by S. 422, Criminal P. C. This alone is good reason for ordering the appeal to be re-heard."

It does not appear from the judgment whether the Government had raised any objection to the omission to give notice. If they had not, this opinion is contrary to that expressed in Devendra v. Shettappa (1). In P. Kanakkan v. Amir Bi (3) Venkatasubba Rao, J., held that the fact that notice of the appeal was not served on the complainant or on the officer appointed under S. 422, Criminal P. C., was no ground for interfering with an order of acquittal, where no injustice had been occasioned. It does not appear from the report whether the petitioner in that case had been awarded compensation or not. It is well established that the Code does not require notice to be issued to the complainant: vide Behari Majhi v. Hari Majhi (4). It has no doubt been held advisable to issue such notice when compensation has been awarded to the complainant: vide the remarks in Bharasa Naw v. Sukhdeo (2), where a reference is made to certain Madras cases which deal with cases of compensation under S. 250, Criminal P. C. In In re Chemikkala Chinna Bali (5) the case was referred by the Sessions Judge owing to want of notice. It has to be noted that although S. 436, Criminal P. C., has now been amended making notice to an accused person who has been discharged under S. 253 necessary before the order of discharge is set aside, no such provision has been made in S. 250 of the amended Code.

The facts of this case are that the petitioner did appear in person and was heard, as will be seen from the heading of the judgment. According to him he got notice of the appeal about noon on 15th November 1931. His village is three miles from Pallur Railway Station. Assuming that he could not get the train at 12.37, there was one at 18.29 which would have brought him to Katpadi at 21.10 hours. There was another at 19.53 which would have brought him to Katpadi at 23.45. Although there appears to be no connexion by these trains from Katpadi to Vellore yet the distance is only 3 or 4 miles by road and the petitioner could almost certainly have got a bus or cart to Vellore. Returning to Katpadi he could have got a train at 3.17 reaching Sholingur at 4.3. So that, it is by no means clear that he could not have at least brought his papers to the Court if not the pleader. As regards In re Arjun Tathoo (6) and Gulai Jha v. Emperor (7), which are quoted in this connexion, I do not think they are applicable in the present case. In the first case the appellant himself had not been given proper notice of hearing of the appeal and the appeal was dismissed. In the second the party was asked to cross-examine a witness at 6.30 p. m. and his request for an adjournment was refused. It has not been pointed out to me that there is any mistake in the judgment. The offence is a petty one and this Court will not lightly set aside an acquittal. I see no reason to interfere, in revision. The petition fails and is dismissed.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition dismissed.

6. A I R 1920 Bom 318=21 Cr L J 373=55 I C 853.

7. A I R 1928 Pat 277=29 Cr L J 239=107 I C 237.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 278

BARDSWELL, J.

Public Prosecutor—Appellant.

v.

Nellore Audinarayana Reddi — Accused—Respondent.

Criminal Appeal No. 316 of 1932, Criminal Revn. Case No. 341 of 1932 and Case Referred No. 20 of 1932, Decided on 2nd September 1932, referred by Sess. Judge, Nellore, D/- 28th April 1932.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 40—Detention to be valid need not be in writing—Judgment debtor escaping from custody, commits offence under Penal Code (1860), S. 225-B.

In order that an order requiring detention of a judgment-debtor under Civil Procedure Code, O. 21, R. 40, to be valid, it need not be in writing. Irrespective of a written order the detention being valid, the judgment-debtor, if he escapes from such custody, is liable to be convicted under S. 225-B, I. P. C. [P 279 C 1]

T.S. Nataraja Pillai—for Respondent.

Order.—Both the trial Court and the appellate Court have found that the Respondent-accused escaped from custody and their findings are warranted by the evidence. The appellate Court however has found that the respondent was not in lawful custody, because there was no order in writing for him to be detained in the custody of the two processions (P. Ws. 2 and 3). O. 21, R. 40, Criminal P. C. 1908, however says nothing about the order having to be in writing. The proviso added by the High Court to O. 21, R. 40 (5), Criminal P. C. says that in order to allow the judgment-debtor an opportunity of satisfying the decree, the Court before making the order of committal may leave the judgment-debtor in the custody of an officer of the Court for a period not exceeding ten days. This is what the District Munsif did in this case and his order, noted on the warrant, as to the judgment-debtor's paying detention batta limited the period of such custody to two days. Emperor v. Madho Singh (1), is no help to the respondent in the face of the proviso above noted. The acquittal of the respondent is set aside and his conviction by the Stationary Sub-Magistrate under S. 225-B, I. P. C. is restored. His offence however was only a technical one and he surrendered himself to the Court on the expiry of the two days. He is fined Re. 1 with one day's simple imprisonment in default.

3. A I R 1924 Mad 837=26 Cr L J 249=84 I C 249.

4. A I R 1932 Cal 61=1932 Cr C 9=33 Cr L J 305=136 I C 474.

5. (1915) 31 I C 176.

P.R.S./V.S. Acquittal set aside.

1. A I R 1925 All 318=86 I O 801=26 Cr L J 86=47 All 400.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 279 (1)

WALSH, J.

S. Subramania Ayyar — Accused — Petitioner.

v.

Emperor — Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 764 of 1931 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 695 of 1931, Decided on 19th February 1932, from order Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Saidapet, D/- 28th October 1931,

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 435—Findings of fact.

It is not the business of the High Court to discuss findings of fact for which there is evidence in revision. [P 279 C 2]

(b) Penal Code (1860), S. 117—Instigating railway workers to lie on line in the event of strike is offence.

Instigating railway workers to lie on the line in the event of a strike is an offence even though the strike is only a contingent matter and it is immaterial whether the accused is urging an immediate strike and instigating the workers to lie across the line or is merely instigating their doing so in case of strike.

[P 279 C 2]

K. Bhashyam Ayyangar for R. Viswanathan—for Petitioner.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—This being a revision petition I propose to say very little. The lower Courts have both found that the accused instigated railway workers in the event of a strike to lie on the railway line. The accused's version was that he told them to lie along the line. Not only the prosecution evidence of persons knowing Hindustani who heard his speech and the shorthand notes made on the spot of the translation into Tamil, show that he told his hearers to lie on the line but the evidence of his own witnesses does not support his own version.

However it is not the business of this Court to discuss findings of fact for which there is evidence in revision. As regards the legal question, it is urged that the strike was only a contingent matter and therefore no offence was committed. The illustration to S. 117, I. P. C. shows that an instigation to attack a procession which is going to be held is an offence under the section. It is immaterial therefore whether the accused was, as argued by the learned Public Prosecutor, urging an immediate strike and instigating the workers to lie across the line or was merely instigating their doing so in case of a strike which he advised if the retrenchment proposals, which were temporarily held up, were carried out. The sentence which was reduced by the appellate Court cannot be said to be excessive. The petition fails and is dismissed.

P.R.S./K.S.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 279 (2)

WALLACE, J.

On difference between

WALLER AND PANDALAI, JJ.

Pogaru Ramamurti — Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Pushavati Alaka Narayana Gajapati Raju—Defendant—Respondent.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 125 of 1926, Decided on 20th April 1932, against judgment of Spencer, J., D/- 8th February 1926: reported in A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 1045.

(a) Madras Survey and Boundaries Act (4 of 1897), Ss. 11, 12 and 13—Dispute as to whether certain land is Government prowas a boundary dispute. After hearing it I remain of the opinion that there was here as much a boundary dispute as in Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1) and as in the cases reported as Kamaraju v. Secy. of State (2) and Muthammal v. Secy. of State (3). I find that I had omitted to deal with another contention that found favour with Spencer, J. It was that the suit—being a suit to recover the emolument of a karnam's office—was under S. 21, Madras Act 3 of 1895, not cognizable by a civil Court. The suit is not one to recover the emoluments of an office, but to eject persons who are alleged to have trespassed on some inam land, which forms part of the emoluments of the office. Apart from that I find great difficulty in following the decisions which have laid down that S. 21 of the Act takes suits by holders of offices for recovery of their emoluments out of the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts. The Act is intended to deal with the succession to certain hereditary village offices and to provide for the hearing of claims to such offices or their emoluments. S. 13 says that "any person"—not, be it observed, village officer "may sue for any of the village offices specified in S. 3 on the ground that he is entitled under the material sections of this and another Act "to hold such office."

That is a suit by a claimant to an office for a declaration that he is entitled to succeed to it. The section also provides for suits for recovery of the emoluments attached to such offices. It says that "any persons," in other words, a claimant and not a village officer in case

"may sue for the recovery of the emoluments of any such office on the ground that he is entitled," under the material sections of this and another Act "to hold such office." I am unable to see how the language of the section can apply to a suit by an actual holder of an office to recover the emoluments thereof. Such a person comes into Court as the holder of the office and not as a person claiming to be entitled to hold it. If there could be any doubt about the point, it is removed by Prov. 2, S. 13, which runs as follows :

"If at any time before the completion of the trial of a suit referred under this section for any office or for recovery of the emoluments of any

2. (1888) 11 Mad 309 (F B).

3. A I R 1915 Mad 106=26 I C 817=39 Mad 1202.

office, it appears to the Collector that the claimant is not eligible for appointment under sub-S. (1), S. 10 or sub-S. 1, S. 11 of this Act, as the case may be, he must pass an order rejecting the plaint."

The question of eligibility for appointment could, in relation to a suit for recovery of the emoluments of an office, arise only in the case of a claimant to an office. Such a question could not arise in the case of an actual holder of an office. That being so, it seems to me open to serious doubt whether a suit by the holder of an office to recover the emoluments attached to it is taken by S. 21 out of the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts. Since we reserved judgment it has been brought to our notice that a Bench of this Court has held that a decision by a survey officer does not make a break in existing possession so as to render ineffective, for purposes of limitation, any adverse possession running at its date : see Azhagaperumal Pillai v. Rasa Pillai (4). The Judges thought that their view did not run counter to the decision of the Full Bench in Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1). With great respect, I think that it does. The referring Judges in that case were definitely of opinion that the decision of the survey officer made a break in the adverse possession and that the period before the decision could not be tacked on to the period after it, so as to make the adverse possession continuous. And the Full Bench did not dissent from their opinion. Even if it be assumed that the two periods can be tacked on to each other, what was the decision of the survey officer in this case? That the inam was a pre-settlement inam and that sixty years' adverse possession was necessary to establish the title claimed by the Maharaja. The decision was erroneous, but he had jurisdiction to pass it and it holds the field till it has been displaced in the proper way. The land having been demarcated as pre-settlement inam, it would lie on the Maharaja to show that he had been over 60 years in adverse possession. All that has been shown is possession from 1873 till 1917. From either point of view the contention fails and I would allow the appeal. I should like to add, in regard to the decision in Chinna Venkatrayadu v. Ramamurthi (5), that I concur in

4. A I R 1932 Mad 310=138 I C 362,

5. A I R 1921 Mad 63=41 Mad 340.

Spencer, J.'s criticism of that decision. In the course of the argument we sent for the printed record, but I was unable to discover from it on what facts or evidence the observations of the Judges were based. I would restore the decision of the District Judge with costs in this and the lower Court.

Pandalai, J.—Though with great reluctance to differ from my learned brother's opinion which I have respectfully considered, I find myself unable to say that Spencer, J., was wrong when he held that there was no such dispute about a boundary as was necessary to make the order, Ex. 23, conclusive under S. 13, Survey and Boundaries Act of 1897, unless it was set aside by suit filed within a year thereafter. The nature of the dispute can be seen from the appeal petition, Ex. 23 (a), by the Vizianagaram Samasthanam. The subordinate survey officers had demarcated i. e., described a particular survey field No. 329, as "subsequent service inam" meaning post settlement service inam, whereas the zamindar contended that it was no longer service inam but raiyati (jiroyati) land. There was no dispute about the physical properties or dimensions of the land. The dispute was about tenure or the quality of estate possessed by the parties in the land and it is to be noted that whichever contention prevailed, the land was part of the zamindari. When this dispute was taken in appeal before the Assistant Superintendent of Survey the present appellant (then respondent) admitted, as it is even now admitted in the plaint, that though the inam was a post settlement inam he had lost possession for a great many years and the zamindari had let out the land as jero-yati to his raiyats and made an allowance of Rs. 30 per year to himself as compensation for the loss of the land. The result of the appeal was that the "present demarcation and registration of Survey No. 339 as mirasi inam was confirmed"—by which I understand that it was demarcated as post settlement hereditary inam.

But the appellant refers to the penultimate paragraph of the order where it is said that land is Government Service inam and therefore that the appellant should prove right by prescription for a period over 60 years. All I can say about this is, that the passage discloses some error or confusion of facts quite against the admitted facts and the contentions of both parties. Whatever these expressions were intended to convey, I read the decision as confirming the order appealed against and not as ordering a third alternative, i. e. pre-settlement inam. This however is a detail, the substantial point being that it is abundantly clear that the dispute was not about the boundary of anything but about the tenure of a specific piece of land—the zamindar claiming it as raiyati land and the appellant as his inam. In my opinion the decision in such a dispute by a surveyor is not final under S. 13, Survey and Boundaries Act, merely because it is placed before him in the course of survey operations and he passes orders thereon. There can be no estoppel on such a point. The only class of orders which derive finality under the Act are those which decide boundary disputes. It is no doubt possible by ingenious use of language to describe a dispute about title as a dispute about boundary—in the sense that when the disputed title is decided, the boundary of the successful party's possessions is extended and that of the other diminished. But this is really a play upon words and not what is intended when it is said that the survey officer shall have power to determine and record undisputed boundaries and that when a boundary is disputed the Survey Officer shall determine the boundary and record it: Ss. 9 and 10, Act 8 of 1923, corresponding to S. 11 (1) and (2), Act 4 of 1897. It is this determination against which an appeal is allowed by S. 12 of the Act of 1897 corresponding to S. 11 of the Act of 1923 and in respect of which the appellate decision shall, unless modified by a decree of the Court, be conclusive as to the right of the dissatisfied party in respect of the boundary of the property surveyed according to S. 13 of the Act of 1897 or conclusive proof that the boundaries determined and recorded therein have been correctly determined and recorded according to S. 13 of the Act of 1923.

Whether there is or not in any particular case a real dispute about a boundary is to be determined on the facts of the dispute itself. In my opinion when two people dispute title to an ascertained and definite piece of land or to subordinate interests therein the dispute cannot in any proper sense be described as a boundary dispute though as a result of the disputed title being settled, the boundaries of the property of one or other of the disputants may be accordingly shifted. If there was a real boundary dispute I can understand that a question of title depending solely on the boundary may become concluded—as a necessary logical consequence but not by virtue of the Act. But if there was no such dispute, it cannot be inferentially introduced into a dispute about title and then held to be inferentially decided under the Act so that the question of title becomes concluded by a further inference. There was, in my opinion, no boundary dispute in the proper sense before the Assistant Superintendent of Survey and his order, Exs. G and 23, being one on a matter beyond his jurisdiction, could not become conclusive under the Survey and Boundaries Act. The further argument has confirmed me in my opinion about the scope and purpose of the Act and of its effect on the case.

The scope and purpose of the Act of 1897 (the material Act in this case) as well as of that of 1933 is to consolidate and amend the law relating to survey of lands and settlement of boundary disputes. The power of survey officers is to fix boundaries, i. e., demarcate the physical extent of properties by setting up the boundaries between them. They have no power to decide disputes about title, but only disputes about boundaries. They were not intended to be a sort of quasi civil Courts whose decisions operate as res judicata in the proper sense as to all matters decided by them or which may inferentially be involved in their decisions. Thus two matters must be distinctly borne in mind: (1) The survey authorities have no jurisdiction at all in any matter except that of boundaries; and (2) the only effect of their decision on matters within their jurisdiction is not that they have the effect of res judicata but that as far as they are boundary decisions they only can be questioned by a suit brought within a certain time—which is quite a different thing. I will not say that some decisions on the Survey and Boundaries Act are not capable of being read as imputing a wider jurisdiction to officers acting under the Act and a more extensive effect to their actual decisions. But I believe that the scope of the Act and the limits of the jurisdiction of survey officers and of the effect of their orders are generally recognized as I have stated. In Kamaraju v. Secy. of State (2) the boundary between the zamindari and a neighbouring trust Government land had been settled in 1875 under the Boundaries Act of 1860. The zamindar, then a minor, was represented before the Survey Superintendent by his Estate Manager. Later the portion so excluded from the zamindari was included in a reserve forest under the Madras Forest Act of 1882. The forest settlement officer rejected the claim of the zamindari to the area excluded from it by the survey decisions.

Of the two questions involved, the first, namely, whether an appeal lies to the High Court from a decision of the District Court passed under S. 10, Madras Forest Act, is not relevant to this case. But the second question was whether the zamindar was properly represented in the survey proceedings. It was held that he was. There was no question raised whether there had been a boundary dispute such as to give jurisdiction to the survey superintendent for the decision of 1875. The Court simply said that the matter in dispute was res judicata and that the zamindar was bound by the proceedings under the Boundary Act in 1875. This decision is hardly in point on the question before me. Nor can the use of the expression res judicata be understood as meaning that the survey superintendent's decision is res judicata in the proper sense in view of the decision of the Privy Council pointing out the distinction between res judicata in the proper sense and the statutory prohibition of questioning executive or as administrative acts except in a particular way: see Radhakrishna Ayyar v. Sundaraswamier (6) confirming the decision of this Court in Radhakrishna Ayyar v. Swaminatha Ayyar (7). In Muthammal v. Secy. of State (3) the question before the High Court was whether a mittadar, against whom the decision of the Boundary Commissioner excluding a certain area from his mittha had become final, could maintain a prayer to the civil Court to reduce his peishkush proportionately to the excluded area. Sir John Wallis, C. J., held that that question did not arise in view of his opinion on the effect of the boundary decision. He said:

6. A I R 1922 P C 257=74 I C 584=49 I A 211=45 Mad 475 (P C).

7. (1917) 40 I C 537.

"In these circumstances the decision of the Boundary Settlement Officer that the lands in question did not form part of the zamindari is res judicata according to the decision of the Full Bench in Kammaraju v. Secy. of State (2) and I think that the ground of the decision, namely, that they never had formed part of the mita is also res judicata as having formed the ground of the decision."

In view of the opinion expressed by this very learned Judge in Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1) and Chinna Venkatrayudu v. Ramamurthi (5) the opinion that survey officer's decisions operate by way of res judicata is open to the remark that it does not recognize the distinction now pointed out by the Privy Council and was perhaps not intended to be understood in that particular sense. The opinion that the effect as res judicata of decisions by survey authorities extends to the grounds of the decisions also is in my opinion not justified by the Survey and Boundaries Act. In Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1) there had been a litigation in the year 1900 between the parties, and a decree was passed. There arose a dispute between the parties as to whether that decree conferred the right to a lane to the present plaintiffs. In 1904 this dispute came before the survey officers who were surveying the town of Madura. The survey officer decided that the lane belonged to the defendant and demarcated it accordingly as part of his property. This decision was not questioned by a suit within a year but the plaintiffs brought a suit in 1913 for an injunction against the defendant alleging that the decree of 1900 had awarded the lane to him, that he was in possession under it both before and after the survey decision and that the defendant had no right to interfere with the plaintiff's enjoyment. It was recognized that unless there was a boundary dispute the survey officials could not by demarcating a boundary affect title to property. Both the referring Judges, Phillips and Seshagiri Ayyar, JJ., refer to this at pp. 427 and 428 (of 42 Mad.) of the report. The question referred was, when a plaintiff's claim has been disallowed under the Survey and Boundaries Act 4 of 1897, but he has been in possession of the property, does the decision of the survey officer operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit for possession? In the opinion of the Full Bench delivered by Sir John Wallis, C. J., he carefully guards himself by premising it with the words

"assuming that in this case the boundary was disputed and the dispute was the subject of an order by the survey officer under S. 11, Madras Act 4 of 1897," and then he stated the opinion that

"in that case the order if not reviewed by the appellate authority or questioned by a suit as provided in the section was conclusive as to the rights of the parties and nonetheless so because the unsuccessful party, who was in possession at the date of the order, was not subsequently ousted from possession."

This clearly recognizes that to give jurisdiction to a survey officer to make an order which shall be conclusive under S. 13 of the Act of 1897 there should be a boundary dispute as stated in the opening words of that section, and all that is meant is that the conclusive character of the order, which according to the section itself relates to the rights claimed in respect of the boundary of the property, is not affected by the unsuccessful party, who was in possession at the date of the order, continuing to be in possession. In Chinna Venkatrayudu v. Ramamurthi (5) the distinction between orders which are final under S. 12 (3) of the Act of 1897 and those which are conclusive of the rights as to the boundary unless set aside by a suit under S. 13 is pointed out by Sir John Willis himself. In that case a karnam in the Pithapur estate had during the survey operations of that estate succeeded in getting the survey officers to demarcate as included in his inam lands the neighbouring jeroyati lands of the zamindar. Neither the zamindar nor his agents had appeared before the survey officers, and there had been no appeal and no suit to set aside the order. It was pointed out that in the Full Bench case Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1) all that was decided was that the survey officer's order in boundary cases is conclusive under S. 13 only when there was a dispute and that nothing was stated therein about the effect of the word "final" in S. 12 (3). The effect of S. 12 (3) was held to be to make the boundary final as far as the authorities are concerned, but not to preclude land-owners from ever afterwards disputing the correctness of the boundary in a Court of law. The opinion that the conclusiveness of a survey officer's order under S. 13 of the Act of 1897 can only arise if there was a boundary dispute was again laid down in Subramania Mudali v. Meenakshi Ammal (8) and Municipal Council, Cochin v. Devusi (9). It must have been in view of these decisions that in S. 13 of Act 8 of 1929 the words:

"any party to a boundary dispute before the survey officer, and any party to an appeal preferred under S. 12 or to whom notice of such appeal is given, and any person claiming under any such party," which are found in S. 13 of the Act of 1897 have been omitted. Under S. 13 of the new Act all persons to whom notice of orders passed under Ss. 9, 10 or 11 of the Act has been given are required to get the orders modified by suits within three years. This case however has to be decided on the words of S. 13 of the Act of 1897. As to what it is, that is concluded by a survey officer's decision acting within his jurisdiction, that is in respect of a boundary the words of S. 13 of the Act of 1897 are that a suit is to be filed to establish the right which the dissatisfied party claims in respect of the boundary of the property surveyed, and that subject to the result of such suit such order or decision shall be conclusive. The words of S. 13 of the Act of 1929 are that the record of the survey shall be conclusive proof that the boundaries determined and recorded therein have been correctly determined and recorded. In my opinion the effect of both the sets of words is the same and they mean that unless the order is set aside by suit the boundary as determined is conclusive. As I have already said, if from a particular boundary being conclusively established the right of either party to the intervening space necessarily follows that will be held concluded not because of the Act but because of the force of logic. The Act itself confers no conclusiveness upon anything else but boundaries and says nothing about the right to the property or about its possession. This last point as to possession is clearly stated in Azhagaperumal Pillai v. Rasa Pillai (4) with which I respectfully agree when it holds that a survey officer's decision as to boundary although conclusive as to the boundary does not have the legal effect of terminating the possession of the man who was in possession or of destroying its legal effect if it had already conferred a title upon the possessor of breaking the running of possession in favour of the person in whose favour the boundary is ordered. As pointed out in that decision it would be very extraordinary if the survey officer's decision could have such a result which would not follow even a declaratory decree of a civil Court that a party had or had not title.

I am not satisfied that there was in this case any dispute about any boundary in the proper sense of the term. The dispute was about title. The survey officer had no jurisdiction to decide it and no jurisdiction to decide such a point can be conferred upon him by calling the dispute a dispute about boundary which it is not except by a play upon words. I do not understand how the District Judge's decree for three years' rent against the respondent can in any event be supported. It is held that the raiyats are not bound by the survey officer's order and that they have occupancy rights. The rents paid by them to the zamindar were paid under engagements between him and his raiyats. The plaintiff had no connexion with these engagements which are several decades old.

The case is not one in which a trespasser has taken possession of rents due to the plaintiff and collected rents from the plaintiff's tenants, and I do not see how if the plaintiff is not entitled to possession as against the raiyats he can claim the rents paid by them to the zamindar under engagements to which he was not a party. According to the decision in Azhagaperumal Pillai v. Rasa Pillai (4) the zamindar's possession of the property through his tenants which began in 1873 is not affected by the survey officer's decision and even if the zamindar is not in a position to question that decision, assuming it related to any boundary, the plaintiff has got no right thereby to claim either possession of the property from the tenants or the rents from the zamindar. In fact the survey decision does not mention or necessarily mean anything about the tenants or rents paid by them. On the

8. A I R 1922 Mad 392=70 I C 481.

9. A I R 1926 Mad 235=92 I C 18.

last point based on the Hereditary Village Offices Act, I agree with my learned brother that the suit is not barred by S. 13 or S. 21 thereof. In the result I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

By the Court.—As we are not agreed, the appeal will have to be dealt with under Cl. 36 of the Letters Patent. The questions on which we differ are these: A. Whether there was a boundary dispute within the meaning of the Survey and Boundaries Act. B. Whether the plaintiff is entitled to recover from defendant 1 the melvaram collected by him from the other defendants for the three years preceding the suit and to the declaration granted to him in Cl. (1) of the decree of the trial Court. (Accordingly the appeal came on for hearing before Wallace, J., who delivered the following judgment.)

Wallace, J.—This appeal has been referred to me because of a difference of opinion between the learned Judges of the Bench who heard it. The suit is one of ejectment, the plaintiff claiming to be the Government mirasi karnam of Laveru village within the ambit of the Vizianagaram estate. This appeal is concerned with his plaint prayer to eject the defendants from a land, survey No. 333, on the ground that he is the mirasi inamdar. Defendant 1 is the zamindar and claims to melvaram right over the land; the other defendants claim to be the kudivaram tenants thereof. The village was surveyed by Government in 1904 in the course of the survey of the Vizianagaram estate under Act 4 of 1897 and the suit land was then demarcated by the survey officer as mirasi inam. Against this decision defendant 1's representative presented under S. 12, an appeal that the land should have been classed as jiroiyati. That appeal was thrown out. The estate did not file any suit under S. 13 to have that decision set aside. Under that section of the Act the decision therefore became conclusive between the parties to the dispute as regards all matters in dispute. The main point contested throughout in this case has been whether the decision of the survey officer precludes the defendants from resisting the plaintiff's claim. It was decided by the trial Court, and that decision has not been since contested, that the order of the survey officer does not bind the tenant-defendants 2 to 12 as they were not parties to the appeal before the survey officer. As regards defendant 1, the zamindar, both the lower Courts held that he was precluded by the decision of the survey officer from resisting the plaintiff's claim and they therefore gave a decree that the plaintiff was entitled to the melvaram right over Survey No. 339. In second appeal Spencer, J., held that the survey officer's decision was without jurisdiction and therefore void, and on the ground that the plaintiff had not independently established his title he dismissed the plaintiff's suit. At the Letters Patent appeal the learned Judges differed on this main point and it is the chief question which I have to decide.

One would imagine that as it is the point on which the case really turned all available records in the survey proceeding would have been produced and exhibited. So far from that being so, the original proceedings of the survey officer are not filed, nor is the entry in the survey register. We have only the decision on appeal, Ex. G, the grounds of that decision, Ex. 23, and the appeal petition of the zamindar, Ex. 23-A, and these are by no means consistent. For example, Ex. 23-A does not show that Government was a party to the inquiry while Ex. 23 says that Government was a party. Again Ex. 23-A says that the original decision was that the land was "subsequent," that is post-settlement service inam, while Ex. 23 says the original decision was that it was a mirasi inam by which the survey officer on appeal, as he states clearly in his grounds, means Government service inam, that is pre-settlement inam. It seems to be now admitted by the plaintiff that the inam was really post-settlement, but that error of fact on the part of the survey officer cannot affect the validity of his decision if he had jurisdiction to pass it. Defendant 1 claims that the order is without jurisdiction because there was no "boundary dispute" within the meaning of the Act. One would expect that, if there was at the time of the survey inquiry any substance in this contention it would have been put in the forefront of defendant 1's appeal, Ex. 23-A, but there is no suggestion of it there. The contention is advanced on two grounds:

first, that the dispute was really whether the land was jiroiyati or darmilla inam, that is, there was no decision that it did not form part of the estate; and secondly, even if the dispute was whether it was jiroiyati or pre-settlement inam, still that is not a dispute about a boundary and therefore there is no boundary dispute. The first contention is based entirely on the wording of Ex. 23-A which, as I have said, is inconsistent with statements in Ex. 23. I see no reason why, if I am to make speculations, I should speculate that Ex. 23-A is right and Ex. 23 wrong. Defendant 1 could have made the matter quite clear by producing the original registry entry, but though it is now 15 years since the plaint was filed he has not so far done so. I must presume that the official act of the survey officer was regularly performed and with jurisdiction, that is that the dispute was whether the land was to be demarcated within or outside of the estate, ill, zeamin jiroiyati or Government service inam.

As to the second contention I find it a little difficult to follow. I understand the argument to be that there cannot be a boundary dispute unless there is a dispute between two estates or between Government and an estate regarding the physical boundary of some piece of land contiguous to both, that is a dispute as to when, where and how the boundary between both shall run; but that if the dispute involves on one side or the other the whole of the contestant's property there cannot be any boundary dispute, because the boundary of the disputed portion is not itself in dispute. I can see no principle in such a contention. What the survey officer had to decide, and had jurisdiction to decide, was how the boundary of the Vizianagaram estate was to run, whether it should exclude or include the suit inam, and his decision was that the inam being Government property must be excluded from the estate demarcated out of the estate. It does not seem to me that such a dispute cannot properly be called a boundary dispute or that it is not one of the kinds of disputes with which the Act was enacted to deal. Obviously the boundary of the estate cannot be properly demarcated unless controversies of this kind are settled.

If we examine the important rulings of this High Court under this Survey Act and its predecessor, we find that this is just the sort of case that has arisen and has been held to come under the Act. In the Full Bench case in Kamaraju v. Secy. of State (2) a survey officer had demarcated out of the Bodinaikanoor estate a tract of land which Government claimed to be reserved forest. There could be here no suggestion that the tract of land constituted the whole of the Bodinaikanoor estate or the whole of Government land. Nor was there any suggestion that there was any dispute as to the physical boundaries of the tract itself. The question was merely whether the tract was to be demarcated within the estate or outside the estate as Government land. The Full Bench held that this was a boundary dispute under the previous Act 28 of 1860 and that the decision was res judicata, and the zamindar was estopped from claiming the tract as part of his estate. The ruling in Muthammal v. Secy. of State (3) is a decision of three Judges in a Letters Patent appeal in a similar case also under Act 28 of 1860. The dispute there was whether a perfectly definite tract of land was part of a mitta or Government reserved forest. The finding was that the survey officer's decision that the land did not form the part of the mitta is res judicata. In the Full Bench case in Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1) it does not seem to have been even argued before the Full Bench that the dispute before the survey officer as to the possession of a perfectly definite piece of land, a lane, was not a boundary dispute within the meaning of Act 4 of 1897.

The only attack defendant 1 is able to make on these decisions is that the first two were passed under the prior Act 28 of 1860, and that the learned Judges made a wrong use of the words "res judicata." As to the first point S. 25 of the Act of 1860, under which the decisions were passed, lays down practically the same procedure and the same principles, stated in fact in much less emphatic terms, as Ss. 11 to 13 of the later Act. The scope of the inquiry under Act 28 of 1860 has been clearly stated in a Bench decision of this Court, Nachiyappan v. Alagappa Chetty (10). As to the second point it is argued that the Privy Council in a passage in Radhakrishna Ayyar v.
10. A I R 1921 Mad 107=62 I C 87.

Sundaraswamier (6), which had nothing to do with a controversy like the present, pointed out the legal distinction between res judicata and statutory prohibition. I cannot see how that decision can be of any assistance to defendant 1 here: whether one calls the decision of the survey officer res judicata or not defendant 1 is, by force of S. 13 of the Act, estopped from agitating anew the right which he there claimed and lost since it is conclusive against him because he did not file a suit within the time granted in order to have his right restored.

It is next contended that even taking it that the survey officer's decision is about a boundary dispute under the Act, it cannot preclude defendant 1 from now contending that the inam is not Government service inam, because the survey officer had no jurisdiction to decide questions of title. That is, if I understand the argument, while it is open to the survey officer to decide that the inam was outside the estate he had no jurisdiction to decide that it was Government service inam. This contention also I do not follow. A survey officer obviously has jurisdiction to decide anything which it was necessary to decide in order to come to his conclusion, and he obviously cannot avoid deciding questions of title in such cases. If parties A and B are disputing whether a particular piece of land is part of the property of A or B and the survey officer decides that it is the property of A, he is deciding that it is not the property of B. If that is not his function, the Act would seem to be useless; and if B's civil rights were not interfered with by the survey officer's decision it would not have been necessary to declare that B is entitled to establish his right in a civil Court within one year.

The Full Bench decisions already quoted are clear authority for the proposition that such decisions of a survey Officer in a boundary dispute are not limited to the mere abstract question of what are the physical boundaries in dispute but are decisions on matters of title and possession. Kamaraju v. Secy. of State (2) and Muthammal v. Secy. of State (3) lay down that his decision is a decision on title and conclusive. Those decisions also implicitly and Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1), explicitly, lay down that his decision on questions of possession also is conclusive. In all these cases it was held that the decision of a survey officer on all these points is res judicata and binding on the parties to the boundary dispute. Kirukan v. Alagapa Chetty (10) is a Bench case directly on the finality of the Survey Officer's decision on a question of title, and Kuppuswami Iyer v. Venkataswami (11) is a Bench decision directly holding the finality of the Survey Officer's decision on a question of possession, even when the decision was in fact wrong. Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1), is particularly instructive on this point, because it held that the decision of a Survey Officer is a decision that the successful party is in possession even though the unsuccessful party was really in possession, and that the decision stops the unsuccessful party from urging later on that he was in possession. Defendant 1 seeks to turn the edge of this decision by referring me to a Bench ruling of this Court in Azhaga-perumal Pillai v. Rasa Pillai (4), where the learned Judges say that they do not interpret the Full Bench decision meaning that the Survey Officer's decision stops the running of possession of a party really in possession. The learned Judges of the Bench give no reasons for this opinion except to refer to an opinion of Ramesam, J., in Kuppuswami Iyer v. Venkataswami (11), which, if I may say so with the greatest respect, cannot quote the learned Judge correctly, because if he really meant that the possession of the defendants in that case was not interrupted by the decision of the survey officer, then he would have upheld the defendants' title by the adverse possession.

But on the contrary he agreed with the other learned Judge of the Bench in decreeing for the plaintiffs on the ground that the decision of the Survey Officer that the plaintiffs were in possession is binding on the defendants. I therefore agree with Waller, J., in his referring judgment in this case that the plain meaning of the Full Bench ruling is that the decision of the Survey Officer is conclusive on the question of possession. There is no real hardship done and there is nothing extraordinary in the decision of an executive officer having such an effect since the civil rights of the parties are not injured provided they sue, as in the Act they are directed to sue, within one year of the decision.

Defendant 1 relies on a ruling in Chinna Venkatrayudu v. Ramamurthi (5), that the correctness of an order under S. 12, Act 4 of 1897, may be disputed afterwards in a Court of law. That case is really against him; it clearly lays down that if the order was passed under S. 13 its correctness cannot be subsequently disputed. The order in the present case is under S. 13. I am quite clear therefore that the decision of the Survey Officer, expressed in Exs. G and 23, is binding on defendant 1 and he is not at liberty now and here to canvass its correctness.

The Full Bench decision in Muthirulandi Poosari v. Sethuram Aiyar (1), settles his further contention based on adverse possession. Defendant's possession was interrupted in 1905 on 31st July 1905, by the decision of the Survey Officer. The suit was within 12 years of that date and therefore defendant 1 has not prescribed by 12 years' continuous adverse possession before suit.

It may be mentioned incidentally that even if there were any substance in defendant's contention that the original dispute was as to whether the land was jiroiyati or darmilla inam, the case of Chinna Venkatrayudu v. Ramamurthi (5) is authority for the proposition that even so it would be a boundary dispute within the Act and the decision is therefore final. This also receives support from the judgment of Sadasiva Aiyar, J., in Kirukan v. Alagapa Chetty (10).

I therefore hold that the decision of the Survey Officer is conclusive, that the inam is not part of defendant 1's estate, but is Government service inam. It is the fault of defendant 1 or rather the fault of his predecessor that he cannot now contest those matters. That decision then puts the plaintiff in the position of a Government service inamdar and from that position he cannot now be dislodged. Whether or not the attainment of that position in 1905 gave him both the melwaram and kudiwaram rights need not now be discussed since the plaintiff is not here contending that he possesses the kudiwaram right. That would be a difficult position to maintain against the sitting tenants, defendants 2 to 12, who were not parties to the proceedings which declared him to be the mirasi inamdar. He was therefore rightly held by the lower Courts not to be entitled to eject the tenants but entitled only to a decree declaring this melwaram right against defendant 1. Defendant 1 contends that such a decree was for a relief for which the plaintiff had never asked. But that is fundamentally to misunderstand the legal position. The plaintiff sued for possession and the melwaram right is a possessory right. It is not accurate to describe it as a mere declaratory right. It is a species of possession, in fact the only kind of possession which, for example, a landlord and estate proprietor under the Madras Estates Land Act can have and no one has yet dreamt of contending that such a landlord has no possessory right. The plaintiff therefore has been given such possession as he could be given, consistent with the finding in the case. He is not entitled to possession against the tenants, he is entitled to have his possessory right to the melwaram declared against one who has been wrongfully in possession of it. For the same reason the decree for recovery of three years' melwaram from defendant is correct since defendant, has been trespassing on the plaintiff's rights as melwaramdar and wrongfully appropriating what belongs to the plaintiff.

Defendant 1 has founded an argument on this point on a statement of the trial Court at p. 8 of the printed papers:

"The relationship of landlord and tenant has never been established between the plaintiffs and defendants 2 to 12;"

and argues that therefore defendant 1 could not trespass on a relationship which did not exist. The context in the judgment shows clearly that what the Subordinate Judge meant was that since the Survey Officer's decision did not bind defendants 2 to 12 and since defendants 2 to 12 were not shown to be the tenants of the plaintiff, the plaintiff could not get a decree to eject them. By "tenants" he obviously meant ordinary tenants. But where the plaintiff is found to have been the melwaramdar since 1905, as the trial Court itself held, it is not open to kudiwaram tenants to say that he is not their landlord, and the trial Court in view of its decision in the case could not possibly have meant to say so.

I therefore agree with Waller, J., that the decree of the District Court is correct and the decree of that Court must therefore be restored. The plaintiff will have his costs against defendant 1 throughout in all Courts.

P.R.S./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 290

WALSH, J.

Mottai Goundan — Defendant—Petitioner.

v.

P. S. Ramaswami Ayyangar and others — Plaintiffs — Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petns. Nos. 1054 and 1435 of 1931, Decided on 31st October 1932, from order of Dist. Munsif, Gobichettipalayam and Dist. Judge, Coimbatore, D/- 23rd March 1931 and 8th July 1931 respectively.

 Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 1 — Discovery of new argument based on fact or law is no ground for review.

Order 47, R. 1, cannot possibly cover a case where the actual issue has been fully tried by the Court, and afterwards one of the parties discovers an argument which he might have raised, based either on fact or law, and asks the Court to review its order: A I R 1922 P C 112; A I R 1924 Mad 98 and A I R 1928 Lah 919, Ref.; A I R 1925 All 364 and A I R 1928 Rang 31, Dist.

[P 292 C 2]

Advocate-General for Government Solicitor—for Petitioner.

K. V. Krishnaswamy Ayyar and T. K. Rangaswami—for Opposite Parties.

Judgment. — The petitioner in this matter is defendant 1 in O. S. No. 216 of 1929 on the file of the District Munsif, Gobichettipalayam. The suit was for a declaration that certain alienations made by defendant 1 are not binding on plaintiff 2 and on her share in the suit properties, on the ground that the suit properties are the separate properties of plaintiff 2's husband. The first issue raised was

"whether defendant 1 was estopped from denying the title of the plaintiffs to the suit properties and from contending that they are the joint properties by reason of the decree in O. S. No. 3 of 1910 on the file of the District Munsif's Court, Tirupur."

The learned District Munsif first gave a finding in defendant 1's favour on this point. Afterwards an application was made to him to review his order which he did and gave a finding in plaintiff's favour on the point. An appeal was taken to the District Judge who remarked that the suit was still in its trial stage and that the correctness of the finding might be canvassed by the appellant in the appeal against the final judgment. He also remarked that the appeal memorandum did not clearly show that the application for review was in contravention of O. 47, R. 2 or R. 4, but he does not discuss O. 47, R. 1 in this connexion. He dismissed the appeal. Petitioner has put in revision petitions both against the original and against the appellate order. So the preliminary objection taken that where an appeal lies, a revision petition will not be entertained is met by taking up the revision petition against the appellate decision, i. e., Civil Revision Petition No. 1435 of 1931.

Original Suit No. 3 of 1910 referred to above was filed by the grandsons of one Marappa Goundan, the maternal grandfather of plaintiff 2's husband alleging that certain properties mentioned in the schedules of the present plaint, belonged to the said Marappa Goundan and that they and plaintiff 2's husband being his heirs were entitled to the same. Plaintiff 2's husband and his father, the present defendant 1, were impleaded as defendants in that suit. The present defendant 1 contended that the suit properties were his ancestral properties and that the plaintiffs in that suit had no right to them. The suit was compromised and a razinamah decree passed under which the properties were divided into some shares between the plaintiffs and the defendants in that suit. When the first issue in the present suit was being argued at the time of the first order, it was contended that it was not open to defendant 1 to claim the suit properties as his ancestral properties inasmuch as by the razinamah decree it was in effect held that they were not so. The Court held that it was not possible to deduce from the terms of the razinamah decree that this was the basis of the razinamah decree.

It therefore as stated above, found the issue in favour of defendant 1. It was asked to revise its order on the ground that by the very fact that certain properties were made over to the plaintiffs in that suit by the decree and that certain others were declared to belong both to plaintiff 2's husband and to defendant 1 it was not open to defendant 1 to deny the plaintiffs' title and say that they were his joint family properties.

and that in any case the decree was a contract which defendant 1 could not go behind. On a consideration of these arguments the Court reviewed its previous order and found the issue in favour of the plaintiffs. The question is whether it had power under O. 47, R. (1) to do so. There is quite clearly no apparent error at all on the face of the order as is admitted by the learned District Munsif in his order granting review. He very fairly puts it:

"If there are two aspects to a question to be considered by a Court and if only one such aspect is brought to its (the) notice of the Court for consideration and it comes to a conclusion only on that aspect of the case, no application for review would lie on the ground that as the Court failed to consider the other aspect there is a patent error on the face of the order."

But he goes on:

"But though the present application may not be maintainable on that ground, I am of opinion, that as the question now raised is purely a question of law and is clearly in favour of the petitioners there is sufficient reason for reviewing the order."

In considering the legal aspect of the Court's power of review there is no use referring to any decisions before that of the Privy Council in Chhajju Ram v. Neki (1) because it is therein stated that there had been a number of conflicting decisions by various High Courts on the matter and so their Lordships proceeded to give an authoritative ruling. That was a case where the Punjab Chief Court had granted a review on the ground that the "judgment had proceeded on an incorrect exposition of the law." The Privy Council held that "any other sufficient reason" must be analogous to those specified immediately previously in O. 47, R. (1) and that this was not an analogous reason and therefore not a sufficient one. As remarked by Mulla in his commentary whether a particular reason is analogous or not to one or other of the two reasons, "the discovery of new and important matter of evidence" or "some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record" may obviously lead to very refined if not subtle arguments, and in fact has done so. Some subsequent cases may be noted here. The first is Narain Das v. Chiranji Lal (2) where a decree having been passed in favour of a plaintiff conditioned on his performing certain acts the plaintiff found that, for reasons entirely beyond his control, he was unable to perform them. He therefore applied for review and got the decree modified. Held that he could do so. This case bears no analogy to the present.

K. K. S. A. R. Firm v. Maung Kya Nyun (3) was a case where review was allowed because, a witness who could not be found during the trial, was subsequently produced. Except for the remark that "of the same kind" is more restricted than "analogous" it does not help in the present case. Then come two cases more in point. The first is Morari Rao v. Balavanth Dikshit (4). A Judge there dismissed a suit on the ground that as between the plaintiffs who were the nearest agnates and the defendants who were the sister's sons of the last male owner the latter were the preferential heirs under the Mitakshara law prevailing in the Madras Presidency, held, that this was an error of law apparent on the face of the record and that the Judge was competent to grant a review. It was remarked in that judgment that each case must be judged by itself and it was held that the error was so patent that it could be said to be "apparent on the face of the record."

The next case is Debi Sahai-Gulzari Mal v. Bashesar Lal Bansi Dhar (5). The parties in that case had dealings in piecegoods and it was admitted that the defendant firm had failed to deliver 15 bales to the plaintiff firm. The only question in dispute was that of the shipments to which these bales belonged. The decision of the trial Court was that 13 should have been of the January shipment and two of the February and damages were granted amounting to Rs. 727 odd. After hearing the appeal the High Court decided that nine of the bales belonged to the February shipment and six to the April and after calculating rates increased the damages to Rs. 1,259. A review was sought on the ground that there had been an error on the face of the record in that the High Court had failed to apply the natural result of its own finding, and to hold that so far as the

3. A I R 1928 Rang 31=107 I C 161=5 Rang 675.

4. A I R 1924 Mad 98=76 I C 342=46 Mad 955.

5. A I R 1928 Lah 919=112 I C 540=10 Lah 184.

1. A I R 1922 P C 112=72 I C 566=49 I A 144=3 Lah 127 (P C).

2. A I R 1925 All 364=86 I C 168=47 All 361.

February shipment was concerned the suit was barred by time. Review was allowed. Referring to Chhajju Ram v. Neki (1) the learned Judges remarked:

"That ruling dealt entirely or almost entirely with the third heading under which reviews are competent, namely, 'for any other sufficient reason' and it was expressly stated that the first two grounds did not apply to that case."

They then proceed to notice a contention that a mistake of law does not come within the words "mistake or error apparent on the face of the record." They say: "This is not quite clear" (compare a similar remark in the Madras case where after noting the cases in which this view has been taken it is stated "but there are cases in which a different view is taken") but anyhow it is, we think, rightly contended by the other side that here there is no question of a mistake of law. It is not urged that there is no question of a mistake of law. It is not urged that of two possible views the wrong was taken. The error complained of is that after the decision had been given the consequences or results of that decision were overlooked and thus the defendants lost part of the fruits of their victory.

They then point out that though the defendant's counsel never raised the point of limitation, and while indeed on his own showing he could have objected to the whole of the decree passed against him on this ground alone, he was primarily concerned with establishing the incidents of the distribution of the various shipments. They held that the failure of the Court to apply the law of limitation to the facts found was not an error of law so much as a failure to apply the law. The review was accordingly granted.

I do not think that these two cases are sufficient authority to justify the review granted in the present case. It is no doubt argued for the plaintiffs that though there is no apparent error on the face of the order, the section mentions "record" and not "order" or "judgment." This is undoubtedly true and in the last case mentioned it is possible that to establish the apparent error the rest of the record would have had to be looked at as well as the judgment. That would depend on whether the facts necessary to show the question of limitation were or were not mentioned in the judgment, which in the absence of the original judgment we do not know. Accepting however that the rest of the record can also be looked into to establish the apparent error, the present case goes far beyond anything allowed either in Merari Rao v. Balavanth (4) or Debi Sahai-Gulzari Mal v. Bashesar Lal Bansi Dhar (5).

Here we have a deliberate issue of estoppel raised and argued before the Court. The whole matter depended on a single document, namely, a compromise decree which was before the Court and the terms of which were perfectly well known to the parties. The argument raised for the plaintiffs, that the compromise decree implied the recognition of the property not being ancestral, was rejected by the Court. The issue was decided against the plaintiffs. That finding has not since been challenged, though I do not say that it may not be challenged in some future appeal against whatever decree is passed by the trial Court. Now they come forward for review on the ground that they overlooked another argument which could have been drawn from the document and which it is alleged is conclusive in their favour. If this can be allowed as a ground of review it would, it appears to me, enormously enlarge the scope of O. 47, R. 1, while the decision of the Privy Council in Chhajju Ram v. Neki (1) is to restrict it. It could be alleged that any new argument, whether of fact or law which had been forgotten was to be found "on the face of the records," for indeed no argument which a Court could listen to could be otherwise, and then there would be applications in every degree of case, from those in which the argument if allowed to be raised did not appear to admit of answer, to those in which much might be said in answer to it, but in which the parties asking for review would of course allege that their point of view was the only possible one. I cannot think that O. 47, R. (1) can possibly cover a case where the actual issue has been fully tried by the Court, and afterwards one of the parties discovers an argument which he might have raised, based either on fact or law, and asks the Court to review its order.

In the result I hold that the learned District Munsif had no power to review his order and that this petition must be allowed with costs throughout and the original order restored. I may perhaps note that this will not, I understand, be a mere barren prolongation of the suit because there are other points involved, but in any case this short cut by way of revi w to rectify a mistake which, if it is a mistake, can only be rectified on appeal is not permissible. The other petition, C. R. P. No. 1054 of 1931, does not lie and is dismissed but without costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Order accordingly.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 293

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.
Ponnu Chettiar—Appellant.

v.

Sambasiva Ayyar—Respondent.

Appeal No. 445 of 1928, Decided on 5th August 1932.

 (a) Mortgagor and Mortgagee—Receiver appointed in mortgage suit—Sale of property in execution of another money decree—Purchaser is not entitled to income collected by receiver as against subsequent purchaser under mortgage decree—Mesne profits.

In execution of a money decree appellant attached some property of judgment-debtor. The respondent who had a mortgage in his favour executed by the judgment-debtor filed a suit on the mortgage and obtained an appointment of a receiver over the mortgaged properties which included those already attached by the appellant. The appellant got leave to execute his decree against the receiver and in execution purchased the property himself. The respondent subsequently got a mortgage decree and the properties were brought to sale and purchased by a third party. The appellant failing to get possession of the property applied for paying out to him part of the money paid by the receiver in Court as income from the property—that part attributable to the property purchased by him.

Held: that the effect of the appointment of the receiver was to deprive the mortgagor of his right to deal with the income, and that as the appellant had purchased only the right, title and interest of the mortgagor he was not entitled to the income which the mortgagor himself had no right to dispose of: In re Anglesey Marquis, (1903) 2 Ch 727, Ref. [P 294 C 1, 2]

(b) Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 58—“Equitable mortgage.”

The term “equitable mortgage” in the English law, is of much wider import than under the Transfer of Property Act. An equitable mortgage in English law might be of several kinds and one of them is by deposit of title-deeds.

[P 295 C 1]

(c) T. P. Act (1882), S. 69-A—English law—Appointment of receiver.

Obiter.—The notion is utterly wrong, that in England those mortgagees only as are entitled to immediate possession obtain an appointment of receiver [P 294 C 2] (d) T. P. Act (1882), S. 58—English decisions should be quoted with great care—Precedents.

It is a very dangerous thing to quote English decisions in mortgage cases in India without the very greatest care as there are many great differences between the law of mortgages in this country and the law of mortgages in England, which is a very difficult and complicated subject: Distinctions between English and Indian law pointed out by Reilly, J. [P 296 C 2]

(e) T. P. Act (1882), S. 58 (d) — Usufuctuary Mortgagee—Rights of Mortgagor and such mortgagee.

Though a mortgagee under his mortgage is entitled to possession, it is the nature of the transaction that till he demands possession or enters into receipt of the rents and profits the mortgagor should remain in possession and such possession is rightful. [P 295 C 1]

K. V. Sessa Ayyangar—for Appellant.

K. Bhashyam and R. Viswanadhan—for Respondent.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—This appeal raises a question as regards the effect of the appointment of a receiver in a suit to enforce a simple mortgage. The appellant obtained a money decree against one Ganapathia Pillai in O. S. No. 78 of 1923 (District Munsif's Court, Mayavaram) and in execution of that decree attached certain properties. To enforce a mortgage executed by the aforesaid Ganapathia Pillai, the respondent filed O. S. No. 55 of 1924 (Mayavaram Sub-Court) and obtained an appointment of receiver over the mortgaged properties, which included those already attached. Thereupon, the appellant applied in the mortgage suit for leave to execute his decree against the receiver. Not only was that request complied with, but leave was also granted to him to implead the receiver as a party to the execution proceedings. Thereafter, in execution of the money decree, the attached properties were put up for sale and purchased by the decree-holder himself, that is the appellant. The sale was in due course confirmed. The appellant attempted to take possession and the respondents then made several applications to the Court, one being to restrain the appellant from taking possession; the second to implead him as a party to their mortgage suit and the third to continue the receiver as against him, after so making him a party. All the applications were granted. The appellant took the matters to the High Court but without success. Pausing here for a moment, the effect of the High Court's order was to negative the appellant's right to possession. The rest of the story may be briefly told. The respondents obtained in their suit a mortgage decree, brought the mortgaged properties to sale, and some third party purchased them. Till the date of this sale the receiver had realized a certain amount as income from the properties and paid the amount into Court. As I have said, some of those properties the appellant had previously purchased. He applied to the lower Court for payment out to him of that part of the amount paid by the receiver into Court, attributable to the properties purchased by him, on the ground that the ownership of the income is incidental to the ownership of the property. When he made this application, the sale in favour of the third party referred to above had not been confirmed and the receiver's appointment was still in force. The lower Court having rejected his application, he has filed the present appeal.

A preliminary point has been taken that no appeal lies. This objection cannot, in our opinion, prevail. The appellant was, as I shall show, impleaded as a party to the mortgage suit. The question of substance is, to whom does the fund in Court belong, to the respondents or to the appellant? If the appellant were a stranger, it would have been open to him to assert his title to the money by a claim proceeding under O. 21, R. 56, but he having been a party the question would be one under S. 47, Civil P. C., and the preliminary objection must on that ground be overruled.

Now coming to the merits, on the facts that I have stated, the point to be decided lies in a very small compass. What was the state of affairs on the date the appellant purchased the properties? The effect of the order appointing the receiver was to deprive the mortgagor of his right to deal with the income. It was in order to safeguard the respondent's position that the receiver was appointed. The mortgagor could not defeat the order by assigning the profits to a third party. Could he have, for instance by private transfer, assigned the income to the appellant? Of course not. What the appellant purchased was no more than the right, title and interest of the mortgagor. But the latter himself had no right to dispose of the income. The order operated to take away that right, which otherwise he would have possessed:

"The order appointing a receiver operates as an injunction to restrain the judgment-debtor from himself receiving the moneys over which the receiver is appointed: see In re Anglesey Marquis (1)."

It is then obvious that no private transferee from him could have acquired a valid right to the income and it follows that the appellant who was a purchaser of his right at a Court sale stands in no better position. Mr. Sesha Aiyangar, for the appellant, contends that as his purchase was with the Court's leave it vested in his client a right over the income. The argument seems to me utterly untenable. It is well established that without an application for such relief no person can proceed against a receiver. The appellant therefore chose the only course open to him: that of obtaining the previous permission of the Court which made the appointment. Had he not obtained such permission, he would have been guilty of contempt and I fail to see how the Court's order, allowing execution against the receiver, could be said to have invested the appellant with any special rights.

The question was raised in the course of the argument, in what circumstances would a Court in India be justified in granting a receiver in a simple mortgage suit? This is not relevant to the point we have to decide and I shall refrain from expressing any opinion upon it; but I may point out that the notion is utterly wrong, that in England those mortgagees only as are entitled to immediate possession obtain an appointment of receiver. This idea seems to underlie some of the decisions cited before us and with great respect, is the very reverse of the truth. A mortgage in England may be either legal or equitable, and before the passing of the Judicature Acts, the general right of a legal mortgagee was to take possession and not to come for a receiver. When he had the legal right to enter into possession, why should he be granted the equitable relief? The English Courts therefore held that the appointment of a receiver at the instance of a legal mortgagee was not a matter of course; where as in the case of an equitable mortgagee, this right was specially conferred on him, on the ground that he had no means of taking possession: Kerr on Receivers, Edn. 9, pp. 32 to 35. This of, course, is not the law to-day. Under the present practice receivers are as freely appointed at the instance of legal mortgagees as in cases in which the mortgagees have only an equitable interest: see Kerr on Receivers, p. 37 and Fisher on Mortgages, Edn. 7, p. 359. I am referring to this subject only to correct the misapprehension to which I have adverted. I may also draw attention to another fact, namely, that the term "equitable mortgage" in the English law, is of much wider import than under the Transfer of Property Act. This fact is sometimes overlooked and confusion has arisen. An equitable mortgage might be of several kinds and one of them was by deposit of title-deeds: 21 Halsbury's Laws of England, p. 74.

To the last-mentioned subdivision alone, the term is by common usage applied in India. The question often arose in England, in what cases a receiver would be granted at the instance of a subsequent encumbrancer (an equitable mortgagee in the eye of the law) as against the first encumbrancer (the legal mortgagee): see Kerr on Receivers, pp. 32 to 44. With that question we are not directly concerned, but the law in England seems to be, that the prior encumbrancer is not entitled to rents received by the receiver previous to his giving notice that he claims them as against the receiver. Ordinarily an order appointing a receiver preserves the rights of prior encumbrancers, but if it does not, a first mortgagee is not entitled to rents collected by a receiver previous to the former's application to take possession: see Fisher, p. 374; Kerr, pp. 36 to 38 and 193 and 194. As I have said, we are not here concerned in what cases a Court in India will appoint a receiver, but when an appointment is made, the English Courts have held the receiver's right to rents already collected prevails even as against a prior encumbrancer, a person with paramount rights. As authority for this proposition I may further refer to, In re. Metropolitan Amalgamated Estates (2). The principle of the rule is this: though a mortgagee under his mortgage is entitled to possession, it is of the nature of the transaction that till he demands possession or enters into receipt of the rents and profits, the mortgagor should remain in possession and such possession is rightful: 21 Halsbury's Laws of England, p. 157.

It has been urged that a Court in India will not appoint a receiver unless the mortgagee makes out that he has eventually a right to a personal decree against the mortgagor. With this subject, again we are not here concerned, but it may be pointed out that, in this case, a personal decree was eventually passed and that it has not even now been fully satisfied. Mr. Sesha Aiyangar next relies upon certain cases, such as In re Dickinson (3), In re Potts, Ex parte Taylor (4) and In re Pearce-Ex parte Official Receiver (5), and argues that the fund in question belongs to his client, as the effect of the order appointing the receiver is not to create a lien in favour of the mortgagees. But what he overlooks is, that these cases deal with special provisions of the Bankruptcy Act. Under the Statute, the property of the debtor vests in the receiver and the execution is made in favour of secured creditors. The discussion turned upon, who were secured creditors. As Lord Esher, M. R., points out in, In re Potts Ex parte Taylor (4):

"The Bankruptcy law is not the Common law of England; it is an enacted law and all the rights under it are determined by statute and by nothing else."

In view of these cases, it is doubtful whether the decision of Madhavan Nair, J., in Maharaja of Pithapuram v. Gokuldas Govardhandas (6) is correct or not, for the claimant, whose right was negatived by the learned Judge, was the Official Assignee; but with that I am not concerned. In re Anglesey Marquis (1), already cited, on which Mr. Bashyam Aiyangar, for the respondents, relies, is more in point. It decides that a receivership order obtained by a judgment-creditor over a judgment-debtor's share of an estate prevents the latter from dealing with it to the prejudice of the former and it also prevents any subsequent mortgagee or judgment-creditor from gaining priority by means of

3. (1889) 22 Q B D 187=58 L J Q B 1=37 W R 130=60 L T 138=6 Morrell 1.

4. (1893) 1 Q B D 648=62 L J Q B 392=4 R 305=69 L T 74=41 W R 337=10 Morrell 52.

5. (1919) 1 K B 354=88 L J K B 367=120 L T 334.

6. A I R 1931 Mad 626=133 I C 504=54 Mad 565.

2. (1912) 2 Ch 497=31 L J Ch 745=107 L T 515.

a stop order or charging order. In the result, the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Reilly, J.—I agree. As my learned brother has pointed out, the arguments in this case, which has occupied us a considerable time, have ranged over a much wider field than was really necessary. It was urged for the plaintiff-mortgagees that by reason of the order appointing a receiver, which they obtained in the course of their suit on simple mortgages, they got a special right to have their mortgage-debts satisfied out of the income of the mortgaged property, which might be collected by the receiver, and that the receiver must be treated as a receiver appointed for their benefit alone. That was contended on the strength of various English decisions. Mr. Bhashyam Ayyangar for the plaintiffs states that he also relies upon Rameswar Singh v. Chuni Lal Saha (7). In that case the learned Judges, dealing with a simple mortgage, certainly went all the way necessary to support Mr. Bhashyam Ayyangar's contention. They said:

"Our attention has been invited to the case of Penny v. Todd (8), where it is ruled that the possession of a receiver in a mortgage suit was prima facie for the benefit of the party who had obtained the appointment. On this principle it has been argued that the receiver who was appointed at the instance of the first mortgagee holds the property for his benefit alone and is bound to make over to him the entire income for the satisfaction of his dues. In our opinion this contention is clearly well founded."

That statement of opinion was adopted by Madhavan Nair, J., in Maharaja of Pithapuram v. Gokaldas Govardhandas (6), and applied to a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds. We are not here concerned with a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds or any of the incidents of such a mortgage. I venture to say with the very greatest respect in regard to a simple mortgage the statement adopted by the learned Judges of the Calcutta High Court as the law of this country appears to me to be anything but well founded. Certainly it was not a safe proposition to base upon a statement in the indirect report of Penny v. Todd (8), where Vice-Chancellor Mallins is represented as having made a remark of a general nature in regard to receivers appointed at the instance of equitable mortgagees in England. The interest of Penny v. Todd (8), really consists, not so much in that general remark of the learned Vice-Chancellor, as in the qualifications of the general remark of which that case is an instance. But, if I may say so, it appears to me a very dangerous thing to quote English decisions in mortgage cases in this country without the very greatest care. There are many great differences between the law of mortgages in this country and the law of mortgages in England, which is a very difficult and complicated subject. If we use English decisions on mortgage questions without the very greatest care they are far more likely to befog us than enlighten us. Indeed indiscriminate citing of English decisions in mortgage cases in the Courts of this country appears to me one of the surest roads to confusion. And to say that it has been decided in a certain case in England that a mortgagee has a certain right and, therefore a simple mortgagee in this country has a similar right is a very obvious instance of non sequitur. When we are dealing with the results of appointing a receiver in a mortgage suit in this country on a simple mortgage, there are many distinctions between the law of this country and the law of England which it is profitable to remember. A legal mortgagee in England has always had the right to get possession on the mortgagor's default, unless by some special provision that is expected; a mortgagee by deed in England before the Law of Property Act of 1925 had a right himself to appoint a receiver, and that right has been restated in the Law of Property Act; an equitable mortgagee in England who applies for the appointment of a receiver, if interest has fallen into arrears, can get an appointment almost of course, and he can also realize the mortgage debt due to him in certain circumstances by getting a receiver appointed as an ordinary remedy; a mortgagee in England can pursue all his remedies at once.

None of those statements applies to a simple mortgagee in this country. In this country there is no doubt that a simple mortgagee, who has brought a suit to enforce his mortgage, can in special circumstances get a receiver appointed, for instance, if the mortgagor by his act or default is destroying the mortgage-security or allowing it to be destroyed. But the appointment of a receiver has to be justified by special circumstances. It is not one of the ordinary remedies of a simple mortgagee. Mr. Sesha Ayyangar for defendant 9, the appellant before us, has suggested that in this country on the application of a simple mortgagee a receiver should never be appointed unless the mortgagee has still a personal remedy on his debt against his mortgagor. Speaking for myself I think there is a good deal to be said for that contention, if we include in "personal remedy" the remedies provided by Ss. 65, 66 and 68, T. P. Act. However it is unnecessary to express any decided opinion on that question in this case. But I do not think there is any reason to doubt that a simple mortgagee in this country cannot by getting a receiver appointed in the course of a suit enlarge his security or enlarge his rights to the prejudice of third parties, who have already acquired rights in the equity of redemption. Nor do I see any reason to doubt that a receiver appointed in such a case in this country is, like a receiver appointed in other cases, appointed for the protection of the property for the benefit of all the parties to the suit in accordance with their respective rights, as they may eventually be established.

7. A I R 1920 Cal 515=56 I C 839=47 Cal 418.

8. (1878) 26 W R 502.

But in this case Mr. Sesha Ayyangar has to go a great deal further than that before he can succeed. A receiver has been appointed in this suit, to which Ponnu Chetty, Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's client, was made a party as defendant 9. The receiver was originally appointed before defendant 9 was brought into the suit; but his appointment was continued after defendant 9 was impleaded, and the appeal against that order has been dismissed. After the appointment of the receiver I do not think there can be the least doubt that the mortgagor as a person bound by that order had no right to do anything to destroy the effect of that order. The receiver had the right and the duty to collect the income of the property. The mortgagor was bound by that order and could not collect or enjoy the income of the property. What was suggested at one stage by Mr. Sesha Ayyangar was that, although the mortgagor could not collect or enjoy the income of the property himself, he could nullify the order appointing the receiver by transferring some right in him to some other person. That appears to me to be in itself an extraordinary proposition. No doubt the order appointing the receiver did not destroy such rights as the mortgagor had in the property. No doubt he could still sell some interest in the equity of redemption to a third party. But, as he had been prohibited by the appointment of the receiver from enjoying or collecting the income of the property, how could he transfer any immediate right to enjoy or collect it to a third party? Even apart from the decisions which my learned brother has quoted, showing that it is well recognized in England that a judgment-debtor cannot deal with property for which a receiver has been appointed so as to defeat the order appointing the receiver or prejudice a judgment creditor at whose instance the order has been obtained, on principle how can the position be otherwise?

But in the end Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, as I understand him, does not go quite so far as to say that after the appointment of the receiver, the mortgagor could at once turn round and defeat that order by himself selling his equity of redemption to a third party. What he contends more reasonably is that with the consent of the Court that could be done even after the appointment of the receiver. What happened in this case was, not that the mortgagor directly sold to defendant 9, but that defendant 9, who had a money-decree against the mortgagor, bought the equity of redemption in execution of his decree.

The fact that he was a Court-auction-purchaser instead of a private purchaser does not justify any contention that the consent of the Court to the transfer of the right to the income may be implied in the Court auction or in any of the proceedings in connexion with it. It happens that in this case the auction in which defendant 9 bought was in the same Court in which the mortgagee's suit was pending. The same Court appointed the receiver and conducted the court-auction in which defendant 9 bought such interest as he could buy from the mortgagor. The receiver was quite properly brought on record in the proceedings in execution of defendant 9's decree. Mr. Sesha Ayyangar suggests that we must take it that the Subordinate Judge consented to defendant 9 buying in the court-auction the whole of the equity of redemption, including the right to possession and the right to collect the income of the property from the date of his purchase. Now why should we infer anything of the sort? Oddly enough the receiver, who was a vakil of the Subordinate Judge's Court, raised no objection to the auction sale and did not assist the Court by putting forward any contention, but merely said, as the record shows, that he left the matter to the Court. I think it would have been better if he had tried to be of more assistance to the Court. But how can we reasonably suppose that the Subordinate Judge consented to such a sale as would nullify and defeat the order appointing a receiver, which he had himself made and which was still in form in his Court. When he decided that defendant 9 was entitled to bring some interest of the mortgagor to sale in execution, that does not imply that he decided that what could be brought to sale was the equity of redemption including the right to possession and the right to the income.

There was undoubtedly a right in the mortgagor, which could be sold without interfering in any way with the effect of the order appointing the Receiver and which might, in certain circumstances, if the mortgage debt had been cleared off, have turned out to be a very valuable right. Subject to the mortgage and to any decree or order in the suit upon it the equity of redemption was put up for sale. The Subordinate Judge allowed that to be done, but I see no reason whatever to say that in so doing he gave any implicit permission to sell anything more than what the mortgagor, but for defendant 9's attachment in execution could have transferred at that time. Without the consent of the Court after the appointment of the receiver the mortgagee obviously could not have collected the income of the property, he could not have transferred the right to collect the income of the property, and defendant 9 could not have bought anything which the mortgagor could not have sold. Accepting for the purpose of this case Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's suggestion that the fund collected by the receiver from the mortgaged property is not in any way charged or earmarked for the benefit of the mortgagee in the first instance, we have to remember that these proceedings arise out of the application of defendant 9 to withdraw part of that fund on the ground that it represents the income from the date of his purchase. It is not necessary to decide in this case whether the plaintiffs would eventually have a right to draw that money.

But it is clear, I think, that defendant 9 had no basis for his claim upon the fund at the time he made it, i. e. while the receiver's appointment was still in force. Mr. Sesha Ayyangar contends that under S. 8, T. P. Act, the income belongs to defendant 9 from the date of his purchase. So it would, if his vendor had a right to transfer it to him. But in the circumstances it is impossible, as my learned brother has pointed out, to say that he had that right while he was under the prohibition of the order appointing the receiver. The decision of the learned Subordinate Judge was therefore correct, and this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 298

WALSH, J.

Mariappan and another—Petitioners.
v.

Nalla Sevugan Servai — Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 294 of 1932, Decided on 25th October 1932 to revise order of Dist. Munsif, Ramnad, D/- 15th January 1932.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 11, R. 1—Suit on promissory note—Plea of want of consideration—Application by defendant without letting in evidence to issue interrogatories to plaintiff must be dismissed.

Where in a suit on a promissory note, the defendant pleads want of consideration, the onus lies entirely on the defendant and he cannot escape the onus by laying no evidentiary basis for his defence but seeking to get admission from plaintiff by interrogatories: A I R 1914 Cal 767, Dist. [P 293 C 1]

Watrapp S. Subramania Ayyar — for Petitioners.

S. Krishnaswami Ayyangar—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—In this case two suits were filed on two promissory notes executed by the father of the defendants in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant's father put in a written statement alleging want of consideration. Issues were framed on 1st February 1930. Defendant 1 appears to have died soon after and his minor sons were added as legal representatives. They filed an additional written statement and additional issues were framed on 15th April 1930. There were a number of adjournments and there was an ex parte decree on 25th October 1930. This ex parte decree was set aside on 15th October 1931 by the District Court (C. M. A. No. 18 of 1931). The trial was then adjourned to 27th November 1931 and on that day the present petitioners, who were defendants 2 and 3 put in an application for issuing certain interrogatories to the plaintiff. On this the Court passed the following order :

"I think that on a simple suit on a promissory note, the interrogatories sought to be exhibited are irrelevant although they may not be so in actual cross-examination. I dismiss this petition with costs."

This civil revision petition is put in against this order. The onus in this case lay entirely on the defendants and it appears to me that they cannot escape that onus by laying no evidentiary basis for their defence but seeking to get admissions from the plaintiff by interrogatories. The learned advocate for the petitioner quotes Bajinath Kodia v. Raghunath Prasad (1). But that case is obviously distinguishable because the hundi was attacked as a forgery and the initial onus of proof lay with the plaintiff who, if he did not let in evidence would have had his suit dismissed. This appears to me to be entirely different from interrogatories by the party on whom the onus of proof entirely rests and who has not attempted to discharge this onus in the smallest possible degree. It seems to me to allow the interrogatories in this case would be to open the door wide for parties to avoid opening the case and taking up the onus of proof which lies on them, and to cast it instead on the other party on whom it does not lie. I express no opinion as to whether such interrogatories may not be issued if the defendants (petitioners) make some effort to discharge the onus of proof but I consider that they not having let in any evidence cannot be allowed to escape the onus by this method. The petition fails and is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./K.S. - Petition dismissed.

1. A I R 1914 Cal 767=24 I C 765=41 Cal 6.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 299

MADHAVAN NAIR AND JACKSON, JJ.
(Coimbatore Sri) Venkatachalapathi Nidhi, Ltd. and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

G. K. Nanjappa Goundan and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 20 of 1926, Decided on 21st October 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Coimbatore, in O. S. No. 64 of 1925.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 37, R. 2 (2) (a)—Suit on hundis under — No agreement to pay interest in document—Statutory interest must be allowed — Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), Ss. 79 and 80.

Order 37, R. 2, Civil P. C., makes S. 79, S. 80, Negotiable Instruments Act, specifically applicable to a case filed under O. 37. Hence in suits on hundis filed under O. 37, where there is no agreement to pay interest in the document, statutory interest can be allowed under S. 80, Negotiable Instruments Act; and the admission of the allegations in the plaint under O. 37, R. 2 cannot refer to the award of interest which is specifically provided in Cl. (a). [P 300 C 1]

M. Krishna Bharathi — for Appellants.

S. Ranganadha Aiyar — for Respondents.

Madhavan Nair, J.— The plaintiff is the appellant. The suit out of which this appeal arises was instituted by him for the recovery of Rs. 5,000 with interest on five hundis, Exs. A to A-4. A decree has been given in his favour for the principal amount. The learned Judge having refused to award him interest on the principal amount, in this appeal the plaintiff claims that he is entitled to interest.

The suit was instituted under O. 37, Civil P. C., under the special rules relating to summary procedure on negotiable instruments. Under R. 2 (2) (a) of this order the plaintiff is entitled to get interest on the amount claimed in accordance with the provisions of S. 79, S. 80, as the case may be, of the Negotiable Instruments Act of 1881 up to the date of the institution of the suit, or for the sum mentioned in the summons, whichever is less, and for interest up to the date of the decree at the same rate or at such other rate as the Court thinks fit. Since there is no agreement to pay any interest in the documents, S. 79 is obviously inapplicable and so under O. 37, R. 2 (2) (a) the plaintiff will be entitled to get only the statutory rate of interest, 6 per cent, under S. 80. But the learned Judge refuses to apply S. 80 because he says that the operation of this section is excluded by O. 37, R. 2. We have read the section carefully. We are not able to see how the operation of S. 80, Negotiable Instruments Act, is excluded by O. 37, R. 2, Civil P. C. On the other hand, it seems to us that O. 37, R. 2 makes S. 79 or S. 80 as the case may be specifically applicable to a case filed under O. 37. We cannot therefore accept the opinion of the learned Judge that the plaintiff is not entitled to the statutory interest mentioned in S. 80.

It is argued on behalf of the appellant that he is entitled to 33 1/3 per cent which he has claimed in the plaint. He contends that O. 37, Civil P. C., supports him having regard to the language of R. 2, namely, "the allegations in the plaint shall be deemed to be admitted." We are not able to accept this contention. No authority in support of the plea has been cited. On the other hand it appears to us that that interpretation cannot be accepted, because in R. (a), Cl. (2) special provision for interest is made to the effect that S. 79 or S. 80, Negotiable Instruments Act, will apply as the case may be. Therefore, the admissions of the allegations in the plaint relied upon by the appellant under Cl. (2) cannot refer to the award of interest which is specifically provided for in Cl. (a). We would therefore allow the appeal and award interest at the rate of 6 per cent from the date of the hundis to the date of the decree and subsequent interest also at the same rate thereafter. The plaintiff will get his costs in this appeal on the amount which we have decreed to him.

P.R.S./K.S. Order accordingly.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 300

PANDALAI, J.

Dumpala Venkanna — Defendant — Petitioner.

v.

Vutla Subbayya and another — Plaintiff — Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 823 of 1929, Decided on 7th September 1932, from decree of Dist. Munsif, Bapatla, D/- 27th August 1928.

* (a) Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 60—Promissory note discharged by execution of another note—Subsequent endorse- ment on discharged note—Endorsee gets no right of action on instrument.

Where a promissory note is discharged by the maker by payment or by execution of a fresh note, the discharged note loses its character of "negotiable instrument" and a subsequent endorsee, even though for value and without notice, gets no right of action on the instrument: 35 I C 591, Diss from; 7 M H C R 271. Expl; 5 Mad 108, Rel on. [P 301 C 1]

(b) Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), Ss. 82 and 60—Difference.

Section 82 deals generally with the discharge of parties and not discharge of instruments which is dealt with under S. 60. [P 301 C 1, 2]

(c) Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 60—Promissory note discharged by maker—Discharged note left with payee subsequently endorsed to another—Maker is not estopped from pleading discharge or non-liability under the note.

After discharge by satisfaction at or after maturity of a promissory note, by the maker, an estoppel does not arise against him by the mere fact that "the piece of paper" or "waste paper" which once had, but has lost its, negotiable quality is left with the payee and he passes it off on others as if it were still a negotiable instrument: Lickbarrow v. Mason, 1 R R 425. Expl. [P 305 C 1]

P. Satyanarayana Rao — for Petitioner.

V. Subramanyam — for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—The petitioner is the defendant against whom a decree has been given on a promissory note for Rs. 60-10-0 dated 14th October 1925 executed by him to one Ankamma, deceased, from whose widow Seshamma (defendant 3) the plaintiff took an endorsement on 17th December 1927 after her husband's death which took place in March 1926. The defence was that the note had been discharged by execution of a fresh note to the payee. It appears that Ankamma, the payee, and his wife (defendant 3, Seshamma) who had no male issue, were bringing up two nephews, that Seshamma with the assistance of one of the nephews who was siding with her got possession of the suit note and other documents from her husband, that though the latter complained to the authorities he could get no assistance from them as the matter was declared to be a family quarrel, that thereupon Ankamma took a fresh note Ex. 1 from the defendant on 5th March 1926 in substitution and discharge of the suit note, and endorsed it to a daughter of the other nephew who was siding with him and that the defendant paid off the amount of the new note to the holder of that note.

There were also pleas questioning the bona fides and consideration of the endorsement to the plaintiff. The District Munsif found the facts as above stated, but also that the plaintiff paid consideration to the widow for the endorsement of the suit note and took it without knowledge of the facts above stated. On these findings he has held that the plaintiff is a holder in due course from the widow and that defendant 1 (petitioner) must pay the debt over again though he has already once paid it. It appears to me that the District Munsif has fallen into error of ignoring S. 60, Negotiable Instruments Act. That section (corresponding to S. 36 (1) read with S. 59 (1), Bills of Exchange Act), lays down that a negotiable instrument may be negotiated until payment or satisfaction by the maker, drawee or acceptor at or after maturity, but not after such payment or satisfaction. This section carried out the fundamental principle that a negotiable instrument loses its character as such after the instrument (as distinguished from a party thereto) is discharged.

A bill or other negotiable instrument is discharged in the words of S. 60 by payment or satisfaction by the maker, drawee or acceptor after maturity, or as S. 59 (1) of the English Act, puts it by payment in due course by or on behalf of the drawee or acceptor, which latter term includes the maker of a promissory note: see S. 89 (1). Thus both enactments convey the same idea because "payment" according to the English Act need not be payment in cash. But the holder may receive satisfaction in any other form: see Chalmers Bills of Exchange Act, Edn. 9, pp. 233 and 234. On such payment or satisfaction at or after maturity by the maker of a promissory note it ceases to be negotiable. The consequence of that as settled more than a century ago is that if it subsequently comes into the hands of a holder in due course, he acquires no right of action on the instrument: see Chalmers, p. 233 and cases cited in note (d).

But the learned advocate for respondent (plaintiff) has relied on two decisions of this Court Muthu Reddi v. Velu Asari (1) and Ramanadhan Chettiar v. Gunbu Ayyar (2) and the decision of the Court of appeal in Glasscock v. Balls (3) for the contention that though a note is fully paid and discharged, but left with the payee, it continues to be negotiable and that a holder in due course can recover against the maker either on the ground that the note was not overdue and mere payment is not evidence of a demand and that payment was only an equity attaching to the note which would bind only those who were aware of it or on the ground of estoppel, that where one of two innocent parties has to suffer by the fraud of a third person he who facilitated the fraud by his neglect (in this case the omission to take back the note on payment) must bear the loss.

The decision in Muthu Reddi v. Velu Asari (1) is of a late learned Judge whom I remember with respect and attachment. It is in favour of the respondent's argument. But I am sorry to have to differ from it as it is based on a misunderstanding of the authorities relied on and the principle involved. In that case a promissory note for Rs. 200 was given for future instalments due to a chit fund. Some instalments were paid and the payment endorsed on the note. Subsequent payments were not so endorsed. The payee endorsed the note to the plaintiff two years after the date of the note after it was fully paid off and apparently after the chit fund had terminated. It was found that the plaintiff had paid consideration and did not know that the note had been fully paid when he took the endorsement.

In reversing a decree dismissing the suit, the learned Judge had to deal with S. 60 and a previous decision Communden Mohideen Sahib v. Oree Meera Sahib (4) of the year 1873. In doing so he refers to Ss. 59, 9 and 82 to support his conclusion that the maker who pays off a note is not discharged from liability if he fails to take back the note as the payment is not made in due course. I very respectfully think that herein lurks a confusion of two distinct ideas: one the discharge of a note by payment on maturity, i.e. in the case of a note payable on demand after a demand has been made expressly or by implication from conduct; and the other the effect of leaving a discharged note in the hands

1. (1916) 35 I C 591.

2. A I R 1928 Mad 1238=113 I C 456.

3. (1890) 24 Q B D 13=59 L J Q B 51=38 W R 155=62 L T 163.

4. (1871-74) 7 M H C 271.

of the payee as a ground of estoppel against the maker. The former question is a part of the law of negotiable instruments. The latter is entirely independent of that law and is a branch of the law of estoppel. They must be kept distinct for a proper decision.

On the first point the reference by the learned Judge to Ss. 59, 9 and 82 is not material to the effect of S. 60. S. 59 deals with the rights of holders who became such after dishonour or after maturity and says that except in the case of accommodation bills, the transferee gets only the rights of the transferor. The whole section deals with a situation when, ex hypothesi the instrument has not been paid or discharged by the principal party liable thereon. But S. 60 deals with the effect of payment or discharge by the principal party liable on the instrument, maker in the case of a promissory note and drawee or acceptor in the case of bills. The opinion of the learned Judge that S. 60 does not affect a holder in due course is at variance with the settled law of negotiable instruments for more than a century in England both before and after the Bills of Exchange Act. And in India that is what Innes, J., meant in Communden Mohideen Sahib v. Oree Meera Sahib (4), at 275, when he said referring to Bartram v. Caddy (5), that if there had been a settlement and discharge, it would have been a good defence against an endorsee though for value and without notice. This decision though given before the Negotiable Instruments Act is still good law by reason of S. 60 which means the same thing. The learned Judge (Seshagiri Iyer, J.) was also not accurate in attributing to Kernan, J., in Communden Mohideen Sahib v. Oree Meera Sahib (4), the view that discharge of a note was an equity applicable to holders of overdue notes. The fact is that both the Judges (Innes and Kernan, JJ.) found that there had been no discharge as pleaded by the defendant in that case. If there had been a discharge there would have been an end of the plaintiff's case even though he was an endorsee for value without notice. But in the absence of a discharge, the Court went on to consider whether at the time of the endorsement to plaintiff, the note was overdue which depended on whether there had been a demand express or by conduct. If it was, the plaintiff as endorsee would be bound by all the equities to which the endorser was subject; aliter if it was not. The equity was not discharge of the note which was not proved; but the agreement made at the time of the note between the maker and payee, that the amount recoverable on the note was to be only what was due on the account between them of cloth supplied by the maker for which purpose the advance on the note was in fact made.

The Judges found (Innes, J., from the fact that there had been part payment from which he inferred a previous demand and Kernan, J., from the direct evidence of demand) that there had been a demand before the endorsement and hence that the note was overdue. Incidentally it is interesting to note that Kernan, J., added, p. 281, that for the equities to attach to an endorsement of an overdue note, it was not necessary that the endorsee should know at the time of endorsement that there had been a demand, i.e. that the note was overdue. Nor does the reference by Seshagiri Iyer, J., to the expression "before it became payable" in the definition of "holder in due course" advance the matter, as a note payable on demand is payable "on demand," and the only evidentiary value in this connexion of part payment towards an on demand instrument is to show that there was in all probability a demand for the whole. The learned Judge refers to good faith and want of negligence in the definition of "payment in due course" and says that failure to secure the note after discharging it is not acting in good faith and without negligence. I can understand the argument based on estoppel by reason of leaving a discharged note with the payee with which I will deal separately. But the good faith and want of negligence mentioned in the definition is as regards the person to whom the payment is made as shown by the rest of the definition where it says "under circumstances which do not afford a reasonable ground for believing that he (the person receiving payment) is not entitled to receive payment."

5. 9 Ad. & El. 275=1 P & D 207=1 W W & H 724=8 L J Q B 31.

This error has crept into the learned Judge's remarks on S. 82 where "payment in due course" occurs in Cl. (c). It may also be added that this section deals generally with discharge of parties and not discharge of the instrument which is dealt with in S. 60.

The learned Judge then refers to a remark of Lord Esher in Glasscock v. Balls (3). The case itself was not a case of payment or discharge of a note by the maker and endorsement of it afterwards by the payee but of a person who held both a promissory note and mortgage transferring the mortgage to one person and endorsing the note to another—the plaintiff. The defendant, the maker, had paid nothing but was sued on the note by the plaintiff, the mortgage being outstanding with the transferee. The defendant was obviously not entitled to plead the doctrine of discharge—because he had not discharged the note. But that was the argument on his behalf. The Court of appeal rejected it. Discharge being thus out of the case, was there anything to show that the note was overdue before endorsement so as to fix the plaintiff with the real nature of the promissory note, that it could not be negotiated after realizing what was due by transferring the mortgage? As to this Lord Esher said that the plaintiff cannot be said to have taken the note when overdue because it was not shown that payment was ever applied for. It was to these facts that Lord Esher's remark applies that:

"if a negotiable instrument remains current even though it has been paid there is nothing to prevent a person, to whom it has been indorsed for value without knowledge that it has been paid, from suing."

That case and the remark quoted are no authority for the purpose for which Seshagiri Iyer, J., used them, that even after a note is discharged at or after maturity by the maker it remains negotiable in the payee's hands and that an endorsee for value without notice can sue on it. On the question of discharge terminating the negotiability of a note and therewith the right of a subsequent endorsee with or without knowledge, the decision in Van Ingen v. Dhunna Lall (6), is directly in point. Of the three notes sued on by the plaintiff (endorsee) in that case it was held that one (Ex. B) had been discharged by payment by the purchaser of defendants' business on his behalf. It was also found that the payee of the note (Alfred Arathoon) who was also a partner of the firm which purchased defendants' business retained the note B in his hands after it was discharged and subsequently endorsed it with Exs. A and C to the plaintiff. In those circumstances it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the amount the amount of Ex. B from defendant:

"The obligation arising out of it was thereby extinguished and Alfred Arathoon had no power by re-endorsing it to bring into existence again the liability of the defendant: Bartrum v. Caddy (5). His re-issue of the note was a fraud."

But I observe that the learned Judge in Muthu Reddi v. Velu Asari (1), to whom this case was cited, failed to note that in this respect the decision was directly against his own. The other case cited for the respondent Ramathan Chettiar v. Gunbu Ayyar (2) was not a case of discharge and therefore is no authority on the point before me. All that appears is an incidental reference to the remark of Lord Esher already referred to in Glasscock v. Balls (3). The case itself is irrelevant to this:

"Payment and other discharges are sometimes spoken of as equities attaching to a bill, but this seems incorrect; they are grounds of nullity. That which purports to be a bill is no longer such; it is mere waste paper: Chalmers, pp. 141 and 142."

On the facts on which the District Munsif has decided against the defendant, the decision was clearly against law. Ankamma, the holder was against his wishes kept out of possession of the note by his wife and nephew and undoubtedly with the intention of discharging the note got the defendant to give him another in substitution. The defendant gave Ankamma another note for the principal and interest till then due on the old note. Ankamma endorsed the new note to another to whom full payment was made by defendant. Long after all this Ankamma having died meanwhile, the widow who undoubtedly knew all that had happened about her husband's having discharged the first note endorsed that note which as above stated was "waste paper" to the plaintiff. There can be no question after all this whether there had been any demand on the first note; in other words whether it was overdue, for without it, it could not have been discharged by substitution. If anything depended on defects of title as affecting the plaintiff's endorsement, there can be no doubt that as the note was certainly overdue, the plaintiff will get no better title than the widow and will not be entitled to a decree. But the true view is not that this is a case of an overdue note endorsed with all defects of title but of an endorsement of a piece of waste paper which could give no right at all.

The only other point left is whether the plaintiff can succeed on the ground that he is an innocent person against whom a fraud by the widow has been facilitated by the default or neglect of the defendant in leaving the old note with the payee and that the defendant must bear the loss so falling on the plaintiff. This was not the ground on which the Munsif gave the plaintiff a decree. This new ground raises really new questions of fact on some of which at least the Munsif's opinion would have been valuable. The defendant was not negligent in not getting back the old note because it was then not with Ankamma but with his wife who was illegally detaining it. Whatever may be said, to which I will presently come, if Ankamma being left with the note had himself fraudulently endorsed it to plaintiff, no such blame attaches to defendant in the circumstances. Though the Munsif thinks that there was no offence in Seshamma's detention of the note, I am by no means sure that her keeping it against Ankamma's wishes with the intention of appropriating it was not technically dishonest and if so her offence however technical was criminal misappropriation. She could not in that view pass a better title to the plaintiff than her own. Even if she was not an offender she was at least a wrong doer.

I am not aware of the doctrine now invoked being used against a defendant in such circumstances. The defendant in no manner facilitated the fraud by the widow, because from the first her possession was against the wishes of Ankamma and of the defendant after he became entitled to get the note. Ankamma's wife was first guilty of conversion of the note against her husband, then against the defendant and finally guilty of deceit by passing it off on the plaintiff. The proximate or real cause of the fraud played on the plaintiff was not any negligence on the part of the defendant or Ankamma but the wrongful act of the wife which neither of them could reasonably prevent. If A pledged his watch with me and then pays his debt to me but, before I can return the pledge to A, if I lose it or someone steals it and the finder or the thief, pledges it as his own, has A or have I facilitated a fraud? I think not. But certain passages in Muthu Reddi v. Velu Asari (1) are relied on where the learned Judge relies on the observations of Collins, L. J., in Nash v. De Freville (7). The facts to which those observations were appropriate are quite different from those in this case and in Muthu Reddi v. Velu Asari (1). The defendant had borrowed from a Solicitor Peed on three promissory notes and some time later received more advances and executed two consolidated notes for the whole sum. All the five notes including the first set of three notes which were satisfied by substitution were left with Peed on the understanding that they were not to be negotiated. But Peed endorsed them for value to the plaintiff who was ignorant of the understanding.

After some months, i. e. when Peed was no longer in possession of the notes the defendant paid off the whole debt to him but failed to get back the notes. After some more months on plaintiff's demand of payment Peed gave him a cheque on a bank where he had no credit and plaintiff returned the notes which Peed immediately sent to the defendant who took them in good faith and put them into the fire. The cheque was dishonoured; and Peed absconded and was afterwards adjudicated bankrupt. The plaintiff sued the defendant for conversion of the notes which were obtained from him by the fraud of Peed. The real question on which the decision turned as stated by A. L. Smith, L. J., was whether the defendant when he got back the notes from Peed got a better title than Peed had. If he did he would succeed; if otherwise, the plaintiff. From the judgments delivered especially by Collins, L. J., it is clear that the principle of Lickbarrow v. Mason (8), that of two innocent persons one of whom must suffer by the fraud of a third, he must sustain the loss who has enabled the third person to occasion it) was called in aid not with reference to Peed's obtaining back the notes from plaintiff by means of the worthless cheque but with reference to his earlier act in negotiating the notes in violation of the agreement between him and the defendant: see p. 83. The essence of this was that the defendant put the solicitor in possession of instruments in their form negotiable though with a promise not to negotiate them and so put it in his power to negotiate them:

7. (1900) 2 Q. B. 72=69 L. J. Q. B. 484=82 L. T. 642=48 W. R. 434=16 T. L. R. 268.

8. 1 R. R. 425=2 Term Rep. 63=1 H. B. L. 357=6 East 21.

"When these notes were negotiated by Peed they were still current and the defendant was estopped as against the plaintiff from setting up any fact which would have defeated Peed's right to negotiate them; for instance the fact that Peed was under a duty to the defendant to return them and not to negotiate them:" p. 85.

The estoppel had nothing to do with defendant's leaving the notes with Peed after payment. For in fact Peed had not got them then, though defendant was ignorant of this, and only got them some months later by a trick played on plaintiffs to which the defendant did not contribute by any act or omission of his. This is further brought out in the latter passages where the learned Judge deals on grounds other than estoppel separately with the first three notes which were satisfied and the two later notes which were unsatisfied. As to the former on the footing that they were overdue or actually paid he says at p. 87:

"These pieces of paper therefore between the defendant and Peed having lost their negotiable quality are denuded of that element which alone makes it possible for a transferee to get a better title than his transferor."

On the whole it seems to me that this case is not an authority for what it is relied upon in Muthu Reddi v. Velu Asari (1) i. e., that after discharge by satisfaction at or after maturity of a promissory note, by the maker, an estoppel against him arises by the mere fact that "the piece of paper" or "waste paper" which once had but has lost its negotiable quality is left with the payee and he passes it off on others as if it were still a negotiable instrument. The case is of course different if the payment or satisfaction takes place before maturity, when the instrument is current; in the case of a promissory-note payable on demand before demand. The principles of this branch of estoppel are summarized in Hals., Vol. 13, p. 398 to 402, and there is a useful summary of the cases in note (t). The decree of the lower Court is set aside and the suit dismissed with costs of defendant 1 in both Courts.

P.R.S./K.S.

Decree set aside.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 305

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.
Lakshmindra Tirta Swamiyar — Appellant.

v.

President, Board of Commissioners, Hindu Religious Endowments, Madras and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 420 of 1930, Decided on 25th October 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, South Kanara, D/- 28th July 1930.

(a) Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (1925), S. 70 — Order in proceedings under the section is open to appeal — Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47.

The effect of S. 70 of the Act is not merely to prescribe the mode of execution so as to make only provisions relating to methods of procedure applicable. The words "as if a decree had been passed" attract to the order in proceedings under S. 70 the whole procedure in execution and consequently a right of appeal under S. 47, Civil P. C.: 14 M L J 433; 31 Mad 24; A I R 1929 Lah 228 and A I R 1922 Bom 377, Ref.; A I R 1913 All 419, Dist. [P 306 C 1, 2]

(b) Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act (1925), S. 70—Notice served on managing or executive trustee is sufficient.

Section 70 refers to the "trustee" as the person on whom notice is to be served. The trustee mentioned in the section means the person who represents that institution. Hence where by usage one of several trustees acts as the managing or executive trustee, notice served on such trustee must be deemed to be a proper notice as against the institution. [P 306 C 2]

B. Sitarama Rao—for Appellant.

P. Venkataramana Rao, T. Kumaraswamiah, M. Lakshman Nayak, M. R. Venkata Raman and S. V. B. Rao — for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—Mr. Venkataramana Rao has raised an objection in limine that the appeal is incompetent. The material words of S. 70, Hindu Religious Endowments Act, are:

"The Court shall, on the application of the President of the Board or Committee, recover the amount as if a decree had been passed for the amount by the Court against the religious endowment concerned."

Mr. Venkataramana Rao contends that the effect of the section is merely to prescribe the mode of execution and that only such provisions as relate to the method of procedure become by force of this section applicable. We see no reason for adopting this very narrow construction. When the duty to execute an order of an outside body is entrusted to a judicial tribunal, it is difficult to conceive that its function is merely to perform an executive act; and when the words employed are wide enough to include the exercise of his judicial powers, there is less reason to hold that the Court does not possess them. In construing similar words occurring in S. 40, Revenue Recovery Act, 1864 "as if the purchased lands had been decreed to the purchaser," a Bench of this Court held that the intention of the legislature was to place the purchaser in the position of a decree-holder and that he is therefore entitled to such remedies as are open to decree-holders in execution proceedings. Gnana Sambanda Pandara Sannadhi v. David Nadar (1). The learned Judges in that case followed a previous decision to the same effect in the unreported case, A. A. A. O. No. 27 of 1889. Sambasiva Mudaliar v. Panchanada Pillai (2) approves of the decision in Gnana Sambanda v. David Nadar (1), although the actual decision in the case relates to a different point. This view has the support also of E. D. Sasoon & Co. v. Shivji Ram, A. I. R. 1929 Lahore 238 and Krishnaji Shridhar v. Mahadeo Sekharam (3). In Mathura Prasad v. Sheobalak Ram (4) the question arose under the Co-operative Societies Act, and Mr. Venkataramana Rao relies upon it as supporting his contention. It is sufficient to observe for the present that we cannot regard it as direct authority on the question raised.

It is next contended that it must be shown that an order made in execution falls within S. 47, Civil P. C., before an appeal can lie from it and that the section by its very terms excludes orders made in a proceeding of this kind. It would be contrary to the spirit of the provision conferring on the civil Court the power to execute to construe the word "suit" in S. 47 in its literal and strict sense. We must hold that the words in S. 70, Religious Endowments Act, "as if a decree had been passed" attract to the order the whole procedure in execution and the right of appeal provided under S. 47, Civil P. C. The preliminary objection is therefore overruled.

As regards the appeal itself, Mr. Sitarama Rao contends that the order of the Religious Endowments Board can operate as a decree only if the statutory conditions are satisfied, and urges that in this case the requirement of the section regarding the service of the notice has not been fulfilled. In the case of this institution, it is alleged that there are eight trustees (heads of eight mutts) and that each of them by rotation acts for a period of two years. The notice under S. 70 was served upon the active or executive trustee then in office, and Mr. Sitarama Rao maintains that, as it was not served upon the whole body of trustees, the order sought to be executed has not acquired the force of a decree. No doubt S. 70 refers to "the trustee" as the person on whom notice is to be served; but the true intention is not that the trustee should be served, but the institution, of which he is the trustee. The funds that are liable under the section are the funds of the institution, and what is intended is that no proceedings should be taken against it before a proper notice is served on it. The trustee is mentioned in that section as the person who represents that institution. The question in each case therefore is, has the institution been properly served or not? When by usage one of the several trustees acts as the managing or executive trustee the notice, served on such trustee must be deemed to be a proper notice as against the institution. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs of respondent 1.

Reilly, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal dismissed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 306

REILLY AND CORNISH, JJ.

(Kottamasu) Venkataratnam — Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Polisetty Butchayya and others — Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 293 of 1929, Decided on 1st November 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Guntur, in O. S. No. 113 of 1927.

(a) Stamp Act (1899), S. 2 (22)—Definition of promissory note under—Promise to pay to some person or persons to their order or to

1. (1904) 14 M L J 433.

2. (1908) 31 Mad 24=17 M L J 441=3 M L T 19.

3. A I R 1922 Bom 377=64 I C 337=46 Bom 128.

4. A I R 1918 All 419=42 I C 968=40 All 89.

bearer is essential—Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 4.

Though for purposes of Stamp Act "promissory note" includes more than what the expression does under Negotiable Instruments Act, it does not do away with, or in any way affect, one essential characteristic of a promissory note that it must contain a promise to pay to some person or persons or to their order or to the bearer of the note. [P 307 C 2]

A promise to pay a certain amount in one event to the payee, or in the other event to deposit the money in Court does not make the document in which it is contained a promissory note either under the Negotiable Instruments or Stamp Act. [P 308 C 1, 2]

 (b) Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 4—Promissory note—Test for determining whether document is promissory note indicated—Stamp Act (1899), S. 2 (22).

Per Cornish, J.—In deciding whether the document is a promissory note the question is what is the dominant, the substantial effect of the instrument. And in the determination of the question, two tests are applicable: (1) was it the intention of the parties that the instrument should be a promissory note; and (2) is the document a promissory note in the common acceptance of the term by business men? A mere promise to pay is not sufficient to make the document a promissory note, if it appears from the context that the document was not intended to operate as a promissory note: Mortgage Insurance Corporation v. Commissioner of Inland Revenue, (1888) 20 Q B D 645, Rel on.

[P 308 C 2; P 309 C 1]

Ch. Raghava Rao and M. Sriramamurthy—for Appellant.

P. Satyanarayana Rao, V. Subramaniam, V. Satyanarayana and B. Somayya—for Respondents.

Reilly, J.—The learned Subordinate Judge has not thought it necessary to try this suit in full. He dismissed it as a result of his finding on issue 5, which he took up as a preliminary issue. That issue is: "Whether the suit document is a promissory note under the Stamp Act as contended by defendants 3 and 4 and is inadmissible in evidence." The learned Subordinate Judge has found that the document is a promissory note, and, as it has not been stamped, he has found it inadmissible in evidence. He has therefore dismissed the suit. Plaintiff 2 has appealed, contending that the document on which the plaintiff sued is not a promissory note. The crucial part of the document appears to me to be contained in two sentences:

"We shall pay to you the said sum together with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from this date as soon as you settled the High Court affair. If it shall be ordered by the Court that the aforesaid amount should be deposited in Court, we shall deposit only the said amount in Court and pay to you the amount of interest accruing thereon till that date."

I do not think it can be reasonably contended that a document so framed is a promissory note within S. 4, Negotiable Instruments Act. It is clear that it does not contain an unconditional promise to pay the amount in question to the payees or to their order or to the bearer of the document. The promise is to pay the amount to the payee unless the Court directs that the amount shall be deposited in Court. But it is contended for the defendants that for the purpose of the Stamp Act "promissory note" includes more than that expression does as defined in the Negotiable Instruments Act. That is so. S. 2 (22), Stamp Act, runs:

"'Promissory note' means a promissory note as defined by the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881; it also includes a note promising the payment of any sum of money out of any particular fund, which may or may not be available, or upon any condition or contingency which may or may not be performed or happen."

It is contended for the defendants that this document in question though not a promissory note under the Negotiable Instruments Act, is a promissory note as the meaning of that term has been extended by S. 2 (22), Stamp Act, because the executants promise to pay the amount to the payees upon a contingency which may or may not happen. But if we examine the language of the document carefully, I think it becomes clear that they promised to pay the amount to the payee, not if something happened or did not happen but to pay to them unless something happened, unless the Court directed that the amount be deposited in Court. Grammatically I do not think that this document, properly interpreted, comes within the extended definition of "promissory note" as given in the Stamp Act. But there is something more than mere grammar in the matter, as Mr. Raghava Rao has urged. S. 2 (22), Stamp Act, extends the definition of "promissory note" as given in the Negotiable Instruments Act, in the ways I have mentioned when quoting the subsection in full. But it does not do away with, or in any way affect, one essential characteristic of a promissory note that it must contain a promise to pay to some person or persons or to their order or to the bearer of the note. Here, quite apart from any question of a contingency happening or not happening, the promise is to pay in one event to the payees, in the other event to deposit the money in Court.

Mr. Lakshmanan for the defendants has contended that in the circumstances payment into Court to the credit of a particular suit, as is provided in one event in this document, would be the same thing as payment to the payee, because the payees were judgment-debtors, who were under liability in certain circumstances to pay the amount to the credit of a suit, in which a decree had been made against them. In effect his argument is that in one event the executants had promised to pay the amount to the payees; in the other event to pay it into Court to the credit of a suit on their behalf, because it was money which in that event they would be liable to pay. It is quite true that the principal money concerned in this suit was on the pleadings money drawn by the plaintiffs from Court on security being given that they would, if they lost a certain case in the High Court, pay it back into Court; and in that sense, if in the one event the executants of the documents in question here had to deposit the amount in Court, they would be paying it into Court on behalf of the plaintiffs (judgment-debtors). But it would be a very extraordinary and to my mind unpermissible extension of the definition of a promissory note in S. 4, Negotiable Instruments Act, to say that it is the same thing for the purpose of that definition to promise to pay an amount to a person or to his order and to promise to pay that amount on his behalf to some third person on the order of that third person, though it may be equally advantageous to the payee if either course is adopted. To pay money to a third party on behalf of the payee but on the third party's order cannot be treated as the same thing as, or equivalent to, payment to the payee or to his order, which is the promise necessary in any note not payable to the bearer or to the payee only in order to bring it within the definition in S. 4, Negotiable Instruments Act. That element of a promissory note has not been extended or altered in any way by the extended definition of a promissory note given in S. 2 (22), Stamp Act. In my opinion this document with which we are concerned is not a promissory note either within the meaning of the Negotiable Instruments Act or within the meaning of the Stamp Act. For these reasons, apart from other consideration in my opinion the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong.

I may mention that the learned Subordinate Judge thought that S. 13 (2), Negotiable Instruments Act, might be applicable to this case treating the document as one containing a promise to pay to alternative payees. But it is unnecessary to discuss that aspect of the matter beyond saying that his opinion is clearly wrong and that it has not been contended by Mr. Lakshmanan that that section is really applicable to this case. In my opinion therefore the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge should be set aside and the suit should be remanded to him for fresh trial, the court-fee paid by the appellant being refunded to him. Costs of this appeal should abide and follow the result.

Cornish, J.—I agree. In deciding whether the document is a promissory note, the question, as observed by Pollock, B., in Mortgage Insurance Corporation v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue (1), is what is the dominant, the substantial, effect of the instrument. And in the determination of the question, two tests are applicable: (1) was it the intention of the parties that the instrument should be a promissory note; and (2) is the document a promissory note in the common acceptance of the term by businessmen? Taking first the second of these tests, I find it difficult to believe that the suit document would be regarded by businessmen as a promissory note. It is addressed to the plaintiffs and purports to be written by two of the defendants, and to be signed by all three defendants. It is in these terms:

"A sum of Rs. 17,000 has been in civil Court deposited to your credit to the account of O. S. No. 31 of 1921 on the file of the Additional Sub-Court. Today I have withdrawn that amount on furnishing security of our own property. We shall repay to you the said sum together with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from this date as soon as you settle the High Court affairs. If it shall be ordered by the Court that the aforesaid amount should be deposited in Court, we shall deposit only the said amount in Court and pay to you the amount of interest accruing thereon till that date."

1. (1888) 20 Q B D 645.

It is true that the document contains a statement that the defendants would repay the money. But a mere promise to pay is not sufficient to make the document a promissory note, if it appears from the context that the document was not intended to operate as a promissory note. In my opinion, the fair interpretation of the suit document is that it was intended to be a memorandum or recital of an agreement whereby the defendants were to repay the money withdrawn from Court to the plaintiff if he succeeded in his appeal, or to the Court if the Court so directed. I also think that the document fails when tried by the first test. It was neither the plaintiff's case nor the defendant's case on the pleadings that a promissory note was executed. The plaintiff's allegation was that the document in question was an acceptance by the defendants of an offer made by the plaintiff for use of money drawn from Court on which the defendants were to pay him interest. The defendants on their part deny the genuineness of the document, and they deny that they withdrew the money on loan from the plaintiff. Their case was that there was an agreement between the parties that the moneys withdrawn from Court should be lent by defendants for the mutual benefit of both parties. When therefore it was nobody's case that a promissory note was intended to be executed, and when the document itself did not clearly reveal any such intention, I think the lower Court was not justified in holding that the document was a promissory note.

P.R S./K.S.

Suit remanded.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 309

VENKATASUBBA RAO AND REILLY, JJ.

Annadana Jadaya Goundar—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Konammal and another—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Appeal No. 294 of 1930, Decided on 12th October 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, South Arcot, D/- 27th January 1930.

* (a) Principal and Surety—Surety bond for allowing execution of decree pending appeal—Consent decree passed in appeal—Surety is not discharged if consent decree is not outside scope of surety bond—Contract Act (1872), S. 135—Civil P.C. (1908), S. 145

Where a surety bond is executed for allowing execution of a decree pending an appeal from such decree, there is no ground for limiting the liability of the surety only to a decree passed after contest. His liability continues even if a consent decree is passed provided the consent order is not excluded by or is not outside the scope of the surety bond. Whether a compromise as such is or is not excluded by the terms of a surety bond, is a question of fact in each case: A I R 1920 Mad 355, Foll.; A I R 1931 Bom 55 and A I R 1932 Cal 558, Ref.; Tatum v. Evans, (1885) 54 L T 336, Held Dist.

[P 310 C 1, 2]

(b) Contract Act (1872), S. 135—Agreement to discharge principal debtor with reservation of right against surety does not discharge surety,

An agreement to discharge the principal debtor with a reservation of right against the surety operates as a covenant not to sue between the creditor and debtor and does not release the surety: A I R 1923 Mad 340 and A I R 1920 Mad 216, Ref.

[P 311 C 1, 2]

(c) Contract Act (1872), S. 135—Contract by creditor giving time to principal debtor for payment discharges surety—Principal and surety.

A surety bond was executed for allowing execution of the decree pending appeal. The appeal was compromised by which time was given to the principal debtor to pay the amount due by him. The surety was not a party to the compromise.

Held: that the surety was discharged: A I R 1930 Bom 122; A I R 1927 Cal 239 and 120 I C 552, Rel. on.

[P 312 C 1]

K. V. Sesha Ayyangar—for Appellant.

C. S. Venkatachariar—for Respondents.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—This is an appeal against the order refusing to make the surety, the respondent (Anganna Reddi) liable in execution. The facts may be briefly stated. A lady by name Konammal obtained a decree against one Annadana Jadaya Goundar for possession of a jagir, and an appeal was preferred by the latter to the High Court. Konammal was allowed to execute the decree pending the appeal on her furnishing security. A security bond was thereupon executed by four sureties, including the respondent, Anganna Reddi. The material portion of that bond runs thus:

"We hereby undertake that plaintiff 1 (Konammal) will restore the jagir which she had taken delivery of in execution, that she will act according to the decree of the appellate Court, that she will pay whatever amount she is liable to pay in accordance with the appellate decree in connexion with the said jagir, that if she commits default in so paying, the amount that she is liable to pay may be realized from the properties hereby given as security."

In the appeal Goundar succeeded and got back from Konammal the jagir in question by way of restitution. Then he applied also by way of restitution for payment of mesne profits. But without any inquiry by the Court, Goundar and Konammal entered into a private arrangement as to the claim to the mesne profits. To this proceeding the surety Anganna Reddi was not a party. The amount claimed in respect of mesne profits was Rs. 33,000, but by the arrangement the profits were fixed at Rs. 20,000 and it was agreed that Goundar should receive towards this amount Rs. 9,000 odd standing to the credit of Konammal in Court and that the balance Rs. 10,000 odd should be paid by Konammal within a period of two months. In default (then follow the important words) Goundar should take execution proceedings against the immoveable properties which were offered as security by the sureties. The agreement then goes on to say:

"All reliefs which the petitioner prays for in this petition have been settled by the aforesaid arrangement."

An order was made by the Court on 10th September 1926 embodying this compromise. It is alleged by Goundar that towards the amount due under the order, namely, Rs. 10,000 odd, one of the sureties subsequently paid Rs. 5,000, and he now claims in execution the balance of Rs. 5,000 odd against Anganna Reddi, the respondent. It is not disputed, though the instrument is not happily worded in this respect, that the claim to mesne profits by way of restitution is covered by its terms. Anganna Reddi contends that the claim made by Goundar in respect of mesne profits was an extravagant one and that the compromise and the order based thereon were collusive and fraudulent. Whether it is open to Anganna Reddi to raise this plea in these proceedings, is a question which does not arise in the view I have taken.

Three points have been urged by Anganna Reddi, the surety who contends that his liability under the surety bond has become extinguished. First, he says that the order made, not being after contest but by consent, he is not bound by it. There is no force in this contention. The true test is whether a consent order is excluded by, or is outside the scope of, the surety bond. As held in Appunni Nair v. Isack Mackadan (1), in the absence of any special stipulation in that behalf there is no ground for limiting the liability only to a decree passed after contest. The same case points out that, if there has been collusion between the plaintiff and defendant in obtaining the decree, the surety is not without remedy. The same view was taken in Ahmed Karim v. Maruthi Ranji (2). The learned Judges observe, whether a compromise as such is or is not excluded by the terms of a surety bond, is a question of fact in each case. As a compromise was not in terms excluded from the surety bond, they held that the surety was bound by the compromise, although it had been entered into without his knowledge. In this Bombay case Appunni Nair v. Isack Mackadan (1), was approved and followed. The view receives support also from Jia Bai v. Johar Mull Bothra (3). In that case Rankin, C. J., considers at length Tatum v. Evans (4), a decision cited for the contrary position, and points out how it is clearly distinguishable. The agreement there was the result of an elaborate arrangement embracing a great many different matters, and it would be impossible to hold that the surety, when he entered into the bond bound himself in the expectation that such an arrangement would be made. In other words, the question in each case is, would the terms of the bond reasonably warrant that the arrangement come to by consent was or was not within the contemplation of the parties? Some cases where a different view has been taken have been cited to us, and I do not think it necessary to refer to them. This contention of Mr. Venkatachari, the surety's counsel, must be overruled.

1. A I R 1920 Mad 355=53 I C 367=43 Mad 272.

Secondly, it is argued for the surety that under the consent order the principal debtor having been discharged, his own obligation has become extinguished. Under the order quoted above, on Konammal failing to pay the balance of Rs. 10,000 odd in two months, the creditor's remedy is confined to proceeding against the surety: in other words the creditor has abandoned his remedy against the principal debtor. It is on the strength of this clause that the contention has been put forward that the surety's liability has become extinguished. But Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, the learned counsel for Goundar, urges that there is a well-recognized exception to the rule that the surety is released when the principal debtor is discharged and that on the facts of this case it is the exception and not the rule that applies. This argument is clearly well founded. The rule of law that the discharge of the principal debtor necessarily carries with it the release of the surety is founded on this principle: it would be a fraud on the principal debtor, for the creditor to release him from liability, if the latter were then able to proceed against the surety, who in his turn might sue the principal debtor and thus render the alleged release nugatory: 15 Hals. S. 1056. see also Sami Iyer v. Ramaswami Chettiar (5), at the bottom of p. 177. But if the deed releasing the principal debtor itself contains a reservation of remedies against the surety, the release is reduced to a mere covenant not to sue: see 15 Hals. same section. The rule as well as the exception are very clearly stated in the following passage in Rowlatt on Principal and Surety, Edn. 2, p. 260:

2. A I R 1931 Bom 55=128 I C 903=55 Bom 97.

3. A I R 1932 Cal 858=139 I C 815=59 Cal 1450.

4. (1885) 54 L T 336.

"The doctrine under which a surety is discharged by an arrangement on the part of the creditor either not to sue, or to give time to the principal debtor, resting as it does upon the principle that otherwise a fraud would be committed upon the principal, does not apply if it is made a condition of the agreement that the rights of the creditor to sue or receive the money from the surety are reserved; for in that case the principal takes the indulgence upon the footing that he must continue exposed to a claim at the instance of the surety, and the arrangement becomes one the observance of which does not involve the suspension of any right of the surety. The surety is therefore not discharged."

The principle is this: if a creditor agrees to discharge the principal debtor, it would be a breach of the agreement so entered into, for the creditor to pursue his remedy against the surety, for the latter would in his turn enforce his remedy against the principal debtor and thus the creditor's agreement to discharge would be rendered inoperative; but if the very agreement to discharge the principal debtor contains a reservation of rights against the surety, the agreement cannot operate as an absolute release, for the obvious reason that the principal debtor has notice that the creditor's remedies against the surety are preserved and that the latter's right of recourse against him is not extinguished. The following passage from White and Tudor expresses this idea very clearly and concisely:

"A release, with a reservation of rights against the sureties, operates as a covenant not to sue between the creditor and the debtor and does not release the sureties. And language importing an absolute release may be construed as a covenant not to sue the principal debtor, when that intention appears, leaving the debtor open to any claim of relief at the instance of his sureties: White & Tudor's Leading Cases in Equity, Vol. 2, p. 554":

see also Murugappa Mudali v. Munuswami Mudali (6), and the note to S. 135, Contract Act, in Pollock and Mulla's commentaries.

In this case there is such contract for a reserve against the surety, and it is the exception and not the rule that applies. I cannot therefore accept Mr. Venkatachari's contention that the surety's liability became extinguished on this ground. But the third contention of Mr. Venkatachari, the one accepted by the lower Court, must prevail. By the terms of the order passed on the arrangement come to by consent, Konammal was given two months' time for the payment of the balance of the amount declared to be due. For the surety it is contended that this giving of time has had the effect of discharging him. Can this compromise be regarded as having been within the contemplation of the surety when he executed the security bond? He agreed under it to pay whatever amount might be found due; that is to say, the payment became due on the date it was in due course ascertained. It was held in Mahomed Ali v. Lakshmi Bai (7) that a compromise providing for the payment of the decretal amount by instalments had the effect of discharging the surety, the test laid down being, is the compromise consistent with the obligations which the surety had undertaken to discharge? Kemp, A. C. J., observes:

"His (surety's) rights against the debtor are prejudiced by this compromise, and, I think, it can fairly be said that such a compromise was not one which was contemplated by him when he entered into the suretyship."

There are observations in the judgment of Kemp, Ag. C. J., to the effect that the very fact that the decree was one passed on consent had the effect of releasing

6. A I R 1920 Mad 216=54 I C 758.

7. A I R 1930 Bom 122=124 I C 227=54 Bom 118.

the surety. I have already said that I take a different view on this point, but I agree that if an arrangement provides for postponed payment or for the amount being paid by instalments, the surety is discharged from his obligation: Abdul Gaffoor v. Mennatal, A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 23-9, and Kunjilal v. Batak Prasad (8), support this view. The observations of Rankin, C. J., in Jia Bai v. Johar Mull (3) already cited are obiter. In an old English case, Bowsfield v. Tower (9), heard by four Judges, the headnote runs thus:

"If a plaintiff accepts from the principal defendant a cognovit, whereby he gives him time for payment by instalments, he thereby discharges the bail, unless they are parties to the arrangement."

Gibbs, J., observes:

"I was the counsel in the cause in the Court of King's Bench in which it lately was ruled that by giving a cognovit payable by instalments the bails were discharged, by analogy to the cases where a creditor, by giving time to the principal, discharges the surety."

The principle that a contract by a creditor to give time to the principal debtor discharges the surety is well recognized. The reason of the rule is this: the surety is entitled at any time to require the creditor to call upon the principal debtor to pay off the debt or himself pay off the debt and when he has paid it off he is at once entitled to sue the principal debtor; and if the creditor has bound himself to give time to the principal debtor, the surety cannot do either the one or the other of these things until the time so given has elapsed: see Rouse v. Bradford Banking Co. (10), and White and Tudor's Leading Cases in Equity, Vol. 2, p. 539.

Mr. Sesha Ayyangar argues that in this case also the rule does not apply, as there is a contract for reserve against the surety. The question is: Is there any reservation of rights as contended? If the arrangement, which said that Konammal was given two months' time, had also provided that Goundar could proceed against the surety in the meantime, there would then have been a reservation and Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's contention would have been right. But the consent order, far from containing any such reservation, says in terms that only in the event of Konammal failing to pay within the two months, the surety could be proceeded against. The facts of the present case bring it within the rule as to the giving of time and not the exception relating to the reservation of rights. I must uphold therefore the third contention of the surety, and, agreeing with the lower Court, hold that he is not liable. In the result the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Reilly, J.—I agree that we must uphold the learned District Judge's order for the reasons given by him, that by the consent order made between plaintiff 1, Konammal, and defendant 1 on 10th September 1926 time was given to Konammal to pay the balance of the Rs. 20,000 fixed for mesne profits and that therefore the surety was discharged. The learned District Judge has said that this is so under S. 135, Contract Act. Mr. Sesha Ayyangar is right in contending that S. 135, Contract Act, does not apply to this case. This is not a case to which the provisions of the Contract Act directly apply. But Ss. 133, 134 and 135, Contract Act, and some of the following sections embody equitable principles which have long been established in England, and I have no doubt that a surety can claim the protection of these principles in such proceedings as those. So long ago as 1795 in Rees v. Borrington (11) a creditor gave time to the principal debtors, and, when they did not pay in the time so given, instituted an action against the surety: the surety preferred a bill in the Court of Chancery praying for an injunction that the action should be stayed, and Lord Loughborough, L. C., held that he was clearly entitled to such an injunction on the ground that his rights had been interfered with behind his back by granting time to the principal debtors. That principle—that the granting of time without the consent of the surety to his principal discharges the surety in such a case—has been reiterated very many times. But, as Mr. Sesha Ayyangar pointed out, there is one exception to it. If, though time is granted by the creditor to the principal debtor by agreement with him, nevertheless under that agreement the creditor's right to proceed at once against the surety is reserved, then, as pointed out by Page Wood V. C. in Webb v. Hewitt (12), the surety is not discharged,

8. (1929) 120 I C 552.

9. 4 Taunton 454.

10. (1894) 2 Ch D 75.

11. (1795) 2 Ves 543.

12. (1857) 3 K & J 438.

the reason being obviously that the creditor may proceed at once against the surety and the surety in his turn may proceed at once against the principal debtor. Mr. Sesha Ayyangar suggests that this is such a case.

In the consent order made on 10th September 1926 it is provided that the balance of Rs. 10,000 shall be paid to the petitioner, i. e., defendant 1 by Konammal within a period of two months: in default the petitioner shall take execution proceedings against the immovable property charged as security. Mr. Sesha Ayyangar urges that we should interpret that as meaning that, although defendant 1 was not to proceed against the principal debtor, Konammal, for two months, his right to proceed against the surety at once was reserved. In my opinion it is impossible to interpret the order in that way. The order gives two months' time to Konammal and provides, not that defendant 1 may at once proceed against the security, but that he may proceed against the security in default of payment by Konammal within those two months. It is clear therefore I think that the right of the creditor to proceed at once against the security or the surety in spite of time being given to the principal debtor was not reserved in this case, and the exception to the rule in regard to granting time to the principal debtor does not apply here.

Mr. Sesha Ayyangar however contends that in this case there was no extension of time, there was really no giving of time at all to Konammal. It is quite true that we have not in this case a definite time fixed by contract which was afterwards extended. But does that take this case out of the rule about the giving of time? What the sureties undertook in this case was to discharge out of the property which they gave as security and, if that was not enough, to discharge personally whatever was eventually decided to be due in connexion with the decree to be made in respect of the jagir, if Konammal failed to pay it. That must mean that they undertook to pay what she might be found liable to pay and to pay it when she was found so liable. I do not think it is possible to attach any other reasonable meaning to their undertaking. In this particular case it was found and settled by the consent order on 10th September 1926 that what she was liable to pay was Rs. 20,000, out of which Rs. 9,900 was to be paid from money which she had deposited in Court. But, instead of her being made liable to pay the balance at once, she was given by the consent order—that is in effect by the creditor, defendant 1—two months' time to pay it. It is impossible I think to suggest seriously, when the matter is fully considered, that the sureties were not injuriously affected by that postponement, by the allowing of two months to Konammal after her liability had been finally fixed, provided that the order meant in effect, as I have no doubt it meant, that the sureties or their property could not be proceeded against for the balance during those two months and they in turn could not proceed against Konammal during those two months. It is obvious that during those two months Konammal would be at liberty to secrete any moveable property or to make away with her property in other manner, if she wished to do so. And there has been an allegation in this case that she did during that time draw Rs. 4,000 from Court and put it away somewhere. That allegation has not been proved; but at any rate it illustrates the way in which the sureties' interests might be very seriously affected by Konammal being given two months' time as she was in this case.

There is one other point taken by Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, to which I may refer. He quoted an Irish case, Provincial Bank v. Cussen (13) as an authority to show that the rule about a surety being discharged when time is given to his principal debtor does not apply when that is done by a judicial act with the consent of the creditor. Now that, if I may say so, is not either fully or accurately the effect of that case. But I do not think it necessary to discuss that case at length because it arose in connexion with bankruptcy proceedings, where obviously very different considerations apply. And moreover the order, which was made on 10th September 1926 in this case, though made with the consent of the creditor, was not in my opinion a "judicial act" in the sense suggested by Mr. Sesha Ayyangar in connexion with this Irish case. There was a compromise between the two parties concerned and on the face of it a perfectly lawful compromise. All that the Court had to do was to accept the compromise and make an order accordingly. There was in no sense an adjudication between the parties. There is really not much meaning in calling that a "judicial act," nor do I think it of any use to try to show that for that reason the order so made was not one to which the principles in regard to the discharge of a surety, which we have been discussing in this case, apply.

That is really sufficient for the disposal of this case, as we uphold the decision of the learned District Judge on this objection of a surety. But, as my learned brother has mentioned, another question has been argued before us at considerable length. Among the objections raised in the surety's counter-statement in the District Court was one to the effect that, as Konammal was released altogether by the consent order of 10th September 1926, the surety was thereby discharged. Oddly enough at first sight, the learned District Judge in enumerating the three points actually pressed before him at the hearing of the case does not mention that objection at all. It was suggested by Mr. Venkatachari for the surety that the learned Judge was mistaken in supposing that the surety did not intend to press that point in the case. Certainly the learned District Judge does not say that the point was given up; but he does not enumerate it among the points pressed before him, and he says nothing whatever about it in his judgment. It was a point for serious discussion, if the surety thought fit to press it, though, as we have found, he could succeed on a narrower point. The words of the consent order have already been quoted in part. On the face of it the order provides that Konammal should pay the balance of Rs. 10,000 within two months and that in default of her so doing defendant 1 should take execution proceedings against the immovable property offered as security by bringing it to sale in pursuance of the charge created over it. But after that there is another sentence, which it is suggested is of considerable importance, namely:

"All reliefs which the petitioner prays for in this petition have been settled by the aforesaid arrangement."

It is urged that, taking those three provisions together, Konammal was entirely released if she did not happen to pay within the two months, and the result of that would be that the surety must have been discharged. Now, it must be noticed that the order contains no explicit release of Konammal. If there is a release, we have to find it by implication. And on the other hand there is an explicit statement that in default of payment by Konammal defendant 1 is to proceed in execution against the property charged as security. In the absence of any explicit release of Konammal and in the face of the definite statement that defendant 1 is to proceed against the property given as security I cannot interpret the provision that "all reliefs which the petition prays for in this petition have been settled by the aforesaid arrangement" as meaning that Konammal was released. On the other hand we have here something even more than a reservation of the right to proceed against the security in spite of the supposed release. Even if the language of the order was clearly in its literal meaning a release of Konammal, nevertheless, if a right to proceed against the charged property or against the surety was reserved, then the surety would not be discharged. Here we have something even more serious against the surety, namely, an explicit statement that defendant 1 is to proceed against the charged property. As my learned brother has pointed out, even if by agreement there is an explicit release of the principal debtor by his creditor, when that is combined with a reservation of the creditor's right to proceed against the surety, that does not discharge the surety. The effect of such an agreement with such a reservation is that the principal debtor agrees that the liability of the surety shall continue with the corollary that the right of the surety to exact his remedy in turn from the principal debtor also continues. There are many authorities for that, such as Kearsley v. Cole (14), Bateson v. Golsing (15) and Cargoe v. Jones (16).

The principle behind both the rule regarding the granting of time to the debtor and the rule regarding the release of the debtor is the same. If by agreement between the creditor and the principal debtor without the surety's consent the surety's right of recourse against the principal debtor is destroyed or impaired or interfered with, then the surety's liability goes and the surety is discharged. But the reservation to the creditor of a right to proceed against the surety in either class of cases prevents the discharge of the surety, as with the reservation the surety's right of recourse against the principal debtor also is preserved. In this case we cannot find, when we examine the matter carefully, that Konammal was released by the consent order of 10th September 1926; and, even if part of the wording of the order had implied that, the provision regarding execution against the security would make the release ineffective. That very probably explains why this particular point was not urged with any persistence before the learned District Judge. But the other point remains, that time was given to Konammal and thereby the surety was discharged. I agree that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

14. (1846) 16 M & W 128=16 L J Ex 115.

15. (1871) 7 C P 9 = 41 L J C P 53 = 25 L T 570=20 W R 98.

16. (1873) 8 Ch 81=42 L J Ex 63=23 L T 36 =21 W R 403.

P.R.S./R.K. Appeal dismissed.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 315

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Karuveepil Ahammad Kutty and others
—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Kottakkat Kuttu—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Misc. Second Appeal No. 123 of 1927, Decided on 18th August 1932, against order of Sub-Judge, South Malabar, D/- 23rd March 1927.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 20, R. 7—Decree—Date.

The date of a decree is not the date on which it is actually drawn up but the date on which judgment is pronounced. [P 318 C 1]

* (b) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 182, Cl. (2)—Partition suit—Preliminary decree and appeal from such decree—Final decree passed pending appeal—Limitation for execution of final decree is from date of final decree and not date of appellate order from preliminary decree.

A preliminary decree was passed in a partition suit. An appeal was filed from such decree. While the appeal was pending the final decree was passed on 30th September 1919. The appellate order from the preliminary decree was delivered on 20th March 1923. Application for execution of final decree was filed on 24th March 1925.

Held: the limitation for execution of the final decree was from the date of the final decree i. e. 30th September 1919 and not from the date of the appellate order from preliminary decree and that the application was barred by time: A I R 1927 Pat 215, Diss from; 33 All 264 (P C), Expl. [P 318 C 1, 2]

* (c) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 182, Cl. (4)—Scope.

A decree which has already become barred by limitation cannot be revived for purposes of execution by a subsequent amendment: A I R 1920 Cal 769 and A I R 1924 Lah 329, Rel on; A I R 1929 Cal 650, not Foll. [P 318 C 2]

K. P. Kesava Menon and K. Kuttikrishna Menon—for Appellants.

P. Govinda Menon—for Respondent.

Judgment.—Defendants 2 and the legal representatives of defendant 9 are the appellants. This civil miscellaneous second appeal arises out of an application for execution made by the decree-holder in O. S. No. 105 of 1914 (Parapanangadi District Munsif's Court) to execute a partition decree. The question for decision is whether the application is barred by limitation or not. The facts are briefly these: In O. S. No. 105 of 1914 the plaintiff-respondent obtained a preliminary decree for partition on 18th April 1918. The decree was confirmed in appeal on 31st March 1919 by the first appellate Court and on 20th March 1923 by the High Court. On 18th April 1918 the plaintiff applied for a final decree and on 30th September 1919 a final judgment was pronounced. As the requisite stamp papers were not supplied in time the final decree was drawn up only on 14th December 1924. As the decree must bear the date on which the judgment was pronounced the decree that was drawn up in 1924 bears the date 30th September 1919. The plaintiff decree-holder put in an execution application E. P. No. 502 of 1924, but that petition was not pressed and was consequently dismissed. The petition out of which the present proceedings arise, E. P. No. 544 of 1925 was filed on 24th March 1925. It will be observed that the present petition as well as the previous one has been put in more than three years after the date of the final decree and the question is whether in the circumstances these petitions are time barred.

It was argued before the District Munsif that the period of three years for executing the decree in this case under Art. 182, Cl. (2), Lim. Act, should be calculated from the date of the High Court's decree and that therefore the petitions are not time barred though they were filed beyond three years from the date of the final decree which is the one now sought to be executed. He did not accept this argument but held that the time for execution began to run from the date of the final decree. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge came to a contrary conclusion and held that the time began to run from the date of the High Court's decree and that therefore, the applications are not time barred. He held that the applications are not time-barred for another reason also. I have already stated that the final decree was passed on 30th September 1919. But on 6th December 1924 it was amended as per order on E. A. No. 1249 of 1924. It was contended before the learned Subordinate Judge that the decree having been amended on 6th December 1924 the decree-holder has got three years' time to execute the decree from the date of the amended decree under Art. 182, Cl. (4), Lim. Act, and that, therefore, the applications are within time. This argument was accepted by the learned Subordinate Judge and on this ground also he held that the applications were not time barred. Another point was also argued before the learned Subordinate Judge and that was that the final decree in this case was drawn up only on 14th December 1924 that till then there was no decree which could have been executed and that the petitioner had therefore three years' time from 14th December 1924.

The decree that was drawn up in 1924 bears the date 30th September 1919. The learned Subordinate Judge did not express any definite opinion upon this point. But as the argument is obviously untenable, it was not pressed before me by the learned counsel for the respondent. And so, the two points arising for determination in this second appeal are: (1) whether the period for the execution of the decree should be calculated from the date of the High Court's decree (i. e. 20th March 1923), or from the date of the final decree (i. e. 30th September 1919); (2) whether time in this case can be calculated under Art. 182, Cl. (4), Lim. Act, from the date of the amended decree. I shall first deal with the question with reference to Art. 182, Cl. (2), Lim. Act. Under this clause the period of the prescribed three years is to be calculated from:

"(where there has been an appeal) the date of final decree or order of the appellate Court or the withdrawal of the appeal."

It is argued for the appellant that since there has been no appeal against the final decree time for execution should be calculated from the date of the final decree which is the decree sought to be executed and not from the date of the High Court's decree passed in appeal against the preliminary decree. On the other hand, the respondent contends that there is nothing in the wording of Cl. (2), Art. 182, to show that the appeal therein referred to is an appeal against the decree sought to be executed and since there has been an appeal in the present case, though not against the final decree, the date of the final disposal of the appeal should be the date from which the period of limitation should be computed. In support of this view it is urged that the appeal against the preliminary decree may imperil the decree sought to be executed and the legislature therefore has deliberately extended the period by fixing the date of the disposal of the appeal as the date for calculating the period of limitation. It is somewhat curious that this question has not arisen for decision in any of the High Courts with reference to the execution of a partition decree. But the question arose in Somar Singh v. Deonandan (1) in connexion with the execution of the final decree in a mortgage suit in which an appeal had been filed against the preliminary decree.

In that case a preliminary decree in a mortgage suit was passed on 23rd August 1921 and there was an appeal against that decree to the High Court. During the pendency of the appeal the mortgagee decree-holder obtained a final decree for sale on 28th October 1922. The appeal to the High Court against the preliminary decree was dismissed on 29th October 1925. The application for execution was made on 2nd February 1926. The judgment-debtor contended that the application was barred by limitation. It was held by the learned Judges that limitation ran from the date of the final disposal of the appeal by the High Court and that therefore the application for execution was within time. This decision is strongly relied on by the learned counsel for the respondent. If the decision correctly lays down the law, there can be no doubt that it may be applied to this case. The fact that the decree in that case was passed in a mortgage suit while the present one was passed in a partition suit does not make any difference with regard to the application of the principle. The appellant's learned counsel argues that this decision does not lay down the correct law.

1. A I R 1927 Pat 215=102 I C 811=6 Pat 780.

The conclusion arrived at by the learned Judges in Somar Singh v. Deonandan (1) is based mainly on two considerations: (1) the wording of the clause and (2) a decision of the Privy Council in Asahfaq Hussain v. Gauri Sahai (2). I shall first consider the Privy Council decision and see whether it supports the principle extracted from it by the learned Judges. To appreciate the decision it is necessary to state the facts of the case. These appear in the head-note as follows :

"A decree for sale on a mortgage was passed against several defendants jointly on 25th August 1900 and made absolute on 21st December 1901. As against one defendant however the decree was ex parte, and it was set aside as against her on appeal on the March 1902. Subsequently, a decree was passed on the merits against this defendant on 15th August 1902, and her appeal was dismissed by the High Court on 16th November 1904 and as against her that decree was made absolute on 27th November 1905. An application for execution was made against all the defendants on 21st December 1905, based on the decrees on 25th August 1902 the 15th August 1902, the 10th November 1904, the 21st December 1901 and the 27th November 1905."

The defendants contended that the decrees of 25th August 1900 and 21st December 1901 were time-barred. Prima facie the application was barred by limitation. But their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the decrees of 25th August 1900 and 16th November 1904 were steps in granting the plaintiff the relief to which he was entitled. The latter decree supplemented and completed the former and for the first time justified the plaintiff in applying for the joint execution of the decree. Time under the Limitation Act began to run from the date of the latter decree, or rather from the date on which it was made absolute, the 27th November 1905, and consequently the application was not barred. From the reasoning adopted by their Lordships it does not appear to me that this case can be used as an authority for the position contended for by the appellant. Their Lordships do not say that time should be calculated from 16th November 1904 (or rather from 27th November 1905) because this is the date of the final decree of the appellate Court, but what they say is that time should be calculated from that date because :

"It was then for the first time that the Court granted a complete decree to the respondent."

According to their Lordships the plaintiff was entitled to get a joint decree against all the defendants. But owing to an irregularity in procedure the decree which he obtained against one of the defendants was set aside and ultimately a decree was passed against that defendant. Their Lordships point out that the decree dated 15th November 1904 was the second step in granting to the plaintiff the relief to which he was entitled, the first step being the original decree of 25th August 1900. Considered in this view, the decree of 16th November 1904 :

"Supplemented and completed the decree granted on 15th August 1900 and for the first time gave to the plaintiff that which alone would justify him in applying for the joint execution to which he was entitled."

Viewed in this light the decree which the decree-holder in that case was executing was an incomplete decree of 25th August 1900 completed by the decree passed on 16th November 1904 and time was calculated from the date when the Court granted a complete decree to the decree-holder. In the present case the decree-holder had obtained a complete executable decree on the date of the final decree. Speaking with the greatest respect I do not think the decision of the Privy Council in Asahfaq Hussain v. Gauri Sahai (2) has been correctly applied by the learned Judges of the Patna High Court in Somar Singh v. Deonandan (1). Now coming to the first ground, no doubt the wording of the clause as it stands supports the conclusion arrived at by the learned Judges. But I think it is wrong to interpret the clause in this way ignoring the context in which it appears. There can be no doubt that under Cl. 1 the period for the execution of a decree is three years "from the date of the decree or order." This clearly means from the date of the decree or order that is sought to be executed. Then comes Cl. (2) which says:

2. (1911) 33 All 264=33 I A 37=9 I C 975 (PC).

"(where there has been an appeal) the date of the final decree or order"

Appeal from what decree or order? Surely, appeal from the decree or order sought to be executed. This seems to me to be the only interpretation possible having regard to the context in which the clause stands. In the present case there has been no appeal against the final decree which is the decree sought to be executed and therefore time should be computed from the date of the final decree. It was argued for the respondent that the final decree is imperilled by the appeal preferred against the preliminary decree and in case of his success in the appeal the final decree will have to be altered. True; but nothing stands in the way of the party concerned applying for the passing of a fresh final decree in accordance with the appellate decree; and this I believe is what is generally done when after the passing of a final decree by the first Court during the pendency of the appeal the appellate Court ultimately interfered with the preliminary decree. I am not satisfied that there is much substance in the argument that the final decree is imperilled by the decree that may be passed by the appellate Court in the appeal against the preliminary decree, and that therefore the time should be calculated only from the date of the appellate decree.

Mr. Kuttikrishna Menon, on behalf of the appellant has brought to my notice various cases, such as Pakir Chand v. Datta Charan (3), Profulla Kumar Basu v. Mt. Sarojbala Basu, A. I. R. 1931 Cal. 332 at 334; Jiraji v. Ramchandra (4), Sheo Prasad v. Anrudh Singh (5), Narasingh Sewak Singh v. Madho Das (6) and Mulkh Raj v. Gurditta Shah Harichand, A. I. R. 1929 Lah. 283. Generally stated, in these cases it was held that appeals from orders refusing to set aside ex parte decrees are not to be regarded as appeals from the decrees themselves and therefore cannot be availed of by the decree-holder to save his application to execute the decree from the bar of limitation under Art. 182, Cl. (2). These cases do not apply to the present case inasmuch as there were no appeals in these cases against the decree sought to be executed. For the above reasons, I am of opinion that in the present case the period of limitation should not be computed from the date of the High Court's decree on 20th March 1923, but should be computed from the date of the final decree on 30th September 1919. I think this conclusion follows from a true interpretation of Art. 182, Cl. (2), Lim. Act, having regard to its context.

The next question is whether time can be computed in this case from the date of the amended decree. Art. 182, Cl. (4), prescribes "(where the decree has been amended) the date of the amendment" as the starting point for limitation. Here again, if you rely merely on the express language of the clause, the respondent's contention should be upheld. In the present case before the amendment the decree had become admittedly barred. If the literal construction of Art. 182, Cl. (4) is to be accepted, then it would enable the decree-holder to execute a barred decree, but I cannot believe that this result was intended by the legislature to follow from this provision. In Rabiuddin v. Ram Kanai Sen (7) it was held that "a decree which is capable of execution and is not executed within three years from its date becomes dead and cannot be revived by a subsequent application for amendment."

To the same effect is the decision in Jhamman Lal v. Daulat Ram, A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 329. As against these decisions Mr. Govinda Menon for the respondent relies upon the following observations in Durga Prasad Das v. Kedar-nath Nayak, A. I. R. 1929 Cal. 650 in support of his contention that the starting point of limitation is the date of the amended decree:

"Where the legislature has provided that the time from which period of limitation for execution of a decree should begin to run where a decree has been amended, is the date of amendment it is not for the Court of execution to inquire whether the original decree was capable of execution or whether for any other reason the Court was wrong in making the order for amendment of the decree."

I agree that is not the duty of an executing Court to consider whether the

3. A I R 1927 Cal 904=104 I C 466=54 Cal 1052.

4. (1892) 16 Bom 123.

5. (1878) 2 All 273.

6. (1882) 4 All 274=(1882) A W N 25.

7. A I R 1920 Cal 769=59 I C 186.

amendment has been properly made, but it has to decide whether the application is barred by limitation or not. I do not think it necessary to discuss this decision any further as it runs counter to the previous decision of the Calcutta High Court itself, Rabiuddin v. Bam Kanai Sen (7), already noticed; and as in that case when the application which was said to have been barred was filed there was already an execution application pending which was within time. The final decree in the case was made on 8th May 1924 and the first application for execution was filed on 7th May 1927. In the course of narrating this facts of the case the learned Judges say:

"It is unnecessary to mention that the execution was asked for of the amended decree in continuation of the application presented in Court on 7th May 1927."

In this view the learned Judges' conclusion that the execution application was not barred by limitation seems unobjectionable whatever may be said against their observations quoted above. In my opinion a decree which has already become barred by limitation cannot be revived for purposes of execution by a subsequent amendment. I must not fail here to point out that the appellant's learned counsel objects to the respondent relying on the amended decree for the reason that no notice was given to his client at the time when the amendment was made. The amendment of the decree was not relied on in the first Court as a ground for saying that the applications for execution were not barred by limitation. The point was taken for the first time in the appellate Court and the learned Judge has not anywhere in his judgment stated that notice of amendment was or was not sent to the appellant. In the view I take that the amended decree cannot in the present case form the starting point for limitation there is no need for considering whether the notice of amendment was as a matter of fact sent to the appellant, and if not whether the amended decree can be relied on to save limitation. In the result I set aside the decision of the lower Court and restore that of the District Munsif with costs here and in the Court below.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 319

BURN, J.

T. B. Kesava Reddiar—Petitioner.

v.

Tahsildar of Polur and another—
Opposite Parties.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 4883 of 1932,
Decided on 25th October 1932.

(a) Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 50—Writ of mandamus.

The High Court has no power to issue a writ of mandamus. [P 319 C 2]

(b) Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 45—High Court's power to issue mandatory order—Scope.

The High Court has power under S. 45, Specific Relief Act to issue a mandatory order to public servants and to others to do specific acts within the local limits of its Ordinary Civil Jurisdiction but not against the Governor in Council nor against the Governor acting with ministers: A I R 1930 Mad 896, Ref. [P 319 C 2]

A. Viswanatha Ayyar—for Petitioner.

Govt. Pleader, K. Bhashyam Ayyangar and T. R. Srinivasan—for Opp. Parties.

Order.—The prayer is that this Court: "should be pleased to issue a writ of certiorari to the Election Officer . . . and to direct the said officer to include my name in the list of nominated candidates and then to proceed to hold the election. . . ."

This is obviously a prayer for a direction which would be suitable in a writ of mandamus, but is quite inappropriate in a writ of certiorari. This Court has no power to issue a writ of mandamus (S. 50, Specific Relief Act). The petition must therefore be dismissed. Moreover, the relief sought is only nominally against the Election Officer; it is in reality against the Government who by their Order in G. O. No. 3810 L and M Mis., dated 24th September 1932, cancelled the order of the Election Officer, Polur, accepting the nomination papers of the petitioner, and further directed under R. 35 (1) of the Rules for the election of members of Local Boards, that the petitioner's name be excluded from the list of valid nominations and ballot papers. This Court has power under S. 45, Specific Relief Act, to issue mandatory orders to public servants and others to do specific acts within the local limits of its ordinary civil jurisdiction, but not against the Governor in Council S. 45, Proviso (f), Specific Relief Act nor against the Governor acting with ministers: Venkataratnam v. Secy. of State (1). That in my opinion is a sufficient reason for me to decline to discuss the question whether the order of the Government was intra or ultra vires. Another equally good reason is that the petitioner has refrained from making the Government a party to the petition. I dismiss the petition with the costs separately of the Election Officer and respondent 2.

P.R.S. K.S. Petition dismissed.

 A. I. R. 1933 Madras 320

JACKSON AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Official Liquidator of Bellary Electric Supply Co. Ltd.—Appellant.

v.

Kanniram Rauwoothmal—Respondent.

Appeal No. 263 of 1929, Decided on 9th September 1932, against order of Dist. Judge, Bellary, D/- 11th December 1928.

 (a) Company — Mere entry of shareholder's name in company's register does not amount to allotment—Companies Act (1914), S. 40.

An application for shares is an offer and like any other offer must not only be accepted but the acceptance must be communicated to the person making the offer. Hence a mere entry of a shareholder's name in the company's register is insufficient to establish that an allotment of shares has in fact been made: In re Universal Banking Corporation, (1867) 3 Ch. A 40, Rel. on. [P 320 C 2]

(b) Interest—Money had and received—Interest is payable only from date of demand—Interest Act (1839), S. 1.

The provisions of the Interest Act are all comprehensive and interest can only be allowed in accordance therewith. Hence interest for money had and received can be recovered only from date of demand of the amount: A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 727, Ref. [P 321 C 1]

V. S. Narasimhachariar—for Appellant.

C. S. Venkatachariar and L. Krishna Doss—for Respondent.

Mockett, J. — The relevant facts in this appeal are that the respondent's firm purchased 110 shares in the Bellary Electric Supply Co., Ltd., at some time previous to 14th October 1925 and that on that date on behalf of his firm the respondent deposited Rs. 1,400 with the company in respect of 140 more shares. The application for 140 shares, Ex. 1, dated 14th October 1925, contains the words "I request you to allot 'me' 140 shares. No share certificate was admittedly issued in respect of the 140 shares nor was a letter of allotment sent. The company went into liquidation on a date subsequent to 14th October 1925, and the respondent now calls upon the Official Liquidator to refund the Rs. 1,400 because no allotment of shares had been made to him. The Official Liquidator contends that there was such an allotment. The learned District Judge found after an elaborate examination of the facts and the documents that there was no allotment. The short point is: was there an allotment? The respondent filed an affidavit setting out the above facts. No counter-affidavit was filed. At the hearing two witnesses were called. The respondent (there the petitioner) examined one S. M. Hussain, once Managing Director of the Bellary Electric Supply Co. He stated that the Members' Register, Ex. 2, which purported to show that on 14th October 1925 140 shares were allotted to the respondent could not in fact be relied upon, as the rubber stamp of the company was not placed upon the respondent's page nor did it appear on Ex. 3, the Members' Register. The appellant examined a clerk of the company who states that although the allotment was authorized by the Managing Director and the entries made in Ex. 2 "the applicant was not notified of the allotment" The appellant relies on S. 40, Companies Act:

"The register of members shall be prima facie evidence of any matters by this Act directed or authorized to be inserted therein" and argues that Ex. 2 raises a presumption of allotment which the respondent (who did not give evidence) has not rebutted. The respondent could of course have been cross-examined on his affidavit but the appellant did not give him notice to appear for this purpose. Any presumption under S. 40 was clearly rebutted by the evidence of the above two witnesses. But apart from this aspect of the case there is ample authority for the proposition that the mere entry of a shareholder's name in the company's register is insufficient to establish that an allotment of shares was in fact made. An application for shares is an offer and like any other offer must not only be accepted but the acceptance must be communicated to the person making the offer. No Indian case in point has been cited, but in the Universal Banking Corporation In re (1) it was held that the principles governing the formation of a contract between a company and a member of the public are identical in principle to those regulating the contractual relations between individuals. The facts in the above case are sufficiently similar to the facts in this appeal and it was held that a shareholder to whom the fact that an allotment of shares had been made had not been communicated was not bound by any contract. The mere entry of his name on the register was held not sufficient for this purpose. We therefore agree with the decision of the learned District Judge.

1. (1867) 3 A O. 40.

The lower Court has allowed the petitioner interest at 6 per cent from 14th October 1925, and the appellant contends that interest should be payable only from the date of demand. We think that this contention must prevail. The law relating to the payment of interest is dealt with in Nanchappa Koundan v. Ittichathara Mannadiar (2), the effect of which is that the provisions of the Interest Act are all comprehensive and interest can only be allowed in accordance therewith. Applying that principle it is clear that this payment of Rs. 1,400 cannot be construed to be "a debt or sum certain payable at a certain time. . . . by virtue of a written instrument".

It is payable otherwise (i. e. as money had and received) and interest is therefore only recoverable from the date of demand, that is Petition, 27th July 1923. We therefore vary the decree of the lower Court to this extent and with this variation dismiss this appeal with costs here and as decreed in the lower Court.

P.R.S./K.S.

Decree varied.

2. A I R 1930 Mad 727=127 I C 630=53 Mad 549.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 321

WALSH, J.

Secy. of State—Petitioner, In re.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 936 of 1932, Decided on 7th October 1932 to revise order of Dist. Judge, Coimbatore, D/- 25th November 1930.

* Court-fees Act (1870), Ss. 13 and 15 and Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151—Deficit court-fee cannot be recovered after disposal of case.

Where an appeal has been disposed of the Court has no power under the Court-fees Act, or otherwise to levy the deficit court-fee as Ss. 13, 14 and 15, Court-fees Act, deal with refund of court-fees, a quite different matter and any inherent power of the Court under S. 151, Civil P. C., in cases not directly governed by them to grant refund cannot be invoked in the matter of collecting deficient duty. [P 321 C 2]

Govt. Pleader—for Petitioner.

Judgment.—This is a petition filed on behalf of the Government to revise the court-fee levied by the District Judge, Coimbatore, on a memorandum of objections in A. S. No. 277/30. The appeal has been admittedly disposed of and the initial question is whether, assuming the stamp-fee is insufficient, there is any power under the Court-fees Act or otherwise to levy the deficit court-fee. It is obviously a mere academic exercise to argue the petition if there is not. The learned Government Pleader with great diligence and fairness has collected all the cases and they are practically unanimous against him as he admits. In Mahadei v. Ram Kishen Das (1) the two learned Judges Mahmood and Oldfield differed. A single Judge of the same Court held in a later decision Mohammad Ismail v. Liyaquat Husani (2) that recovery of deficient court-fees could not be made once the appeal was dismissed and he quotes there a recent decision of the Hon'ble the Chief Justice of that Court to the same effect.

Jotra Mohan Sen v. Secy. of State (3), Abdulla v. Secy. of State (4) and Radhika Raman Prasad Singh v. Mt. Janki Kuer (5), are also against the view that the deficient court-fees are recoverable in such a case and there is not a single case in which the opposite view is held. In the face of these decisions it seems hardly worth discussing the matter further. I had doubted on seeing the petition whether, assuming the appeal had been disposed of, any action could be taken to recover the deficient stamp-fee, if there is a deficit. The decisions quoted make me certain that it is not recoverable. S. 6, 12 (2) and 28, Court-fees Act, do not apply, O. 33, Rr. 10 and 12, Civil P. C., are obviously special provisions confined to pauper suits. Ss. 13, 14 and 15, Court-fees Act, deal with refund of court-fees, a quite different matter and any inherent power of the Court under S. 151, Civil P. C., in cases not directly governed

1. (1885) 7 All. 528=(1885) A W N 140.

2. A I R 1932 All 316=140 I C 191.

3. A I R 1919 Cal 194=52 I C 435=46 Cal 520.

4. A I R 1925 Lah 131=82 I C 588.

5. A I R 1919 Pat 9=51 I C 756=4 Pat L J 472 (FB).

by them: vide Thammayya Naidu v. Venkataramanamma (6) to grant refund cannot be invoked in the matter of collecting deficient duty. This application is therefore dismissed.

P.R.S./K.S. Application dismissed.

6. A I R 1932 Mad 438=139 I C 131=55 Mad 641.

 * A. I. R. 1933 Madras 322
Full Bench

JACKSON, SUNDARAM CHETTY AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Venkatachalam Pillai— Defendant — Appellant.

v.

Sethuram Rao and another—Plaintiffs —Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1118 of 1929, Decided on 22nd August 1932, against decree of Dist. Judge, West Tanjore, in A. S. No. 224 of 1927.

* (a) Vendor and Purchaser— Contract to resell — Scope—Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 54.

A covenant in a sale deed was as follows : "If it happens that you or your heirs have to sell the property to others, then you must sell it to the plaintiff or his heirs for the above price and also for such price as may be determined by arbitrators in respect of any building that may be constructed upon the land." In a suit by the plaintiff for a specific performance :

Held : that there was not merely a standing offer to resell which would ripen into a contract only on the buyer accepting the offer and tendering the purchase money, but that there was a completed contract to resell and purchase even on the date of sale : A I R 1928 P C 174, Foll.; A I R 1931 Mad 799 and 49 Mad 387=A I R 1926 Mad 699=100 I C 399, Overruled.

[P 324 C 2]

* * (b) Minor — Sale of minor's property by guardian — Covenant in sale deed that vendee should resell to minor or his heirs on his selling property — Minor cannot sue for specific performance of such covenant — Specific Relief Act (1871), S. 21.

In a sale deed in respect of a minor's property, executed by his guardian there was a covenant that in case the vendee sold the property, he should resell it to the minor or his heirs.

Held : that the agreement for resale in the sale deed being an executory contract without mutuality was unenforceable by either party in a suit for specific performance irrespective of the question whether the contract was for the benefit of the minor or not : 39 Cal 232, Foll.; 40 Mad 308 (F B), Expl and Dist. [P 324 C 1, 2]

K. Desikachari—for Appellant.

(Salem) Ramaswami Ayyar for T. Appaji Rao—for Respondents.

Sundaram Chetty, J. — This second appeal arises out of a suit filed by the plaintiff (respondent 1) for specific performance of an agreement to resell the plaint mentioned site. The plaintiff's case is that the suit site belonged to his adoptive father, that it was sold during the minority of the plaintiff by his natural father as his guardian to defendant 1's father on 14th December 1912 under a registered sale deed, that there is a stipulation in the sale deed for the reconveyance of the property to the plaintiff and his heirs for the original price itself, that in violation of that contract defendant 1 sold the property to defendant 2 on 6th December 1923, that this sale is not binding on the plaintiff and that he is entitled to enforce specific performance of the agreement to resell on tendering the purchase money and get a conveyance in his favour. The defendants attacked the plaintiff's claim on several grounds and contended that he was not entitled to specific performance of the alleged agreement. The first Court gave a decree in plaintiff's favour, which was confirmed by the lower appellate Court.

In this second appeal preferred by defendant 2, three main contentions have been raised on his behalf in order to show that the plaintiff could not claim specific performance of the plaint mentioned agreement. The first is, that the agreement contained in the sale deed, Ex. A, was not a completed contract but only an offer by the vendee to resell the property to the vendor, which could become a completed contract only on acceptance of the offer by payment of the price and that the offer having been at an end by the sale of the property to defendant 2, there was no subsisting offer for acceptance by the plaintiff and as such there was no contract of which specific performance could be claimed on the date of the suit. The second is, that even if it should be held that there was a completed contract on the date of Ex. A itself, it was not competent for the guardian of the minor plaintiff to bind him by a contract for the purchase of the site and as the minor was not bound by that contract, there was no mutuality and consequently specific performance of such a contract is unenforceable in law. The third is, that the stipulation for resale as contained in Ex. A is void as it is obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities as laid down in S. 14, T. P. Act. The covenant in question contained in the sale deed, Ex. A, is substantially as follows :

"If it happens that you or your heirs have to sell the property to others, then you must sell it to the plaintiff or his heirs for the above price and also for such price as may be determined by arbitrators in respect of any building that may be constructed upon the land."

There is some dispute as regards the construction of this clause. It may be understood to mean that on the happening of the contingency, namely, the determination of the vendee or his heirs to sell the property and thus part with it, the vendee must sell it to the plaintiff or his heirs and that the latter must also purchase it as per the terms of the covenant. In the absence of any words to signify that the repurchase was only optional with the plaintiff or his heirs, it would not be unreasonable to hold that under this contract the vendee was bound to make the offer for resale and the vendor was equally bound to buy it, and we are prepared to hold accordingly. The learned District Judge however construed this clause in a different way and was of opinion that though there was an obligation on the part of the vendee to resell, the vendor's was only an option to repurchase. It is on the basis of this construction that the learned advocate for the appellant contends that the agreement in question was not a completed contract, but only a standing offer on the part of the vendee. The decision in Papa Naidu v. Munisamy Aiyar (1), would be on all fours with the present case and doubtless supports his contention. Following the English decision in Helby v. Mathews (2) and Dickinson v. Dodds (3), the learned Judges held that there was a binding offer to resell on the part of the vendee and no agreement to buy on the part of the vendor but only an option to repurchase. The view expressed in Helby v. Mathews (2), that until acceptance of the offer there was no completed contract was adopted. It is also said that an offer would be at an end by the death of the promisor or by the promisor selling it to a third party, the sale being known to the promisee before acceptance. A similar question arose for consideration in the case reported in Alagarasami v. Kathia Goundan (4).

This case was decided by Ramesam, J., sitting as a single Judge, and he was also a party to the decision in Papa Naidu v. Munisamy Aiyar (1). The learned Judge seems to have adopted the same view by construing the contract as one consisting of an undertaking by the vendee to make the offer for resale whenever he thought of selling the property, and by stating that the vendor, who had only an option to repurchase, cannot sue for specific performance of the contract but may sue for damages if there was consideration for the contract. But the soundness of this view seems to be shaken by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in an almost similar case reported in Sakalaguna Nayudu v. Chinna Munuswami Nayakar (5). In that case, the counterpart to the sale deed provided that the vendee should reconvey the property to the vendor after a period of 30 years from that date, in case the vendor wished to have the property again and upon his paying a sum of Rs. 10,000. It is thus clear that the vendor had the option of repurchasing the property or not. Their Lordships have held that it was not a case of a mere standing offer by the vendee which could ripen into a contract to buy and sell only on the acceptance of that offer by the vendor by tender of the purchase money. On the other hand, it was distinctly held that there was a completed contract between the parties even on the date of the counterpart document (27th January 1891) and that the right of the vendee under that contract was assignable to a stranger. This decision of the Privy Council was given in an appeal against the decision in Munuswami Nayudu v. Sagalaguna Nayudu (6) to which Ramesam, J., was a party.

It looks as if this decision of the Privy Council was not brought to the notice of the learned Judge when hearing the case reported in Alagarasami v. Kathia Goundan (4). We should now take it that the matter is concluded by the decision of the Privy Council, and on the strength of that

1. A I R 1922 Mad 16=65 I C 720=46 Mad 30.

2. (1895) A C 471=64 L J Q B 465=60 J P 20 =43 W R 561=72 L T 841.

3. (1876) 2 Ch D 463=45 L J Ch 777=24 L T 594=34 L T 607.

4. A I R 1931 Mad 799=135 I C 540.

5. A I R 1928 P C 174=109 I C 765=55 I A 243=51 Mad 533 (P C).

6. A I R 1926 Mad 699=100 I C 399=49 Mad 387.

authority, it must be held that there was a completed contract between the parties on the date of Ex. A itself, even adopting the construction put upon the covenant in Ex. A, by the lower appellate Court and urged for acceptance by the learned advocate for the appellant. The plea that the stipulation in question was not a completed contract and therefore specific performance could not be enforced is unsustainable. This disposes of the first point raised by the appellant. Coming now to the second point, the contention put forward on behalf of the appellant appears to rest on a much firmer ground. The leading authority on this point is the decision of the Privy Council reported in Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed Chowdhuri (7). In that case, the guardian of a minor entered into an agreement with another for the purchase of certain immovable property by the minor. The minor after attaining majority sued for specific performance of that contract. Their Lordships have laid down the principle of law in the following passage found on p. 237 :

"They are however of opinion that it is not within the competence of a manager of a minor's estate or within the competence of a guardian of a minor to bind the minor or the minor's estate by a contract for the purchase of immovable property, and they are further of opinion that as the minor in the present case was not bound by the contract, there was no mutuality and that the minor who has now reached his majority cannot obtain specific performance of the contract."

The present case is in our opinion governed by the aforesaid decision. The agreement for resale contained in Ex. A being an executory contract without mutuality, it is unenforceable by either party in a suit for specific performance. An attempt has been made by the learned advocate for respondent 1 to get over the effect of this decision, by urging that the first Court has found that this contract was for the benefit of the minor and therefore this fact should enable him to enforce specific performance of the contract. But in the case dealt with by their Lordships of the Privy Council it was found that the contract was validly entered into and was for the benefit of the minor and was even ratified by him. Still, their Lordships held that there was no mutuality and on that ground declared the contract to be invalid and unenforceable. The validity or the enforceability of such a contract does not therefore depend upon the question whether it was conducive to the benefit of the minor or not. That being so, the argument on respondent 1's side is unacceptable. It is urged on behalf of respondent 1, that inasmuch as there was an undertaking on the part of the vendee to resell with only an option on the part of the plaintiff to repurchase, the contract may be deemed to be a unilateral contract with no reciprocal obligations and only in favour of the minor plaintiff. Reference was made to the Full Bench decision of this High Court in Raghavachariar v. Srinivasa Raghavachariar (8). The specific question decided in that case is that a mortgage executed in favour of a minor who has advanced already the whole of the mortgage money is enforceable by him. It has also been held that a sale to a minor under similar circumstances is quite good.

But on a careful perusal of that decision, it is clear that the mere fact that a sale or a mortgage is in favour of a minor is not enough to hold that it is valid and enforceable. Where a mortgage or sale has been effected as a completed transaction in favour of the minor and it does not involve the performance of any onerous act by the minor by reason of any contractual obligation in respect of the sale or mortgage, such a sale or mortgage would not be invalid. This is clearly indicated in the following passage on p. 313 in the judgment of Wallis, C. J. :

"The question then is whether it makes any difference that the transfer in favour of the minor by way of sale or mortgage is made in consideration of a price paid or a loan advanced by the minor. No doubt, according to their Lordships' decision in such a case, the minor could not bind himself by contract to pay the price or advance the mortgage money; but when he has done so and the vendor or mortgagor has executed a registered conveyance in his favour, is there any reason why the transfer in his favour should not take effect."

It is also said by Srinivasa Ayyangar, J., that the transfer in favour of the minor cannot be void, unless the transfer is conditional on the passing of consideration and the consideration did not pass (p. 336). If the test laid down in that decision is adopted, the position in the present case is this. In the first place this is not a case where a registered conveyance has been executed in favour of the plaintiff in pursuance of the original contract. On the strength of that contract, the plaintiff seeks to get a conveyance by specifically enforcing that contract. Even granting that under the contract an option to repurchase was reserved to him, want of mutuality must be judged as on the date of that contract. On exercising his option in favour of the repurchase, he has to pay the price mentioned in Ex. A and also pay such price as may be determined by arbitrators in respect of any building constructed on the land. That being so, how can it be said that under this contract the vendee should simply execute a reconveyance in favour of the plaintiff who has no sort of corresponding obligation? It is true that no building was constructed upon the land and the necessity for payment of the price as fixed by arbitrators has not arisen, but still the plaintiff has to pay the original price for the site. That being so, the Full Bench decision in Raghavachariar v. Srinivasa Raghavachariar (8) is of no avail to the plaintiff. On the authority of the Privy Council decision in Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhrudin Mahomed (7), it must be held that the contract in question is void for want of mutuality, and specific performance of such a contract is unenforceable by either party.

7. (1912) 39 Cal 232 = 39 I A 1 = 13 I C 331 (P C).

8. (1917) 40 Mad 308 = 36 I C 921 (F B).

The plaintiff's claim must fail on the aforesaid short ground, and it is therefore unnecessary to discuss the third point raised on behalf of the appellant. If the contract embodied in Ex. A does not create an interest in immovable property, as is clear from the statutory provision in S. 54. T. P. Act, the case cannot come under S. 14 thereof. There is some conflict of judicial opinion on this point and several decisions have been cited at the Bar. As the decision on the second point is sufficient for the disposal of this appeal, it is unnecessary to discuss this question. In the result, the second appeal should be allowed as the plaintiff is not entitled to sue for specific performance of the plaintiff mentioned agreement, and his suit is therefore dismissed with costs of defendant 2 in all the Courts.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

* A. I R. 1933 Madras 325

WALSH, J.

Bayya Naiko and others—Appellants.
v.

Desetti Krupa and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 181 of 1929, Decided on 20th January 1933, against order of Sub-Judge, Berhampur, D/- 19th October 1928.

* Limitation Act (1908), Art. 181—Execution of decree—Appeal and stay order—Limitation for continuing execution is three years from date on which stay comes to an end.

In execution of a final decree in a mortgage suit an order to proclaim and sell was passed and the application was posted to another date for final hearing. In the meantime an appeal was filed and an order staying execution was passed. The execution application was kept pending in the Court with the order "await final order." The appeal was disposed of on 21st November 1924. An application was filed on 8th April 1927 to continue the previous execution proceedings:

Held: the application was not a fresh one, that limitation was three years from the date on which stay came to an end and that application was in time: A I R 1927 All 16 (FB) Foll; A I R 1922 Mad 268, Dist. [P 326 C 1,2]

B. Jagannadha Doss—for Appellants.

C. Sambasiva Rao—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal concerns a question of limitation. The preliminary decree in the mortgage suit was passed on 19th April 1911. The final decree was made on 24th April 1914. E. P. No. 931 of 1922 was admittedly put in on 8th August 1922 within time. This execution petition reached a certain stage when sale had been applied for and fresh schedule and affidavit were filed. The order on 3rd March 1923 was "for settlement of proclamation 7th March 1923." The next order was "Proclaim and sell on 18th June 1923. Final hearing on 25th June 1923." This order was dated 7th March 1923. Meanwhile an appeal had been filed as regards defendant and an order staying execution had been passed, which was dated 6th March 1923, by the District Court of Ganjam and received on 9th March 1923. On this date when the stay order was received the order is "call on 28th instant." On 28th March 1923 the entry is "No final order received from District Court. Await 16th April." The last order is on 16th April 1923:

"No final orders received from District Court. Appeal intimation received. Await final orders by 5th May. Meanwhile send up material papers for purposes of appeal."

The appeal was disposed of on 21st November 1924. The present petition was filed on 8th April 1927 to continue the previous execution petition. The trial Court did not accept the argument that this execution petition was a continuation of the previous proceedings and dismissed the execution petition. The Subordinate Judge held it was an application to continue the proceedings on which no final orders had been passed and against this order this appeal has been preferred. Subbaroyan v. Natarajan (1) has been quoted for the appellant. But the applicability of this depends on the question as to whether this was a fresh execution application. It seems to me clear that it was not a fresh execution application. A good deal of argument has been addressed to me for the appellant on the point that the decree-holder did not take steps within reasonable time after the disposal of the appeal on 21st November 1924. Chhattar Singh v. Kamal Singh (2) is exactly a case of the present sort. It was there held that a petition like the present is a petition to revive the previous execution application and that in default of any specific section or article of the Limitation Act the general Art. 181 applies so that a decree-holder has three years from the date on which stay came to an end. I see no reason for dissenting from this view and it gives a clear cut period of limitation instead of depending on what may be called reasonable diligence which is a more insuperable test. The Allahabad case is a stronger one than the present because the petition there had been struck off. Admittedly no final orders have been passed in the present case on the execution petition. It has been argued that the decree-holder should have appeared on 5th May 1923. In the first place from the context the order "Await final orders by 5th May" seems to be addressed to the office because it is followed by "meanwhile send up papers for the purpose of appeal."

There is nothing to show that this was an order to the petitioner. In the next place so long as the stay continued,

1. A I R 1922 Mad 268 = 70 I C 396 = 45 Mad 785.

2. A I R 1927 All 16 = 100 I C 692 = 49 All 276 (FB).

the decree-holder could not take any further step whatsoever in execution and therefore I think he committed no default by not turning up on 5th May. At any rate there is no such default as would have justified the petition being dismissed. In my opinion the view in Chhattar Singh v. Kamal Singh (2) applies to this case and the decree-holder had three years from 21st November 1924 within which to apply for revival of the execution petition. It was argued that there is no such provision in the Code to revive a petition. If that is so it would appear that the decree-holder is in a better position as regards limitation for, in that case the execution petition automatically revives and as the petitioner had been given no date by the Court on which to appear, it would not seem that it could either be dismissed, nor there would be any period of limitation whatsoever running against him. In my opinion, the order of the lower appellate Court is correct. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 326

BURN, J.

A. Bakthavathsalu Naidu—Accused—Petitioner.

v.

P. N. K. Ramanuja Naidu — Complainant—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 321 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 295 of 1932, Decided on 11th October 1932 to revise the judgment of Sessions Judge, West Tanjore, in Criminal Appeal No. 51 of 1931.

(a) Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), S. 208—President who has ceased to be such refusing to hand over documents to successor is guilty under S. 208

A person who has ceased to be President can thenceforth neither act, nor purport to act, though he may pretend to act, as President, and hence if he refuses to hand over the documents to his successor he is guilty under S. 208.

[P 327 C.1]

(b) Madras Local Boards Act (14 of 1920), Ss. 41 (1) and 42 (b)—Failure of Panchayat President to do duty imposed on him—President of District Board has no power to interfere.

Where a President of Panchayat fails to do a duty imposed on him, the Local Government or the President of the Taluk Board on its behalf can fix some period within which the Panchayat President should perform the omitted duty, and on his failure to do so, appoint some person to perform it. In such a case the President of the District Board has no power to interfere. And any meeting or resolution passed by his interference is not valid. [P 327 C 1, 2]

V. L. Ethiraj and N. Somasundaram—for Petitioner.

S. Nagaraja Ayyar—for Respondent.

A. Narasimha Ayyar for Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The propriety of the conviction of the petitioner under S. 208, Madras, Local Boards Act depends upon the validity of the meeting of the Panchayat held on 8th June 1931 at which a majority of ten members out of fifteen passed a resolution of no-confidence. If that meeting was validly called and held, then the petitioner must be deemed to have vacated his office forthwith, S. 44 (4) (a), and as he admittedly failed to hand over the documents etc. to his successor he must be held guilty of an offence under S. 208 (3) of the Act. I cannot accept the argument of Mr. Ethiraj that even if he had ceased to be the President, he nevertheless purported to continue to act as the President, and therefore could not be prosecuted without the sanction of the Local Government. It seems to me self evident that a person who has ceased to be President can thenceforth neither act, nor purport to act, though he may pretend to act as President.

The validity of the meeting held on 8th June 1931 is dependent on the validity of the meeting held on 28th May 1931 at which leave to make a motion of no confidence was given to one of the members. The meeting held on 28th May 1931 was convened by the President of the Taluk Board, who took action (under the orders of the President of the District Board) because the petitioner had disobeyed the order of the President of the District Board to hold a meeting on 21st May 1931. It is quite clear that the President of the District Board had no power to direct the petitioner to summon a meeting on any particular day. Under S. 41 (1) if the petitioner made default in performing any duty imposed on him by the Act the Local Government could by order in writing fix a period for the performance of such duty by the petitioner. And under S. 41 (2) if the petitioner failed to perform the duty within the period so fixed, the Local Government could appoint some person to perform it. The petitioner being the President of a Panchayat, these powers of the Local Government could be exercised by the President of the Taluk Board (S. 42 (b)); but there is no room for the intervention of the President of the District Board. Even the President of the Taluk Board could only have (a) fixed some period within which the petitioner should perform the omitted duty and (b) on failure appoint some person to perform it.

It appears to me therefore that the meeting of 28th May 1931 was not validly summoned; consequently the leave then granted to move a resolution of no-confidence at the meeting of 8th June was not valid, and the resolution of no-confidence itself was invalid. It follows that the petitioner did not vacate his office on 8th June and the conviction under S. 208 (3), Local Boards Act, is wrong.

I may say that the "default" of which the petitioner is supposed to have been guilty has not been proved. According to Mr. A. Narasimha Ayyar who appears for the learned Public Prosecutor in support of the conviction, the dereliction of duty of which the petitioner was guilty was his refusal to place before the meeting of 21st January 1931 the application of one of the members for leave to move a resolution of no-confidence. It is very doubtful whether that application was made in accordance with S. 44 (a) of the Act. The learned Sessions Judge says that it was not considered by the petitioner on the ground that it had been given to him after the other business of the meeting had commenced. If that were so the petitioner was well within his rights in refusing to allow the application to be considered by the meeting, and his refusal was not a breach of duty at all.

I say nothing about the petitioner's conduct in general; the learned Sessions Judge's strictures are certainly not unfounded. But it is clear that the conviction under S. 208 (3), Local Boards Act, cannot be maintained. I set it aside and order that the fine, if collected, be refunded.

P.R.S./K.S.

Conviction set aside.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 328

MADHAVAN NAIR AND JACKSON, JJ.

(Kotikalapudi) Pakirayya—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

(Kodiyala) Kamasastri and another—Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 154 of 1926, Decided on 7th November 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Narasapur, in O. S. No. 5 of 1924.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 63—Scope of suit under.

A suit to show that the claimant has a title to the property and that the order of attachment was not properly made would lie under O. 21 R. 63: A I R 1926 Mad 42; A I R 1920 Mal 126; A I R 1921 Mad 163 and A I R 1924 Cal 744, Rel on. [P 329 C 2]

C. Rama Rao—for Appellant.

V. Suryanarayana—for Respondents.

Madhavan Nair, J.—The appeal arises out of a suit instituted by the plaintiff under O. 21, R. 63, Civil P. C. The properties involved in the appeal are half of the items in the plaint, other than items 1, 6, 9, 10 portions of 12 and items 21 and 22: see p. 19 of the judgment. These properties were in the possession of defendant 2's husband as a tenant under the zamindar. They were sold in execution for non-payment of arrears of rent under the Estates Land Act. The plaintiff's case is that at such sale the zamindar purchased the lands and afterwards gave pattas to him, constituting him a tenant under the Act. These lands were attached in execution of a decree obtained by defendant 1 against defendant 2's husband. The attachment was on 2nd September 1921. The plaintiff filed objections to the attachment in 1922. The pattas which were given to him with respect to these properties are Exs. D and D-1 dated 3rd October 1923 and 6th February 1922. At the date of the attachment he was not able therefore to show that he had a title to these properties. His petition was therefore disallowed, and he has instituted the present suit under O. 21, R. 63. The learned Judge held in the first instance that the suit was not maintainable by reason of the fact that the plaintiff had no title at the time when the attachment was made. This opinion would entail the dismissal of the suit, but he went into its merits also and held that, if a suit would lie, the plaintiff had established his title to items 18 to 20 of the suit properties, as well as the items covered by the sale certificates, Exs. G, G-1, G-2, G-5, and G-6 and that the plaintiff had not succeeded in establishing his title to items 3, 4, 14, 16 and portions of items 13 and 15. His claim to item 4 is not pressed in this appeal.

The learned counsel for the appellant argues first that a suit is maintainable under O. 21, R. 63, in this case; and secondly, that the learned Judge should have allowed in his favour the items which he has disallowed, namely, 3, 14 and 16, and portions of items 13 and 15. So we have to decide two points in this appeal. The first point is whether in a suit under O. 21, R. 63 it is open to the plaintiff to assert the title which he has at the time when the suit was instituted to show that the order of attachment should not have been made. O. 21, Rr. 58 to 63, relate to investigation of claims and objections to attachment. Under R. 59 what the claimant or objector has to prove is that "as the date of the attachment he had some interest in, or was possessed of, the property attached."

Whether he had any interest at the date of the attachment in the property, is the question which the Court has to decide. If the decision goes against the claimant, he has to establish his title to the property under R. 63 before the expiry of one year; otherwise the order of attachment prevails against him and becomes conclusive, and he cannot assert his title to the property. It is argued on behalf of the appellant that, though he was not able to establish his title to the property attached at the date of the attachment, still it is open to him to assert such title in his suit under O. 21, R. 63, Civil P. C., since he has obtained pattas from the zamindar establishing his title to the property; so that, if he is able to establish his title having regard to the evidence that he is able to offer in support of it, the Court may consider whether the attachment was validly made or not. The terms of O. 21, R. 63 are these:

"Where a claim or any objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute"

These terms are wide enough to include a suit based upon title. No doubt according to the decisions, what the Court has got to consider is, whether the attachment was rightly made. But having regard to the words of the section, this question can be settled—if the claimant gives evidence in regard to his title to the property—by considering whether he has succeeded in establishing his title to it. The observations of the learned Judges in Najimunnessa Bibi v. Nacharuddin Sirdar (1) support this view. Rankin, J. observes:

“The suit, if brought, is not limited by any special standard of evidence or of law. The claimant may, if necessary, thresh out his title in the fullest and most ultimate sense. But if the title which he claims is not the ultimate full title to the property, then, of course, he must be content to assert whatever the title claimed may be.”

Later on the learned Judge says:

“In either case the material date is the date of the attachment. The decree-holder has to show that the attachment was valid but has been wrongfully released. The claimant has to show that the attachment was wrongful but has been improperly retained. To show either of these things the real and ultimate right to the property may be put in issue.”

Page, J., states his view thus at p. 565 (of 51 Cal.) :

“In my opinion in a suit instituted under R. 63 the object of the suit is to establish the plaintiff's title to the property, and not merely to establish his right to have the attachment released.”

So it is open to the claimant in a suit under O. 21, Rr. 63 to show that he has a title to the property and that therefore the refusal to raise the attachment was wrong. Reference in support of this position may also be made to the decisions in Seetharami Reddi v. Venku Reddi (2) and Ranganatha Ayyar v. Srinivasa Ayyangar (3) and to the observations of the learned Judges in Veyindra Muthu Pillai v. Maya Nadan (4) and Arunchalam Chetty v. Periasami Servai (5). This position is not seriously contested by the learned counsel for the respondents. His argument is that in the plaint the claimant confined his relief for a declaration that the order of attachment was wrongly made and that he does not base it upon his title. It is true that the plaint is worded rather narrowly, but it cannot be disputed that the claimant has given evidence to show that at the time when the suit was instituted, he had a title to the property. The learned Judge has also considered the evidence relating to the title of the claimant to the disputed properties. In these circumstances we are not inclined to construe the plaint in the narrow form suggested by the respondent. It therefore follows that a suit to show that the claimant has a title to the property and that the order of attachment was not properly made would lie under O. 21, R. 63, Civil P. C., and the present suit cannot therefore be dismissed on that account.

The next point for consideration is whether, in addition to the title to the properties which has been declared in favour of the claimant, he is entitled to get a declaration of title with regard to the disallowed items we have referred to above. In respect of items 3, 14 and 16 the learned Judge says that the plaintiff has no sale certificates. But it is not disputed that he has taken pattas from the zamindar. The learned Judge says also that the zamindar is not shown to have acquired the raiyat's interest in these lands by purchase or otherwise. This is relied upon by respondent 1 in support of the learned Judge's disallowance of the plaintiff's claim. But in his written statement he does not say that he has any title to these properties, and it cannot be denied that pattas have been given by the zamindar to the plaintiff. In these circumstances we do not see what other evidence the claimant could give in support of his title. Obviously the pattas show that the zamindar treated the claimant as his tenant, and this would never have been done by the zamindar unless he had a title to the property. We would therefore hold that the lower Court should have declared the right of the claimant to these items as well.

The other items are portions of items 13 and 15 referred to in para. 16 of the lower Court's judgment. The learned Judge disallows these items on the ground that the attachment was prior to the sale. But the learned counsel for the respondents has very frankly conceded that the ground is untenable, having regard to S. 109, Estates Land Act. The claim of the appellant to these items also should be allowed. We would there-

1. A I R 1924 Cal 714=83 I C 233=51 Cal 548.

2. (1901) 11 M L J 344.

3. A I R 1926 Mad 42=90 I C 1037.

4. A I R 1920 Mad 126=58 I C 501=43 Mad 696.

5. A I R 1921 Mad 163=70 I C 439=44 Mad 962 (F B).

fore set aside the decree of the lower Court, and give a decree to the plaintiff not only for the items which have been allowed in his favour by the lower Court but also for the other items, the title to which we have dealt with in our judgment. In the circumstances we direct each party to bear his own costs throughout. The memorandum of objections is dismissed. No costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

* * A. I. R. 1933 Madras 330

RAMESAM AND MOCKETT, JJ.

Nukala Venkatanandam and others—
Petitioners, In re.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 3400 of 1932,
Decided on 5th October 1932.

* * Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (iv) (f) — Suits for taking accounts in partnership and partition suits—Appellants can file appeals on any valuation they like — Procedure for collecting deficit court-fee indicated.

In suits for taking accounts in partnership and partition suits, it is impossible to say at the outset what exact amount the plaintiff will recover. In appeals in such suit the appellant, whether defendant or plaintiff, is in the position of a plaintiff. A I R 1914 Mad 369 and A I R 1920 Mad 546, Rel on.; and he can file the appeal on any valuation he likes and pay court-fee on it and the whole case can be heard on such payment. If the appellate Court after the hearing and consideration of the appeal comes to a conclusion in favour of the appellant in respect of a far larger amount than what he has paid court-fees for, the proper thing would be to post the case for orders and direct the appellant to pay additional court-fee, and only then the judgment should be delivered and the decree should be allowed to be drawn up: A I R 1929 P C 147, Expl. and Foll.; A I R 1931 Rang. 146, Foll.; A I R 1925 All 757, Ref. [P 331 C 1, 2]

P. Somasundaram—for Petitioners.

K. Subba Rao for Government Pleader —for the Government.

Ramesam, J. — The question arising for decision in the above civil miscellaneous petition relates to court-fees in a partnership suit. The facts of the case are as follows: A suit was filed in the Subordinate Judge's Court of Cocanada for dissolution of partnership, for settlement of accounts and for recovery of such amounts as may be due to the plaintiffs. Under S. 7 iv (f), Court-fees Act, the plaintiff tentatively valued his plaint at Rs. 7,500. A decree was passed on 22nd December 1931 under which defendants 3 to 5 were directed to pay certain sums of money with interest at 6 per cent from 1st April 1924. Defendants 3 to 5 filed the present appeal on 26th April 1932. In the memorandum of appeal the valuation is stated to be Rupees 12,770-6-0 and the court-fee thereon as Rs. 847-7-0, but the court-fee actually paid was only Rs. 447-7-0. In the affidavit filed on behalf of the appellants it is stated that the valuation was calculated according to the old practice and was stated to be Rs. 12,770-6-0. But as appellant 1 had not the money with him at the time, it was filed on a court-fee of Rs. 447-7-0 with the idea of supplying the deficient court-fee afterwards.

Both according to the affidavit and on the face of the appeal memorandum, the appeal was filed on a deficient court-fee and the office ought to have returned the papers for supplying the deficit; but by some oversight the office did not return the papers. The appeal was numbered as Appeal No. 156 of 1932. From one point of view it may well be said that the appellants may as well have kept quiet. But there is the apprehension that when the appeal comes on for hearing the matter will be noticed by the opposite side or by the Court and the appellants would naturally be called upon to supply the deficit court-fee. Appellant 1 therefore not wishing to wait until then and desiring to put the matter on a proper legal basis filed the present petition. He now wishes to revise the valuation in such a way that the court-fee already paid would be adequate until the hearing of the appeal. It may be that after the hearing of the appeal he may have to pay more court-fees if he succeeds in respect of an amount larger than the amount for which the court-fee he has now paid, namely, Rs. 447-7-0, suffices, that is Rs. 5,500. In the affidavit it is stated that they were expecting the papers to be returned so that they may correct the valuation and represent the papers. But unfortunately the papers were not returned.

If the only valuation which is possible for the appeal is Rs. 12,700, then of course, he cannot do this. But it is contended on the footing of the Privy Council decision in Faizullah Khan v. Mauladad Khan (1) than even in an appeal relating to the accounts of a partnership a tentative valuation can be given by the appellant under S. 7 iv (f), Court-fees Act. In that case the plaintiff filed a suit on a valuation of Rs. 3,000, but the first Court gave a decree against him for Rs. 19,991. The plaintiff filed an appeal in which he paid court-fees on the said sum of Rs. 19,991. But in the memorandum of appeal he prayed that the decree against him should not only be vacated but that he should also get a decree for Rs. 3,000. The Privy Council held that the amount actually paid is good enough for covering both the reliefs. In the judgment Lord Shaw said :

1. A I R 1929 P C 147=117 I C 493=56 I A 232=10 Lah 737.

"Their Lordships find no reason for treating that payment either as upon an under value or a split value. Their Lordships think, with much respect to the Judicial Commissioner, that it was a mistake to treat the payment of Rs. 975 as a fee made only on the amount of the decree passed against the appellants. That amount, as already stated, may be not only in full but largely in excess of the true sum of relief at which a sound valuation could in the present circumstances be said to reach and it covered the appeal as a whole, including that sum on the one hand and a much smaller figure of Rs. 3,000 on the other."

The view apparently taken by their Lordships is that the appellant can pay court-fee on a notional valuation as in the first Court. Even if some of the sums in respect of which he was appealing are definite amounts, the actual court-fee he pays should be supposed to cover any actual sums decreed and any uncertain sums in respect of which relief is sought. That this is the view taken by their Lordships is clear from the observations of Lord Tomlin in the course of the argument reported in Fai-zullah Khan v. Mauladad Khan (1) and quoted by Page, C. J., in C. K. Ummar v. C. K. Ali Umar (2) at p. 168 (of 9 Rang.) as follows :

"In S. 7 the amount of the fee is to be computed, in suits for accounts, according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint or memorandum of appeal. If therefore the appellant values the relief in the memorandum of appeal and pays a fee thereon, that is the amount of fee properly payable. Of course if the appellant recovers more he pays the extra fee under S. 11 of the Act. But you cannot complain that the amount valued in the memorandum of appeal is not the proper amount. In suits for accounts it is impossible to say at the outset what exact amount the plaintiff will recover. The legislature leaves it open to him to estimate the amount. That is the scheme of the Act."

According to the view of the Privy Council, the appellant whether plaintiff or defendant, can give some valuation and one cannot complain that the amount in the memorandum is not the proper amount, the reason being that in suits for accounts it is impossible to say at the outset what exact amount the plaintiff will recover, and they apply this principle to appeals also. The question that arises is, if appellants can file their appeals on any valuation they like and pay court-fees on it and the whole case can be heard on such payment, and if as the result of the hearing of the appeal, he can succeed for a much larger amount than the amount for which he paid court-fees, can it not be said that the Crown has been deprived of the court-fee properly due, and if so, how is this amount to be recovered. Lord Tomlin referred to S. 11 of the Act, but it seems to me that S. 11 may not give adequate remedy to the Crown, for S. 11 refers to execution and before the decree-holder seeks execution, he must pay the court-fee. But suppose the party settled the matter privately and the decree holder had not to seek execution, would not the Crown be deprived of the proper court-fees in such a case? S. 11 no doubt furnishes one method, but for the protection of the interests of the Crown, it is necessary to indicate what the proper practice should be.

If the appellate Court after the hearing and consideration of the appeal comes to a conclusion in favour of the appellant in respect of a far larger amount than what he has paid court-fees for, the proper thing would be to post the case for orders and direct the appellant to pay additional court-fee and only then the judgment should be delivered and the decree should be allowed to be drawn up. I think this protects the Crown's interests properly. Under S. 149, Civil P. C., the Court has got the power to direct the payment of court-fees at any stage of the case and this is expressly relied on by Lord Shaw at p. 743 of the Lahore judgment. In the present appeal the appellant does not want any refund of his court-fee. He simply wants permission to re-state his valuation tentatively at Rs. 5,500 so that the court-fee actually paid may be enough and so that no objection can be taken to the hearing of the appeal afterwards. He himself would have done this if the appeal papers had been returned; but they were not. In the view taken in the Privy Council decision we direct the valuation to be amended tentatively at Rs 5,500, but, as already mentioned it must be understood that when the appeal is heard and he succeeds to a larger amount, unless the court-fee is paid, the judgment and decree ought not to be issued.

2. A I R 1931 Rang 146=133 I C 91=9 Rang 165 (F B).

In view of the decision of the Privy Council no purpose is served by referring to the earlier decisions. In the case of appeals against a preliminary decree only, the Madras High Court held that where a defendant appeals he should pay on the tentative valuation of the plaintiff in the first Court but the Privy Council decision seems to imply that the defendant can give his own tentative valuation in appeal. This is the way how the Privy Council decision with Lord Tomlin's observations are construed by Page, C. J., in C. K. Ummar v. C. K. Ali Umar (2) and I agree with his view. He points out that the same view was taken by the Allahabad High Court in Chunni Lal v. Sheo Charan Lal (3), but that was before the Privy Council decision. It is unnecessary to refer to the decision of Rankin, C. J., in Kantichandra Tarafdar v. Radharaman Sarkar (4), in which no reference was made to the Privy Council decision nor could it be, for the report could have reached India at the time the case was heard. I may add that an appellant, whether defendant or plaintiff, is in the position of a plaintiff in appeal at least in suits for taking accounts of a partnership and in partition suits. In such suits it has been held that every party is in the position of a plaintiff: vide T. Adeyya v. C. Venkataragadu (5) and Ramamurthi v. Surampalli Reddy (6). In the first of the above cases the defendant actually paid court-fee on the footing that his position is analogous to that of the plaintiff. In the latter case it was observed that the effect of the plaintiff being allowed to withdraw was to allow defendants 8 to 10 to become plaintiffs in his stead. The valuation of the appeal for the present will be regarded as Rs. 5,500.

Mockett, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./K.S.

Petition allowed.

3. A I R 1925 All 787=89 I C 122=47 All 756.

4. A I R 1929 Cal 815=124 I C 77=57 Cal 463.

5. A I R 1914 Mad 369=23 I C 392.

6. A I R 1920 Mad 546=60 I C 144.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 332

WALSH, J.

Srivilliputtur Municipal Council — Defendant—Appellant.

v.

K. G. A. Arunachala Nadar and others — Plaintiffs — Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1098 of 1928, Decided on 15th November 1932,

(a) Madras District Municipalities Act (1920), Ss. 44 and 45—Noncompliance with provisions of Ss. 44 and 45 makes contract void.

If the provisions of Ss. 44 and 45, District Municipalities Act are not complied with the contract is void: A I R 1930 Mad 600 and 97 I C 511, Ref. [P 332 C 2]

* (b) Contract Act (1872), S. 65—Contract void for noncompliance of provisions of Ss. 44 and 45, Madras District Municipalities Act—Neither principle of "quantum meruit" nor that of "quantum valebat" applies—Madras District Municipalities Act (1920), Ss. 44 and 45.

Where a contract is void for noncompliance of the provisions of Ss. 44 and 45, District Municipalities Act, S. 65, Contract Act, has no application and neither the principle of "quantum meruit" nor the principle of "quantum valebat" applies: Case law reviewed. [P 335 C 2]

(c) Contract Act (1872), S. 65—Contract of supply of goods—Contract being void—If S. 65 applies doctrine of "quantum valebat" applies—Obiter.

Obiter—Where in a case of supply of goods the contract is found to be void and S. 65, Contract Act, is found to be applicable, it is the doctrine of "quantum valebat" and not that of "quantum meruit" that must be applied; and where the actual goods cannot be returned, restitution must be fixed at the price at which they were sold by the vendors. [P 338 C 2]

(d) Limitation Act (1908), S. 19—President of Committee has authority to acknowledge.

A President of a Committee who is authorized to purchase goods has equal authority to acknowledge. Such authority need not be express: A I R 1919 P C 120; A I R 1925 All 176 and A I R 1925 Rang 30, Ref. [P 336 C 1]

T. Rangachariar and S. Narayana Ayyangar—for Appellant.

K. Rajah Ayyar, V. Ramaswami Ayyar and S. Nataraja Nadar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—Under Ordinance 9 of 1914 and the rules prescribed thereunder the plaintiffs were appointed wholesale dealers of rice at Sattur. The defendant Municipal Council of Srivilliputtur appointed a Local Emergency Committee for the purchase of rice from the plaintiffs. This Local Committee used to indent for the monthly supply and the Collector allotted the quantity to be supplied. In January 1920 the defendant Municipality applied for a certain amount of rice. The Collector ordered 460 bags of raw and 300 bags of boiled rice. The rice was despatched on 15th February 1920. The price of rice seems to have started to fall from the beginning of March: vide Ex. E letter from the President, Local Emergency Committee, to the Collector, dated 3rd September 1920. The sentence is a little obscure. Anyhow the allegation in the written statement that the fall began from about 15th February was not substantiated by evidence (para. 16 of the trial Court judgment). Under the rules, the Local Emergency Committee was to sell at the cost price and the wholesale dealer was allowed a profit of not more than eight annas per bag. This consignment of rice was, after some correspondence with the Collector, sold in September and November, 1920 at a loss, and the plaintiffs sued for the deficiency between what the defendant Municipality paid them and the cost at which the rice was supplied. A number of pleas were raised by the defendant including want of privity, limitation and the late supply of the goods.

The trial Court found that there was privity of contract, that the suit was not barred by limitation, and that it was not proved that the price had fallen when the rice was sent. In first appeal the point was taken that if the provisions of Ss. 44 and 45, District Municipalities Act, not having been complied with the contract was void. The learned Subordinate Judge found for the defendant on this point but as regards privity of contract and limitation agreed with the findings of the trial Court. He however in para. 8 of his judgment held that the defendant council was liable under S. 65, Contract Act, to pay "quantum meruit" for any profit that the Municipality had got under the contract. He appears to be under a misapprehension that the accounts had not been filed though he says the defendant council had had an opportunity of doing so. But it is not disputed before me that the accounts, Ex. 4, were filed though in another connexion. He gave plaintiffs a decree for Rs. 2,864-1-2 which he considered as the profit which the defendant had realized by the sale of the rice. It is admitted before me that on the accounts which have been signed by the plaintiffs themselves with the exception of a trifling sum of Rs. 5 or so, defendant council credited all they got by the sales to plaintiffs after deducting legitimate expenses. Therefore on the "quantum meruit" which the learned Subordinate Judge was willing to grant there would be practically nothing due to the plaintiffs. Against this decision defendant council have preferred an appeal. It is not disputed in appeal that the contract was void. It is therefore unnecessary to go at any length into this matter. I may perhaps refer to the most recent decision of this Court in Municipal Council, Tiruvarur v. Kannuswami Pillai (1), a case decided by Sir Kumaraswami Sastri, J., and myself, where the difference between a contract governed by statute and one which is not so governed is pointed out and most of the cases are discussed which bear on a contract like this. I might however quote a sentence of Sir Coutts-Trotter, C. J., in Madras Engineering Works Ltd. v. Municipal Council, Trichinopoly (2) :

"In England the provision that Corporations should contract in a special manner, namely under seal is not a statutory provision but is a rule of the Common law, and the Judges in well-known cases have evolved a rule that the necessity for the corporate seal to be fixed to contracts does not apply to such contracts as appertain to the ordinary execution by the corporation of its daily duties; and that has been engrafted by the Judges on to the rigour of the Common law. I am quite satisfied it is quite impossible for a Judge in India to temper the ferocity of the Statute law by similar engraftments upon it. I must therefore hold that in the absence of a contract which fulfils the requirements of the Act, the plaintiffs' suit cannot succeed."

It is strenuously argued for the respondents that S. 65, Contract Act, does apply, but that it is not the doctrine of "quantum meruit" because in cases of supply of goods it is the doctrine of "quantum valebat" which should be applied: (vide Leake on Contract, p. 443). I am inclined to agree with the respondents that if S. 65, Contract Act, is applied to the case it is the doctrine of "quantum valebat" that must be applied and restitution must, in a case of this sort, where the actual goods cannot be returned, be fixed at the price at which they were sold by the vendors (plaintiffs in this case): vide Mayne on Damages, 383 and Leake on Contract above.

1. A I R 1930 Mad 690 = 53 Mad 352 = 127 I C 120.

2. (1923) 97 I C 511.

For the appellant it is contended that a breach of a statutory Regulation does not fall under S. 65, Contract Act. Annada Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick (3) is strongly relied on. There, there was a contract by a Hindu to sell immovable property to which he was the next reversionary heir-expectant upon the death of a widow in possession and to transfer it upon possession accruing to him. It was held that this being void under S. 6 (a), T. P. Act, 1882 the time at which such an agreement is "discovered to be void" so that a cause of action to recover the consideration arises under S. 65, Contract Act, 1872, in the absence of special circumstances is from the date of the agreement. Their Lordships held (p. 937 of 50 Cal.) that S. 65 did not apply to such a contract. In that case another Privy Council case Harnath Kunwar v. Indar Bahadur Singh (4) was pressed upon their Lordships. In the latter case a Hindu, while next reversioner to an Oudh estate, obtained a decree declaring that a will which the widows of the last holder alleged authorized them to adopt was invalid and that he was entitled to the estate upon the death of the last surviving widow. Prior to that event occurring he purported to sell half the estate in consideration of Rs. 25,000 advanced to him declaring by the sale-deed that when he succeeded he would put the vendee in proprietary possession. After the death of the last surviving widow the widow of the purchaser sued the vendor for possession, or alternatively to recover the purchase money with interest. It was held that there was no effectual transfer of the villages, since the vendor had only an expectancy and the decree did not create any greater interest in him but that under S. 65, Contract Act, 1872 the purchase money was recoverable, with interest from the date of the suit, the period of limitation not running until the rights of the purchaser were discovered to be unenforceable. The facts of that case are peculiar and their Lordships held that in those peculiar circumstances there was a misapprehension as to the private rights of the vendor which he purported to sell and that the true nature of those rights was not discovered by the plaintiff earlier than the time at which his demand for possession was resisted. The agreement was discovered to be void and the discovery in their Lordships' view was one within the words and the meaning of S. 65, Contract Act. This difference is stressed by their Lordships in Annada Mohan Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick (3) at p. 935 (of Cal. 50) where they say:

"In that case, however, there were special circumstances wholly different from those in the present case, circumstances which were proved in evidence and were sufficient for their Lordships to act upon and to enable them to say that the discovery in the case was later than the date of the contract itself."

These are the two important Privy Council cases relied on one by each side respectively. The case in Harnath Kunwar v. Indra Bahadur Singh (4) cannot be taken as authority for saying that a contract entered into in breach of the statutory provisions of Ss. 44 and 45, District Municipalities Act can be brought under S. 65, Contract Act for purposes of a "quantum meruit" or a "quantum valebat." In Veeranna Ambalam v. Ayyachi Ambalam (5) it was held that a contract which was necessarily invalid from its inception would not fall under S. 65. In Radhakrishna Das v. The Municipal Board of Benares (6) at p. 601 the learned Judges consider the applicability of S. 65, Contract Act in a case exactly similar to the present. They say:

"There was no illegality in the action of the Municipality in passing a resolution accepting the appellant's tender and therefore it cannot be said that the agreement, if any, constituted by the tender and acceptance of it, has been discovered to be void. The agreement is unobjectionable but it did not ripen into a binding contract by reason of the neglect of the parties to comply with the provisions of the section under which the Municipality could alone contract. The words of the section, namely "When a contract becomes void" evidently have no application because there was no contract. If we were to hold that this section was applicable, we should render nugatory the salutary provisions of the Municipalities Act which provide that "a contract executed otherwise than in conformity with it shall not be binding on the Board." Likewise S. 70 appears to us to have no application."

In Wolf & Sons v. Dadiba Khimji & Co. (7) it was held that advantage must be received before the contract becomes

3. A I R 1923 P C 189=74 I C 499=50 I A 239=50 Cal 929 (P C).

4. A I R 1922 P C 403=71 I C 629=50 I A 69=26 O C 223=45 All 179 (P C).

5. A I R 1926 Mad 118=92 I C 63.

6. (1905) 27 All 592=(1905) A W N 111.

7. A I R 1920 Bom 192=58 I C 465=44 Bom 631.

void but that is not the case here. Some cases are relied on by the respondent to show that a contract entered into in breach of a statutory regulation would nevertheless fall under S. 65. One is Aryaprabhakara Rao v. G. Sanyasi (8) the decision of a single Judge. It may be noted that the applicability of that section was merely examined with reference to the question of limitation. Girraj Bakhsh v. Hamid Ali (9) was a case of a mortgage entered into by the minor's mother without the permission of the Court. It was held that the benefit obtained on the mortgage must be refunded. This must be considered overruled by the Privy Council decision in Mohori Bibee v. Dharmodas Ghose (10) where it was held that a mortgagee who advanced money to a minor on the security of a mortgage is not entitled to repayment of money on decree being made declaring the mortgage invalid. In Appasami v. Narayanaswami, A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 945 a minor fraudulently represented himself as a major. Therefore there was in that case a mistake of fact at the time of the contract. Thangammal Ayyar v. Krishnan (11) is a case between a legal practitioner and his client. The agreement which had not been filed in Court was held to be void. Nevertheless it was held that the pleader was still entitled to claim any reasonable remuneration in respect of his professional services. That case is distinguishable because the pleader had a right outside the alleged agreement whereas in the present case the plaintiff's case is one founded on his contract. Municipal Board Lucknow v. Debi Das (12) followed Lawford v. Billericay Rural Council (13) and Young & Co. v. Mayor and Corporation of Royal Leamington Spa (14) which have been distinguished in Municipal Council, Tiruvarur v. Kannuswami Pillai (1) Municipal Committee, Gujranwala v. Fazal Din (15); followed Sri- rangam Municipal Council v. Bodi (16) which is the decision of a single Judge and which is dissented from by Sir Kumaraswami Sastri, J., and myself in Municipal Council, Tiruvarur v. Kannuswami Pillai (1). Two cases are however relied upon to show that a "quantum meruit" can be granted in the case of a contract entered into by a Municipality in which the requirements of Ss. 44 and 45, District Municipalities Act, are not complied with. One is the case in Municipal Council, Tiruvarur v. Kannuswami Pillai (1) quoted above. But it would be seen therefrom that "both the parties are agreed before us that if the contract is found invalid they should accept a decree on a 'quantum meruit' basis"

so that the legality of a "quantum meruit" was not raised. The other case is the one in Mohamed Ebrahim Molla v. Commissioners for the Port of Chittagong (17) to which we referred in that judgment. In that case the Commissioners for the port of Chittagong sued the defendant for the recovery of money due as hire of a tug lent to the defendant under a contract. The contract was not under seal as required by S. 29, Chittagong Port Act, 1914. It was held that the Act was imperative in its terms and the plaintiffs could not sue on the contract, but, a "quantum meruit" was allowed. This case is alluded to in Pollock on Contract, p. 378. He says:

"It appears from the report of this case that counsel for the defendant (who was the appellant before the Court) himself conceded that the plaintiffs were entitled (though not in that suit) to some compensation for the use of the tug. It is submitted that both counsel and the Court were in error in thinking that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover 'quantum meruit.' No question of payment upon a 'quantum meruit' can arise where an act is imperative."

I therefore consider that the contention of the appellant that no "quantum meruit" or "quantum valebat" can be allowed is correct. If the "quantum meruit" is to be, as given by the lower appellate Court, on the profit which the defendant had made then it is clear from the accounts Ex. 4 that the Municipality derived no profit. But on this point I should hold that if an allowance is to be made it must be a "quantum valebat" and the plaintiffs would be entitled to recover the price of the rice fixed at the time of supply.

8. A I R 1925 Mad 885=88 I C 557.

9. (1887) 9 All 340=(1887) A W N 62.

10. (1903) 30 Cal 539=30 I A 114=8 Sar 374 (P C).

11. A I R 1930 Mad 122=124 I C 502=53 Mad 209.

12. A I R 1926 Oudh 388=99 I C 643=1 Luck 444.

13. (1903) 1 K B 772=72 L J K B 554=31 W R 630=67 J P 245=1 L G R 535=19 T L R 222.

14. (1883) 8 A C 517=52 L J Q B 713.

15. A I R 1929 Lah 742=121 I C 187=11 Lah 121.

16. A I R 1924 Mad 162=72 I C 703.

17. A I R 1927 Cal 465=103 I C 2=54 Cal 189.

Turning to the ground of limitation it is argued that the letter Ex. F (2) on which the learned Subordinate Judge relies written by the President of the Local Emergency Committee will not save limitation as there is nothing to show that he represented the committee. I cannot agree with this contention. The point has not been taken at all in first appeal. The matter was only taken in a general form in the grounds of the second appeal (para. 21), viz., "The Court below ought to have held that the suit was barred by limitation." The correspondence was conducted by the President of the Committee. He was put into the witness-box, but no question was put to him that he had no authority to carry on the correspondence. In Braja Sundar Deb v. Bhola Nath (18) it was held that a person with authority to purchase and settle the price of goods had equal authority to acknowledge and that the authority to do so need not be express. In Ganga Ram v. Lachman Singh (19), it was held that it can be presumed from the attendant circumstances that acknowledgment made by the agent is authorized: see also Rala Singh v. Bagwan Singh & Sons (20). Such acknowledgment may be addressed to a person other than the person entitled to the property or right (Expl. 1, S. 19, Lim. Act). I agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that the letter Ex. F-2 saves limitation. One more argument is raised on behalf of the respondents, namely, that the parties are governed by the Ordinance, that the contract is made under it and that the Municipal Council was not acting as a Municipal Council in making the contract: Douglass v. Rhyl Urban Council (21), Attorney-General v. Gaskill (22), Mathura Mohan Saha v. Ram Kumar Saha (23) and Leake on Contracts, 447 were quoted. This contention was also raised before the learned Subordinate Judge who deals with it in para. 7 of his judgment. I agree with his conclusions. The Ordinance lays down that the Governor-General-in-Council or the Local Government may require any persons or class of persons to make a return of any article of commerce of which he or any person belonging to such class is the owner, and that if any article is found to be unreasonably withheld from the market on the issue of notification under S. 6, any person empowered by the Governor-General or the Local Government may take possession of any articles so notified on paying compensation. There is nothing in this to prevent the plaintiffs from making their contract with the Municipal Council in the statutory terms prescribed in Ss. 44 and 45, District Municipalities Act. I consider that these terms were applicable.

The appeal in my opinion must be allowed with costs and the suit dismissed with costs throughout. I cannot help observing that the defendant council were put into an extremely awkward position. Correspondence shows that they were not free agents either in the matter of buying or selling and yet they were to be considered responsible for any loss which might accrue owing to fall in prices. The Emergency Committee was a purely honorary body and neither it nor the Municipal Council were going to make any profit out of the transaction. It is immaterial that the Municipality did take a sum of Rs. 500 for peace celebrations because this was returned. The Emergency Committee was at one time called on by the Collector to make good a deficiency of Rs. 285-10-0 in regard to another Union (Elayangudi Union). That sum however was also refunded by the Collector. It would appear hard to hold the Municipal Council responsible for trading losses in a matter in which they had no freedom of action and in which they and their agent, the local Emergency Committee, were serving the public in an honorary capacity. If the contract had been made in accordance with the statutory regulation it would certainly appear hard in the circumstances that the Municipal Council should have had to make good presumably from the ratepayers' money, a loss for which they were not responsible. This question does not however arise owing to the fact that the contract actually made was void.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

18. A I R 1919 P C 120=55 I C 543 (P C).
19. A I R 1925 All 176=35 I C 633.
20. A I R 1925 Rang 30=84 I C 391=2 Rang 367.
21. (1913) 2 Ch 407=82 L J Ch 537=29 T L R 605=57 S J 627=109 L T 30=11 L G R 1162=77 J P 373.
22. (1833) 22 Ch D 537=52 L J Ch 163=31 W R 135=17 L T 566.
23. (1916) 43 Cal 790=35 I C 305.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 337

BARDSWELL, J.

P. S. Anantanarayanan, Petitioner,
In re.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 743 of 1932 and Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 693 of 1932, Decided on 25th October 1932, for revision of judgment of Joint First Class Magistrate, Chingleput, D/- 14th March 1932.

Penal Code (1860), S. 71—Charge of picketing against accused — Two separate sentences under both Criminal Law Amendment Act and Ordinance is illegal—Criminal Law Amendment Act (1908), S. 17 (1) and Ordinance (5 of 1932), S. 4.

Accused was found guilty of picketing which fell both under the Criminal Law Amendment Act S. 17 (1) and Ordinance 5 of 1932. Magistrate awarded separate sentences under each of the provisions of law for the offence.

Held: that the separate sentences cannot stand and that the sentence under one of them must be set aside. [P 338 C 1]

K. S. Jayarama Ayyar for G. Gopala-swami—for Petitioner.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—This is a petition put in not by but on behalf of, two persons, who have been convicted by the First Class Joint Magistrate of Chingleput of an offence punishable under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment, Act 1908, and S. 4, Ordinance 5 of 1932. The point taken in this petition is that they have in fact been convicted only of one offence, that of picketing, which can fall equally under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act, and under S. 4 of the Ordinance and that therefore the Joint Magistrate in awarding them separate sentences for the conviction under each count has acted illegally with reference to S. 71, I. P. C. Under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act, a person can be punished if he is a member of an unlawful association, or for in any way assisting in the operation of any such association. By S. 4, Ordinance 5 of 1932, which is known as the Ordinance for the prevention of molestation and picketing, a person can be punished for molestation. The judgment of the Magistrate refers to the two accused as having been respectively President and Member of the Taluk Congress Committee, Conjeevaram, and of the District Congress Committee of Chingleput; and it has been suggested by the learned Public Prosecutor that the conviction under the Criminal Law Amendment

Act may have been for their being members of an unlawful association which would be a separate offence from that of picketing. It has been proved by evidence that the Taluk and District Congress Committees in question have been notified by Government as unlawful associations. In order to make clear the matter the records of the case have been sent for and scrutinized. The particulars of the accusation stated against accused 1 have thus been set out by the Joint Magistrate:

“Whereas it appears that you Dr. P. S. Srinivasa Iyer, being a President of the Taluk and District Congress Committees of Conjeevaram and Chingleput respectively, which have been declared to be unlawful associations by the Government under S. 16, Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908 and in spite of a warning from the District Magistrate to desist from activities in furtherance of the purposes of the said unlawful associations, did, at 12-20 p. m., on 14th March 1932, in furtherance of the purposes of the said unlawful associations, picket foreign cloth shops at Hodsonpet, Conjeevaram, and thereby committed an offence under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908; and that you by doing the said picketing, committed the offence of molestation as defined in S. 3, Ordinance 5 of 1932, punishable under S. 4 of the said Ordinance; show cause why you should not be convicted under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, and S. 4, Ordinance 5 of 1932. Do you plead guilty or not guilty?”

The accusation that was read to accused 2 is just the same as that read out to accused 1 except that he is described as a member of the Congress Committees and not as the President. It is true that in both these statements of accusation the fact of the accused being either President or Member of the Taluk and District Congress Committees is mentioned, but I am satisfied that this is only by way of description. This is shown by the use of the word “being.” Had they been charged with the offence of being members of an unlawful association the accusation should run “that you were.” This however is not a case in which one has to decide by a meticulous examination of the language that is used as from what follows later it is perfectly clear that the offence charged under S. 17 (1) was that of picketing foreign cloth shops and that the offence charged under the Ordinance was that of molestation in the said picketing. Therefore under each section alike it was the offence of picketing with which the two accused were charged. The matter is so very clear that it is hardly necessary to mention anything that might make it even clearer, but for the sake of emphasis I will point out that what was read by the Joint Magistrate to the accused as to the accusation is practically a paraphrase of what is stated in the charge-sheet though in the charge-sheet in the place of the word "being" we have "who are." The conclusion of what appears in the charge-sheet shows that the charge against the accused was one of picketing which is shown as falling both under the Act and under the Ordinance. And, again, in the first information report nothing is mentioned about these accused being members of an unlawful association, but it is merely stated that they were guilty of picketing and thereby committed offences under the Act and under the Ordinance. Before the Magistrate accused 1 declined to plead either way and so also did accused 2. Accused 2 however went on to say:

"I wish to add however that I think I was a member of the Taluk Congress Committee only, as far as I remember, and not of the District Congress Committee."

As he had already declined to plead, it is clear that in this statement he was only correcting a possible mistake in his description and was not replying to the charge of being a member of an unlawful association, which charge indeed had not been preferred against him. I find then that the two accused have been found guilty of one offence and one only, though it is one punishable under two separate provisions of law. The two separate sentences therefore cannot stand. The convictions are confirmed but the sentence of six months' rigorous imprisonment and of fine of Rs. 200 that has been passed for the conviction under S. 4, Ordinance 5 of 1932, is set aside. I understand that they have already undergone imprisonment for six months or more. If that be the case, and, if they have no further term of imprisonment to undergo in default of payment of fine, they must at once be released and set at liberty; at any rate, they must be released as soon as their term of six months and any term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine has expired. The fines if paid should be refunded to them.

P.R.S./K.S.

Order accordingly.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 338

BEASLEY, C. J. AND BARDSWELL, J.

Sothavalan and others—Petitioners—Appellants.

v.

Rama Kone and others—Respondents.

Criminal Revn. No. 162 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. No. Petn. 148 of 1932 Decided on 13th December 1932 from order of Sub-divisional Magistrate, Ramnad, D/- 16th January 1932.

* Penal Code (1860), S. 71—Conviction under Ss. 147 and 323—Separate sentence is legal—Penal Code, Ss. 147 and 323.

A person convicted both under Ss. 147 and 323 can be awarded a separate sentence for each of the offences and S. 71 can have no application. For the offence of voluntarily causing hurt or of voluntarily causing grievous hurt obviously can be committed without the commission of the offence of rioting and in like manner rioting can be committed without the commission of the two other mentioned offences, as the force used in rioting may fall far short of causing bodily pain, i. e. hurt or grievous hurt: A I R 1928 Mad 18, Foll.; A I R 1919 Mad 353; 16 Cal 75; 40 Cal 511; 17 Bom 260; 7 All 29 and 7 All 757 (F B), Rel. on. A I R 1922 Mad 405 and A I R 1927 Mad 970, not Foll. [P 339 C 2]

G. Gopalaswami—for Petitioners.

A. Narasimha Aiyar—for the Crown.

T. G. Singaravelu—for Respondents.

Bardswell, J. — The petitioners in this case have been convicted of rioting as punishable under S. 147, I. P. C., and of the substantive offence of voluntarily causing simple hurt as punishable under S. 323, I. P. C. They have been sentenced in all to three months' rigorous imprisonment each, two months for the rioting and one month for causing hurt. They have also each of them been fined Rs. 15 for each offence. The only point that has now to be considered is that of whether the two separate punishments were legal.

For the petitioners reliance is placed upon the decision of Curgenven, J. In re Kunnammal Mayan (1). In that case the learned Judge has held, though with some hesitation and while admitting that he saw a difficulty in arriving at his conclusion, that when a person is convicted both under S. 147 and S. 323 I. P. C. he could not be awarded a separate sentence for each of the offences. He has followed a decision, apparently unreported, of Krishnan, J. in C. R. P. 209/24 and a decision of the Lahore High Court reported in Bishna v.

1. A I R 1927 Mad 970=105 I C 828=28 Cr L J 1004.

Emperor (2). The principle of these decisions is that where the causing of the hurt is itself the particular form of the force or violence which contributed to the offence of rioting, the one was included as an ingredient of the other. Curgenvin, J., followed this principle and found it difficult to escape the conclusion that to convict for voluntarily causing hurt, where the only violence which formed the act of rioting was the hurt itself, offends against the provisions of S. 71, I. P. C. A different opinion however has been expressed by Wallace, J. in a decision which is also to be found in Anthoni Udaiyan v. Royappudayar (3). Therein he has pointed out that "Causing hurt and using force are not the same thing and the word 'force' does not appear in the definition of 'hurt.' The use of criminal force is no doubt an ingredient of the offence of rioting and the use of force may be an ingredient in the offence of rescuing cattle, but the force necessary to constitute these offences may fall far short of 'causing bodily pain' and, if further force is used which does cause bodily pain, then, in my view, the offences which involve and are complete by more use of criminal force have been exceeded and that excess constitutes another offence, viz. that of causing hurt or causing whatever more serious form of bodily hurt has been the result."

With all respect I think that the view thus taken by Wallace, J., is correct; and what he says as to force is equally applicable to violence. The same view has also been taken by a Divisional Bench of this Court, Krishna Ayyar v. Emperor (4), a decision which does not appear to have been brought to the notice of either of the learned Judges whose decisions, above referred to, appear in Kunnamal Mayan, In re (1). In that case it is remarked that "it has been well settled that where the object of an unlawful assembly is to cause hurt, then a member of that unlawful assembly, if he is convicted under S. 147, cannot be convicted also under S. 323 or S. 325 read with S. 149, except that such of the accused as are proved themselves to have caused hurt in the raiyat would be rightly convicted of the offence of hurt in addition to the offence of rioting."

The convictions therefore of certain of the accused under Ss. 147 and 323, I. P. C., were confirmed. With regard to the constructive S. 149, Gour's commentary shows that there is a conflict of opinion between the various High Courts but with that section we are not now concerned, as all the petitioners in this case have been convicted of offences of hurt individually committed. Except in the case of the Lahore Court in Bishna v. Emperor (2) there seems to have been no such conflict among the other High Courts as to its being legal to inflict a separate punishment on a rioter, on a substantial conviction under S. 323, from that awarded for the offence under S. 147. This was held by the Calcutta High Court in Mohu Mir v. Queen-Empress (5) and more recently in Ram Angutha Singh v. Emperor (6). There are similar decisions in Queen-Empress v. Bana Punja (7) when the matter was considered by a Full Bench, and in Queen-Empress v. Dungar Singh (8) and in Queen-Empress v. Ram Sarup (9). Queen-Empress v. Dungar Singh (8) dissented from a previous decision of that Court to the contrary. None of these cases has been referred to by the learned Judge who decided the case in Bishna v. Emperor (2). It is the Allahabad view which has been followed in Calcutta and Bombay. As remarked in Queen-Empress v. Dungar Singh (8):

"The offence of voluntarily causing hurt or of voluntarily causing grievous hurt obviously can be committed without the commission of the offence of rioting and, in like manner, rioting can be committed without the commission of the two other mentioned offences."

This is putting in general terms what has been put more particularly by Wallace, J., in the quotation from his judgment given above. Taking this as the correct position as, in my opinion, it should be and as, indeed, has been found by a Bench of this Court to be settled, S. 71, I. P. C., can have no application. I would hold, then, that the petitioners have been properly and legally awarded separate sentences, one for rioting and one for having caused simple hurt. The sentences cannot be said to be excessive, but, seeing that this case has been hanging over the petitioners for over a year, that none of the injuries caused was of a serious character, and that they have already served out about half of their several terms of

2. A I R 1922 Lah 405=73 I C 517=24 Cr L J. 629

3. A I R 1928 Mad 18=105 I C 806=28 Cr L J 982,

4. A I R 1919 Mad 353=49 I C 337=20 Cr L J 145.

5. (1889) 16 Cal 725.

6. (1913) 40 Cal 511=18 I C 402.

7. (1893) 17 Bom 260 (F B).

8. (1884) 7 All 29=(1884) A W N 220.

9. (1885) 7 All 757=(1885) A W N 195 (F B) imprisonment, I do not think it necessary to send them back to jail. Their not being sent back is likely to be the more conducive to future harmony between them and the opposite party, and they have had their lesson. I would therefore reduce their sentences to rigorous imprisonment for the period already undergone and now set them at liberty, discharging their bail bonds. The sentences of fine and of imprisonment in default should stand as also the order for compensation to P. Ws. 1—4.

Beasley, C. J.—I agree.

P.R.S./K.S. Sentence reduced.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 340

WALSH, J.

V. K. Kelu Achan and another—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Thandavan Chettiar and another—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1667 of 1928, Decided on 12th December 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, South Malabar, in Appeal Suit No. 20 of 1927.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47—Party to suit bound by decree—Dispute in execution must be settled under S. 47.

Where the party to the suit is bound by the decree he cannot evade the rule that disputes in execution must be settled under S. 47, Civil P. C., and not by a separate suit by joining with a stranger: A I R 1930 Mad 817; A I R 1920 Bom 223 and A I R 1927 Rang 137, Dist

[P 341 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 63—Appointment of receiver under S. 92—Attachment in execution of decree—Dismissal of claim and suit under O. 21, R. 63—Sanction to sue receiver is not necessary.

A receiver was appointed under S. 92, Civil P. C. A decree was passed and in execution of the decree certain crops were attached. The plaintiff put in a claim to the property but it was dismissed. He then filed a regular suit to have his share in the property.

Held: sanction to sue the receiver was not necessary for the suit and that even if it were necessary sanction of the sub-Court was sufficient: Case law referred. [P 341 C 2]

K. Kutti Krishna Menon—for Appellants.

T. A. Ananta Ayyar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The defendant in this suit was a receiver appointed by the High Court under S. 92, Civil P. C. He got a decree in O. S. No. 191 of 1921 on the file of the Additional District Munsif's Court, Palghat, against one Andy Chettiar. The suit was against Andy Chettiar and his father, Samiyappan Chettiar, but Samiyappan Chettiar was exonerated and a decree was given against Andy Chettiar. In execution certain crops were attached. Andy's father, Samiyappan Chettiar, and his second son, Thandavan Chettiar put in a claim petition, and one Ramalinga Ayyar put in another claim petition. Both petitions were dismissed. Ramalinga Ayyar took no further action. But Samiyappan Chettiar and his son Thandavan Chettiar brought this suit to set aside the order of dismissal. The suit was resisted on the grounds; (1) that the suit is not maintainable without the sanction of the Court by which the defendant was appointed a receiver: (2) it was barred under S. 47, Civil P. C., because Samiyappan Chettiar was a party in O. S. No. 191 of 1921, and so a separate suit was not maintainable and (3) the crops attached really belonged to the judgment-debtor, and so the order dismissing the claim should be upheld. The trial Court held in favour of the receiver on all the three points and dismissed the suit, but the appellate Court decided all the three points against the receiver and decreed the suit. The last point being a question of fact there can be no second appeal on it. As regards the rest, this appeal is preferred by the defendant under two points of law.

I shall take the second point first because it is comparatively simple. The suit of Thandavan Chettiar is admittedly not barred as he was not a party to the original suit. Whether the suit of Samiyappan Chettiar would be barred would depend on whether he was exonerated because he had no interest in the property, and as there was no evidence on this point in the lower Court, I sent for the original records. It is clear from them that he was a proper party to the suit. So the decision in Abdul Sac v. Sundara Mudaliar (1) is not applicable. Goba Nathu v. Sakaram Teju (2) and U Kala v. Ma Hnim U (3), are quoted for the appellant. But in the former case it was the auction purchaser who was the plaintiff, and the Court held that he was entitled to maintain his suit against the defendants, one of whom was the original judgment-debtor, and the other a stranger, but it expressly holds that the plaintiff brought his suit in his capacity as auction-purchaser, and acquired a different set of rights from those which he had as a decree-holder. U Kala v. Ma Hnim U (3), was a case where the suit was dismissed on the ground that plaintiff was wrongly joined as a party in the previous suit having no concern with it. What has been laid down in this case was followed: Abdul Sac v. Sundara Mudaliar (1). It seems impossible to hold that where the party to the suit is bound by the decree he can evade the rule that disputes in execution must be settled under S. 47, Civil P. C., and not by a separate suit, by joining with a stranger. This would be to defeat the purpose of S. 47, Civil P. C. The suit therefore by Samiyappan Chettiar is, I consider, already not maintainable for this reason.

1. A I R 1930 Mad 817=127 I C 805=54 Mad 81 (F B).

2. A I R 1920 Bom 223=59 I C 366=44 Bom 977.

3. A I R 1927 Rang 137=101 I C 794=5 Rang 110.

The next point to be considered is whether the want of sanction of the Court with regard to the receiver invalidates the suit by Thandavan Chettiar for his half share of the property. As the plea was not taken in the written statement it is argued that the receiver waived his right. Jagannatha Sanyasiah v. Atchanna Naidu (4), referred to, is a case in which sanction was obtained during the course of trial. It is also argued that the sanction of the sub-Court was sufficient, and that the High Court only directed that the receiver should work according to the direction of the sub-Court. Ammukutty v. Manavikraman (5) was quoted in this connexion. The order of the High Court appointing the receiver is not traceable, and it is not possible to say quite definitely whether he was ordered in those proceedings to work under the direction of the sub-Court. But when the receiver took up the execution he had applied to the sub-Court and taken its leave. The evidence of D. W. 1 was that the sub-Court's order was obtained under the High Court's direction. In Ex. E, the petition filed by the plaintiffs, it is stated that the receiver was appointed to act under the direction of the sub-Court, so that it appears very likely that he was ordered by the High Court to work under the sub-Court.

On the general question of sanction

4. A I R 1921 Mad 624=70 I C 759.

5. A I R 1920 Mad 709=59 I C 568=43 Mad 793.

Miller v. Rama Ranjhan Chakravarthi (6) and U On Maung v. Ebrahim (7), may be referred to. In the latter case though objection was not taken in the lower Courts the trial was held to have been without jurisdiction. Kuppuswami Aiyar v. Suppan Chetty (8) quoted on the other side is distinguishable because the receiver had an independent duty thrown on him to grant pattas, and was liable to be sued under the Act for his failure to do so. There is however one line of argument which appears to me conclusive against the appellant. The rule forbidding the bringing of a suit against a receiver is a mere procedure of Court not resting on any statutory authority, whereas the right to bring the suit with regard to the claim under O. 21, R. 63, Civil P. C., 1908, is a statutory right: Pokker v. Kunhammad (9) and Din Mahomed v. Unna Dutta Hans Raj (10), a Lahore case, follows Madras. It is there laid down that a statutory right to sue cannot be defeated by any rule of practice. In Raja of Ramnad v. Subramaniam Chettiar (11), at p. 483 (of 52 Mad.) it has been held that a suit under O. 21, R. 63, is a continuation of those proceedings, and it would certainly appear to be very inequitable if a receiver disturbs a person in possession by taking action in execution that the latter should be deprived of his right and of the suit allowed under O. 21, R. 63, unless he first obtains permission to sue. I therefore agree with the lower appellate Court that permission to sue the receiver is not necessary, and even if it is necessary I hold the sanction given by the Subordinate Judge is sufficient. Therefore as regards the property falling to the share of Samiyappan Chettiar the appeal is allowed with costs, and it fails as regards Thandavan Chettiar's share and is dismissed with costs.

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal partly allowed.

6. (1884) 10 Cal 1014.

7. A I R 1928 Rang 175=110 I C 622=6 Rang 268.

8. (1907) 30 Mad 505=17 M L J 483.

9. A I R 1919 Mad 257=51 I C 714=42 Mad 143.

10. A I R 1931 Lah 430=133 I C 118.

11. A I R 1928 Mad 1201=116 I C 827=52 Mad 465.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 342 (1)

WALSH, J.

G. Kuppuswamy Chetty — Appellant.
v.Pakkiri Pillai and others — Respondents.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 534 of 1928 and Civil Appeal No. 25 of 1929, Decided on 11th January 1933, petition from order of Dist. Munsif, Chidambaram, D/- 5th September 1927.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 145 and O. 43, R. 1 — Order dismissing petition to arrest surety is not appealable.

An appeal does not lie from an order dismissing a petition for arrest of a surety.

[P 342 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 145—Attachment of moveables of judgment-debtor — Surety bond for production of articles — Procedure for enforcing surety bond indicated.

Where the moveables of a judgment-debtor are attached and a surety bond is executed for the production of the articles, though a separate suit to enforce the bond is not necessary, action on the bond does not fall under S. 145, Civil P. C. The proper procedure for enforcing the bond is to move the Court to make an order calling upon the surety to produce the articles or the money for which he has rendered himself liable. Without such an order under the bond, a petition for the arrest of the surety is premature: A I R 1926 Mad 1005, Ref; A I R 1919 P C 55, Rel on.

[P 342 C 2]

T. R. Srinivasa Iyengar — for Appellant.

M. S. Venkatarama Iyer — for Respondents.

Judgment. — In this case the properties of a judgment-debtor were attached and the respondents' sureties executed a bond for the production of the articles. The petitioner applied for the arrest of these persons on the ground that they did not produce the articles. The lower Court dismissed the petition mainly on two grounds: firstly that the bonds were defective as the list of articles attached had not been initialed by the parties on each page, and secondly that there must be a notice to the sureties to produce the articles for any valid order of execution to be taken against them and there was no such notice in the case of the first surety. The matter was taken in appeal to the District Court, which found that the appeal did not lie and that finding is not contested before me. The learned District Judge remarked however that "he was not at all satisfied with the manner in which the lower Court dismissed the execution petition on the merits. The surety bond is not incomplete in law by reason of the attachment list annexed to it having been signed by only one surety even though the surety who has not signed was the one who took charge of the moveables."

He was of opinion that it is a matter for evidence. Then he said:

"While I agree that the issue of a notice was necessary on the analogy of S. 145, the petition ought not to have been dismissed without calling upon the decree-holder to pay batta for notice."

He is evidently here under a misapprehension that the petition was one for notice on the sureties to produce the articles. The petitioner simply prayed for their arrest. From the decision in Rai Raghubar Singh v. Jai Indra Bahadur Singh (1) which has been followed in Sankunni Variar v. Vasudevan Nambudripad (2) it is clear that while a separate suit to enforce a bond of this nature is not necessary yet action on the bond does not fall under S. 145, Civil P. C. Their Lordships have in Raj Raghubar Singh v. Jai Indra Bahadur Singh (1), laid down the procedure to be followed where they say:

"It remains therefore that here is the unquestioned liability and there must be some mode of enforcing it and that the only mode of enforcing it must be by the Court making an order in the suit upon an application to which the sureties are parties that the properties charged be sold unless before a day named the sureties find the money."

In that case it was a question of finding money and in the present case it is a question of producing the articles or money for which the sureties rendered themselves liable on the bond. Hence the petition to arrest the sureties without having obtained an order of Court under the bond is premature and was rightly dismissed. In these circumstances this revision petition is dismissed with costs one set. The second appeal does not lie.

P.R.S./R.K. Order accordingly.

1. A I R 1919 P C 55=55 I C 550=46 I A 228=42 All 158=22 O C 212 (P C).
2. A I R 1926 Mad 1005=97 I C 787.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 342 (2)

WALSH, J.

V. S. Rm. Ramanathan Chettiar — Petitioner.

v.

V. St. N. Chidambaram Chettiar — Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1006 of 1932, Decided on 3rd January 1933, from order of Sub-Judge, Dindigul, D/- 27th July 1932.

Civil P.C. (1908), S. 63 and O. 21, Rr. 52, and 53—Money in custody Court is not assets in attaching Court unless such money is ordered to be credited to attaching Court.

There is absolutely no authority for the proposition that because a Court orders the attached property to be sent to it by a public officer, therefore the money must be considered to have been reached the Court from the date of the order or at least from the date of its receipt by the public officer.

The properties of a judgment-debtor were sold for default in payment of Government revenue and the purchase money was in the hands of the Tahsildar who conducted the sale. The decree-holder in execution of his decree asked for attachment of the money in the hands of the Tahsildar. Attachment was ordered and the Munsif wrote to the Tahsildar for sending the money. In the meantime the Tahsildar had sent the money to the Sub-Court and wrote to the Munsif that there were several notices of attachment. The decree-holder claimed priority in payment of his decree debt as he got the first attachment.

Held: that the decree-holder cannot get priority as the money continued to be in custody Court and as it was not transferred to the attaching Court to the credit of his decree: A I R 1921 Mad 213, Rel on; 7 Mad 47, Ref. [P 344 C 1, 2]

Judgment.—This is a civil revision petition preferred by the decree-holder in O. S. No. 41 of 1930, who got a decree on 2nd September 1930 in the District Munsif's Court of Palni against one Venkatachala Chetti, Zemindar of Chatrapatty. On account of default in payment of Government revenue this Venkatachalla Chetti's property (Chatrapatty village) has been brought to sale. The Tahsildar sold the village on 12th November 1931. The sale was confirmed by the Collector on 23rd December 1931 and the purchase money was in the hands of the Tahsildar who conducted the sale. The respondent, who had obtained a decree against the same judgment-debtor, filed E. P. No. 790 of 1931, on 10th December 1931, asking for attachment of the money in the hands of the Tahsildar. The District Munsif ordered attachment on 12th December 1931, which was made absolute on 15th January 1932. On 16th January 1932 the respondent asked the District Munsif of Palni to send for the amount and issue a cheque. The Tahsildar was addressed by the District Munsif, as he had not sent the money, as to why it had not been sent and whether there were any prior attachments on it. As a matter of fact the Tahsildar sent the money to the Sub-Court, Dindigul, on 6th January 1932. In his reply dated 25th February 1932 the Tahsildar stated that the first attachment was that of the District Munsif's Court. He has wrongly stated there that there was no direction from the Court to credit the amount to O. S. No. 21 of 1929 and he also said that as he had received several attachment notices the amounts could not be credited to any of the suits. The respondent claimed that he was entitled to priority in payment because he got the first attachment order on 12th December 1931. This claim has been recognized by the Subordinate Judge, and it is against this decision that this revision petition is put in.

Although the matter has been very elaborately argued for nearly two days the point in issue is perfectly simple. The matter falls under O. 21, Rr. 52 and 53 and under S. 63, Civil P. C. The property while it was being attached under decrees of more Courts than one was in the custody of a public officer, the Tahsildar. It is not disputed that the Sub-Court of Dindigul being the Court of a superior grade is the Court which had to realize such property and determine all claims thereto. Since the decision in Viswanadhan Chetty v. Arunachalam Chetty (1), it is perfectly clear that the custody Court cannot distribute money or adjudicate claims to it. It must remit it to the attaching Court and all that it can settle is which attachment was made first if the attaching Courts are of equal standing. That was a very strong case since the custody Court happened itself to be the attaching Court, yet it was held that until the money was actually transferred to the decree in which it was sought to be attached the Court continued to be merely the custody Court. Consequently, the only argument which is open to the respondent to claim priority and which has actually been adopted before me is this. Because public officers are supposed to perform their duties properly it must be held that when the attachment order was issued by the District Munsif of Palni to remit the money the Tahsildar did by a legal fiction remit it, and the assets therefore came into the hands of the Palni Court either on the date of the order itself or at least on the date when the order reached the Tahsildar. Consequently they were assets in his hands under S. 73 at the time when attachment applications had not been made by the other decree-holders to the Sub-Court of Dindigul.

1. A I R 1921 Mad 213=44 Mad 100 (FB).

Now it is clear that if this argument is to be allowed it must cover any sort of delay whether caused by negligence, delays incidental to official business, or delays in transmission through the post. There is absolutely no authority for the novel proposition that because the Court ordered the attached property to be sent to it by a public officer, therefore the money must be considered to have reached the Court from the date of the order or at least from the date of its receipt by the public officer. Admittedly the attachment per se does not create any charge or interest on the property so as to give the first attaching creditor any preferential claim. In Muthukaruppan v. Muthuramalinga (2) it was held that the words "in the custody of any Court" imply actual custody and relate back to S. 272 (a) of the old Code. That case is also authority for the proposition that there is no difference in this respect between moveable or immovable property which is attached. The learned pleader for the respondent sought to found an argument on O. 21, R. 56 which says:

"Where the property attached is current coin or currency notes, the Court may, at any time, direct that such coin or notes, or a part thereof sufficient to satisfy the decree, be paid over to the party entitled under the decree to receive the same."

It is not necessary in this case to say whether, if the District Munsif of Palni had passed such an order before the property had been also attached by the Subordinate Judge of Dindigul this would have amounted to a receipt of the assets by the District Munsif of Palni under S. 73 because as a matter of fact no such order was passed. I do not think it is necessary to discuss the immense volume of case law which has been quoted before me in this revision petition, because the order appealed against cannot be sustained excepting on the fiction alluded to above that when the order directing the Tahsildar to remit the money to the District Munsif of Palni was passed, or at least when it reached the Tahsildar, the Court not only got the custody of the money, but that it was actually transferred to the decree in O. S. No. 21 of

2. (1884) 7 Mad 47.

1929. There is absolutely no authority in support of either of these propositions. As stated above, Viswanathan Chetty v. Arunachalam Chetty (1) shows that even where the attaching and the custody Court are the same the assets would not reach the attaching Court under S. 73 until it has actually been ordered to be credited to the decree in question.

Both the learned advocates agree that the question as to whether the respondent can apply for rateable distribution at all may be left open by this Court. It is therefore not necessary for me to express any opinion on that point. The order of the learned Subordinate Judge that the respondent has priority merely on account of his being the first attaching decree-holder cannot be sustained. The revision petition is therefore allowed with costs throughout and the respondent's application is sent back to the Subordinate Judge for disposal along with the other applications.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition allowed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 344

WALSH, J.

Sathiaavel Pillai—Petitioner.

v.

Sivasami Pillai—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn No. 186 of 1929,
Decided on 14th December 1932.

 Contract Act (1872), S. 65—Suit for wages based on alleged contract — Contract not proved—Relief on quantum meruit cannot be granted unless asked.

Where a plaintiff sues for wages for work done on the basis of an alleged contract but the contract is not proved, the Court has no jurisdiction to grant relief on the principle of quantum meruit unless it has been asked for alternatively: 11 I C 820 and A I R 1930 All 545, Rel. on.

[P 344 C 2]

T. E. Ramabhadrachari—for Petitioner.

S. Nagaraja Ayyar—for Opp. Party.

Judgment.—In this case the plaintiff, the brother-in-law of the defendant, claimed that he worked in the press of the latter for about 10 months on contract at Rs. 10 a month for wages. The contract was denied, and the Court found that it was not proved. However his claim was decreed at Rs. 5 a month, in addition to the boarding which he admittedly had from the defendant.

It is contended in revision that no alternative relief on the footing of quantum meruit having been asked for, the lower Court had no jurisdiction to grant any.

I agree with that contention. Krishna Prosad Sinha v. Purnendu Narain Sinha (1), is a much stronger case, because the service there was admitted. It was held that the plea of quantum meruit not having been raised, it could not be granted : see also Roopji & Sons v. Dyer Meanken & Co. Ltd., A. I. R. 1930 All. 545 at p. 549. The plaintiff's own evidence shows that he entered on the work knowing nothing about it and learned it under a man employed by the defendant. He was getting board, and I can find in the circumstances no evidence at all from which it could be inferred with any certainty to what, if any, wages the plaintiff would be entitled. But it is unnecessary to go further into the facts of the case. The civil revision petition is allowed and the suit is dismissed with costs throughout.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition allowed.

1. (1912) 11 I C 820.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 345

CURGENVEN, J.

P. Ramaraja Nadar and others—Petitioners.

v.

T. M. P. Chidambara Nadar and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 67 of 1929, Decided on 22nd November 1932, from order of Dist. Judge, Madura, D/- 3rd March 1928.

Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 75—Ex parte order regarding binding nature of debts of father on sons—Sale—Ex parte order as to delivery of property is void—Duty of Court indicated—Civil P. C. (1908), O. 47, R. 1 and S. 151.

The father of the minor petitioners was adjudicated insolvent and the Official Receiver obtained an ex parte order that his debts were binding upon them. The property including their interests was sold by the Official Receiver and an ex parte order for delivery to the purchaser was passed.

Held: that the order passed by the Judge without notice to the petitioners was beyond his competence and void, that it was his duty ex debito justitiae to take the matter up at their instance and give them a hearing, that in such cases, there is no question of review procedure and that the order was appealable under S. 75, Insolvency Act: A I R 1932 Mad 164, Rel. on.; 6 All 65; 9 All 51 and A I R 1919 Mad 844, Expl; A I R 1922 P C 112 and A I R 1926 Mad 980, Ref.

[P 346 C 1]

M. Patanjali Sastri—for Petitioners.

K. Raja Ayyar, V. Ramaswamy Ayyar, S. Nataraja Nadar and R. Sundaralingam—for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—The father of the four minor petitioners was adjudicated insolvent and the Official Receiver obtained an ex parte order that his debts were binding upon them. The property, including their interest, was sold by the Official Receiver and purchased by respondent 1 who applied for and obtained from the Subordinate Judge, an ex parte order for the delivery of the property. After delivery had been given the minor petitioners through their mother filed an application, so styled, for review of the Subordinate Judge's order, and the learned Subordinate Judge, after framing issues and considering the circumstances, dismissed the petition. An appeal was taken from this dismissal to the District Judge who however decided that, since the order was in the nature of a refusal to grant an application for review, it fell under O. 47, R. 7 and no appeal would lie. This finding of the District Judge has been challenged in this revision petition.

It is no doubt true that the petition preferred by the petitioners to the Subordinate Judge was in form an application to review his former order and it quoted R. 1, O. 47, Civil P. C., as well as S. 151 of the Code, both being attracted by S. 5, Provincial Insolvency Act. But I think we have to look at the general circumstances in which that application came to be made. It may be regarded, I think, from two points of view. In the first place, it was in the nature of an application to set aside an ex parte order, and the question therefore arises whether the review machinery is appropriate to achieve such a purpose. There are some older cases such as Bibi Mutto v. Illahi Begam (1) and Ghansham Singh v. Lal Singh (2) which hold that the absence of a party owing to failure of notice is a sufficient reason within O. 47, R. 1. In these cases a review of judgment was given on such a ground. The same opinion was expressed by Kumaraswami Sastri, J., in Virupakshigowd v. Bandappa (3) the learned Judge holding that the party could resort to either of the two alternative procedures, O. 9, R. 13 or O. 47, R. 1. Since those judgments were passed however the Privy

1. (1884) 6 All 65.

2. (1887) 9 All 61 (FB).

3. A I R 1919 Mad 844=50 I C 327.

Council in Chhajju Ram v. Neki (4) has given a construction of R. 1, O. 47 which no longer, I think, permits such a broad meaning to be put upon the words "sufficient reason." Following that decision Devadoss and Waller, JJ., in Narayana Chettiar v. Muthu Chettiar (5) came to the conclusion that the absence of a party's pleader is not a fit ground for review. It appears to me therefore that the circumstances in which the application was made to the Subordinate Judge would not justify recourse to the review procedure and that if he was competent to reconsider his former order it must have been under the general powers conferred by S. 151, Civil P. C.

It is upon this broader ground, I think, that his second order can be justified. Whatever power he had to give delivery of the property belonging to the insolvent and the petitioners, I think it is quite clear that an order passed without notice to the petitioners was beyond his competence and, so far as they were concerned, void. I have dealt in very similar circumstances with the effect of such an order and with the power of the Court to remedy it in Guruvammal v. Arumuga Padayachi (6) and I would beg that the observations made there be considered as equally applicable to the circumstances of the present case. It seems to me that the first order of the Subordinate Judge was passed without jurisdiction and was void against the petitioners and that it was no less than his duty ex debito justitiae to take the matter up at their instance and to give them a hearing after rectifying his omission in the first place to give them notice. In circumstances such as these there is no question about resorting to the review procedure, and no question therefore of the restriction of appeals in the case of reviews can arise. Regarding then the second order, which was taken in appeal to the learned District Judge, as properly speaking, the first valid order passed by the Subordinate Judge, I do not think there is any question that it would be appealable under S. 75, Provincial Insolvency Act. I must accordingly hold that it is so appealable,

4. A I R 1922 P C 112=72 I C 566=19 I A 144=3 Lah 127 (P C).

5. A I R 1926 Mad 980=97 I C 1008=50 Mad 67.

6. A I R 1932 Mad 164=136 I C 769.

and allowing this petition I set aside the order of the lower appellate Court and remand the case for hearing upon the merits. Costs to abide and to be provided for in the appellate decree.

P.R.S./K.S.

Case remanded.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 346

WALSH, J.

Rethinasami Thevar — Defendant — Petitioner.

v.

Nataraja Thevar—Plaintiff—Opposite
Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 171 of 1931, Decided on 25th October 1932, from decree of Sub-Judge, Tiruvarur, D/- 22nd December 1930.

(a) Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), Sch. 2. Art. 28—Suit for recovery of property as heir of deceased daughter is not cognizable by Small Cause Court.

A suit by a father for recovery of property as heir of his deceased daughter is not cognizable by a Small Cause Court: A I R 1926 Mad 37, Foll; 27 All 622 and 27 I C 773, not Foll.

[P 347 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 21—Acquiescence of parties cannot give jurisdiction.

Even when objection is not taken, when there is a complete absence of jurisdiction, acquiescence of the parties cannot give the Court jurisdiction in the matter: 41 I C 276; 36 I C 457 and A I R 1924 Cal 536, Rel on, [P 347 C 1]

Watrap S. Subrahmanya Ayyar—for Petitioner.

N. S. Srinivasa Ayyar—for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—The suit was one for the recovery of jewels and vessels given by the plaintiff as stridhanam to his deceased daughter. The plaintiff's case was that the defendant paid him Rs 75 towards the price of his daughter and that the marriage was in Asura form and therefore he was the heir of his deceased daughter. The defendant's case was that the marriage was in the Brahma form. In the written statement a preliminary ground was taken in para. 6 that the suit was not maintainable on the small cause side. There is no reference to this matter of jurisdiction in the judgment, but there is nothing to show that it was given up. The plaintiff was given a decree and this revision petition is put in on the initial point that the suit was not maintainable as a small cause one as it falls under Art. 28, Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. There is a decision of this Court,

Samu Asari v. Anachi Ammal (1), directly in point where Ramesam, J., held that such a suit will not be cognizable as a small cause suit and declined to follow Chhedi v. Gulabo (2) which latter case was followed in Fika Sahu v. Chirkat Sahu (3). Although the decision in this Court was that of a single Judge with great respect I agree with it. It was sought to distinguish that case by saying that it was proved that the deceased had no other property and that the learned Judge said:

"under the circumstances it is obvious that the plaintiff is suing for the whole of the property of her deceased daughter who died intestate."

In this case the plaintiff also sues as the heir of his daughter and so apparently for the whole property, but even if the property sued for is not the whole property, but is only a share of property of the intestate I fail to see how it will not bring the suit under Art. 28. Even if the objection had not been taken in the lower Court, Ram Prosad v. Sri-charan Mandal (4), which followed Su-randranath v. Bangsi Badan (5) and Priyanath Sardar v. Mohendranath Paik (6), are authorities that even when objection is not taken when there is a complete absence of jurisdiction acquiescence of the parties cannot give the Court jurisdiction in the matter. In my opinion the petition must be allowed with costs of both the Courts and the decree set aside. The plaint should be returned by the learned Subordinate Judge, to whom it will be sent by this Court, for delivery to the party to be presented to the proper Court.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition allowed.

1. A I R 1926 Mad 27=91 I C 561.
2. (1905) 27 All 622=2 A L J 388 = (1905) A W N 134.
3. (1915) 27 I C 773.
4. (1917) 41 I C 276.
5. (1916) 36 I C 457.
6. A I R 1924 Cal 536=70 I C 316.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 347

Full Bench

BEASLEY, C. J., RAMESAM, SUNDARAM
CHETTY, WALSH AND BURN, JJ.

Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras.

v.

Madura Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd.

Ordinary Civil Petn. No. 243 of 1931,
Decided on 28th September 1932.

Income-tax Act (1922), S. 10 (2) (iii)—Capital of fund contributed by subscribers—Subscribers to get back amount paid with fixed interest—Such guaranteed interest is interest on capital borrowed and can be deducted in computing profits.

The capital of a fund was contributed by A and B class subscribers at the rate of Re. 1 per mensem per share. The subscribers in A class went on paying their subscriptions for 45 months and those in B class for 84 months. As soon as A class subscriber had paid Rs. 45 for one share in this manner, his account, in so far as that particular share was concerned, was closed, and he was paid off with a sum of Rs. 50. A "B" class subscriber was paid off at the end of 84 months with Rs. 102-8-0. The amounts of Rs. 5 and Rs. 18-8-0 thus paid out to A and B class subscribers in excess of their subscriptions to the fund were called "guaranteed interest."

Held: that the fund was really a company for the purpose of income-tax even though it was registered under the Companies Act, that the subscribers occupied the position of lenders to the fund of sums of money upon which the fund contracted to pay fixed interest, that the guaranteed interest was interest on capital borrowed for the purpose of fund's business and that it could be deducted in computing the profits of the business: The New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles, (1889) 14 A C 381, Expl. and Dist.; A I R 1923 Mad 604 (S B) and 3 I T C 385, Diss. from.

M. Patanjali Sastri—for Commr. of Income-tax, Madras.

S. Srinivasa Aiyangar for K. Rajah Aiyar—for Respondent.

Beasley, C. J.—This reference by the Commissioner of Income-tax, Madras, under S. 66 (2), Income-tax Act (11 of 1922), has arisen out of an assessment to income-tax of the profits of the Madura Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd. This fund was incorporated as a limited company in 1894 under the Companies Act (6 of 1882). Its memorandum of association shows that the objects of the fund are: (a) to enable persons to save money; (b) to invest their savings in landed property and Government promissory notes; (c) to secure loans at favourable rates of interest and to grant loans on sound securities; to grant loans to societies registered under the Co-operative Credit Societies Act; and (d) to do all such other things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects. The nominal capital of the fund at its inception was stated to be Rupees 2,99,964 divided into 3,571 shares of Rs. 84 each to be paid in monthly instalments of one rupee. This was raised in 1896 and again in 1902 by the addition of further shares of the same denomination. In 1906 a new class of shares of Rs. 45 each was introduced, and in 1909, 1914, 1915, 1923, 1927 and 1929 the numbers of the shares in both classes were raised until in the last year the capital was stated to be Rupees 38,70,000 divided into 30,000 shares of Rs. 84 each ("B" class shares) and 30,000 shares of Rs. 45 each ("A" class shares).

The capital of the fund is contributed by these "A" and "B" class subscribers at the rate of Re. 1 per mensem per share. The subscribers in "A" class go on paying their subscriptions for 45 months and those in "B" class for 84 months. As soon as an "A" class subscriber has paid Rs. 45 for one share in this manner, his account in so far as that particular share is concerned, is closed, and he is paid off with a sum of Rs. 50. A "B" class subscriber is paid off at the end of 84 months with Rs. 102-8-0. The amounts of Rs. 5 and Rs. 18-8-0 thus paid out to "A" and "B" class subscribers in excess of their subscriptions to the fund are called "guaranteed interest." During the year of account (ending with 20th January 1930) there was also a third class of subscribers ("C" class). These subscribers did not pay any periodical contributions but paid a subscription of Rs. 2 on entry into the fund. They had no share in the profits but were entitled to obtain loans from the fund and their accounts were closed when they repaid their loans or at the expiry of three years from the date of admission if they did not take any loan. For the purpose of this reference it is not necessary to take into account the existence of these subscribers in "C" class.

The rules make provision for the receipt of fixed and current deposits from any person, whether a subscriber to the fund or not. The rules also make provision for the grant of loans not only to subscribers but also to non-subscribers and to registered Co-operative Societies. But in fact no fixed deposits have been received, and no loans have been made either to non-subscribers or to Co-operative Societies. The reference has therefore been made, and falls to be dealt with on the assumption that all the transactions of the fund are with its own members. It is the members of the fund who subscribe the capital, and it is to the members of the fund that the subscribed capital is lent. During the year of account the fund received a total income of Rs. 1,00,907-8-10 made up as follows:

	Rs.	as.	ps.
From 'A' and 'B' class subscribers. ...	84,205	14	2.
From 'C' class subscribers ...	2,808	4	8.
„ others ...	12,698	8	0.
House rent ...	1,194	14	0.

From this the fund claimed to be entitled to deduct Rs. 86,559-3-8 made up as follows:

	Rs.	as.	ps.
Guaranteed interest to 'A' and 'B' class subscribers ...	68,462	13	3.
Interest paid to 'A' and 'B' class subscribers on fixed deposits ...	6	9	3.
Interest paid on security deposits and provident fund ...	850	14	5.
Interest paid to non-subscribers ...	139	12	0.
Establishment ...	10,308	5	1.
Contingencies ...	6,790	13	10.

This left a net profit according to the fund of Rs. 14,348-5-2, and that figure was returned to the income-tax officer. The income-tax officer made certain minor adjustments. He allowed in the main all the items of expenditure except the item of Rs. 68,462-13-3. He held that this was a profit earned during the year and therefore liable to be assessed to income-tax. His decision was based mainly upon the point that the fund had dealings with C class shareholders who were not subscribers of capital and not sharers in the profits. He was influenced also by the fact that according to the by-laws loans could be made to persons who were not members of the fund and to Co-operative Societies. As already indicated, these circumstances have to be left out of account in dealing with this reference.

The Fund appealed to the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax and the appeal was dismissed. The Fund thereupon applied to the Commissioner of Income-tax to make a reference to this Court under S. 66 (2), Income-tax Act. The Commissioner considers, agreeing with the income-tax officer and the Assistant Commissioner, that this amount of Rs. 68,000 distributed in the shape of "guaranteed interest" forms part of the profit earned by the fund, (by trading with its own members), and that this would be assessable to income-tax if it were not for the decision of this Court in Board of Revenue v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund (1). The Commissioner admits that the facts of the present case are very similar to those of the Mylapore Fund case (1), and as the decision in the Mylapore Fund case (1) was based upon the case of New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2), he has framed the questions which he desired to refer in the following form:

1. A I R 1923 Mad 684=76 I C 833=47 Mad 1 (SB).

Question 1.—Are the facts of this case such that the ruling in New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2), can be applied to them?

Question 2.—If the fund is conducting a business and making a profit, is the “guaranteed interest” to be deducted in computing that profit as being “interest on borrowed capital” within the meaning of S. 10 (2) (iii) of the Act?

With regard to the first question what were the facts in New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2)? They were that the life insurance company had no shares or shareholders. The only members were the holders of participating policies, each of whom was entitled to a share of the assets and liable to all losses. A calculation was made by the company of the probable death-rate among the members and of the probable expenses and other liabilities, and the amount claimed for premiums from members was commensurate therewith. An account was annually taken and the greater part of the surplus of such premiums over expenditure referable to these policies was returned to the policy-holders as bonuses, either by addition to the sums insured or in reduction of future premiums. The remainder of the surplus was carried forward as funds in hand to the credit of the general body of members. It was admitted that the income derived by the company from investments and from all transactions with persons not members, was assessable to income-tax. It was held by Lords Watson, Bramwell, Herschell and Macnaghten, Lord Halsbury L. C., and Lord Fitz Gerald dissenting, that no part of the premium income received under participating policies was liable to be assessed to income-tax as profits or gains under Sch. D. Lord Halsbury, L. C. and Lord Fitz Gerald held that the surplus returned or credited to members was liable to income-tax. In this case the majority of their Lordships distinguished the case from Last v. London Assurance Corporation (3), the income in that case being derived from transactions with persons not members and not from mutual insurance between members only. That is what the headnote to Styles' case (2) states. Lord Watson on p. 393 says:

“The main and to my mind essential difference between Last's case (3) and the present consists in the fact that in this case the policy-holders are not outsiders, because they, and they alone, are members of the company. In Last's case (3) the insured and the corporation stood to each other in no other relation than that of creditor and debtor; they were in all respects separate and independent bodies, without community of rights and interests, their sole connexion being a right on the one part to pay premiums, with a counter obligation, when these had been duly settled, to pay the sum insured,” and on p. 394:

“When a number of individuals agree to contribute funds for a common purpose, such as the payment of annuities, or of capital sums, to some or all of them, on the occurrence of events certain or uncertain, and stipulate that their contributions, so far as not required for that purpose shall be repaid to them, I cannot conceive why they should be regarded as traders, or why contributions returned to them should be regarded as profits. That consideration appears to me to dispose of the present case. In my opinion, a member of the appellant company, when he pays a premium, makes a rateable contribution to a common fund, in which he and his co-partners are jointly interested, and which is divisible among them, at the time and under the conditions specified in their policies.”

On p. 396 Lord Bramwell stated with reference to the facts in Last v. London Assurance Corporation (3) as follows:

“Certain persons agree to insure their lives among themselves on the principle of mutual insurance. They take care to admit none but healthy lives. They contribute according to rates fixed by approved tables, and they invite other persons to come in and join them by insuring their lives on similar terms. The rates fixed by the tables are taken as being sufficient to provide for expenses, to meet liabilities, and to leave a margin for contingencies. What is to become of the surplus if everything goes right? The practice is to take an account every year of assets and liabilities and to give the insured the benefit of the surplus, either by way of reduction of premium or by way of addition to the sum insured. It can make no difference in principle whether the surplus is so applied or paid back in hard cash. In either case it is nothing but the return of so much of the amount contributed as may be in excess of the amount really required. I do not understand how this excess can be regarded from any point of view or for any purpose as gain or profit earned by the contributors. I do not understand how persons contributing to a common fund in pursuance of a scheme for their mutual benefit—having no dealings or relations with any outside body—can be said to have made a profit when they find that they have overcharged themselves and that some portion of their contributions may be safely refunded. If profit can be made in that way, there is a field for profitable enterprise, capable, I suppose, of indefinite expansion."

2. (1889) 14 A C 381=59 L J Q B 291=61 R T 201.

3. (1885) 10 A C 438=55 L J Q B 92=53 L T 634=34 W R 233=50 J P 116.

At the bottom of p. 412 he continues:

"I do not think that that decision Last v. London Assurance Corporation (3) compels your Lordships to hold in a case like the present, where the business is a mutual undertaking pure and simple, that persons who contribute in the first instance more than is wanted, and then get back the difference, are earning gains or profits, and so liable to income tax."

On p. 410 Lord Herschell says:

"Once show that profits are made by trading and they are taxable, whatever the purpose to which they may be applied. But in the present case I cannot see that the income sought to be taxed is profit arising from trading."

It is obvious that in one respect—and it certainly is an important one—the facts of this case differ from those in New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2). In the latter case the fund sought to be taxed was the surplus arising out of an over-estimate. It was nothing that had been earned. A member who paid a premium of £50 got back not more than £50 contributed by him either by means of a cash bonus or by reduction of premium. Their Lordships in that case were therefore dealing only with a surplus. Here the facts are quite different because the guaranteed interest is certainly interest which has been earned. New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2) therefore can have no application here; nor could the decision in Board of Revenue v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund (1) have been rightly based upon it. The only support that it gives to that case are the observations of Lord Bramwell, Lord Watson, Lord Macnaghten and Lord Herschell, where the fact that the business was a mutual undertaking pure and simple was so strongly emphasized. Style's case (2) was also the basis of this High Court's decision in English and Scottish Co-operative Society v. Commissioner of Income tax (4). It is not necessary to refer to the facts of that case because the point for consideration is shortly set out in the concluding portion of Odgers, J.'s judgment as follows:

"If therefore this return of interest on the share capital to the persons called share holders, namely, the Co-operative Wholesale Society and Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society is simple, as it appears to be and as is sworn by the affidavit of Sir Fairless Barber, merely a return on the amount of its subscribed capital or handing back of a portion of the amount subscribed and in no sense a dividend on the profits earned by the company, then I think it falls within the ambit of Styles' case (2); and that if that is so, it is simply a return in another form of the rateable dividend in R. 20 (e). It is clearly not a division of profits in the ordinary sense but is purely notional, for we are told that no money changes hands. This notional profit is calculated on the difference between the market price of the commodities at the time they are distributed to the members of this society and the actual cost of their production to the society when ascertained. This so-called profit is distributed in the six ways provided for by R. 20, and on this so-called profit after allowing for depreciation, interest is to be paid on the share capital, i. e., to the only two members of the society in proportion to their contributions to the capital. I am unable to see on the facts of this case as disclosed in the rules and on the only evidence we have, namely, the affidavit of Sir Fairless Barber, any evidence of a profit being made by sales to persons outside the membership of the society. There is no evidence as stated above that any other societies except the two named in R. 5 have been admitted to membership. It seems to me that this is a case of a purely mutual concern. We know that the whole of the produce raised and exported by the Association is in fact divided among these two members."

I think that it is hardly right to say that New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2) governed either of the two cases referred to—and it does not govern this case—although the observations made by their Lordships in their judgment certainly support the result arrived at in both. I am not disposed to say therefore that those two cases were wrongly decided although, in my opinion New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2) does not govern them. I would answer question 1 in that way although in my opinion it is not necessary here to consider the effect of the ruling in New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (2) on the two income-tax decisions of this High Court to which reference has already been made, because I think that this question can be answered favourably to the assessee in question 2 for reasons which I will now give. Of course if no profit has been earned, then no question of deductions under S. 10 (2) (iii), Income-tax Act, arises. But on the assumption that the assessee has earned a profit, I will proceed to the consideration of question 2. Is this guaranteed interest on capital borrowed for the purposes of the business where the payment of interest thereon is not in any way dependent on the earning of profits? For the Income-tax Commissioner it is contended that this 'guaranteed interest is interest on the share capital, that interest on share capital must always be dependent upon its being earned by profits being made and that it is not capital borrowed for the purposes of the business within S. 10 (2) (iii), Income-tax Act.

It is to be observed that by Cl. (5), Memorandum of Association, there is to be a nominal capital divided into shares and it is further argued that there is here a share capital, that the proprietors of the shares are share-holders and that the interest earned is profit made by the assesseees. On the other hand the contention of the assesseees is that this is not really share capital at all but subscription capital raised by recurring subscriptions paid periodically by the share-holders or subscribers, that the share-holders or subscribers are creditors of the company and that as they must under the Articles of Association be repaid the accumulated subscriptions plus the guaranteed interest at the end of the specified period, these subscriptions cannot really be share capital, although so described, and of course a share-holder cannot demand repayment of his share-capital. The Income-tax Commissioner meets this point with the argument that the provision for the return to the share-holders of the amounts contributed by them is ultra vires because this fund has chosen to get itself registered under the Companies Act and it is therefore a company and it must have capital and it is repugnant to the provisions of the Companies Act for the capital of the registered companies to be returned to its share-holders. Capital, of course, can be reduced but only with the sanction of the Court. In my opinion, the fact that the fund is registered under the Companies Act and is subject to its provisions is not by any means conclusive of a question which arises under the Income-tax Act.

The fact is that the machineries of the Companies Act cannot be in its entirety adopted to a fund such as this. This fund and many similar are not really companies but Mutual Benefit Societies with a fluctuating capital dependent entirely upon the amount subscribed by their members and the repayment of subscriptions plus guaranteed interest to the members. The capital is bound to vary from time to time and to say that, whenever this capital is reduced by a repayment to the members, it is necessary to get the sanction of the Court would be to make such funds unworkable. In my opinion although these subscriptions are called share-capital, they are not really so as that description is understood in its ordinary sense; nor is this capital borrowed for the purpose of the business as that capital is ordinarily understood. It is something different from both. That this is so and that the legislature recognized the distinction is clearly shown by the explanation to S. 10 (2) (iii), Income-tax Act, where recurring subscriptions paid periodically by share-holders or subscribers in such Mutual Benefit Societies as may be prescribed are to be "deemed" to be capital borrowed within the meaning of S. 10 (2) (iii). If it is "deemed" to be capital borrowed then it is not really capital borrowed but is for the purpose of the Income-tax Act to be so considered. The fact that no Mutual Benefit Societies have as yet been prescribed may be due to various causes with which we are not really here concerned. What we are concerned with is the apparent intention of the legislature to recognize an association of persons not having share-capital but borrowing and lending from and to themselves for the mutual benefit of themselves.

This borrowing is to be deemed to be a borrowing of capital and that being so, the interest on it can be deducted from the profits and gains of the Association under S. 10 (2) (iii), Income-tax-Act, if the payment of interest upon it is not in any way dependent on the earning of profit. For the Income-tax Commissioner it is argued that if the subscriptions to this fund are to be treated as capital borrowed for the purpose of the business, the payment of interest upon that capital is dependent upon the earning of profits. If there are no profits, it is argued, there can be no interest; and a company can only pay interest out of profits and cannot pay interest out of capital. The answer to that contention is that this fund is really not a company and that it is not paying interest on its share-capital but is paying a fixed interest to its members or subscribers.

who occupy the position of lenders to the fund of sums of money upon which the fund contracts to pay fixed interest and for which I am of the opinion the lender can sue the fund in the same manner as anyone who has lent money to a partnership or firm at a certain rate of interest could sue that partnership or firm for repayment of the principal and interest. It seems to me therefore that the guaranteed interest is interest on capital borrowed for the purpose of the fund's business and that its payment is not in any way dependent on the earning of profits. I would accordingly answer Question No. 2 in the affirmative.

Ramesam, J. — I entirely agree with my Lord's judgment. As I delivered the judgment in Board of Revenue v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd. (1), it is only proper to add that I also agree with my Lord in thinking that the actual decision in Style's case (2), did not govern the Mylapore Fund case (1) :

"although the observations made by their Lordships in their judgment certainly support the result arrived at"

in the latter case, and that it cannot be said that the case in Board of Revenue v. Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund, Ltd. (1) was wrongly decided. That case arose under S. 9, Act 7 of 1918. It is unnecessary now to say how exactly that decision ought to have been put, whether the guaranteed interest payable to subscribers was not "profits" at all within the meaning of S. 9, Act 7 of 1918, or whether the subscriptions paid by the subscribers should be considered to be analogous to borrowed capital. It seems to me that the legislature considered the decision right and sought to put it on the latter basis by adding the explanation to sub-Cl. (iii), S. 10 (2) of the present Act, the sections being otherwise similar. The fact that no Mutual Benefit Societies have been prescribed under the explanation does not, as pointed out by my Lord, prevent us from adopting the construction now adopted. The assesses will have his costs which we fix at Rs. 500.

Sundaram Chetty, J. — I am in entire agreement with the judgment of my Lord the Chief Justice and have nothing to add.

Walsh, J. — I agree with my Lord and have nothing to add.

Burn, J. — I agree with my Lord the Chief Justice.

P.R.S./K.S.

Reference answered.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 352

CURGENVEN, J.

Thangavelu and another—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Nachu Narayana Padayachi and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1670 of 1928, Decided on 6th December 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Trichinopoly, in Appeal Suit No. 13 of 1927.

Minor—Sale by guardian—Two-thirds of purchase money for purpose binding on minor—Sale is binding on minor.

A sale of a piece of land was executed by the mother of the minors for Rs. 600 out of which Rs. 400 which was binding on the minor was to discharge a debt incurred by their father and the balance was spent for purchasing another piece of land for the minor :

Held : that the sale must be held binding on the minor because the preponderance of the purchase money was for a binding purpose : A I R 1927 P C 37; A I R 1927 P C 244 ; A I R 1927 P C 246 and A I R 1929 P C 143, Ref.

[P 353 C 1]

K. S. Desikan—for Appellants.

K. Bhashyam Ayyangar and T. R. Srinivasan—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The suit was brought by two minor plaintiffs to set aside a sale-deed executed by their mother to defendant 1. The consideration for the sale, which was of a piece of land, was Rs. 600 of which Rs. 400 is now admitted to be binding upon the minors, both the Courts having found that it was in discharge of a debt incurred by the father. The remaining Rs. 200, it is said, was expended upon purchasing another piece of land for the minors. It is unnecessary here to go into the question whether a guardian has ordinarily a right to spend money for a purpose like this as the case, in my view, is one of those in which the sale must be held binding because the preponderance of the purchase money was for a binding purpose. That as a legal principle has been laid down now by the Privy Council in a series of cases such as Sri Krishna Das v. Nathu Ram (1); Suraj Bhan Singh v. Sah Chain Sukh (2) and Gowri Shankar v. Jiwan Singh (3). It must always remain a question of applying this principle and therefore of the discretion of the Court as to what proportion should be found to be binding in order to constitute the sale binding as a whole. In the present case a third of the money was not appropriated to an incontestably binding purpose. My attention is drawn to a Privy Council case: Ram Sunder Lal v. Lachhmi Narain (4) in which out of a total consideration of Rs. 10,000 and odd some Rs. 7,000 had been found to be not of this character. I cannot accordingly say that the lower appellate Court has committed any error of law in holding that in the circumstances of this case the sale ought to be confirmed and the suit dismissed. I accordingly dismiss the second appeal with costs.

1. A I R 1927 P C 37=100 I C 130=54 I A 79=49 All 149 (P C).

2. A I R 1927 P C 244=105 I C 257 (P C).

3. A I R 1927 P C 246=107 I C 4 (P C).

P.R.S./K.S. Appeal dismissed.

4. A I R 1929 P C 143=51 All 430 (P C).

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 353 (1)

PANDALAI, J.

Balgis Beevi Ammal—Petitioner.

v.

Hathija Beevi Ammal—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 1755 of 1931,
Decided on 23rd March 1932.

Court-fees—Defendant making claims as to items in account to be taken in suit, is not required to pay court-fees on sums claimed—Accounts.

Where the defendant is not putting forward any counter-claim, but is making various claims as to items in the particular account to be taken in the suit, he cannot be asked to pay court-fees on those sums. [P 353 C 1, 2]

C. A. Seshagiri Sastri—for Petitioner.

P. Rajamannar for Govt. Pleader—
for the Crown.

Judgment.—In deciding that defendant 1 should pay court-fees on the four sums mentioned in paras. 6 to 9 and the postscript of his order, the learned Judge would have been well advised in not relying so much on check slips issued by the court-fee examiner, but on some provision of law which requires the payment of the court-fee. The learned Government Pleader is quite rightly unable to support the order as it is quite erroneous. The defendant is not putting forward any counter-claim, if such a proceeding is known to the procedure laid down by the Code of Civil Procedure, but making various claims as to items in the partition account to be taken in the suit. The order of the learned Judge is set aside. The costs of this petition will be costs in the cause.

P.R.S./S.N.

Order set aside.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 353 (2)

WALSH AND BARDSWELL, JJ.

Srinivasalu Naidu—Appellant.

v.

Ramakrishna Naidu—Respondent.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 75 of 1929.
Decided on 26th October 1932.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100—Finding of fact.

No second appeal lies from a concurrent finding of fact of the lower Courts if such finding has been given on a point raised by the parties and on which the parties had let in evidence: 29 Bom 1 (P C), Dist. [P 355 C 1]

(b) Contract Act (1872), S. 253—Partnership—Dissolution may be inferred from circumstances.

A partnership is not dissolved merely because it is closed, but it must be dissolved in one way or other known to and recognized by the law.

[P 355 C 2]

A dissolution of partnership at will can be inferred from circumstances of the case. In a suit for partnership accounts neither the plaintiff in his plaint nor the defendant in his written statement had stated that the partnership had dissolved; there was only the allegation that the partnership came to an end. But the plaintiff in his examination-in-chief and cross-examination let in evidence which tended to prove dissolution:

Held: that there was dissolution of the partnership even though it was not expressly stated or raised in the plaint: A I R 1925 All 787; A I R 1930 Lah 378 and A I R 1921 Cal 538, Appr.; 36 Mad 185, Rel on. [P 356 C 2]

(c) Practice—Burden of proof—Point that onus had been wrongly thrown cannot be taken for first time in Letters Patent Appeal.

The point that onus of proof had been wrongly thrown on a party cannot be taken for the first time in Letters Patent Appeal when it has not been taken either in the first appeal or second appeal: A I R 1927 P C 238, Rel on. [P 356 C 2]

(d) Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 106 and 120—Suit for accounts of dissolved partnership—Art. 106 applies and not Art. 120.

A suit for accounts in respect of a partnership which has already been dissolved is governed by Art. 106 and not by Art. 120: A I R 1919 Mad 838, Dist.; A I R 1921 Cal 538 and A I R 1930 Lah 378, Ref. [P 357 C 2]

(e) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 103—Evidence not properly considered—High Court will interfere.

Even with the concurrent findings of the two lower Courts as to fact, if they have not properly and fully considered all the evidence put before them, the High Court will interfere.

[P 357 C 2]

A. Viswanatha Ayyar and A. Ramaswami Ayyar—for Appellant.

K. Krishnaswami Ayyangar and A. Seshachari—for Respondents.

Bardswell, J.—This is an appeal from the decree and judgment of Reilly, J., in S. A. No. 1223 of 1927. The suit was originally filed in the Court of the District Munsif of Arni by two plaintiffs who are now the respondents before us. Their case was that on 20th December 1916 they and the defendant, who is now the appellant, entered into an oral agreement that they should invest capital in equal shares and carry on at Arni a business in groundnuts, paddy and rice on certain terms, under the name and style of Sri R. A. Subbarayulu Naidu Co. They carried on business accordingly at Arni from 20th December 1916 till August-September 1918. Then they stopped the mandi business at Arni as they found it unprofitable; but, after an interval, they "decided to continue the said company" and carry on business instead at their own village, Vallam, by buying groundnuts and stocking them. This business at Vallam, in which they were assisted by sub-partners, was carried on from 17th November 1919 till January-February 1930, after which misunderstandings arose.

The suit was brought for dissolution of the "company" and the taking of accounts. In a written statement, which is by no means as clear as could be wished, the defendant has admitted that there was the partnership at Arni, though he denies the truth of some of the details of the partnership as set out in the plaint. The written statement goes on to say that "the partnership came to an end in 1918 as alleged in the plaint," though the plaint has alleged no such thing, and that :

"it is wrong to state that it was continued into fresh partnership as alleged by the plaintiffs. Both of them were independent and unconnected transactions."

In para. 5 it speaks of a new business, but in para. 6 it talks of a new partnership. In para. 9 it says that the "partnership property" was stored in the plaintiff's house; in para. 11 it refers to the "partnership accounts;" in para. 18 it speaks of the "partnership concern" and in para. 19 the "partnership assets" are mentioned, but in none of these paragraphs is it stated whether the partnership referred to was at Arni or at Vallam or at both places. In conclusion it is prayed in the written statement that the accounts may be looked into and settled. It nowhere says in so many words that there was a dissolution of the Arni partnership or sets up that the claim of the plaintiffs in respect of that partnership was barred by limitation. The suit was contested, and decided by the District Munsif, with reference to the first part of issue 2 which runs thus : "Was the partnership at Arni continued at Vallam?"

The learned District Munsif has found, on dealing with that issue, that the Vallam trade was not a continuation of the Arni partnership, but that it was an entirely new business, with no relation to the old one except that the men among whom disputes have arisen are the same in respect of both the trades. He has also found that, in this view, the Arni partnership must be deemed to have been dissolved, at the latest, on 2nd November 1919, and that, as the suit was filed more than three years after that date, the claim for accounts in respect of the Arni partnership was barred under Art. 106, Lim. Act. He has therefore granted a decree for the taking of accounts of the Vallam partnership only. This decree was confirmed in a brief judgment on first appeal by the District Judge of North Arcot; but, on second appeal, Reilly, J., ordered that accounts should be taken of the Arni business also. In his judgment he has said that, even if the business conducted by the parties at Arni was that of a different partnership from that which subsequently conducted business at Vallam, the plaintiffs are entitled to have accounts taken of the Arni business, unless the partnership concerned in that business was dissolved more than three years before the date of the suit.

He remarks that the defendant did not allege dissolution of that partnership at any particular date, nor can his written statement be reasonably construed as pleading dissolution at all. He also expresses the opinion that the evidence on which the two lower Courts have held that there was a dissolution of the Arni partnership was not, in the circumstances, sufficient to establish the fact of such dissolution, and says that the two lower Courts appear to have been confused by the question whether the business at Arni was the business of the same partnership as that which conducted the business at Vallam, and to have overlooked the importance of the question whether and when there was a dissolution of the first partnership, if there was more than one partnership. This confusion he attributes mainly to the way in which the defendant's written statement was drafted.

On this appeal the main contentions are that Reilly, J., erred in setting aside the concurrent judgment of the two first Courts, failing to note that they were based on a finding of fact, and that in any case the evidence conclusively shows that the Arni business was dissolved over three years before the suit was filed. Now in this case there has certainly been a concurrent finding, both in the first Court and the appellate Court, that there was a dissolution of the Arni partnership. The learned District Munsif has found that “there was a radical change contemplated in the partners inter se and the firm became dissolved.”

The learned District Judge finds it clearly established that “the Arni partnership came to an end” by which he evidently means that it was dissolved, as he has expressly discussed the question of whether the first Court was correct in holding that there had been a dissolution of the partnership. Under S. 100, Civil P. C., a second appeal does not lie to the High Court on a pure question of fact. Our attention has however been called to Shivabasava v. Sangappa (1) in which it was held that S. 584, to which the present S. 100 corresponds, applied to a case in which the lower appellate Court had disposed of a suit upon a case not raised by the parties and to which the evidence had not been directed. We shall have occasion to show that evidence has been directed to the point of whether the Arni partnership had been dissolved. What has to be considered more carefully is the point as to the suit having been decided upon a case not raised by the parties. These and various connected points have to be dealt with and decided by us, before we can come to a conclusion as to whether or no the learned Judge who heard the second appeal disposed of it on a pure question of fact.

That there was a dissolution of the Arni partnership was not at all the case

1. (1904) 29 Bom 1=31 I A 154 = 8 Sar 720 (P C).

as set up in the plaint. The plaintiff's case was that the partnership was continuing, and so the learned District Munsif should not have attached importance as he has done, to there being no allegation in the plaint “that the Arni trade dissolved within three years of the suit.” Naturally there could be no such allegation. Even the written statement does not say in so many words that the Arni partnership was dissolved. The word “dissolution” does not occur in the written statement at all. The most that it says is that the partnership, meaning the Arni partnership, came to an end in 1918. It has been held by the Allahabad High Court, in Chunilal v. Sheo Charan Lal (2) that a partnership will not be dissolved merely because it is closed, but it must be dissolved in one way or other known to and recognized by the law. S. 253, Contract Act, provides that a partnership is dissolved by the death of any partner, or if any member of a partnership ceases, from any cause whatever, to be so. Dinmahomed v. Khansi Ram, A. I. R 1930 Lah. 378, shows that a partnership is not necessarily dissolved because the work of the partnership ceases, though at the same time it indicates that dissolution of a partnership can be inferred from the facts of the case. We may however note that this decision uses the expression “came to an end” as an equivalent for dissolution and that that very expression “came to an end” is what is used in the written statement with reference to the Arni partnership though it is, unfortunately, qualified by the words “as alleged by the plaintiffs,” whereas the plaint has no such allegation. In Harimohandas Poddar v. Sundarson Poddar (3) the Calcutta High Court held that the stoppage of a business cannot be treated as the dissolution of a firm. The defendant in this case has, indeed, set up in his written statement something more than a mere stoppage but, at the same time, he has not explicitly and definitely set up the fact of dissolution. Nor is there any issue framed as to dissolution. These points, no doubt, tell in favour of the plaintiffs.

But the matter does not rest there. It is represented that the plaintiffs were prejudiced in that they were taken un-awares by the first Court's taking for the first time at the trial a point that was not covered by the issues. But we have to point out that if a new point was thus taken it was due to what was stated by plaintiff 1 himself even in his examination-in-chief. In the course of it he has produced Ex. 4, a rough calculation which he says was written by the defendant in his presence though the defendant is noted in the first Court's judgment as having denied that he wrote it. This document is dated 2nd November 1919, 15 days before the new business at Vallam was started, and the plaintiff has said as to it :

2. A I R 1925 All 787=47 All 756 = 89 I C 122.

3. A I R 1921 Cal 538=66 I C 811.

"The defendant directed me to receive the debts due from the debtors of the firm at Arni. He also calculated the interest due on my capital and his capital. It was ascertained that the defendant owed Rs. 446-15-8. It was prepared to find out how much the defendant owed me. The Arni accounts were not settled and they were not carried forward to the Vallam accounts."

This evidence shows that he was perfectly aware that there was a question as to whether the partnership at Arni had been dissolved. He may have thought that the question was involved in the first part of issue 2, or he may have had some other reason of his own for letting in evidence on the subject. At any rate there we have his evidence in chief, on which he was, of course, cross-examined. In his cross-examination he admits that Ex. H was prepared before the Vallam business began though he says it was ten days before, which is not quite accurate. He says, further, that "all that remained to do in connexion with the Arni business was to collect the outstandings, pay up the debts and ascertain the profit and loss," and he explains the figure of Rupees 446-15-8 in the following way: A certain amount was found due to the defendant and a certain amount to the plaintiffs. These amounts were totalled, and divided by three. The defendant then deducted what was to his credit and said that he owed Rs. 446-15-8. If he had paid that amount there was nothing more to adjust "as between ourselves." Plaintiff 1 himself accepted the correctness of Ex. H. And, again, plaintiff 1 says :

"When the Vallam trade commenced no money or assets of the Arni trade were taken for the Vallam trade. We invested a separate capital for the Vallam trade."

No doubt what was elicited in his cross-examination gave far clearer evidence on which a finding of a dissolution of partnership could be based than what he stated in his examination-in-chief, but when he had given evidence in chief that bore on the subject of dissolution, he cannot be said to have been taken by surprise by that subject being raised, and it was only in the natural course of events, following on what he had said in chief, that his further statements in cross-examination were elicited from him. It is true that there was no re-examination but we cannot hold in the circumstances that this was because he was unaware that the question of dissolution had been raised. It may very well have been because no re-examination could explain away what he had admitted. It has been argued that no heed should be paid to the evidence of P. W. 1 as the onus had been wrongly laid on the plaintiffs who should therefore not have been called upon to lead evidence. Peddi Reddi Jogi Reddi v. Chinvaibbi Reddi, A. I. R. 1929 P. C. 13, has been cited to us in this connexion and also, among other cases the Privy Council decision in Official Assignee of the estate Cheah Sova Taun v. Khoo San Chcow (4) and The Official Receiver v. W. K. M. R. M. Chettiar Firm (5). We do not however find it necessary to go into the various decisions that have been cited to us in this connexion as even 'taking it that the burden of proof was wrongly thrown on the plaintiffs, that appears to have been done with their acquiescence, and certainly no point as to the onus of proof having been wrongly thrown was taken on either first appeal or second appeal. It is too late for the point to be taken now, even if it be taken correctly. It was decided by the Privy Council in Secy. of State v. Girijabai (6) that when the plaintiff had accepted the onus on the issues as they were framed and evidence was gone into on that basis and the parties proceeded to trial accordingly it was too late for the plaintiff to raise before their Lordships, on appeal from an appellate decision of the High Court of Bombay, the question of whether the onus of proof had been wrongly thrown on him. We may also add that this is not a case where the evidence is nicely balanced, so as to make it material, when all the evidence is before the appellate Court, where the onus lies. The concrete evidence, in fact, is practically all one way, and it is the evidence of one of the plaintiffs.

4. A I R 1930 P C 265=128 I C 662.

5. A I R 1931 P C 75=58 I A 115 = 9 Rang 170=131 I C 767 (P C).

6. A I R 1927 P C 238=106 I C 1=54 I A 359 =51 Bom 957 (P C).

Next as to the point of limitation. When the learned District Munsif found that a question of limitation arose from the evidence for the plaintiffs he was entitled and indeed obliged to deal with it. He had evidence before him from which it was open to him to draw the inference that the Arni partnership was dissolved on 2nd November 1919, over three years before the suit. It is however contended before us that, even taking it that the partnership was dissolved on 2nd November 1919, the suit was within time in that Art. 120, which allows a period of six years within which to bring a suit, applies and not Art. 106 which allows only three years. Art. 106 is as to a suit for an account and share of the profits of a dissolved partnership, while Art. 120 is as to suits for which no period is provided in Sch. 1. In this connexion we are referred to Narayana-swami Mudali v. Gangadhara Mudali (7) in which it was held that Art. 106 is inapplicable to a suit which is in terms one for dissolution of a partnership even though the parties treated it as one for an account of a dissolved partnership. That decision however dealt with a partnership which had not been dissolved at the time when the suit was filed, and the Court had to fix the time from which the partnership should cease to exist. In the present instance, though the suit was brought as one for the dissolution of an existing partnership, it has been found as a fact that the partnership had been dissolved over three years before the suit was filed. As pointed out by the Calcutta High Court in Haramohandas Poddar v. Sudarshan Poddar (3) Art. 106 applies only to dissolved partnerships, but the finding in this case is that the Arni partnership has been dissolved. Dinmohamed v. Kanshi Ram, A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 378, is to a similar effect to Haramohandas Poddar v. Sudarshan Poddar (3). Had the suit been brought for the dissolution and taking of accounts of a partnership that had not been dissolved, then we should have to follow these decisions and hold that not Art. 106 but Art. 120 was applicable; but, when the suit was brought in respect of a partnership that had already been dissolved, the matter is otherwise. We cannot hold that it is open to a party to bring a suit saying that a partnership still subsists when it has, in fact, been dissolved, and then claim the benefit of Art. 120 on the basis of an untrue contention. We agree with the two lower Courts that, on their findings of fact, Art. 106 applied to the case so as to make the relief prayed for in respect of the Arni partnership barred by limitation.

7. A I R 1919 Mad 838=48 I C 89.

There remains one more point to be dealt with. Reilly, J., has remarked that Exs. K and Z (1) had not been considered. Were this the case there might be ground for interfering, even with the concurrent findings of the two lower Courts as to fact, in that they had not properly and fully considered all the evidence that was put before them. But, with all respect, we have to point out that the learned Judge is not accurate in this remark. The learned District Munsif has very specifically dealt with Ex. Z (1) along with which Ex. K, which he has not mentioned, has to be read, and found that no weight attaches to it. By Ex. K the parties jointly sold some properties of the Arni business on 12th December 1919, that being after the Vallam business had started, and the sale proceeds of Rs. 1,000 were utilized for the Vallam business, and credited to it in Ex. Z-1 on the following day. It is admitted that the entry as to these sale proceeds is the only entry in the Vallam accounts relating to the Arni business, and the view of the District Munsif is that:

"all that it amounts to is that the parties brought in their common property as their contribution for the Vallam trade," a view which he was entitled to take. The learned District Judge has not referred in terms to Exs. K and Z (1) in his appeal judgment, but he has relied on the admissions of plaintiff 1 as P. W. 1, and one of these admissions he could legitimately take as covering the case of these exhibits. This is when P. W. 1 says that it was a separate capital that was invested for the Vallam trade. Reilly, J., has discussed the effect of Ex. H and the statements of P. W. 1 as to it, but the findings of the two lower Courts on that matter were findings of fact which could not be questioned on second appeal. Lindley on Partnership states that a dissolution of partnership at will can be inferred from circumstances, and this has also been held in the Privy Council decision in Joopody Sarayya v. Lakshmanaswamy (8) from which the learned District Munsif has extracted a long quotation which is applicable to the facts in this case. In this case there were undoubtedly circumstances from which it was open to the two lower Courts to draw the inference which has been drawn by them as to the partnership having been dissolved. In conclusion we hold that the two lower Courts have arrived at a finding of fact, and that as there was no legal impediment or objection to their arriving thereat, it was not competent for the learned Judge who heard the second appeal to interfere with their decrees on the grounds stated by him, which amount to a difference from them on a question of fact, the point of limitation being merely a corollary to what they found as to the facts. We therefore allow the appeal and restore the decree of the learned District Munsif, with costs to the appellant-defendant in the Court of the District Munsif and the District Judge and in this Court in second appeal and on this appeal.

P. R. S. / K. S. Appeal allowed.

8. (1913) 36 Mad 185 = 19 I C 513 (P C).

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 358

BARDSWELL, J.

Chintapatla Venkatanarasimha Ramchandra Rao and others—Petitioners, In re.

Civil Misc. Petn. No. 3987 of 1932, Decided on 4th October 1932 against order of Dist. Judge, Kistna, D/- 30th October 1929.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 41, R. 3—Memorandum of appeal not registered is not appeal—Continuance of concession for completing it cannot be given

A memorandum of appeal which has not been registered is not to be regarded as an appeal but only as a memorandum of appeal presented to the Court. As long as there are defects in it, all that the Court can do under O. 41, R. 3 is to return it and give the party a chance of putting it again in a complete form; and any time that it allows for re-presentation is only by way of concession. Hence a continuance or extension of the concession cannot be demanded as a matter of right at any rate after the expiry of the nominal period of limitation within which the appeal can be presented: A I R 1927 Cal 775 Rel. on. and A I R 1932 P C 165, Dist.

A party failed to complete the memorandum of appeal even though it was returned to him thrice and sufficient time was allowed each time to represent it in a complete form.

Held: that it must be rejected. [P 360 C 1]

P. Satyanarayana Rao—for Petitioners.

Order.—This is a petition for excusing the delay in representing a Memorandum of Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeal. The memorandum of appeal was first filed on 14th April 1930. It was returned on 11th June 1930 for revision of the cause-title and preamble and of certain affidavits and the stamping of the decree of the first Court. The time allowed was one week but the re-presentation was not made till 19th December 1930, that is after a delay of 155 days. The memorandum was again returned on 24th December 1930, because provisions of law had not been entered, because the affidavit did not contain certain information, because the cause title and preamble needed revision and because the petitions had not been properly stamped. The re-presentation this time was on 30th April 1931, the delay being one of 114 days. Once again the memorandum was returned because the decretal order of the first Court still remained unstamped, because some of the requisitions made on the previous return had not been satisfied and for other reasons. The re-presentation on this occasion was not till 2nd August 1932, after a delay of 386 days. Even then, after all this immense delay, all the requisitions had not been complied with. The actual period of delay that tells against the petitioners is 627 days.

The reasons given for the delay by Mr. P. Satyanarayana Rao are that the clients did not send him the full instructions to comply with the requisitions of the office, and that as soon as the papers were returned he wrote to his clients to send the money, but that, owing to the dullness of the money market, they sent the money only recently. The petition for excusing delay was put in on 19th December 1930 and relates only to the delay in first re-presentation. There has been no supplementary petition and no supplement to the first petition in respect of the delays which have subsequently occurred. The reasons given for the first delay are not adequate while those given for the subsequent delays are nil. The delays cannot therefore be excused.

On my holding that the delays could not be excused Mr. Satyanarayana has gone on to contend that it is not open to me to reject or dismiss the memorandum of appeal, but that the most that I can do is to order that his clients must pay the costs of the appeal in any event. He has referred to the various provisions of law under which an appeal can be rejected or dismissed, but the only one to which I find it necessary to refer is O. 41, R. 3 which allows for the rejection of a memorandum of appeal that has not been admitted. Provisions of law as to how an appeal can be dealt with after admission have nothing to do with this case. Mr. Satyanarayana, indeed, calls to notice the Privy Council decision in Nagendranath v. Suresh Chandra, A. I. R. 1932 P. C. 165, in which it was held that any application by a party to an appellate Court, asking it to set aside or revise a decision of a subordinate Court, is an appeal within the ordinary acceptance of the term, and that it is no less an appeal because it is irregular or incompetent. But that case, which has to deal with a matter of limitation and has no concern with the point now under consideration, was one in which what was held to count as an appeal had been admitted and heard as such. It does not overrule the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Bidhu Bhusan Bakshi v. Kalachand Roy, A. I. R. 1927 Cal. 775, in which it has been held that an appeal cannot be held to have come properly before a Court until it has been registered. Neither does it deal with the case, with which I shall have to deal later, of a memorandum of appeal which, at the time of presentation, is incomplete. In agreement with the Calcutta decision I shall, then take it that the memorandum of appeal now under notice, in that it has not been registered, is not to be regarded as an appeal that is before this Court but has only to be considered as a memorandum of appeal that has been presented to the Court. I have next to consider O. 41, R. 3 (1). This provides that "when a memorandum of appeal is not drawn up in the manner hereinbefore described it may be rejected or be returned to the appellant for the purpose of being amended within a time to be fixed by the Court, or be amended then and there."

How a memorandum of appeal is to be drawn up is set out in O. 41, R. 2 (1) which provides that it shall set forth, concisely and under distinct heads, the grounds of objection to the decree appealed from. Now in the present case the memorandum of appeal, as at first presented, was defective in some of its grounds. Three of them contained clerical errors and from a fourth there was an omission. But still, in spite of these defects, the grounds as originally stated were intelligible, and I think that it would be standing too much on technicalities to say that the appeal was not drawn up in the prescribed manner because of the defects that were found in them; while of course there were other grounds to which no objection was found and in respect of which the memorandum of appeal was in time. I do not then think that the memorandum of appeal under notice can be rejected under the provisions of O. 41, R. 3.

I cannot, however, follow Mr. Satyanarayana when he contends that, if the memorandum of appeal cannot be rejected under that rule, it cannot be rejected at all. As I have already said, this case has to be regarded as one of appeal that has not yet been admitted and not as one of an appeal that is before the Court as such. Before an appeal is admitted it has to be completed. This is a matter so obvious that no rule is necessary for it, and I can find nothing in the Privy Council case already referred to that runs at all to the contrary. Now, in the present instance, the memorandum of appeal as presented was not complete. Not only were there the defects, to which I would not attach too much importance, in some of the grounds, but there were also a number of other defects which were of a more serious nature. One of these was that the decree in the Court of first instance had not been stamped, nor indeed has it been stamped even yet. Another was the absence of affidavits as to how persons named as legal representatives held that position. Even yet those affidavits are not sufficient. As long as there are such defects the memorandum of appeal cannot be entertained and all that the Court can do is to return it and give the petitioners the chance of putting it again in a complete form. Any time that it allows for re-presentation is only by way of concession, and a continuance or extension of the concession cannot be demanded of it as a matter of right, at any rate after the expiry of the normal period of limitation within which an appeal can be presented. In the present instance, at the time of the first return, a week was allowed for re-presentation, but the re-presentation was only made after 155 days by which time the limitation period had long expired. On the occasions of the other two returns no time was fixed, but it has to be taken that the representation was to be made within a reasonable time and representations cannot be said to have been made in a reasonable time when they have been made after intervals, respectively of 114 and 386 days. Nor can it be said that the petitioners had no notice that they should not be dilatory. After the first return the case was put on the board on 17th July 1930 and yet the re-presentation was not till 19th December 1930. After the second return the case was put on the board on 6th January 1931 and the re-presentation was not till 30th April 1931; and after the third return it was put on the board on 13th July 1931 and the representation was not till 2nd August 1932.

Even now the memorandum of appeal is not complete, and certainly no further time can be given for putting it in proper form. I hold that it is hopelessly out of time and I therefore reject it.

P.R.S./K.S.

Petition rejected.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 360

ANANTAKRISHNA AYYAR, J.

Kandaswami Chettiar—Petitioner.

v.

A. R. M. Annamalai Chettiar—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Petn. No. 407 of 1928, Decided on 14th July 1931, against order of Sub-Judge, Tuticorin, D/- 7th September 1927.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 55 — Arrest of A in execution—B filing surety bond—On construction of his bond held that B could not be discharged from his liability in circumstances of the case—Deed—Construction.

A was arrested in execution of a decree. A surety bond the construction of which was in dispute was then executed by B. The surety bond was as follows: The said A has been brought under arrest before the Court. The said A intends to present an insolvency petition within one month from this date. I have deposited the decree amount in Court as security for the due presentation of the insolvency petition, and, until its disposal, I shall hereby undertake to produce the said A either before this Court or before the Official Receiver until he presents the insolvency petition and is adjudicated and discharged. If the said A fails to present the insolvency petition within one month from this date, or if I fail to produce the said A when so ordered by the Court in the course of those proceedings or in execution, I hereby agree to make the deposit amount liable for the decree debt of the said A. A applied to be adjudicated an insolvent. He was directed to apply for discharge. Subsequently he applied for his discharge. The Court however dismissed the application relying on the report of the Official Receiver that the outstandings shown were unrealizable and that a large credit was given to a woman without any security. After the said order refusing to grant a discharge to the insolvent, the surety filed an application that he may be discharged from his liability under the surety bond.

Held: that the words of the surety bond in the case were clear that the liability enured not only till an application for discharge was filed, but till there was discharge, therefore the surety's obligation could not be deemed to have ceased the moment the application for discharge was filed by the insolvent. The wordings of the bond were on a proper construction, within the scope of S. 55, Cl. (4). Unfortunately for the surety no order of discharge, not even a conditional discharge having been passed according to the terms of the bond, the application was premature and he was not entitled to the relief claimed by him: Mad. Appeal No. 224 of 1927, Dist.; 16 All 37 and AIR 1929 Lah 262, Ref. [P 361 C 1, 2; P 362 C 1]

(b) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 41 — Insolvency proceedings do not end on mere adjudication—Discharge has to be obtained.

The insolvency proceedings do not end on mere adjudication. The insolvent's presence and help are greatly needed so long as the estate has not been fully administered but continues to be in the hands of the Official Receiver. Simply because a person has been adjudicated insolvent, and he has applied for discharge it cannot be said that the proceedings in insolvency have terminated, and so long as no order of discharge has been obtained the insolvency proceedings should be deemed as pending. [P 362 C 2]

K. S. Ramabhadra Ayyar — for Petitioner.

K. Venguswami Iyer — for Opposite Party.

Judgment.—Kulandavelu Chettiar defendant in S. C. Suit No. 1319 of 1922 on the file of the Sub-Court, Madura, was arrested in execution of that decree. Then the present petitioner Kandasami Chettiar executed a surety bond the construction of which is in dispute before me. The surety bond is dated 24th September 1923 and the relevant portion is as follows:

"The said Kulandavelu Chettiar has been brought under arrest before the Court. The said Kulandavelu Chettiar intends to present an insolvency petition within one month from this date. I have deposited the decree amount in Court as security for the due presentation of the insolvency petition, and, until its disposal, I shall hereby undertake to produce the said Kulandavelu Chettiar either before this Court or before the Official Receiver until he presents the insolvency petition and is adjudicated and discharged. If the said Kulandavelu Chettiar fails to present the insolvency petition within one month from this date, or if I fail to produce the said Kulandavelu Chettiar when so ordered by the Court in the course of those proceedings or in execution, I hereby agree to make the deposit amount liable for the decree debt of the said Kulandavelu Chettiar."

Kulandavelu Chettiar applied in I. P. No. 12 of 1923 to be adjudicated an insolvent. He was directed to apply for discharge by 17th December 1926. Subsequently he applied for his discharge. The Court however dismissed the application relying on the report of the Official Receiver that the outstandings shown were unrealizable and that a large credit of over Rs. 500 was given to a woman without any security. After the said order refusing to grant a discharge to the insolvent, the surety filed the present application on 4th May 1927 praying that he may be discharged from his liability under the surety bond. The learned Subordinate Judge has dismissed the application on the ground that the surety bond stipulates that the surety is liable until a discharge is obtained; and as no discharge has been obtained the learned Subordinate Judge held that under the terms of the surety bond the surety was not entitled to the relief claimed by him. The surety has accordingly filed the present revision petition to the High Court. On his behalf it was argued by his learned advocate that on a proper construction of the surety bond it must be held that the obligation subsists only so long as an application for discharge has not been filed; and in support of that argument an unreported decision of a Bench of this Court was strongly relied upon. I am unable to agree with that contention. In my view the words of the surety bond in the present case are clear that the liability enures not only till an application for discharge is filed but till there is discharge. I have already quoted the relevant portion of the surety bond. It clearly says "until he presents the insolvency petition and is adjudicated and discharged." I am therefore unable to agree that the surety's obligation ceased the moment the application for discharge was filed by the insolvent. The unreported case relied upon by the learned advocate for the petitioner, namely, A. A. A. O. 224 of 1927, does not apply to the facts of the present case. The wordings of the surety bond in that case were

"this surety bond shall remain operative until the above insolvent shall put in a discharge application and an order is passed therein."

The learned Judges held that the moment a discharge application was filed and an order was passed the surety's obligation under his bond ceased. The bond in that case did not specify that the obligation was to enure till discharge was obtained. It therefore seems to me that the unreported judgment is not really applicable having regard to the wordings of the surety bond before me. Then it was argued that so much of the surety bond as contained any provision outside S. 55, Civil P. C., should be taken to be ultra vires and not enforceable in those proceedings, and reliance was placed on Janaki Das v. Ram Parthab (1) and Aishan Bi v. Mahabir Parshad (2). The answer to this contention will largely depend upon the interpretation of S. 55, Cl. 4, Civil P. C. That clause is to the following effect:

"Where a judgment-debtor expresses his intention to apply to be declared an insolvent and furnishes security, to the satisfaction of the Court, that he will within one month so apply, and that he will appear when called upon, in any proceeding upon the application or upon the decree in execution of which he was arrested, the Court may release him from arrest, and if he fails so to apply and to appear, the Court may either direct the security to be realized or commit him to the civil prison in execution of the decree."

It will be seen that the section contemplates a security bond to be in order if it contains words to the effect that the judgment-debtor would appear when called upon "in any proceeding upon the application," etc., the application contemplated being the application for insolvency. In my view the wordings

1. (1893) 16 All 37=(1893) A W N 203.

2. A I R 1929 Lah 262=118 I O 438.

of the present bond are, on a proper construction, within the scope of S. 55, Cl. (4). I construe the words:

"if I fail to produce the said Kulandavelu Chettiar when so ordered by the Court in the course of these proceedings," to mean that so long as the insolvency proceedings are in force and are pending in Court, the judgment-debtor—insolvent—shall—when called upon—appear before the Court and if he should commit default the surety's liability should continue. Therefore as I construe the surety bond in question, the clause in question is not beyond the scope of S. 55 of the Code. Then it was argued that having regard to the fact that the opposing creditor has not really taken any active steps in the course of insolvency, he should not be heard to argue against the prayers in the surety's application. For my part I cannot understand the conduct of the opposing decree-holder in this case. But the question before me is not whether his conduct is up to the high water mark or not, but whether having regard to the wordings of the surety bond and to the fact that no order of discharge—absolute or conditional—has been obtained by the insolvent, the surety is entitled to the relief claimed in this application at present. Ss. 41, 42 and 43, Provincial Insolvency Act, have been referred to. Discharge may be either absolute or conditional. And any order of discharge, however conditional it might be would, according to my construction of the surety bond, be enough to discharge the surety from the obligations of his bond. But unfortunately for the surety no order of discharge—not even a conditional discharge—has been passed in this case. That being so according to the terms of the bond, his application is I think premature and he is not at present entitled to the relief claimed by him.

Finally it was contended that all that the surety can be called upon to do under the terms of his bond at present is that the insolvent should be asked to appear before the Court, and if the surety manages to produce the insolvent before the Court, the learned advocate for the petitioner argues that the obligations under the surety bond cease. I am unable to agree with that contention however much I might sympathize with the surety having regard to the circumstances of the case. The insolvency proceedings do not end on mere adjudication. The insolvent's presence and help would be greatly needed so long as the estate has not been fully administered, but continues to be in the hands of the Official Receiver. Simply because the judgment debtor has been adjudicated insolvent and he has applied for discharge (which application has not been granted), it cannot be said that the proceedings in insolvency have terminated; and it seems to me that so long as the insolvency proceedings are really pending and so long as (according to the terms of the surety bond in question) no order of discharge has been obtained the surety should be under an obligation to produce the judgment-debtor whenever called upon to do so by the Court. That being so I am unable to grant the request of the surety in the present case. I therefore dismiss this revision petition; but having regard to the conduct of the decree-holder, who now opposes the petition, I think this is a proper case in which I should decline to give him his costs of this petition.

P.R.S./B.V.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 362

WALSH, J.

R. V. Ranga Ayyar—Appellant.

v.

Sundararaja Ayyangar and others — Respondents.

Appeal No. 27 of 1929, Decided on 4th January 1933, against appellate order of Dist. Judge, Ramnad, D/- 20th August 1928.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 7—Power of executing Court to go into the disputed points of fact stated—Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47.

When there is no want of the jurisdiction apparent on the face of the decree the party in execution cannot raise a disputed point of fact which, if his contention is true, would have deprived the Court of its jurisdiction to pass a decree in that matter : 28 Mad 84 ; A I R 1922 Mad 197 and A I R 1921 All 118 (F B), Dist.

[P 363 C 2]

A. Nagaswami Ayyar—for Appellant.

S. Narayana Ayyangar—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The appellant is the assignee of a mortgage decree against certain property passed on 20th September 1924. Defendants 1 and 2 filed written statements, but they were subsequently declared ex parte. The assignment to the appellant was recognized, but when he went to take out execution defendant 2 raised objections that the land in question was service inam and not alienable. The executing Court, the District Munsif's Court of Srivilliputtur, wrote a very short judgment as follows :

"The inam title deed Ex. 2 is proof positive that the inam in question is an enfranchised one. So items 2 to 5 are liable to be sold."

It is abundantly clear both from this judgment and from that of the lower appellate Court that the assignee decree-holder contested as a question of fact that this was an enfranchised inam and on the facts the executing Court found in his favour. In the lower appellate Court the learned District Judge held that the executing Court misconstrued the inam title-deed when it construed it as an enfranchised inam. He clearly puts before himself the question he has to decide in para. 4 :

"The first question to decide is whether the inam is an unenfranchised one and could not be sold."

Then in para. 10 he says that it is argued that even assuming that the inam had been unenfranchised, the inam may have been that of the melwaram only and not of the land itself. The learned District Judge concludes on the strength of the inam register as regards this that the lands themselves were inam. Before him a very serious objection was taken that it was not open to the executing Court to go into this question at all or to question the decree as there was no apparent want of jurisdiction on the face of it. This objection the learned District Judge overruled. But it seems to me to be absolutely sound. The cases relied upon by him and also for the respondent before me are clearly distinguishable. Rajah of Vizianagaram v. Dantivada Chelliah (1) was cited. There it is stated :

"Though the record prior to and inclusive of the decree makes no allusion to the fact, yet in the subsequent proceedings the land is admitted to be service inam being the emoluments attached to the office of village carpenter which is among the offices comprised in the Madras Hereditary Village Offices Act (Act 3 of 1895)."

I need not go into the question here whether when there is such a decree which in its form does not disclose any want of jurisdiction but when the property to be proceeded against is admittedly inalienable the executing Court can go into the question and decide whether the Court which passed the decree had no jurisdiction. Anjaneyalu v. Sri Venugopala Rice Mill Ltd. (2) is also a case where there was no dispute about the fact that the properties sought to be sold by the Court was the property whose alienation was forbidden as opposed to public policy. In Katwari v. Sita Ram Tiwari (3) there was also no question that the land sought to be alienated was land which could not be alienated under specific enactments on the ground of public policy. The question therefore in this case is very simple, and it is whether when there is no want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the decree the party in execution can raise a disputed point of fact which if his contention is true would have deprived the Court of its jurisdiction to pass a decree in that matter.

I am quite clear that there is no authority quoted to this effect and the doctrine would obviously have most disastrous consequences ; for instance in a suit for rent in raiyati lands in an estate tried by a revenue Court without objection and where a decree passed therein becomes final it is clearly not open in execution proceedings for the judgment-debtor to urge that after all the lands are not raiyati lands but kamatom lands and that therefore the trying Court had no jurisdiction, and it would be clearly most improper for the executing Court to embark in execution on an investigation into a disputed matter of fact of this sort. The point of fact in this case was, so far, from having been admitted, that the executing Court came to one conclusion and found that the land was an enfranchised inam whereas the lower appellate Court came to the opposite conclusion. I consider that neither Court had any jurisdiction to go into this disputed question of fact at all and as there was no want of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the decree they were bound to execute it. It is not necessary therefore to discuss the other points raised by the appellant since I consider that the appeal must be allowed with costs here and in the Court below. The order of the District Munsif will be restored.

P.R.S./K.S.

Appeal allowed.

2. A I R 1922 Mad 197=45 Mad 620.

3. A I R 1921 All 118=63 I C 264=43 All 547 (F B).

1. (1905) 28 Mad 84=14 M L J 468.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 364

MADHAVAN NAIR, J.

Medavarapu Narasayya—Appellant.
v.Vadlamudi Somayya and another— Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 2291 of 1927, Decided on 23rd March 1931, against decree of Sub-Judge, Ellore, in A. S. No. 17 of 1927.

Part-performance—Doctrine applies where contract is in its own nature enforceable.

One of the necessary conditions for applying the doctrine of part performance is that the contract to which the doctrine of part performance refers must be such as in its own nature is enforceable. Agreement of sale of immovable property of a Hindu minor entered into on his behalf by his guardian is not binding on the minor and enforceable specifically against him even though the debts binding on the minor are discharged by the consideration paid for the sale and consequently the doctrine of part performance does not apply to such a contract: A I R 1928 Mad 407; A I R 1930 Mad 298 and A I R 1930 Mad 84, Rel on; 39 Cal 232; A I R 1930 Cal 457; A I R 1921 Bom 401 and A I R 1928 Mad 830, Ref. [P 366 C 1]

N. Rama Rao—for Appellant.

S. Varadachariar and V. Pattabhirama Sastri—for Respondents.

Judgment.—Defendant 2 is the appellant. Defendant 1 was a minor. On his behalf his guardian executed a contract of sale of the suit lands in favour of the plaintiff on 19th May 1923. The appellant (defendant 2) obtained a sale-deed of the same lands from defendant 1 on 13th July 1925. The suit out of which this second appeal arises was instituted by the plaintiff for the specific performance of the contract of sale executed in his favour by the guardian of the minor, defendant 1, on his behalf. Defendant 2 contended that he was a bona fide purchaser of the suit lands for proper consideration, without notice of the contract of sale in favour of the plaintiff and that the contract in plaintiff's favour is not binding on him.

Both the Courts found that the contract in plaintiff's favour executed by defendant 1's guardian was supported by proper consideration and was for purposes binding on the minor. The lower Courts also found that the appellant had notice of the contract of sale in favour of the plaintiff and that he was not a bona fide purchaser for proper consideration. On these findings the plaintiff was given a decree for specific performance of the contract in his favour. In support of the decree the learned Subordinate Judge relied on the decision in Chidambaram Swamigal v. Ramakrishna Reddiar (1) in which it was held by Devadoss, J., that under the Hindu law it is competent to the guardian of a minor to enter into a valid contract for the sale of his immovable property for the purpose of discharging the debts of the minor's father for which the property in the minor's hands would be liable and that such a contract of sale can be enforced against the subsequent purchaser of property with notice, even though the latter has brought it for a higher price than that stipulated under the prior contract.

Subsequent to the disposal of the appeal by the Subordinate Judge, the decision in Chidambaram Swamigal v. Ramakrishna Reddiar (1) was reversed by Wallace and Thiruvengkatachariar, JJ., in a Letters Patent appeal preferred against that decision: see Ramakrishna Reddiar v. Chidmabara Swamigal (2). The learned Judges held that an agreement of sale of immovable property of a Hindu minor entered into on his behalf by his natural guardian, assuming the same to have been entered into for necessity, is not binding on the minor and enforceable specifically against him or a subsequent transferee of the properties from the guardian who took with notice of the agreement. The appellant relying on this decision argues that the second appeal shall be allowed and that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed.

Having regard to the decision in Ramakrishna Reddiar v. Chidamabara Swamigal (2), Mr. Varadachariar for the plaintiff-respondent frankly conceded that he could not support the lower Court's judgment on the ground on which it has been based by the learned Subordinate Judge, but he contended that the judgment could be maintained on the statement appearing in the appellate judgment under point 4 (whether defendant 2 had notice of the contract of sale in favour of plaintiff and whether he was a bona fide purchaser for proper consideration)

"that the plaintiff has been in possession of the suit property since the date of Ex. A in 1923"

1. A I R 1924 Mad 863=82 I C 926.

2. A I R 1928 Mad 407=108 I C 282.

His argument is, since the debts binding on the minor were discharged by the consideration paid by the plaintiff for the sale, and since he was put in possession of the property in pursuance of the contract, though the contract is not itself enforceable, the plaintiff has a good title to the property on the equitable ground of "part performance." I may say that "part performance of the contract" as an alternative title to the property was not put forward at any stage of the suit till now and the sole basis of the argument is the statement occurring in the Subordinate Judge's judgment referred to above. The question is how far this argument can be accepted.

No direct authority in support of his argument was referred to by the learned counsel, but he has drawn my attention to a decision in Nageswara Rao v. M. Kotamma (3), in which there is a dictum of the learned Judges which appears to support him. In that case two suits were filed, O. S. Nos. 484 and 338 of 1919, and the first suit was a suit for specific performance of a contract for the sale of the plaintiff-mentioned lands entered into between the plaintiff and defendant 2 as guardian of defendant 1; while the second was to recover possession of the self same lands by defendant 3 in the first suit from the plaintiff therein and his sons, he having purchased the suit lands under a sale deed executed by defendant 1 in his favour. Defences similar to those raised in the present case were raised by the parties in those two suits.

The Courts found that the contract set up by the plaintiff in O. S. No. 484 of 1919 was supported by consideration and necessity and defendant 3, the plaintiff in O. S. No. 334 of 1919, purchased the property with the knowledge of the contract with the plaintiff. The lower Courts granted specific performance against the minor in O. S. No. 484 of 1919, and in O. S. No. 334 of 1919 refused to the plaintiff a decree for delivery of possession. Two second appeals were filed in this Court. The learned Judges on the authority of the decisions in Rama Krishna Reddiar v. Chidambara Swamikal (2) held that the lower Courts were clearly wrong in granting specific performance against the minor and in the other case in refusing to the plaintiff a decree for delivery of possession. Then they stated the argument based upon "part performance" that might have been raised in support of the claim of the plaintiff against the minor in the "specific performance suit" and answered it in the following manner; and in that answer occurs the dictum relied on by the learned counsel for the respondent:

"The only possible question that might have been raised and argued is in the case whether the matter could be regarded as different if, as in the present case, there was not only a contract by the guardian to convey the property, but pursuant to the contract the guardian by way of partly performing the contract had placed the other party in actual possession. But we believe that a satisfactory answer to this has been furnished by Mr. S. Varadachariar, the learned vakil for the appellant. The doctrine of part performance being a doctrine of equitable relief could be held to apply only to the person concerned and if, as in this case, the contract was not a contract of the plaintiff who is suing, it follows that the equitable principle cannot be invoked as against him."

Having regard to the facts of the case, the latter part of the answer explaining the learned Judges' refusal to apply the doctrine is not very clear and if the observation refers to the specific performance suit, as it obviously does, the statement that "the equitable principle cannot be invoked as against him" should, I think, be that the "equitable principle cannot be invoked in his favour." The counsel was not able to explain this difficulty very satisfactorily, but that does not affect in any way the statement expressed in the first part of the answer that the doctrine of equitable relief could be held to apply "to the persons concerned." Mr. Varadachariar relying upon this dictum argues that in this case the persons concerned in the contract, the specific performance of which is sought against defendant 1, are defendant 1 and the plaintiff and that the latter is entitled to invoke that doctrine in his favour and claim a decree in the suit on the ground that he has been in possession of the suit lands since 1923. I was referred to no authority in support of this position. Mr. Varadachariar, who appeared in the case in Nageswara Rao v. M. Kotamma (3) and who appears in this case also, intimated to me that he quoted before the learned Judges the decision in Robert Blore v. Sir Richard Sutton (4) in support of the proposition. It is conceded that, except suggesting such a doctrine, that decision has no direct bearing on this question. I am not able to find much support for the proposition contended for in that judgment.

3. A I R 1928 Mad 830=110 I C 492.

4. 36 E R 91.

In Subba Rao v. Veeranjanyaswami, A. I. R. 1930 Mad. 298, Ramesam and Jackson, JJ., observed with regard to the doctrine of part performance that the doctrine is only used to complete an intended transfer between the transferor and the transferee where there is no other objection to complete the transfer. It has never been used to complete a transaction against a third person, such as the idol of a temple or cesti que trust or a minor against whom it cannot be regarded as operative. No doubt these observations were made in connexion with the application of Art. 134, Lim. Act, to the facts of that case. But I do not think that that would affect the principle enunciated by the learned Judges. In that case it was found impossible to hold that the suit was barred under Art. 134 as there was nothing to show that there was a valid transfer of the suit lands between the transferor and the transferee, and reliance was placed on the doctrine of part performance in support of their title by the defendants.

The learned Judges held that the doctrine could not be relied on for the reasons mentioned in the extract already quoted. If the doctrine cannot be invoked to complete a transaction against a minor against whom the transaction could not be regarded as operative then in the present case I do not think it is possible for the plaintiff respondent to rely on it in his favour, defendant 1 being a minor and the contract for specific performance being invalid and not operative as against him in law. One of the necessary conditions for applying the doctrine of part performance is stated by Fry in his book on Specific Performance (Edn. 6, p. 276) to be that the contract to which the act of part performance referred must be such as in its own nature is enforceable by the Court. As already pointed out, the decision in Rama Krishna Reddiar v. Chidambaram Swamikal (2) has declared that the contract in the present case is not enforceable by the Court against defendant 1.

That being the case, this necessary condition is lacking in this case and there is no room for the application of the doctrine of part performance. In this connexion attention may be drawn to the decision of this Court in C. Venkataratnam v. B. Guravayya (5), which contains general observations in support of the contentions urged by the appellant. I do not think that the other cases cited by the learned counsel on both sides, Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin Mahomed (6), Nipendra Chandra v. Ekherali Joardar (7) and Hiralal Ramanarayan v. Shankar Hirachand (8), afford any direct help for deciding this question. There being no room for the application of the doctrine of part performance for the reasons above mentioned I am of opinion that this second appeal should be allowed and the plaintiff's suit dismissed. The appellant will get the costs of this second appeal from the plaintiff. The lower Court's order as to costs will stand.

P.R.S /P.N. Appeal allowed.

5. A I R 1930 Mad 84=121 I C 18.

6. (1912) 39 Cal 232=39 I A 1=13 I C 331 (P C).

7. A I R 1930 Cal 457=57 Cal 268=121 I C 66.

8 A I R 1921 Bom 401=45 Bom 1170=62 I C 637.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 366

PANDALAI, J.

N. P. Subbiah Pillai—Decree-holder—Petitioner.

v.

M. Nellayappa Pillai—Judgment-debtor—Opposite Party.

Civil Revn. Retn. No. 1205 of 1932, Decided on 3rd November 1932, from order of Dist. Munsif, Ambasamudram, D/- 13th August 1932.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 26 and O. 5, R. 4—Refusal of witness in foreign territory within 200 miles from the Court to attend on service of summons—Evidence should be taken on commission.

Where a witness in a foreign territory refuses to attend on a process of summons, his evidence should be taken on commission though the witness resides in such foreign territory within 200 miles from the Court. [P 367 C 1]

Judgment.—The District Munsif was wrong in refusing to issue a commission on the mere ground that the distance to Trivandrum where the witnesses reside is less than 200 miles from the Court. Trivandrum is in foreign territory. The rule applies to distances in British India. I am not aware of any law by which witnesses in Native States which have made arrangements for mutual service of processes with British India can be compelled to obey these processes i. e., punished if they fail to do so. The arrangement for mutual service of processes is made in pursuance of S. 29, and O. 5, R. 26, Civil P. C. Though such processes may be served as if they had been issued by territorial Courts, the effect of non-compliance is a different matter. If therefore the Trivandrum witnesses refused to attend on service of summons, the only way to take their evidence, if necessary, was by commission. It appears from the reply affidavit that the witnesses were summoned to appear but did not do so. For these reasons the District Munsif should now issue a commission for the examination of witnesses 1 to 6. The petitioner and his agent, witnesses 7 and 8, must appear before the lower Court and be examined there. The order of the District Munsif is varied accordingly. The petitioner has won and must have his costs of this petition.

P.R.S./K.S.

Petition allowed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 367 (1)

WALSH, J.

T. K. M. Alagappa Chetty—Plaintiff—Petitioner.

v.

Saminathan Chetty and others—Defendants—Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn, Petn. No. 183 of 1932, Decided on 7th December 1932, from order of Sub-Judge, Sivaganga, D/- 4th December 1931.

(a) Madras Estates Land Act (1 of 1908), Ss. 11 and 151—Suit for recovery of raiyati land held on patta—Plaint cannot be valued on value of land as building site—Court-fees Act (1870), S. 7 (v) (xi).

In a suit for ejectment and to recover possession of a raiyati land held on patta in an estate on an objection as to valuation the Subordinate Judge valued it on the value of land as a building site on the hypothetical assumption that the landlord would for some nazzar be willing to allow it to be so used as a building site.

Held: that it was not open to the Court to value property on such a basis: 16 Mad 407 and 24 Mad 65, Ref. [P 367 C 2]

(b) Court-fees Act (1870), S. 12—Wrong principle applied in question of court-fees—High Court can interfere in revision.

Where the lower Court applied wrong principle in question of court-fees, though in exercise of jurisdiction vested in it, the High Court can interfere in revision. [P 367 C 2]

Judgment.—This is a suit for ejectment and to recover possession of land which measures about 2 acres and 16 cents. It is admittedly a raiyati land held on patta in an estate i. e., the Sivaganga Estate. It was objected that the plaint was under-valued: so the Court had to determine the market value of the property. The learned Subordinate Judge valued it on the value of the land as a building site on the hypothetical assumption that the landlord would for some nazzar, for which the Court deducted Rs. 20, be willing to allow it to be so used as a building site.

It is objected that it was not open to the Court to value property on such a basis. Reading Ss. 11 and 151, Estates Land Act, it is clear that the land cannot be used for building purposes without the consent of the landlord: Ramanadhan v. Zamindar of Ramnad (1) and Orr. v. Mrithyunjaya Gurukkal (2) have been quoted. It is not argued for the respondent that the method by which the lower Court assessed the market value can be justified. But it is contended that the Court is exercising a jurisdiction which is vested in it when it proceeded to determine the market value on this basis. But when it is a question of a principle to be applied to the levying of court-fees, this Court has frequently interfered in revision. There is, in fact, no other remedy open if the Court proceeds on a wrong principle. It is clear that the principle on which the Court has proceeded to levy court-fees in this case is wrong; it is not entitled to proceed on a principle, at variance with the provisions of the Estates Land Act, by which without the consent of the landlord the land cannot be converted into one for building purposes. The revision must therefore be allowed with costs, and the order of the lower Court is set aside.

P.R.S./K.S.

*Petition allowed.*1. (1893) 16 Mad 407=3 M L J 185.2. (1909) 24 Mad 65.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 367 (2)

Full Bench

BEASLEY, C. J., STONE AND BURN, JJ.

Mounagurusami Naicker and others—Accused, Petitioners, In re.

Criminal Misc. Petn. No. 1014 of 1932, Decided on 24th November 1932.

* Criminal Trial—Case and counter case—Procedure to be followed indicated.

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as regards the procedure in the trial of case and counter case. There can be nothing irregular in a Judge trying each case to a conclusion before different assessors and afterwards pronouncing judgment in both so long as he tries the one quite independently of the facts in the other. But it is necessary (1) that the trial must be separate, i. e., before different assessors and separate judgments delivered; (2) that the conclusions in each case must be founded on, and only on, the evidence in each case and (3) that if the Judge considers himself unable to detach himself from extraneous considerations a transfer may be necessary to deliver the Judge from this embarrassment: A I R 1930 Mad 190, Expl.; (1932) M W N 692 and (1929) M W N 881, Ref.

[P 369 C 1]

Nugent Grant for B. R. Sethuraman—for Petitioners.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Beasley, C. J.—This transfer petition was directed by me to be placed before this Full Bench not because of any difficulty which arises in the petition which is not opposed, but because it is a favourable opportunity for resolving difficulties with regard to procedure which have arisen on account of conflicting opinions expressed by this High Court.

One of these is Krishna Pannadi v. Emperor (1) a decision of Jackson, J., and another is K. Jaggu Naidu v. Emperor (2) a decision of Reilly and Krishnan Pandalai, JJ. Some difficulty has probably been created also by Krishtamma v. Emperor (3), a decision of Waller and Cornish, JJ. These cases lay down the procedure to be adopted at the trial of cases and counter-cases, the two former by Sessions Judges and the latter by Magistrates. In Krishna Pannadi v. Emperor (1), Jackson, J., stated:

"There is no clear law as regards the procedure in counter-cases, a defect which the legislature ought to remedy. It is a generally recognized rule that such cases should be tried in quick succession by the same Judge who should not pronounce judgment till the hearing of both cases is finished. This precludes the danger of an accused being convicted before his whole case is before the Court, and also prevents there being conflicting judgments upon similar facts."

Jackson, J., then points out that there is obvious difficulty in the adoption of this rule as it seems to infringe the fundamental principle that the Court must not import any facts into a case which are not to be found on the record. He then proceeds to state his view that the only way in which such a procedure can be justified is by setting up a fiction that the case and counter-case are really one and suggests that this fiction should be made a reality by statute. This judgment has been severely criticised in Kandregula Jaggu Naidu v. Emperor (2) but I am bound to say that I think that most of the criticism is due to a misunderstanding of Jackson, J.'s judgment because on p. 696 Reilly, J., says:

"I understand Jackson J's opinion to have been that not only should the same Assistant Sessions Judge have heard both cases to the end and have had the evidence of both of them in his mind before he pronounced judgment in either but also that he should have tried both cases with the aid of same assessors That is how the learned Sessions Judge of Vizagapatam has understood Jackson, J's directions and it is that procedure he has followed."

I do not understand Jackson, J., to have meant that both cases should be tried with the aid of the same assessors. What he does say is that both cases should be tried in quick succession by the same Judge who should not pronounce judgment until the hearing of both cases is finished. If that is what Jackson, J., meant, then there is really no difference between the procedure Jackson, J., has in mind and that indicated by Reilly and Krishnan Pandalai, JJ. It seems to me that all the three are agreed upon the desirability of the Judge withholding judgment until he has heard both the case and the counter-case but since Jackson, J., states that this procedure may allow the facts in the one case to impress or influence the Judge in the other case, it is as well to observe that if the Judge withholds his judgment until he has heard both cases for the purpose of considering the cases as if they were one case, then that would be an irregular procedure; and the suggestion made by Jackson, J., that a fiction should be set up that the case and the counter-case are really one and should be made a reality by statute seems to me to be one which it would be very difficult to adopt. Waller and Cornish, JJ., who were dealing with the procedure in the Magistrates' Courts are of opinion that "no Court can grasp the real facts unless it tries both cases." If by that it is meant that the fundamental principle that the Court must not have regard in one case to the facts in another is not to be observed, then that view cannot be supported. Possibly if the Judge reserves judgment in both cases in order that he may consider both for purpose of, arriving at the truth, he is likely to reach a more satisfactory result than by trying each case without reference to any of the facts in the other. But since this procedure is irregular, it cannot receive our support. No hard and fast rule can be laid down. It is sufficient to say that there can be nothing irregular in a Judge trying each case to a conclusion before different assessors and afterwards pronouncing judgment in both so long as he tries the one quite independently of the facts in the other. Should the Judge however feel that he is likely to be embarrassed by the adoption of this procedure, he will no doubt get a transfer of the counter case to the file of another Sessions Judge. What must be made clear is: (1) that the trial must be separate, i. e., before different assessors and separate judgments delivered (2) that the conclusions in each case must be founded on, and only on, the evidence in each case and (3) that if the Judge considers himself unable to detach himself from extraneous considerations a transfer may be necessary to deliver the Judge from this embarrassment. We are much obliged to Mr. Nugent Grant and Mr. Bewes for their great assistance to us as amicus curiae.

1. A I R 1930 Mad 190=31 Cr L J 451=123 I C 10.

2. (1932) M W N 692.

3. (1929) M W N 881.

Stone, J.—I agree.

Burn, J.—I agree.

P.R.S./K.S. Reference answered.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 369

RAMESAM, J.

B. Iswarudu—Petitioner—Accused.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 436 of 1932, and Criminal Revn. Petn. No 405 of 1932, Decided on 21st July 1932, from judgment of Joint Magistrate, Narasapur, in Criminal Appeal No. 20 of 1932.

Criminal Law Amendment Act (1908), S. 17 (1)—Simply because object of unlawful association and object of some individual person are identical, such person cannot be held to be assisting the association unless connexion between two is proved.

Simply because the object of an association and the object of some individual person in his own individual activities are identical it cannot be said that the individual is helping the operations of the association. Unless the operations of the association are in the person's mind and an intention to assist them is also there, such intention to assist the operations of that association can be inferred by an unambiguous overt act. The mere advocating by an individual of boycott, the shouting of slogans and the carrying of a national flag do not constitute an offence under S. 17 (1) unless it is proved that such individual is in any way connected or assisting with such intention the object of the All India Congress Committee: A I R 1931 Bom 200, Inf. [P 370 C 2; P 371 C 1, 2]

P. Satyanarayana Rao and N. V. Shama Rao—for Accused.

K. N. Ganapathi—for the Crown.

Order.—In this case one B. Iswarudu of Narsapur has been convicted by the Stationary Sub-Magistrate of Narsapur for an offence under S. 17 (2), Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1908, and is sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for six months and to pay a fine of Rs. 200. On appeal to the Joint Magistrate of Narasapur the fine was reduced to Rs. 100; otherwise the conviction was confirmed. The present revision petition is filed against the appellate judgment of the Joint Magistrate.

It will be convenient now to set forth the facts of the case which gave rise to this revision petition. By notification dated 4th January 1932 the association known as the Working Committee of the All India Congress Committee was declared an unlawful association under sub-S. 1, S. 8, Ordinance 4 of 1932. This was published in the Fort Saint George Gazette dated 12th January 1932. On 13th March 1932 the accused in this case at about 6 p. m. is said to have taken part in a demonstration accompanied by a national flag and the singing of political songs. In the course of the demonstration he is said to have visited the streets of Narsapur wherein foreign cloths and British goods are sold, advocated the boycott of British goods and foreign cloth; thereby he was charged with having acted in furtherance of the resolution of the All India Congress Working Committee which was declared an unlawful association and having therefore committed an offence under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1908. Two witnesses were examined for the prosecution, a Police Inspector and a constable. The Police Inspector is the same person who sent the confidential report of the occurrence on the same day, and this report is filed as Ex. A. Fourteen witnesses were examined for the defence. Both the Magistrates have dealt with the defence evidence at great length. It is unnecessary to refer to it in detail. Most of it relates to the beating of the accused by the police, a matter which is now irrelevant to the present revision petition.

The Joint Magistrate in dealing with the case divided the activities of the accused into two parts, namely, what he did up to the arrival of the police and what happened after the arrival of the police. So far as the first part is concerned, the Joint Magistrate refers to the evidence of D. Ws 1, 3, 4 and 13. D. W. 1 is the Government Pleader of Narsapur. D. Ws 3 and 4 are also pleaders. According to their evidence the accused was only carrying placards and was not saying anything at all. The learned Joint Magistrate accepts their evidence and points out that though up to that stage the accused was not guilty of anything objectionable this does not prevent later developments which are unlawful. The second part of the accused's activities relates to what happened after the arrival of the police, which is not touched by the defence witnesses already mentioned. P. W. 1, the Sub-Inspector, says that he was carrying a national flag and singing political songs. He also says:

"I saw the accused and five or six non-co-operators holding a demonstration near the house of Ponnappalli Veeraraghavaya Somayajulu advocating the boycott of British goods and foreign cloths The accused did all this to assist the operations of the All India Congress Working Committee."

The witness then proceeds to say that the All India Congress Working Committee advocated the boycott of foreign cloth, manufacture of salt, etc. In cross-examination he says:

"I do not know if the accused is a member of the All India Congress Committee. I do not know if the accused was authorized by the All India Congress Committee."

The witness also refers in chief examination to some non-co-operation meetings attended by the accused, but in cross-examination he says he cannot give the dates of those meetings. There is also some reference to the Narasapur Taluk Congress Committee. I refer to these two matters merely to eliminate them from further discussion. The charge actually made against the accused has nothing to do either with the non-co-operation meetings held in Narasapur itself or the working of the Narasapur Taluk Congress Committee. We have only to see what he did to bring himself within S. 17 (1) of the Act, in connexion with the Working Committee of the All India Congress Committee. It is clear from the evidence which I set forth above that the accused is not a member of that unlawful association, nor has he contributed or received or solicited any subscriptions for the purpose of that association. The only question that remains is, has he in any way assisted the operations of that association. In Ex. A the Police Inspector reported that he noticed volunteers carrying a national flag and some cardboards containing seditious matter. The cardboards and the national flag were seized from these people and the national flag is a material object before me. (After discussing the value of the evidence afforded by the flag and placards, the judgment proceeded). Neither do the placards refer to the Working Committee of the All India Congress Committee or any of its operations.

Then on what does the conviction of the accused rest? On this matter I find some difficulty in following the appellate judgment. In para. 2 it refers to the evidence of P. Ws. 1 and 2 and the particular portion of the evidence mentioned is:

"They were advocating boycott of British goods and foreign cloth. P. W. 2 also says they started advocating boycott."

Paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 deal with the defence evidence. Para. 6 deals with the discrepancies of the defence evidence. So far as these paragraphs are concerned, it is unnecessary for me to say anything about them nor have I anything to say about para. 7 subject to one remark. In this paragraph the learned Joint Magistrate says:

"There are also some other discrepancies as regards what was written on the placards and as to the direction from which the police came."

One refers to the discrepancies in dealing with evidence relating to the events that happened but not when the evidence relates to the contents of a document. The placards are before the Court. What purpose do the discrepancies in the oral evidence relating to their contents serve? It can only show that the witnesses are so very loose and inaccurate in describing the simple contents of a cardboard just as the Police Inspector is very inaccurate in describing the contents of the same cardboard. However, as I have already said, I have nothing to say about these paragraphs.

Then in para. 8 the Magistrate says:

"The prosecution case is that the appellant and others were advocating boycott, shouting out slogans and carrying a congress flag. The defence denies this and says appellant was saying nothing."

The learned Joint Magistrate says:

"These assertions and counter-assertions cannot be to any extent tested by cross-examination. It is only by the evidence as to surrounding circumstances that it can be decided which side is telling the truth. From the numerous discrepancies and the exaggerations of the defence I consider the lower Court was right in disbelieving their evidence."

The Joint Magistrate then explains the delay of the police in putting up the case. I take it that this paragraph is intended to express the conclusion of the Magistrate that the prosecution case, namely, that the appellant and others were advocating boycott, shouting out slogans and carrying the congress flag, is true, and the defence case denying this is false. I accept the finding of the Joint Magistrate. But is this finding enough to convict the appellant of an offence under S. 17 (1), Criminal Law Amendment Act, to which the Joint Magistrate's judgment makes no reference. As the judgment stands, the impression is created in me that the Magistrate thinks that his finding that the prosecution case that the appellant was advocating boycott, shouting out slogans and carrying the congress flag is true, is enough to dispose of the case. Unfortunately it is not. This finding does not bring the accused within the clutches of S. 17 (1). That section does not make the advocating of boycott, the shouting out of slogans and the carrying of congress flags an offence. Incidentally we may observe that no reasons are given for describing the flag as the congress flag. As I said, it contains nothing on it. One may call it a national flag or any other flag as his fancy dictates. Earlier in the judgment in para. 2 it was described as a national flag. Why it was referred to as congress flag, I do not know. No details are mentioned about the slogans. If they also referred to boycott they do not add to the previous phrase advocating boycott. I accept the finding of the learned Joint Magistrate that the accused was advocating boycott, but that does not necessarily amount to assisting the operations of any unlawful association. A man may individually advocate boycott without even knowing the existence of any unlawful association and without thinking of helping the operations of any unlawful association.

Simply because the object of an association and the object of some individual person in his own individual activities are identical it cannot be said that the individual is helping the operations of the association. Identity of objects with no other connexion does not amount to assisting the operations of associations. Of course I do not mean to say that only if a man is secretary or a member or a salaried servant that he can be said to assist. He may be guilty of assisting in other ways than these. It may be he is an honorary worker on behalf of that association in which case he may be guilty. He may get leaflets or placards from that association for distribution, in which case he will be guilty. But when there is no kind of connexion proved between a person and an unlawful association, it cannot be said that the person is assisting the operations of that association simply because there is the identity of objects. The words "assisting the operations of an association" would become meaningless unless the operations of the association are in the person's mind and an intention to assist them is also there and such intention to assist the operations of that association can be inferred by an unambiguous overt act. A different construction of the words of the act will lead to startling results.

First, as I have already said, a person may be convicted under this section even if he has never heard of the existence of such an unlawful association and knows nothing of its operations. I can mention other anomalies, but they would not be relevant to this case and it is unnecessary to advert to them. The Bombay High Court has held to the same effect, namely, that it cannot be said that a person is assisting an association unless he has its operations in his mind and has an intention to help them or they are within his intention as evidenced by the Act: vide Gangubai v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1931 Bom. 200. In this case accepting the whole of the prosecution story there is no act of the accused on which one's fingers can be laid to say that the accused had the operations of the All India Congress Committee in his mind and he intended to assist the operations of that Committee by his activities. In my opinion no case has been made out under S. 17 (1). The conviction is set aside and the accused is directed to be set at liberty. The fine, if paid, will be refunded.

P.R.S./K.S. Conviction set aside.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 372 (1)

CURGENVEN, J.

Modali Lakshmi Narasimham Sarma, —Accused—Petitioner In re.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 568 and Criminal Revn Petn. No. 525 of 1932, Decided on 24th November 1932.

Railways Act (9 of 1890), S. 122 (1)—Crossing railway line to reach platform is offence.

In order to reach the platform accused crossed the line instead of entering it by ordinary route even though there was a notice board put at the station prohibiting such trespass:

Held: that persons cannot wander about railway lines at their own will and pleasure without rendering themselves liable under some provision of law which prohibits so dangerous a practice and that the conviction was justified.

[P 372 C 1,2]

T. V. Ramanatha Aiyar—for Petitioner.

Parakat Govinda Menon, for Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The petitioner has been convicted under S. 122 (1), Railways Act, of unlawfully entering upon a railway and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 10. The evidence shows that in order to reach the platform of the Nellore Railway Station he crossed the line instead of entering it by the ordinary route. The only point taken is that the prosecution has not demonstrated that such action constitutes an unlawful entry or a trespass. There is evidence, which the Courts have accepted, that there was a notice-board put at the station prohibiting such trespass and the accused's conduct was said to have constituted a breach of that notice. Inasmuch as this point was not specifically challenged at the trial the prosecution was not put to the proof of the authority upon which that notice was based. Had this been done, I have no doubt that it could have been shown that the notice was perfectly justified by some rule or regulation. I am not going to believe that persons can wander about railway lines at their own will and pleasure without rendering themselves liable under some provision of law which prohibits so dangerous a practice. The criminal revision petition is dismissed.

P.R.S./K.S. Petition dismissed.

* A. I. R. 1933 Madras 372 (2)

BURN, J.

Ponnusami Chetty—Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. Case No. 14 of 1933, (Criminal Revn. Petn. No. 14 of 1933), Decided on 16th January 1933, from order of Stationary Sub Magistrate, Negapatam, D/- 9th December 1932.

* Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 162—Assertion made before police in order to show that witness is making statement in witness box which he did not make before police cannot be filed.

A statement made by a witness to the police in an investigation under S. 162 cannot be filed, or exhibited, or, in short, used, when the witness is under examination in an inquiry under Chap. 18 in order to show that while giving evidence the witness has made assertions which he did not make when he was examined by the police: A I R 1932 Lah 103 and A I R 1926 Pat 20, Rel on; A I R 1926 Pat 362, Expl.; 16 All 207, Ref. [P 372 C 2]

K.S. Jayarama Ayyar and K. Venkataramani—for Petitioner.

Public Prosecutor—for the Crown.

Order.—The point raised in this case is whether a statement made by a witness to the police in an investigation under S. 162, Criminal P. C., can be filed, or exhibited, or, in short, used, when the witness is under examination in an inquiry under Chap. 18, Criminal P. C., in order to show that while giving evidence the witness has made assertions which he did not make when he was examined by the police.

Statements recorded under S. 162, Criminal P. C., can be used at a subsequent inquiry or trial for one purpose only: to contradict the witness. If they are to be used for this purpose the statements made under S. 162 must be duly proved, and used in the manner laid down in S. 145, Evidence Act. It follows, of course, that unless there is a contradiction between the statement recorded under S. 162 and the statement made by the witness in the course of his deposition, the statement recorded under S. 162 cannot be used at all. It is therefore obvious that the question raised in this case must be answered in the negative, unless an omission from a statement under S. 162 can be said to be a contradiction of a statement made in the witness-box. Reduced to these terms the matter appears to me to be too simple to admit of any argument. Whether it is considered as a question of logic or of language, "omission" and "contradiction" can never be identical. If a proposition is stated, any contradictory proposition must be a statement of some kind, whether positive or negative. To "contradict" means to "speak against" or in one word to gainsay." It is absurd to say that you can contradict by keeping silence. Silence may be full of significance, but it is not "diction," and therefore it cannot be "contradiction." It is clear therefore that a statement under S. 162, Criminal P. C., cannot be used during an inquiry or trial in order to show that a witness is making statements in the witness-box which he did not make to the police.

The same conclusion follows from a consideration of S. 145, Evidence Act. If it is intended to contradict the witness by the writing, his attention must be called to those parts of the writing which are to be used to contradict him. It would be, in my opinion, sheer misuse of words to say that you are contradicting a witness by the writing, when what you really want to do is to contradict him by pointing out omissions from the writing. I find myself in complete agreement with the learned Sessions Judge of Ferozepore who observed that:

"a witness cannot be confronted with the unwritten record of an unmade statement: Mohinder Singh v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1932 Lah. 103, at p. 110."

In the case cited, it was held by Coldstream, J., that the view of the learned Sessions Judge was not correct. Reference was made to the judgment of Dalip Singh, J., in Hazara Singh v. Emperor (1), but in neither of these cases was it explained how an omission could amount to a contradiction. The instance given by Dalip Singh, J., was that of a witness who should state under S. 162, Criminal P. C., that three persons were beating a man, and should later allege that four persons were beating the same man. I would say with all respect that such statement would be, in fact contradictory. It is impossible to state a case in which an omission amounts to a contradiction. There is apparently no decided case in this High Court, but I cannot see that there is any real difficulty in the matter. There is some apparent divergence of view in the Patna High Court. Mr. K. S. Jayarama Ayyar for the petitioner relies on the case of Iltaf Khan v. Emperor (2) whereas the learned Public Prosecutor relies on the observations of Macpherson, J., in Badri Chaudhry v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 20. In the former case it appears to me (with all respect) that there is a slight confusion of thought. A witness named Mahabir Dubey, who during the trial had given evidence against the accused, had stated in cross-examination that when examined by the police he had said that he had seen the accused that evening. This statement was contradicted by the Sub-Inspector of Police who apparently referred to his record of the statement made by the witness under S. 162, Criminal P. C., and found therein no record of any statement by Mahabir Dubey of the fact that he has seen the accused that evening. In such a case as that, the statement of Mahabir Dubey in the witness-box, that he had seen the accused, was not contradicted either by the record of his statement under S. 162 or by the evidence of the Sub-Inspector. What the Sub-Inspector contradicted (refreshing his memory no doubt by reading the record he had made under S. 162) was the statement of the witness that he had told the police so and so. It was a contradiction not of his evidence against the accused but of what he had said to the Sub-Inspector. And moreover it was a contradiction not between two statements made by the witness, but between a statement made by the witness and a statement made by the Sub-Inspector. For such a purpose as this, the statement under S. 162, Criminal P. C., cannot be used; it can only be used in order to show that the witness in the box is contradicting something he has said before. It appears to me, with respect, that the reasoning of Macpherson, J., in the case cited, Badri Chaudhry v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 20, is entirely correct.

The evidence in the case now in question is not before me. Mr. K. S. Jaya-

1. A I R 1923 Lah 257=29 Cr L J 348=9 Lah 389=108 I C 167.

2. A I R 1926 Pat 362=27 Cr L J 796=5 Pat 346=95 I C 396.

rama Ayyar tells me that certain witnesses appear to have stated to the police merely that all the accused beat some one. In the witness-box these witnesses, I am told, have added allegations against particular accused of particular acts. The defence wants to file their statement under S. 162, Criminal P. C., in order to show that when examined by the police they did not attribute any particular acts to any particular accused. As the learned Public Prosecutor points out, the defence thus wants to use the statement under S. 162, Criminal P. C., for a purpose not sanctioned by the Code. It is not permissible to use such statements in order to show "development" of the prosecution case; it is only permissible to use them to prove contradictions. In the present case there are no contradictions.

Mr. Jayarama Ayyar then asks how he is to contradict the witnesses when they say that they told the police exactly what they are telling the Court. The answer is simply that he must contradict the witnesses on this point by adducing counter-evidence, exactly in the same way as he would contradict on any other point. He can put questions to the police officer to whom they made the statements under S. 162, Criminal P. C., or he can cite witnesses, if any, who were present when those statements were recorded. He cannot however use the statements themselves. It is not difficult to understand why the legislature has restricted the use of such statements to a single purpose. Some of the reasons have been enunciated by Enoz, J., so long ago as 1894 and most of the language is still appropriate even after the changes introduced into S. 162, Criminal P. C., in 1923: see Queen Empress v. Nasiruddin (3):

"Still more extraordinary is a permission given before the case came on for trial by which the accused were granted copies of statements recorded by the police during the investigation. Such statements are recorded by police officers in the most haphazard manner. Officers conducting an investigation not unnaturally record what seems in their opinion material to the case at that stage and omit many matters equally material, and, it may be, of supreme importance as the case develops. Besides that, in most cases, they are not experts of what is and what is not evidence. The statements are recorded often hurriedly in the midst of a crowd and confusion, subject to frequent interruption and suggestions from bystanders; over and above all, they cannot be in any sense termed depositions, for they are not prepared in the way of a deposition, they are not read over to, nor are they signed by, the deponents. There is no guarantee that they do not contain much more or much less than what the witness has said. The law has safeguarded the use of them, and it never can have been the intention of the legislature that, as in this case, copies of them should have been without question and as a matter of course made over to the accused or their counsel."

The learned Sub-Magistrate's view of the provisions of S. 162, Criminal, P. C., is substantially correct. His actual order is not quite accurately worded. It is impossible to "read over" portions alleged to have been omitted; but the learned Sub-Magistrate only means that the witnesses are to be particularly questioned about the statements in their depositions which according to the defence were not made when the police questioned them under S. 162, Criminal P. C. There is no ground for interference in revision.

P.R.S./V.S.

Revision dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 374

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

Nallakaruppan Ambalam and another —Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Vellamarunthan Ambalam and others
—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Second Appeals Nos. 983 and 984 of 1929, Decided on 22nd August 1932, against decrees of Sub-Judge, Sivaganga, in Appeal Suits Nos. 22 and 23 of 1928.

(a) Madras Estates Land Act (1908), S. 112
—None-service of notice on defaulter is fatal and renders sale illegal.

The non-service of notice required by S. 112 upon a registered pattadar who 'alone is the defaulter for the purposes of that section is an illegality, and by reason of such an illegality, the civil Court has jurisdiction to set aside the sale of the holding for arrears of rent: A I R 1923 Mad 6, Foll. [P 375 C 2]

(b) Madras Estates Land Act (1908), S. 112
—In case of more than one pattadar service must be on each pattadar.

There is no presumption that if a patta for certain lands stands in the names of two persons, they are necessarily co-owners of those lands. The existence of the patta in the names of both may be due to so many causes. Moreover, when S. 112 distinctly requires service of notice on the defaulter, if it happens that the defaulters are more than one notice must be served on all of them. [P 375 C 2; P 376 C 1]

K. P. Ramakrishna Ayyar — for Appellants.

V. Ramaswami Ayyar — for Respondents.

Judgment.—These two appeals arise out of two connected suits for setting aside a sale for arrears of rent, after declaring the same to be illegal, and also in the alternative for possession. The first Court decreed these suits in favour of the plaintiffs and these decrees have been confirmed by the lower appellate Court. Land No. 139 is the subject-matter of O. S. No. 28 of 1926 and land No. 140 is the subject-matter of O. S. No. 453 of 1925. Both these lands were originally comprised in patta No. 57 which stood in the name of plaintiff 1 in O. S. No. 453 of 1925. It appears that that patta included some other lands also. By reason of a sale effected in favour of one Velayutha, the patta in respect of lands Nos. 139 and 140 was transferred to his name and a fresh patta viz., patta No. 2, was also issued to him. For arrears of rent these two lands were brought to sale under the Estates Land Act; but it is admitted that no notice of the intention to sell as required by S. 112 of the Act was issued to Velayutha. It is however alleged that a notice was served on plaintiff 1 in O. S. No. 453 of 1925. The first Court held that there was no sufficient service of notice on him, whereas the lower appellate Court found that service to be sufficient.

The main question argued in these second appeals is whether the sale sought to be set aside was illegal on account of the non-service of notice on Velayutha who was the registered pattadar in respect of these lands under patta No. 2. There is no doubt that the procedure prescribed under S. 146 of the Act should have been adopted in effecting the transfer of patta in respect of lands Nos. 139 and 140 in favour of the purchaser Velayutha. Consequent on the recognition of Velayutha as a raiyat by the land-holder, patta No. 2 was issued in his favour. In the circumstances set forth above, it is reasonable to hold that so far as lands Nos. 139 and 140 are concerned, the fresh patta No. 2 was issued in supersession of the old patta No. 57. It is however contended that plaintiff 1 in O. S. No. 453 of 1925 should also be deemed to be a pattadar, as these two numbers were not deleted from patta No. 57. The omission to amend patta No. 57 seems, to my mind, to be due to a mistake and it could never have been the intention of the land-holder to treat the pattadar of No. 57 patta to be a raiyat in respect of lands Nos. 139 and 140 even after the recognition of Velayutha as a raiyat in respect of these lands by issuing in his favour patta No. 2. If this is a correct understanding of the facts of this case, as I believe it is, we must hold that the defaulter within the meaning of S. 112 of the Act was only Velayutha and nobody else, as he was the properly constituted registered pattadar. The non-service of notice required by S. 112 upon a registered pattadar who alone is the defaulter for the purpose of that section is an illegality, and by reason of such an illegality, the civil Court has jurisdiction to set aside the sale of the holding. It has been so held by a Full Bench of this Court in a decision reported in Rajah of Ramnad v. Venkataramaiyar (1). On this short ground, the sale in question must be declared to be illegal and the decisions of this Courts below should be upheld.

It is however contended by Mr. Ramakrishna Ayyar for the appellants that by reason of the retention of lands Nos. 139 and 140 in the old patta, we may consider plaintiff 1 in O. S. No. 453 of 1925, and also Velayutham as joint pattadars as regards the suit lands. If No. 2 patta was issued in supersession of patta No. 57, it would not be possible to hold both of them as joint pattadars. Even treating them as joint pattadars, the question still remains whether a notice required by S. 112 of the Act should be served on both of them or not. It is contended on the analogy of S. 106, T. P. Act, that notice to quit issued to one of the co-owners would be sufficient and therefore notice served on one of the joint pattadars must also be taken to be sufficient. I fail to appreciate the force of this analogy. There is no presumption that if a patta for certain lands stands in the names of two persons they are necessarily co-owners of those lands. The existence of the patta in the names of both may be due to so many causes. There is nothing in this case to show that plaintiff 1 in O. S. No. 453 of 1925 and Velayutha were co-owners of these lands. Moreover, when S. 112 distinctly requires service of notice on the defaulter, if it happens that the defaulters are more than one, notice must be served on all of them. On the general principle that the singular includes also the plural, I must take it that service of notice on the defaulters mentioned in S. 112 means service of notice on all the defaulters if they happen to be joint pattadars.

1. A I R 1923 Mad 6=69 I C 923=45 Mad 890.

In any view therefore the non-service of notice on Velayutha is a fatal defect and renders the sale in question illegal. It is unnecessary to consider the other aspects of the case. The decrees of the Courts below are correct and these second appeals are therefore dismissed with costs.

P.R.S., V.S. Appeals dismissed.

A. I. R. 1933 Madras 376

CURGENVEN AND SUNDARAM
CHETTY, JJ.

Secy. of State — Defendant — Appellant.

v.

Kunhi Krishna Varma Valia Raja and another—Plaintiff and Defendant—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 248 of 1930, Decided on 31st March 1932, against decree of Sub-Judge, Telicherry.

(a) Malabar Law — Assets of deceased Sthani go to Kovilagam from which he has sprung.

On the death of a Sthani such of his assets as originated from the income of the Sthanam go to the Kovilagam from which he has sprung. They do not under the ordinary law pass as accretions or otherwise to the Sthanam.

[P 377 C 2]

(b) Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), Ss. 4 and 69—War-bond is promissory note.

A war bond is a promissory note within the meaning of the Negotiable Instruments Act or the Limitation Act.

[P 378 C 1]

(c) Indian Securities Act (10 of 1920), S. 18—S. 18 does not give more time than what is allowed by Limitation Act.

Section 18, Securities Act, does not give the plaintiff more time than he would otherwise have under the Limitation Act. That section says no more than that when the Government has made a payment due upon a security it shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the security after the lapse of six years from the date on which the payment was due. That merely puts an unconditional limit upon the time within which the claim may be made but does not extend the time in all cases up to that limit.

[P 377 C 2]

(d) Limitation Act (1908), Art. 80—Suit on war-bond—Limitation runs from date of presentment.

A suit on a war-bond is governed by Art. 80, Lim. Act, and time which runs from the point of time when the note becomes payable under Art. 80, Col. 3, does not run until presentment at the specified place has been made. [P 378 C 1]

(e) Promissory Note — Government Securities are payable at specified places.

In the case of Government securities such as war-bonds the Government lies under no duty to seek out and pay its creditors, but that they must present their promissory notes at the place appointed for payment.

[P 378 C 2]

P. Venkataramana Rao—for Appellant.

K. P. M. Menon and D. A. Krishna Variar—for Respondents.

Curgenvén, J.—The plaintiff is a Valia Raja of Kadathanad, having succeeded to that title on the death of the previous holder, Krishna Varma, in 1919. In 1918 Krishna Varma Valia Raja had subscribed for six war bonds of Rupees 1,000 each and sixty post-office cash certificates of Rs. 100 each. The point for decision in this case is, who became entitled to these assets upon Krishna Varma's death. The succession to the Sthanam which comprises an estate as well as the title of Valia Raja, is regulated by the usual Malabar rule; there are two Kovilagams, called respectively the Edavalath and the Ayancheri Kovilagams, and the senior male member of the two Kovilagams combined succeeds as Valia Raja. Krishna Varma himself derived from the Ayancheri Kovilagam, his successor the plaintiff from the Edavalath Kovilagam. The general proposition is not now disputed before us that on the death of Valia Raja such of his assets as originated from the income of the Sthanam go to the Kovilagam from which he sprang; in the case of Krishna Varma to the Ayancheri Kovilagam. They do not under the ordinary law pass as accretions or otherwise to the Sthanam. When Krishna Varma died, the securities in question were taken possession of by the senior member of that Kovilagam, Sankara Varma, now defendant 2; and it is his case that by the ordinary rule of succession his Kovilagam is entitled to them. The plaintiff as Sthani sets up special grounds, which will be particularized later to take the case out of the ordinary rule.

Before coming to the present suit we may glance briefly at the course of proceedings which led up to it. Not long after Krishna Varma's death, which occurred on 5th September 1919, both the plaintiff and defendant 2, applied to the revenue authorities for the transfer of the securities in their respective names.

Defendant 2's letter to the Collector, Ex. 5, is dated 6th December 1919, and that of the plaintiff to the Tahsildar, Ex. 2, is dated 22nd January 1920. These applications evoked a reply from the Superintendent of Post Offices, Malabar Division (Ex. B) that the amount of the war loan could only be paid on production of an order from a competent Court of law. The plaintiff after some considerable delay then applied (Ex. 1) for a succession certificate, making Sankara Varma respondent. The District Judge dismissed the application on 16th August 1923. Thereupon the plaintiff sued the present defendant 2, in O. S. No. 23 of 1923, on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Tellicherry, for a declaration of his title to these assets. While the suit was pending Sankara Varma succeeded in obtaining payment of the amounts due upon the war loan and post office certificates, and the plaintiff was allowed to amend his plaint to include a prayer for the recovery of the money. The suit was dismissed both upon the allegation of fact with which the plaintiff endeavoured to support his title and upon the issue whether, even if the plaintiff had proved his title, he could recover the money from defendant 2. There was an appeal to this Court and the learned Judges who disposed of it, while agreeing with the Court below that the plaintiff could not recover the money, took a different view of the evidence relating to title. Having thus failed in his objective, the plaintiff then brought the present suit against the Secretary of State, on whose application Sankara Varma was impleaded as defendant 2. Substantially the same ground was travelled over, the depositions of some of the witnesses in the prior suit being by consent read as evidence. The learned Subordinate Judge of Tellicherry has found in favour of the two plaintiffs on the question of title, and has given them a decree for the recovery of the amount of the war loan, but has dismissed the claim in respect of the post office certificates as barred by limitation. The appeal is preferred by the Secretary of State in respect of the former decision and the plaintiff has filed a memorandum of objections in respect of the cash certificates.

Although the matter was at one time disputed it is now common ground that the money with which these investments were made came from the income of the sthanam, and, as already observed, it is not disputed that according to the ordinary law of succession defendant 2's Kovilagam would have been entitled to them. The plaintiff must therefore put his case upon a special footing if he is to succeed. He in fact assumed two alternative positions. In the first place he alleges that Krishna Varma specifically appropriated these particular assets to the sthanam with the intention that they should be incorporated with the rest of the sthanam estate and pass to his successor as Valia Raja. The plaintiff's second position is that the ordinary law is overridden by a special family custom according to which all assets left by a sthani pass to his successor in the sthanam. (After discussing the evidence, the judgment proceeded). On the question of limitation I do not think that the learned Subordinate Judge is right in his view that S. 18, Securities Act (10 of 1920) will give the plaintiff more time than he would otherwise have under the Limitation Act. That section says no more than that when the Government has made a payment due upon a security it shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the security after the lapse of six years from the date on which the payment was due. That merely puts an unconditional limit upon the time within which the claim may be made but does not extend the time in all cases up to that limit.

The question remains open therefore whether this suit was in time under the ordinary law of limitation. The first point to decide is what kind of instrument is a war bond. It has been argued before us that it is not a promissory note, either as defined in the Negotiable Instruments Act, or in the Limitation Act. Now in the first place it is styled a promissory note, and the definitions in the two Acts appear to be wide enough to include it. The only specific argument advanced is that the presence of a stipulation with regard to presentment of the security at a named place (the General Treasury, Fort William) takes it out of the definition. The answer is furnished by the terms of S. 69, Negotiable Instruments Act, which provides that a promissory note payable at a specific place must, in order to charge the maker or drawer thereof be presented for payment at that place. The Act clearly therefore contemplates promissory notes of this character. We have then to consider under what article of the Limitation Act it should fall. Since the provisions with regard to the place of presentment excludes it from the special Arts. 69, 72, and 74 to 76, it seems clear that the residuary Art. 80 for a must apply and that time runs from the date when the bill, note or bond becomes payable. This raises the further question whether the promissory note becomes payable on the date of maturity, which is 15th September 1921, or whether it would only be rendered payable by presentment in accordance with its terms.

"suit on a bill of exchange, promissory note or bond not herein expressly provided for"

It is well-settled that where a note is drawn for payment "at sight" or "on demand" and, without more, no presentment is necessary; and in fact this is expressly stated in the exception to S. 64, Negotiable Instruments Act. Where however a note is made payable at a specified place the terms of S. 69 already quoted require that there must be presentment in order to charge the maker thereof. Whether this latter phrase is equivalent to saying that the note does not become payable until that condition is complied with may not be perfectly clear. It has been argued that the words "in order to charge" relate only to the institution of a suit. But on all ordinary principles the liability to pay and the right to sue should be governed by the same conditions. If the maker is sued upon such a note, would it not be open to him to plead that no liability to pay had arisen as no presentment had been made? It appears to me that the reasoning employed by Schwabe, C. J., in Secy. of State v. Radhika Prasad Bapooli (1), although it related to an instrument which was unusual in character and probably not a promissory note within the meaning of the Negotiable Instruments and Limitation Acts, was general enough in its terms to apply also to a case such as the present. If I may very briefly abstract it, it runs as follows: When money is payable on demand and nothing further is said—whether by prescribing a place for presentation or otherwise—time begins to run at once. This principle is in this country to be found expressed in Arts. 59 and 71, Lim. Act. The words "on demand" are in fact to be regarded as mere words and it is not really intended that any demand should be made before the liability to pay arises. In England it was formerly held that where a place for presentment was named, presentment at that place was necessary before a right to sue could arise. This rule has since been altered by Statute; but there has been no such statutory alteration of the law in India. We must look at the document and decide whether it was the intention of the debtor to insist on a demand at the place named.

1. A I R 1923 Mad 667=74 I C 785=46 Mad 250.

If such an intention can be inferred, then the debtor comes under no liability to pay until such demand is made. It is when the argument has reached this point that the terms of the instrument fall to be considered. It appears to me clear in the Government securities such as the present that the Government lies under no duty to seek out and pay its creditors but that they must present their promissory notes at the place appointed for payment. I would therefore hold, with reference to the terms of Col. 3, Art. 80, that time, which runs from the point of time when the note becomes payable, does not run until presentment at the specified place has been made. This is the further difficulty that there has in fact been no presentment by the plaintiff, the notes having been presented by defendant 2 and cancelled upon payment of the amount to him. In the circumstances I am of opinion that the plaintiff would be entitled to avail himself of the presentment already made as the only reasonable conclusion on the facts. If that be so, admittedly the suit will be in time. But as my learned brother concurs in the view which I take of the merits of this case, the appeal is allowed and the suit dismissed with costs throughout. The memo. of objections is dismissed with costs.

Sundaram Chetty, J. — My learned brother has dealt with the merits of the plaintiff's claim in its several aspects and I express my concurrence in the view taken by him. I do not propose to deal with those points once again, but I shall confine myself to the question of limitation raised in this case. The learned Subordinate Judge had held that the plaint claim in respect of the war-bonds is not barred by limitation. The correctness of that finding is challenged by the learned Government Pleader on behalf of the appellant. These war-bonds are six in number, each of them being for Rs. 1,000. They were purchased by the late Krishnavarma Valiya Raja who was the Sthani of the plaintiff mentioned Mooppu Stanam and who died on 5th September 1919. The present plaintiff is his successor to the office of sthanam above mentioned and has filed this suit for the recovery of the amount of those war-bonds as the sole legal representative of the deceased Sthani. In order to understand under what category of documents the war-bonds in question come, we may take Ex. 9 as the sample. It is styled as a promissory note. The Governor-General of India in Council on behalf of the Secretary of State for India in Council promises to pay the Accountant-General, Madras, or order at the General Treasury at Fort William on 15th September 1921, a sum of Rs. 1,000 together with interest at $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent per annum to be paid by equal half-yearly payments. This war-bond is dated 15th September 1918.

The definition of a promissory note is given in S. 4, Negotiable Instruments Act, and a promissory note is also defined in S. 2 (9), Lim. Act 9 of 1908. There seems to be no substantial difference between the two definitions and the requisites of a promissory note as defined in either of those Acts are fulfilled in the case of the war-bonds in question. It is contended on behalf of the respondent that by reason of the specification in Ex. 9 of the place where the amount of the promissory note is payable it would not be strictly a promissory note as defined by the aforesaid Acts; but if regard be had to some of the sections in the Negotiable Instruments Act, it is clear that by reason of the specification of a place for the repayment of the amount, the document is not taken out of the category of promissory notes dealt with under that Act. S. 69 of the Act relates to a promissory note made payable at a specified place and S. 66 relates to a promissory note made payable at a specified period after date thereof.

The wording of Ex. 9 shows that it is a promissory note of this double character coming under Ss. 66 and 69 of the Act. It is not a promissory note payable on demand, for the words "on demand" do not appear in it at all, but it is a pro-note payable at a specified period after date thereof and at a specified place. We have to see which would be the appropriate article of the Limitation Act applicable to a suit on such a pro-note. Art. 69 deals with a suit on a promissory note payable at a fixed time after date thereof. Art. 71 relates a suit on a bill of exchange accepted payable at a particular place, but this article does not provide for a promissory note made payable at a particular place, nor does Art. 69 provide for such a pro-note. Nor does the promissory note in question come under Art. 72 or Art. 73. If none of the specific articles relating to promissory notes can strictly apply to a promissory note of the type of Ex. 9 the only proper course is to apply Art. 80 which deals with a suit on a promissory note not expressly provided for in the schedule. This article provides a period of three years from the date when the note becomes payable. This is a general article applicable to promissory notes which are not expressly provided for in any other article. If the document in question is a promissory note, and I have no doubt that it is, Art. 80 cannot be overlooked, and it is only when even this general article is found to be inapplicable we should resort to the final and residuary articles, namely, Art. 120 which provides a period of six years from the time when the right to sue accrues for suits for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in the schedule. In my opinion the proper article applicable to the present suit, so far as it relates to the claim for the recovery of the amounts due on the war-bonds in question is Art. 80, Lim. Act.

The next and the more difficult question is, what is the starting point for limitation? According to Col. 3, Art. 80 limitation begins to run from the date when the note becomes payable. Under S. 66, Negotiable Instruments Act, a promissory note made payable at a specified period after date thereof, must be presented for payment at maturity, and under S. 69 a promissory note made payable at a specified place must, in order to charge the maker thereof, be presented for payment at that place. According to S. 22 the maturity of a promissory note is the day at which it falls due and every promissory note which is not expressed to be payable on demand is at maturity on the third day after the day on which it is expressed to be payable. The mode of calculating the days of grace is given in S. 23. According to the terms of Ex. 9 the promissory note is expressed to be payable on 15th September 1921. It is not expressed to be payable on demand. It must be deemed to have been at maturity on the third day after that date, that is on 18th September 1921. Presentment for payment at maturity is obligatory under S. 66 and similarly presentment for payment at the specified place in order to charge the maker thereof is obligatory under S. 69. It is only where the promissory note is payable on demand and is not payable at a specified place, no presentment is necessary in order to charge the maker thereof: vide exception to S. 64. This rule does not apply to the promissory note in question. It was at the maturity on 18th September 1921, and not before, and its presentment for payment must be made on the date at the specified place as required by Ss. 66 and 69. As this is not a negotiable instrument payable on demand, S. 74 of the Act does not apply and there is no question of presentment for payment within a reasonable time. The question of what is reasonable time has been held to be a mixed question of law and fact. Such a question would arise for determination when presentment is optional, in which case the holder, if he chooses to present, may do so at any time before payment.

In the case of a promissory note like Ex. 9, there is no option in the matter of presentment and, in view of Ss. 66 and 69 of the Act, it must be presented for payment at the specified place on 18th September 1921, when the note really becomes payable according to law. That date seems to my mind to be the correct starting point for limitation for a suit on this promissory note under Art. 80, Lim. Act. When the note has thus become legally payable on the aforesaid date, limitation for enforcing the payment must be deemed to have commenced since then, and, unless a valid reason is made out of its cessation or suspense, the bar of limitation cannot be got over after the expiration of three years from the date when the limitation began to run. Where the date of the cause of action is so determined, it must be held that limitation has commenced to run from that date. Suppose the time for presentment of the note for payment was at the option of the holder, it can reasonably be urged that the note becomes payable on the date on which he chooses to exercise that option; but where the date for presentment is fixed to be a particular date according to the provisions of law applicable to a promissory note, or in other words, the date on which the promissory note becomes payable is determined to be a particular date according to the provisions of law, limitation for a suit to enforce the payment must be taken to have commenced on the date on which it ought to have been presented, and the starting point cannot be altered by the act or omission of one party alone.

Reliance has been placed by the learned advocate for the respondent on the decision reported as Secy. of State v. Radhika Prasad Bapooli (1). The decision rested upon the special terms of the promissory note and the main contention in that case was that, though the claim related to the amount due as per the pro-note, it had an indissoluble link with the previous agreement of 1824 entered into with the company, whereby a specific trust was created and as such the case would come under S. 10, Lim. Act. The learned trial Judge was of opinion that the claim based on the pro-note as a simple contract debt would be barred by limitation, but as it was a case of express trust coming under S. 10, Lim. Act, there would be no bar of limitation. But on appeal it was held that the claim on the promissory note even if looked upon as a simple contract debt was not barred. In the first place, according to the terms of the document dealt with in that decision, the principal amount became payable on demand after the expiration of the 15 months from the date on which the Government gives the notice set out in the document. In the second place, there was no unconditional promise to pay the principal amount because the payment depended upon the Government exercising its option to give the notice or note: vide p. 276 of 46 Mad). In the next place, in order to entitle the holder to payment, a demand after the expiration of 15 months from the giving of the notice was rendered necessary by the express terms of the document.

On a proper construction of the terms thereof, it was held by Schwabe, C. J., that the words "on demand" were not mere formal words, but it was really intended that the demand should be made before the liability to pay arose. Great importance was also attached to the fact that the payment was to be made at a named place by the person liable. There was no time fixed for making the demand after the expiration of 15 months' notice to be given at some future time by the Government. No time was fixed for the giving of such a notice by the Government and it would appear that it was optional with the Government to give such notice at any time and it was equally optional with the creditor after the expiration of the aforesaid 15 months time to make a demand for payment at any time. In view of those special conditions, it was within the power of the parties to postpone the starting point of limitation as they pleased. But in the present case, such features are absent, and, as I have attempted to show, the date on which the note becomes payable has been determined to be a particular date and according to the provisions of Ss. 22, 66 and 69, Negotiable Instruments Act, which govern a promissory note such as Ex. 9, the date for the accrual of liability to pay the amount of the pro-note in question does not depend on the performance of an act at a time left to the option of one party or other as was the case dealt with in the aforesaid decision.

The present suit was filed by the plaintiff on 13th September 1926. Obviously it was filed more than three years since the date on which the war bonds (promissory notes) became payable, that is 18th September 1921. The cause of action must be deemed to have arisen when the notes became payable within the meaning of Art. 80, Lim. Act. In para. 15 of the plaint the correct dates for the accrual of the cause of action have not been given. If the cause of action for a suit on these promissory notes should be held to have legally arisen on 18th September 1921, nothing has been stated in the plaint as a ground for exemption from the bar of limitation. The learned Subordinate Judge has however held that the suit is within time by reason of S. 18, Securities Act 10 of 1920. Ss. 17 and 18 of this Act deal with cases, wherein the Government is absolutely discharged from all liability. S. 17 deals with immediate discharge of liability in the cases specified therein. In the present case the Government has paid the amount of these war-bonds to defendant 2 in June 1924. These bonds were endorsed as discharged and cancelled on 6th June 1924 by reason of such payment. The plaintiff claiming to be the real legal representative of the deceased holder of those war-bonds seeks to recover the amount due thereunder from the Government, despite the payment made to defendant 2. His case is that his rights cannot be defeated by reason of the payment made to defendant 2 who according to his contention, was not entitled to receive the payment. S. 18 of the said Act lays down that, except as otherwise provided in this Act, the Government shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the securities on which a payment has been made after the lapse of six years from the date on which payment was due.

This section fixes a period of six years from the date on which the payment was due as the limits of time beyond which the Government is immune absolutely from liability on the pro-notes. This contemplates a case of the true owner or a person having a paramount title suing for the money due under the promissory notes in spite of the Government having paid the same to some other person. This is mainly a provision intended for the benefit of the Government who cannot, in any event, be made liable to pay the amount of such pro-notes at the instance of the rightful owner after the expiration of the time limit fixed in the section. If the claim of the rightful owner becomes barred by limitation even within the said period of six years, is it to be understood that, by reason of the provision in S. 18, Securities Act, an extension of the period of limitation afforded to him under the general law is given to him? There is nothing in S. 18 to warrant such an inference. It is noteworthy that there are no words in S. 18 indicating that this period is fixed notwithstanding anything contained in the Limitation Act. If it was meant that the period of limitation allowed to a creditor to sue on such promissory note was overridden by the provision contained in this section the legislature would have used express words to convey such a meaning. What seems to me is that, even if the true owner has an enforceable claim against the Government according to the general law of limitation after the lapse of six years from the date on which the payment was due under the promissory notes, he could not enforce payment by the Government by reason of this special time limit. This is not a provision to enable a person disabled from suing under the ordinary law, by extending the period of limitation open to him. It is obligatory on a creditor to make out that his claim is not barred under the ordinary law. The learned Subordinate Judge states that, if the liability of the Government is discharged only after the six years mentioned in the section, the true owner is also entitled to enforce his right within the period. I think the conclusion does not necessarily follow from the premise.

For all the foregoing reasons, I am of opinion that the plaintiff's suit to enforce payment on the war bonds in question is barred under the general law of limitation, and S. 18, Securities Act, cannot be invoked for his aid in order to extend the period of limitation allowed to him under the general law. I should think that the plaintiff's claim in respect of the war bonds must fail on the ground of limitation also. The lower Court has held that the plaintiff's claim for the amount payable under the Post Office cash certificates is barred by limitation. A memo of cross-objections has been filed by the plaintiff in respect of the claim disallowed. But the plaintiff's claim to the amount of these certificates fails on the merits, as shown by my learned brother in his judgment. I agree with my learned brother, that the appeal should be allowed and the memo of objections should be dismissed, and also concur in the order as to costs.

P.R.S./K.S.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1933 Madras 382

SUNDARAM CHETTY, J.

(Appana Maha) Sadasiva Suryanarayana Rao—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Palakurthi Rajalingam and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Second Appeal No. 1620 of 1928, Decided on 8th August 1922, from decree of Sub Judge, Bezwada, in A. S. No. 150 of 1927.

(a) Contract Act (1872), S. 43—One of co-vendors paying compensation to vendee in pursuance of clause in sale deed is entitled to contribution from other co-vendors even though they were not consulted when payment was made.

In sale deed executed by co-vendors, there was a provision to pay compensation to vendee for breach of covenant. One of the co-vendors paid the compensation for such breach without consulting or taking consent of the other co-vendors.

Held: that the liability was a joint and several one and that the co-vendor was entitled to contribution under S. 43 if the payment made was valid and bona fide. [P 383 C 1]

(b) Vendor and Purchaser — Discovery of vendor's defective title in portion of property purchased subsequent to sale — Whole sale is not ab initio.

If, with respect to a portion of the property sold under a registered sale deed it is found that the vendors had a defective title and by reason of that finding the purchaser could not take possession of that portion, it should not be said that the whole sale becomes void. It is open to the vendee to avoid the sale itself on the ground that the entire extent stipulated for was not put in his possession, or he might claim compensation or damages in respect of the portion lost, on the ground of partial failure of consideration. [P 383 C 2]

(c) Limitation Act (1908), Arts. 97 and 116 — Suit for compensation by vendee for breach of covenant in sale deed — Limitation is six years from date of failure of consideration.

Articles 97 and 116 must be read together; in suit for compensation by vendee for a breach of covenant in a registered sale deed, the extended period of limitation of six years should be allowed. The starting point of period of limitation is date of failure of consideration of sale. [P 383 C 2]

(d) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100—New plea.

A new plea cannot be entertained in second appeal. [P 384 C 2]

P. Satyanarayana Rao — for Appellant.

V. Govindarajachari — for Respondents.

Judgment.—This second appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff (appellant), for the recovery of a certain sum of money alleged to be due to him by way of contribution from the defendants in respect of a payment of Rs. 3,500 made by him in satisfaction of a claim for compensation or damages on account of the breach of a covenant contained in a registered sale deed, Ex. B. The first Court gave a decree in plaintiff's favour for a sum of Rs. 562-8 0 with proportionate costs. The lower appellate Court reversed that decree and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. Hence this second appeal.

It is clear that by reason of the execution of the sale deed, Ex. B, by three persons including the plaintiff's deceased father, there was a joint covenant for title and quiet enjoyment in that sale deed. On account of a defect in the title of the vendors as regards the full extent covered by the sale deed, it is found by the first Court that the payment of Rs. 3,500 by the plaintiff's father in satisfaction of the claim for compensation or damages set up by the Cotton Press, the vendee under Ex. B, was in no sense an overpayment, but, on the other hand, it was an adequate compensation paid in respect of the loss sustained by the Cotton Press, in respect of 4,287 yards of site. That finding is, in my opinion, based upon a proper appreciation of the evidence and though the lower appellate Court has not dealt with it, I have no hesitation in accepting that finding as correct. It is true that the plaintiff's father when he made the payment in question did not previously consult the co-vendors and take their consent. There is no doubt that the liability to compensate in respect of the breach of the covenant contained in Ex. B was joint and several. This case therefore comes under S. 43, Contract Act, though there is some doubt whether S. 69 would apply or not. In order to resist such a claim the defendants may show that on the date of the alleged payment the Cotton Press was not entitled to recover so much amount as compensation and say that the claim for compensation was itself barred by limitation. As regards the first point, I have already found that the amount paid by the plaintiff's father was in no sense an overpayment.

Then, on the question of limitation, the learned District Munsif has found that the claim of the Cotton Press for compensation in respect of 4,287 yards of site lost was not barred on the date of the payment, viz., 22nd November 1924. The correctness of this finding has been attacked by the learned advocate for the

